The country being threatened with disintegration and party strife, and the people appealing to him to take over its administration to save the people from suffering, the young Emperor says he was compelled to take action. China's future government will be based on the following:

The Emperor's Platform.

"The country shall be administered according to the constitutional laws promulgated by the late Emperor.

"Expenses of the Imperial household shall remain the same as those fixed by the Republic.

"Blood princes shall not be allowed to interfere in politics.

"There shall be no difference between Manchu and Chinese. Marriage between them is allowed.

"All foreign treaties and contracts shall remain in force.

"The stamp tax and other petty taxes are abolished.

"The republican criminal civil code is abolished and that introduced the first year under Hsuan Tung's government is reinstated.

"Political offenders are pardoned.

"The wearing of queues is optional."

VICTIMS SHOT DOWN AS THEY FLEE FROM BLAZING HOMES; MOB DISARMS MILITIAMEN

Others Drop Back Into the Flames Rather Than Face Rain of Bullets---Estimates Place the Total Dead at From Twenty-Five to Two Hundred and Fifty.

WOMEN AND GIRLS ARMED, JOIN IN THE ATTACK

EAST ST. LOUIS, Ill., July 4.—The negro quarter of the city, set afire as the climax of two days of race rioting, was ablaze late last night and negroes were being shot and killed by the whites as they ran from their burning homes. It is known now that at least fifteen negro fugitives from the fire have been killed as they tried to escape, and it is believed many more have lost their lives. The police estimate is between twenty-five and one hundred negroes dead, with probably more than six whites killed. The St. Louis Globe Democrat said the dead probably would number 250.

The burning quarter is hemmed in about by a ring of desperate and armed whites who are firing at every negro as he darts from his blazing home. Usually the fugitive's body is pierced by a dozen or more bullets before he has run twenty yards, and he crumbles up and falls in the flame-swept street.

Estimates of the dead run as high as one hundred at midnight. A reign of terror prevails. The police and the two companies of the National Guard that arrived are powerless. Ten more companies of the National Guard have been ordered here, and Adjutant General Frank S. Dickson is on his way from Springfield to take command.

WHITES DISARM MILITIAMEN.

The saloons were closed early in the afternoon, following a series of riots in the streets, in which three negroes and two white men were killed, and in which white women and girls played a conspicuous part. The two companies of soldiers were powerless, as they had orders not to shoot. The whites took their rifles from them, telling them they might hurt some one.

Martial law was declared in the city at eight o'clock and the police, fighting against overwhelming odds, had gathered in three hundred white men and boys, most of them armed, and had them locked in the jail and at the City Hall.

Police activity inflamed the whites to even more drastic measures, and they marched upon the negro quarter prepared to set it afire. At the same time the negroes began to flee, and before dark Eads Bridge was congested with all kinds of conveyances carrying negroes and their goods across the Mississippi into St. Louis and another State.

Before seven o'clock fire had been set to at least twenty houses in the negro district, and the slaughter of the negroes began. As dark came on the flames spread, and at midnight the fire had spread so far that it was at the edges of the business section. The entire flame area seemed to be surrounded by a ring of white men, women and boys, several deep. Most of them were armed. Even women and girls carried rifles and pistols. Every pawnshop in the city had been sacked for weapons by the mobs.

Flight Starts Fusillade.

As the flames would drive a negro —man, woman or child—from a dwelling, frequently their clothes burning, the mob would set up a great shout and rifles and pistols would be fired. So far no negro is known to have escaped. The whites have a merciless net about the negroes and the cry is:

"Kill 'em all!"

Negro faces are seen at the windows framed in flames, and when they see what happens to those who flee from the burning structures they drop back into the fire rather than tempt a similar fate. Many are believed to have been burned to death, but their number may never be known. When the fire subsides it is a question if their bodies will be found. For that reason it is impossible to estimate even approximately the number of dead. However, it is known that fifteen negroes who fled from their burning homes have been shot and killed by the circling white mob. The number may be much higher, as the hemmed in district has a long circumference.

Firemen were working at top speed to confine the flames to the negro quarter and to save the business district, but they were harassed by the flying bullets from the weapons directed against the blacks.

Those who have the better interests of the city at heart are hoping that the additional State troops arrive before it is too late to save the city. It seems that when the mobs applied the torch to the negro quarter they drew lines across the streets and with rifles prevented the firemen from entering until the flames had gained such headway that they were beyond the control of the Fire Department. Then the scorched negroes began to flee from their homes, and were shot as they ran.

St. Louis Fireman Called.

Mayor Hoffman, fearing the city would be destroyed by the spreading fire, called upon the firemen of St. Louis, across the river, for aid. The St. Louis firemen responded quickly and engines were on their way across the bridge when they were ordered back by Chief Swingley, of St. Louis. He had heard of the mob rule and would not consent to expose his firemen to bullets.

Mobs Overpower Police.

After midnight the mobs of whites ran wild through the streets. Here and there the police would seize a man and hustle him into the jail, but that only angered the mob into greater fury. No attempt at any time was made to disarm the whites, or to fire into their mobs.

At Police Headquarters it was said at midnight that there were at least twenty-five dead and that the number might be one hundred. The only hope entertained was for the quick arrival of the ten additional companies of the National Guard. It was said that they would arrive before morning. It is expected that when Adjutant General Dickson realizes the seriousness of the situation he will order the troops to fire into the whites if they refuse to disperse.

The Adjuant General will find two companies of the National Guard here whose rifles have been taken, started to pass. A white man hit knocked him down and kicked him. As he lay in the street a white man pushed the crowd aside with his revolver and, deliberately taking aim, fired five times. Only two of the shots took effect, one in the arm and one in the leg. As the mob fell back, the negro jumped up and ran.

A little later a white man standing in front of the Elmo Hotel, fired at a negro, but missed him and, wounded a white man, Louis Haege, aged sixty-five. The man who fired the shot was arrested, but the threatening mob forced the police to release him. Later a man who shot Haege was found haranguing a street crowd.

Troops Stir Mob to Frenzy.

One of the National Guard companies then was ordered from the negro quarter to the business section, but the arrival of the troops seemed to arouse the increasing mobs to further aggression. The mobs took rifles from the soldiers, telling them they might hurt somebody.

The rioting grew more serious, a car was stopped, the trolley pulled from the wire and a mob of white men invaded the car looking for negroes. One was taken off, beaten, and kicked and then shot. He died in an ambulance. While that disturbance was raging another car appeared. As the car was halted, white women and white girls boarded it, and seizing shrieking negro women, dragged them into the streets, where they were pounded and kicked.

A few minutes later, as a crowd was attacking negroes, one negro was shot in the head. The crowd cheered as policemen put him in an ambulance. Militiamen witnessed that scene, but did nothing to disperse the mob.

One negro, who was taken from the car, which women rioters first invaded, was beaten on the head with a heavy club. He died in an ambulance.

Some of the men in the mob began to fire. William Keyser, a hardware merchant, was killed by stray bullet. One negro was shot and killed as he was waiting for a train to take him out of town. About five o'clock a mob made raids on pawnshops and carried away rifles and revolvers.

Telephone wires were cut early in the evening. As telegraph and telephone poles caught fire other wires went down.

The mobs in East St. Louis were swelled by hundreds of persons who early in the evening crossed the river from St. Louis, Mo. This added such a menace to the situation that at half-past eight o'clock the bridges were closed. This forced hundreds of residents of suburban towns to stay in St. Louis for the night. As soon as street car traffic ended, at 7 o'clock, crowds walked across the bridge into East St. Louis by the thousands.

Negro Snipers Kill Four.

Some of the negroes not trapped in the negro quarter, locally known as "Black Valley," made reprisals upon whites. Negro snipers concealed at Ninth street and Missouri Avenue had killed four white men a little after nine o'clock.

State Attorney Schaumloeffel of St. Clair county, and Inspector Lawrence of the St. Louis Police Department, made a tour in an automobile through East St. Louis, and the State Attorney said that probably 250 negroes were killed.

While the fire was destroying all the negro houses in Black Valley, covering more than two square miles, another serious fire was started at Third street and St. Louis Avenue. Forty frame houses there seemed doomed to destruction.

The rioting is a revival of the riots of a month ago, when the leaders of various labour unions found that many negroes were being imported from the South. The unions had been arranging for a big strike, and the negroes were induced to come here from the South to be ready to take the strikers' places.

In the riots that followed those disclosures several persons were killed. The State troops were called and when order was restored they were withdrawn. The new rioting followed an announcement Saturday that labour contractors employed by several large corporations were shipping in more negroes from the South, preparing for strike trouble. A mass meeting of negroes was held Sunday night in the negro colony, and, according to the police, that tolling of a church bell was to have been the signal for all negroes to seize arms and attack the whites.

Policeman Killed, Another Dying.

When a church bell was heard ringing a waggon filled with policemen was hurried into the negro section. As the loaded waggon entered the district many shots were fired into it. Detective Sergeant Coppedge was killed, Detective Frank Wodley was shot in the stomach and may die, and the driver also was wounded.

The remaining policemen attacked the negroes and drove them into their houses. Trouble was brewing all Sunday and there were numerous clashes. Policemen in platoon formation charged all gatherings of negroes and at 3 o'clock this morning Mayor Mollman asked Governor Lowden to send troops. Two companies arrived at half-past nine o'clock and were sent into the negro quarter.

Quiet then prevailed in that quarter, but in the business centre the whites, emboldened by the absence of police and soldiers, attacked negroes wherever they were seen. Agitators, speaking at street corners, inflamed the mob.

While one agitator was speaking a harmless negro, an old resident,

The Betrayal of Roumania

(New York Times.)

Considerable mystery has always shrouded the circumstances of Rumania's entry into the war, and the reason for her lone, wild venture into Transylvania. This has been cleared away and an intrigue, which was one of the causes of the revolution in Russia, divulged by no less a person than General D. Illiesco, former Rumanian Minister of War, who at the time Rumania joined the Allies, was chief of the general staff of the army. General Illiesco, who arrived in Paris recently to consult with the French military authorities, said that Rumania had been betrayed by Boris V. Sturmer, the pro-German Russian statesman, who was premier at the time of the Rumanian declaration of war.

The Russian government in the spring of 1916," said General Iliesco, "submitted to us a plan of campaign fully elaborated. The probable role of Bulgaria, however, had not been taken into consideration. On this being pointed out, M. Sturmer assured us that Bulgaria never would take up arms against Russia. We then demanded that 200,000 Russian troops be sent to Dobrudja. To this it was objected that 20,000 would be ample for a purely political demonstration.

"Twice our general staff urged the Russian government to begin the operations by an attack upon Bulgaria to take the form of the occupation of a strip of territory on the right bank of the Danube. The capture of Rustchuk would have protected our capital. The French general staff shared our opinion as to what should be done but Russia opposed an absolute veto."

General Iliesco then traced the progress of the campaign in Transylvania. It appears that the third Rumanian army was to have advanced in conjunction with a large force of Russians who has been concentrated at Dorna Watra.

"The Russian troops at Dorna Watra, alas! never advanced a single yard," continued the general. "They are even now where they were when we went to war. This inertia compromised the plan given to us by Russia herself, for success depended on speed and our ability to shorten as much as possible the immense Transylvanian front of 800 kilometers by occupying the hypotenuse of the triangle running from Dorna Watra to Orsova.

"To sum up, by the entry of Bulgaria into the war a double plan, political and strategical, was to be carried out. M. Sturmer's government forced us to declare war because it needed troops to cover the left flank of the Russian army in Bukowina. The troops of this flank, contrary to the assurances given to Rumania and France, were ordered to stay where they were. The defeat of Rumania was foreseen and prepared by M. Sturmer, who planned to end the war as far as Russia was concerned with this feat of the enemy's arms. His plan was to let Rumania be invaded as far as the Sereth river, then using the unconquerable military might of the Central empires as an argument, conclude peace as the result of this defeat, which not being a Russian one, would in nowise have diminished his own power or that of the Czar."

GENERAL DECLINE IN WHEAT PRICES

Ontario Flour Down Thirty-five Cents—The Cattle Market

Following the general decline in wheat prices, Ontario flour made a further decline of 35c yesterday. The markets are very dull during the holidays. There were no Chicago quotations yesterday, and but very little trading in the one option now on the board, October closing 1 1-8c lower than Saturday's close. Cash quotations are 3c to 5c lower. Corn and oats are still firm, and are quoting higher.

Manitoba wheat—No. 1 Northern, lake ports, $240; No. 2 Northern, $2.37.

Manitoba oats—No. 2, 80 1-2c, track, bay ports.

American corn—$1.81 1-2, nominal.

Ontario oats—No. 2 white, not quoted.

Ontario wheat—No. 2 winter, per car lots, $2.35 to $2.40; No. 2, winter, $2.33 to $2.38, according to freight outside.

Peas—No. 2, nominal.

Barley—Good malting, nominal.

Buckwheat—Nominal.

Rye—No. 2, $2.05.

Manitoba flour—First patents, in jute bags, $12.90; second patents, $12.40; strong bakers, $12.

Ontario flour—Winter, according to sample, $10.15 to $10.25, track, Toronto, prompt shipments.

Mill feed—Car lots, delivered Montreal, shorts, $38; bran $31; feed flour per bag, $2.80 to $2.90; middlings, $42.

Hay—Baled, track, Toronto, car lots, No. 2, $13 to $13.50; mixed, $9 to $11.50; straw $9.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Union Stock Yards—Receipts, 33 cars, with 518 cattle, 205 calves, 372 hogs, and 207 sheep and lambs.

Cattle prices have broken this week from 50 cents to $1 from last week. Good butcher steers and heifers are 50 cents off, and medium from 50 cents to 75 cents. Butcher cows are off from 75 cents to $1. For common butcher cows there was practically no demand in yesterday's market. The receipts of fresh cattle were light but with over 1,000 head of cattle left over from Monday's market, there were more than enough to meet the day's requirements. The bulk of this week's receipts are grass cattle, very few stable fed being in evidence. The whole market for cattle is decidedly weak.

Sheep, lambs and calves are holding fairly steady.

Hogs are firm and 25 cents higher at $16.50, fed and watered.

Presentation To S. S. Teacher

Miss Clara M. Dewart Presented With a Leather Bag

The boys and girls of the Intermediate class of the Warsaw Methodist Sunday School gave their teacher, Miss Clara M. Dewart a very great surprise, when during the closing exercises of the Sunday School, last Sunday morning, Miss Dewart was called to the front and presented with a handsome leather bag, beautifully lined with pretty flowered poplin and fitted with coin purse and mirror; also the following address which was read by Alice Wasson, the presentation being made by Birdie Greystock.

Dear Miss Dewart:—

We, the members of your Sunday School class, learning of your departure from among us, could not consent to part with you, without leaving in your hands some memorial however trifling, of deep and abiding gratitude for your unceasing efforts to benefit us.

We appreciate the many activities that you have been connected with. Yours has been a leading part. You have acted with a public spirit, in an unselfish manner, making sacrifice of time and ability for the benefit of others. We assure you that your advice and counsel has not been seed sown on barren ground, but on receptive minds.

We ask you to accept this small token of our esteem and good-will, and when in the future days, you look upon this moment, let it be a pleasant token of the deepest love and reverence of our young hearts.

Signed on behalf of the class.

Alice Wasson,
Birdie Greystock.

Miss Dewart was much touched by the token of love and thoughtfulness of her pupils, and expressed the pleasure that had been hers in connection with the class during the years she had been with them. She carries with her kind recollections of each pupil and of their loyalty and faithfulness from Sunday to Sunday.

Yes, Builds You Up in 5 to 10 Days

Iron For the Blood and Phosphorus For the Nerves

Weak, anaemic, run-down, nervous persons will be glad to know that they can be restored back to their youth vigor by the discovery of this new drug called Bonised Phosphorus with Iron.

It is spring time now and every person needs something to build them up. Now you know as well as any doctor will tell you, the curse of spring time is impure blood. It takes many people to their grave, ruins health, makes you weak, runs you down and finally you are a physical wreck.

This new drug is a combination of iron and phosphorus. The iron acts directly on the blood while the phosphorus soothes and strengthens the nerves. You start today and take two or three tablets of Bonised Phosphorus with Iron after meals and in 5 to 10 days you will be 100 per cent. stronger.

This drug does not act like other iron tonics you have taken, but instead, it does not blacken the teeth, upset the stomach or make you constipated. This new drug is dispensed by one druggist in each city. P. O. Weber (Limited) is for Peterborough.

"The Postmaster's Daughter"

By LOUIS TRACY

"That is very kind and considerate of you," said Grant gratefully.

"Don't halloo till you are out of the wood," said Furneaux, sitting back suddenly and nursing his left knee with clasped hands. "I can't control other people's actions, you know. What I insist on to-night that you shall envisage this affair in its proper light. We have a long way to travel before counsel rises with its smug 'May it please you, me lud, and gentlemen of the jury.' But having persuaded you to agree that, willy nilly, Miss Doris is the hub of our little universe for the hour, I now swear you and this fire eater in as assistants. There must be no more speeches, no punching of heads, very little love making, and that by order——"

"Has the postmaster's daughter a delectable sister, O Lilliputian cop?" demanded Hart.

"No. Two of 'em would have caused a riot long since. Mr. Grant will do all, and more than all, necessary in that direction."

Grant leaned forward. He spoke very earnestly.

"I want you to believe me when I tell you," he said, "that I never gave serious thought to the notion of marrying Miss Martin until such a possibility was suggested last night by that swab, Ingerman."

"Ah, Ingerman! You kept a record of what he said, I gather?"

"Yes, here it is."

Grant rose, and went to a writing desk with nests of drawers which stood against the wall on the left of the door. He never used it for its primary purpose. When the table was laid for meals, Minnie or her mother had orders to remove all papers or books to the top of the desk. The house contained no other living-room of size. The hall was spacious; a smoking den next the dining room had degenerated into a receptacle of guns, fishing rods, golf clubs, Alpenstocks, skis and other such sporting accessories. The remainder of the ground floor accommodation was given up to the Bateses.

Unlocking a drawer, Grant produced a note book, which he handed to Furneaux. The detective laid it on the table. He was sitting with his back to the large window. Hart faced him. Grant's chair was between the two.

"By the way, as you're on yo r feet, Mr. Grant," said Furneaux, "you might show me exactly where you were standing when you saw the face at the window."

"For the love of Mike, what's this?" gurgled Hart. "'The face at the window'; 'the post-master's daughter.' How many more catchy cross-heads will you bring into the story?"

"Poor Adelaide Melhuish undoubtedly came here on Monday night and looked in at me while I was at work"—said Grant sadly. "You know the history of my calf love three years ago, Wally."

"Shall I ever forget it? You bored me stiff about it. Then, when the crash came, you walked me off my legs in the Upper Engadine. Ugh! That night on the Forno glacier. It gives me a chill to think of it now. Furneaux pass the port. Your name is wrongly spelt. It should be fourneaux, not Furneaux. A little oven. Hot stuff. Got me?"

"My dear Hart, you flatter me," retorted the detective instantly.

"How long am I to pose here" snapped Grant.

"Sorry," said Furneaux "These interruptions are banal. Is that where you were?"

"Yes. I had my hand outstretched for a book. It is dark in this corner. When I want to find a book I light a candle, which is always placed on the ledge of the window for the purpose. The blind was not drawn that night. It seldom is. I had the book in my hand, and had found the required passage when I chanced to look at the window and saw her face."

"Do you mind reconstructing the scene. This lamp was on the table, I suppose?"

"Yes."

"Well, pull up the blind, light your candle, and find the book. Act the whole incident in fact."

Grant obeyed. He held the candlestick until he had picked out the particular volume; then he placed it in the recess of the window, and searched through the pages of the book.

Furneaux bent forward so as to watch the rehearsal and catch the effect of the light externally. The hour was not so late as when Adelaide Melhuish, or her ghost, gazed in through one of those narrow panes but the night was dark enough to lend the necessary ressemblance. Hart, deeply interested, looked on, with rapt, eager eyes. For a full minute the tableau remained thus Then with a rapidity born of many a close 'scape in wild lands, Hart drew a revolver from a hip pocket, and fired at the window.

He alone was in a position to see through all parts of it. Grant was still thumbing a small brown volume in the manner of one who knew that a certain passage would be found therein, but was ignorant of its exact place in the text. Furneaux, intent on every movement, had only a side-long view of the window, which it will be remembered, formed a tiny rectangle in a thick wall.

The revolver was a heavy-caliber weapon and the explosion blew out the lamp. The flame of the candle flickered, owing either to the passage of the bullet or the disturbance of the air. But it burnt steadily again within the fifth part of a second and they all saw a starred hole in the centre pane of glass of the second tier from the bottom.

"What fool's game are you playing?" shrilled Furneaux, nevertheless active as a wildcat in his spring to the French window, there to snatch at the blind and turn the knob which controlled a lever bolt.

"Laying another ghost—one with whiskers," said Hart cooly. "I got, him, too, I think."

"You must be mad, mad!" shrieked the detective, tearing open the window, and vanishing.

"For Heaven's sake, Wally, no more shooting!" cried Grant, running after Furneaux.

Minnie and her mother appeared at the dining room door. Finding the place in semi-obscurity, and reeking with gunpowder, they screamed loudly.

"You Steynholme folks are all on the jump," said Hart. "Cheer up, fair dames! Thunder relieves the atmosphere you know, and one live cartridge is often more effective than an ocean of talk."

"Bub-bub-but who's shot, sir?" gasped Minnie.

"A ghost, a most scoundrelly apparition, with fearsome eyes, offensive whiskers and a hat which is a base copy of mine."

"Owd Ben!" sighed Mrs. Bates, collapsing straightway in a faint.

Luckily, Minnie caught her mother and broke her fall, because the housekeeper was large and solid, and might have been seriously injured otherwise. Hart was distressed by this development but being eminently a ready person in an emergency he rose to the occasion by extracting the empty case from the revolver, and holding it to the poor woman's nostrils, while supporting her with an arm and a knee.

"This is far more effective than burn brown paper, Minnie," he said. "Now, don't get excited, but mix some brandy and water and we'll have your mother telling us who Owd Ben is or was, before Hawk-eye comes back to disturb us. Judging by the noises I hear he is busy outside."

"That's father!" shrieked Minnie hysterically.

"Good Lord! Has your father ——"

For an instant Hart was nearly alarmed, but Grant's voice came authoritatively:

"It's a right, Bates. Let go, I tell you!"

"Phew!" said Hart. "I was on the point of confusing your respected Dad with Owd Ben....That's it ma' Sniff hard! As a cook you're worth your weigth in gold, which is some cook."

Meanwhile, Furneaux, seeing that no dead body was stretched on the strip of grass beneath the window, dashed into the shrubbery to the right and was clutched in a mighty embrace by an older but much more powerful man in Bates, who had hurried from the front of the house on hearing the pistol shot. Most fortunately the gardener, deeming his vigil a needless one, had not armed himself with a stick or the consequences might have been serious. As it was no one except Hart had been vouchsafed sight or sound of the latest specter, which, however had left a very convincing souvenir of its visit in the shape of a soft felt hat with two bullet holes through the crown.

Furneaux, quivering with silent wrath, soon abandoned the search, when this piece de conviction was found at the root of the Dorothy Perkins rose tree. Seeing the lamp re-lighted he peremptorily bade Grant and Bates come in with him. He closed the window, adjusted the blind again, and poured generous measures of port wine into two glasses. Handing one to Bates, he took the other himself.

"Friend," he said. "some men have fame thrust upon them, but you have achieved it. To-night you pierced the heel of Achilles. Here's to you now!"

"I dunno wot 'ee's sayin', Mister, 'good health,'" said Bates, swigging the wine with gusto.

"Now for your master's sake, not a word to a soul about this hubbub."

"Right you are, sir! But that there pryin' Robinson wur on t' bridge five minutes since. And, by gum, here he is!"

A determined knock and ring came at the front door. Minnie helped by Hart, had just escorted Mrs. Bates to the kitchen.

"Let me go!" said Furneaux, darting out into the hall. He opened the door, and thrust his face into the police constable's, startling the latter considerably. Before Robinson could utter a syllable, the detective hissed a question.

"Did anyone cross the bridge after that shot was fired?"

"Nun—No, sir," stuttered the other.

"You saw no one running along the road?"

"Saw nothing, sir!"

"Very well. Glad to find you are on the job. Don't let on you met me here. Good night!"

Mighty is Scotland Yard with the Provincial police. Robinson was back on his self imposed beat before he well realized that he knew neither why nor by whom nor by what sort of weapon the commotion had been created. But he was quite sure the noise came from the garden front of Mr. Grant's house.

"That little hop-o'-me-thumb thinks he's smart—damn smart," he communed angrily, "but I've taken a line of me own, an' I'll stick to it, though the Yard sends down twenty men!"

He heard footsteps coming down a paved footpath which ran like a white riband through the cobble-headed width of the high street, and withdrew swiftly to the shelter of a disused tannery adjoining the village end of the bridge. A cloaked female figure sped past. Though the night was rather dark for June, he had no difficulty in recognising Doris Martin's graceful movements. No other girl in Steynholme walked like her. She was slim enough to dispense with tight corsets and tall enough to wear low heeled shoes, nor did she need to pinch her toes in order to gain the semblance of small feet.

After her went Robinson, keyed to exultation by this outcome of his watchfulness. She was going to the Hollies of course. The road led to Knoleworth, and no young woman of her age in the village would dream of taking a lonely walk in the country at ten o'clock at night.

For a man of his height and somewhat ponderous build, the policeman followed with real stealth. Thus, when she turned in at the gate, he was there by the time she had reached the front door. He heard her pull the bell. Curiously enough to his thinking, Furneaux again appeared. "Is Mr. Grant at home?" he heard Doris say.

"Yes." Will you come in?" replied the detective.

"Is he—is all well here?"

"Quite, I assure you. But do come in. I'l escort you home. I'm going to the inn in five minutes."

Doris, after hesitating a little, entered.

Robinson crept on tiptoe over a stretch of gravel, and took to the shrubbery. It was high time, he thought, that the local constabulary learnt what was going on in that abode of mystery.

Large doses of pills for the liver are not as efficient as small doses.

The big dose purges its way through the system fast, but does not cleanse thoroughly.

The small dose (if right) acts gently on the liver, and gives it just the slight help it needs to do its own work, and do it well.

Take one pill regularly, until you know you are all right.

MYSTERY OF THE PLANETS.

Science Cannot Penetrate the Hazy Veils That Mask Them.

It is not known definitely whether the planet Venus rotates. If it does it may possibly have a life and a vegetation like our own, though we suspect that it is clothed in eternal cloud. Of Saturn's rings we cannot say whether they consist of millions of tiny moons like brickbats or whether they may be even smaller still—a veil of shining dust.

Of Jupiter we can only say that it is covered with clouds, though of their substance we know nothing, and that according to Professor Lowell and Sir William Huggins some of the bands we see on it may be rifts in the clouds revealing the body of the planet. Little lines crisscross these bands. Photographs of Jupiter taken at Flagstaff observatory, Arizona, seem to indicate that these lines, too, are the upper clouds of Jupiter.

But whenever we see a planet we see it badly. Even Mars, the most clearly revealed of them all, is constantly obscured by a refracting haze, so that even the famous "canals,"—though nearly 500 in number, are only perceptible a few at a time, and an unskilled observer would probably not make them out at all.

Sandstorms, sometimes snowstorms, sweep the surface of the planet, and because the winds of Mars are very gentle and slow moving these occurrences take a long time to pass by. A snowstorm on Mars—if indeed it was a snowstorm and not merely a fog—once lasted three weeks.

Historic Pawnee Rock.

A short distance north of Pawnee Rock station, Kansas, is a high southward facing cliff of sandstone known as Pawnee rock, projecting as a rocky promontory from the broad ridge that forms the north side of the valley. The elements and the hand of man, says a report of the geological survey, have made great changes in its size and appearance since the days when the Santa Fe trail passed along its base. Here there were many encounters between the savages and the whites and also between hostile bands of Indians, for the place is noted not only in pioneer history, but in Indian traditions as well. Names and initials of many travelers, from the early trappers and the "forty-niners" to the later army detachments, have been scratched on the smooth faces of the ledges.

Birds That Sing During Flight.

In reference to a recent paragraph about birds that sing while flying a correspondent writes:

"The cuckoo is a fine bird that sings as it flies, especially when pursued by angry little birds whose nest it has attempted to invade, as I have several times seen and heard. Then the tree pipit and whitethroat generally rise from their perch and flutter in the air while singing, besides swallows, if you count their twittering as a song. I have also seen and heard missel thrush and blackbird sing while flying, but only very rarely."—London Mail.

(Christian Science Monitor).

The aim of the three great democratic allies, to whose ranks Russia may now be added, is that the present war shall and not only in a manner as decisive as any of the decisive struggles of the past, but with a scientific decisiveness which shall make the waging of war, amongst civilised nations, difficult, if not impossible, in the future.

Early June in the Evangeline country.

APPLE GROWING IN NOVA SCOTIA

THERE is no part of Canada where apple production is more successfully carried on than in the Annapolis Valley of Nova Scotia. The principal reason for this, apart from the fact that soil and climatic conditions are favorable, is that practically all of the large commercial orchards are situated in a continuous and closely connected chain. "The Valley" is approximately 80 miles in length, with an average width of 9 miles. There are about 46 shipping stations in that area, all being on the main line of the Dominion Atlantic Railway with its terminus at Halifax. Consequently the facilities for shipping and for export are perfect.

There is one other reason for the success with which fruit growing is carried on in Nova Scotia, and that is the systematic manner in which the fruit is marketed. Over one-half of the entire apple crop is packed and marketed co-operatively. Each particular section of the Annapolis Valley has its own co-operative association, and all these subsidiary companies are responsible to one main selling association, the United Fruit Companies. All of the fruit marketed by this organization is uniformly packed in accordance with specific grading rules and marketed under the brand of the central selling body. The details concerning the operating methods of the United Fruit Companies (too lengthy to be outlined here) are well worth careful study. Their headquarters are at Berwick which is the principal apple shipping station.

By far the greater portion of Nova Scotian apples is exported to Great Britain, the principal market being London. In the year 1911, which was a record season, almost 2,000,000 barrels of apples were marketed. At that time Nova Scotian fruit was introduced in the Prairie Provinces. There is every indication that shipments to those markets will be increased, inasmuch as the Gravenstein apple, for which Nova Scotia is famous, matures at a time when apples are in great demand in the Canadian West. A growing trade is also being developed with South America and South Africa, corresponding geographically to the trade in apples between British Columbia and Australia.

It is rather interesting to note that the apple barrel used in Nova Scotia contains only 96 quarts, as compared with the 112 quart barrel of Ontario. The Canadian Government regulations call for a minimum size of 96 quarts and Nova Scotia has adopted that minimum. The difference in the size of the two barrels must therefore be always taken into consideration when comparing the prices of Ontario and Nova Scotia apples in any particular market.

It is impossible to single out any variety of apple which is most successfully grown in Nova Scotia. Several varieties succeed equally well. Undoubtedly the province is most famous for the Gravenstein, because that variety is grown more extensively in the Annapolis Valley than in any other part of Canada. About 15 per cent of the apples marketed in Nova Scotia are Gravensteins. It is a tender, early fall apple, usually harvested between September 10th and 25th, and should be consumed under ordinary conditions by the end of October. If stored in a suitable cellar it will keep in prime condition until Christmas.

THE COAL SHORTAGE

THE anticipated shortage in hard coal affecting thousands of Canadian homes may become a reality next winter if consumers delay their orders to the dealers till fall.

This is the opinion of railway men who say that while they are doing everything possible to assist Mr. C. A. Magrath, Controller of Canadian Fuel Supply, the co-operation of the consumer also is necessary to meet our undoubtedly serious situation.

The hard coal used in the east for the average furnace is imported from the United States, and the problem of supply is largely a problem of transportation. Owing to the shortage of labor and a very hard winter, the Canadian Railways last year faced a severe congestion of traffic, which was accentuated during the winter months by the demand for furnace coal.

In order to prevent if possible a similar condition next season, the railways are concentrating every effort on the supply of coal-carrying equipment. The Canadian Pacific, for instance, has decided to adapt at once and concentrate a considerable portion of additional freight equipment for coal haulage, increasing its capacity during the next six months by cars capable of hauling over a million additional tons during that period. It is withdrawing a large number of cars from other services, is adapting other types of cars, and has just put into force a new rule under which every foreign coal car is at once returned empty to the mines for fresh coal instead of being delayed by loading with return freight, although this move means added expense.

Within a few days the coal merchants will thus have prospect of rapid deliveries, but unless consumers co-operate by giving their orders to the merchants now for their winter supplies, then unloading cars quickly, the congestion experienced last winter will be accentuated and prices may rise to unheard of heights. Consumers are also recommended to be exceptionally careful in the use of coal, avoiding waste and burning wood where possible. The merchants themselves are also being asked to co-operate by having cars loaded to the maximum capacity and by promptly unloading the cars as soon as received, thus releasing them for further service.

The situation apparently is more serious in the East than in the West, owing to the accepted use of box cars in the latter territory. The supply of the open cars required in the east is, however, limited, and unless deliveries are spread more than they have been over the summer months by the recommended co-operation of consumers, the approaching winter will come with tragic force upon the Canadians in Ontario, Quebec, and the Maritime Provinces.

The coal, according to Mr. Magrath, is available. The cars, according to the railways, are coming—but will carry the coal only if the orders are known before winter puts on the brakes.

Canadians Taking Shelter

Canadian citizens in the United States would be classed as "friendly aliens" and would not be in danger of internment unless they gave aid and comfort to the enemy. If living in New York State they would have to be registered under the new State law for registration of aliens, which, we think, applies to aliens generally. Being technically subjects of a foreign State, they are not liable to military service in the United States; and in the absence of special legislation the only way to deal with them would be to deport them to Canada. They could not claim "a right of asylum" under the circumstances.

Lucky Miss at Ladysmith

Speaking at Liverpool, Admiral Sir Hedworth Meux related a story of General Smuts, whom he said he had met at dinner a few nights previously. "You are an old enemy of mine, I believe," said the General, when they were introduced. "Yes," replied Admiral Meux. "Well," said General Smuts, "do you know that one of the first shots fired by your guns at Ladysmith nearly killed me?" "I said, 'Thank God it didn't,'" replied the Admiral.

Suffered With Heart For Ten Years

Would Nearly Smother

There is nothing that brings with it such fear of impending death as to wake up in the night with that awful sense of smothering. The uncertain and irregular heart action causes the greatest distress of both mind and body.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are the only remedy that can give prompt relief and effect a complete cure in cases of such severity.

They strengthen and invigorate the heart, so that it beats strong and regular, and tone up the nervous system so that the cause of so much anxiety becomes a thing of the past.

Mrs. M. O. McCready, Wapella, Sask., writes: "I am not much of a believer in medicines, but I feel that it is only right for me to let you know what your wonderful remedy has done for me, and in a very short time, too. I had suffered terribly with my heart for nearly ten years, could scarcely do any work, and would nearly smother at times. I had many remedies, some only relieving me for a time. I got a box of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills and felt so much better that I kept on using them, and can truthfully say I feel like a new woman.

"I would advise anyone with heart trouble to use them."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c, or three boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

AMBASSADOR A "DANDY"

Isvolsky, the Russian, Knew Dressing and Politics Well

M. Isvolsky, Russian Ambassador in London, was ambassador in Paris from 1910 to 1917. To take up that post he resigned the office of Foreign Minister in the Russian Government. It was M. Isvolsky who as Foreign Minister came to London in 1908 on a special mission, which resulted in the cementing of the new understanding between his country and Great Britain. He knows European politics inside out, having served his country's diplomacy in the Balkans, at the Vatican, at Munich, at Tokio—where he was one of the few of his countrymen who foresaw the Russo-Japanese War—and at Copenhagen, before taking office as Foreign Minister.

He was known a broad-shouldered, pleasant-faced, perfectly-dressed man, with an eyeglass usually riveted in his right eye. They used to tell an amusing story of his scrupulous care in the selection of clothes. When he was minister at Munich he kept waiting a distinguished visitor for three-quarters of an hour while he was closeted with his tailor. "I am exceedingly sorry," was his apology, "but the special courier with whom I have been engaged had to catch a train to Berlin, and his business was urgent." "Yes," replied the visitor, pointing to an immaculate pair of trousers hanging over the back of a chair, "I perceive he was in such a hurry that he has forgotten his portfolio."

COLD-BLOODED MURDER

Toronto Man Wrote of Horrors of Air Raid

In a vivid description of a big air raid over Folkestone, George A. Mackenzie, Toronto, residing in the English seaside resort, wrote of the horrors which he witnessed: After it was all over he had the feeling, he said, that the whole diabolical business was just cold-blooded murder. The noise was horrible. Bombs fell with terrible detonation, but most of the people in his vicinity were quite calm. On two streets not far distant two large houses were shattered. In his own house one pane was smashed. On a street about a quarter of a mile away a bomb scooped a symmetrical hole in the asphalt road. Perhaps the most pathetic sight of all, wrote Mr Mackenzie, was a house on a residential street with one side cut clean off, leaving the rooms and staircase exposed, the furniture standing and the pictures on the wall. A servant was buried in the debris. There were 17 aeroplanes in use.

SOME GIVE, NOT LEND MONEY TO THE EMPIRE

Missionaries, Children, Let Unknown Villages Send Gifts to London—Romance of New Spirit

Among a heap of pamphlets connected with the war is one by James Douglas with the suggestive title of "Treasury Romances." Mr. Douglas tells that the war has created a new kind of citizen—one who does not lend his money to the State but gives it. This new citizen, we are informed, is sometimes a man, sometimes a woman, sometimes a child. He lives in all parts of the Empire and all parts of the world. He gives his money to the State because he cannot fight, and wishes it to fight for him.

As a sample, Mr. Douglas asks where is Sandakan, B.N.B.? Sandakan, B.N.B.? There is romance in the sound of Sandakan, and surely it was romance that moved a firm in Sandakan to send $2,500 to the British Chancellor of the Exchequer with this message: In this territory we contribute nothing towards the Imperial Finances, while at the same time we enjoy all the benefits of British protection. We are, therefore, anxious to have a share, however small, in the financial burden which our fellow-countrymen have to bear at the present time, and by disposing of the above sum for us you will be assisting us to discharge a welcome duty.

Business is business, but this is the sheer romance of patriotism. It is a far cry from Sandakan to St. Louis, but the same spirit impels a business man there to send $500 with a similar message: The British Empire has been forced into a war which may be a struggle for the life of the nation, and we of British birth in foreign lands who cannot devote our lives to the service of our country may at least uphold the right and encourage our people at home by sharing the financial burden.

From Isles of the Sea

From St. Louis we leap to Matsqui, in British Columbia. The Municipality of Matsqui sends $250. A civic romance! From Matsqui we fly to Penning Island, which sent two gifts, and then to West China, whence comes a gift from an old missionary who sends it to the Chancellor with these words: I wish you with the national burden on your shoulders to understand how the rank and file of us wish to carry with you the nation's sorrow and fulfill its obligations. A scrap of paper becomes burnished and imperishable gold leaf when inscribed with England's signature to a treaty.

Interesting Messages

And so it goes. A Baptist Minister in Ontario sent $5; an American citizen in Summit, New Jersey, contributed a cheque made payable to "The British Empire"; a Canadian sent a cheque for $1,000 "to cover moneys received by me whilst an engineer student at Keyham" nearly half a century ago; an old man in Saskatchewan sent a cheque for $100 to help beat the Kaiser, whom he described as "a compound of Nero, Judas, and Ananias." A little girl sent a shilling out of her pocket-money, "to help you pay for the war"; her daddy wrote a footnote that this was entirely her own idea, and had cleaned out her money-box, and "Please don't return it whatever you do, or you will give great offence." Many are the instances given of gifts from rich and poor alike. They show that the spirit of sacrifice is abroad, and they reveal how profound is the love for the British Empire in all sorts of out-of-the-way places throughout the world.

Higher Goes the Fighting

When the war began, flying was mostly done at from 4,000 feet to 6,000 feet, said Mr. Louis Coatalen at the Aeronautical Society yesterday. By 1917 our airmen rarely went over the lines at less than 16,000 feet, and fighting had taken place at 21,000 feet and 22,000 feet.

HOCKEY FOR ENGLAND

Canadian Professionals Gave London an Interesting Exhibition

How the 228th Battalion team, formerly of the National Hockey Association, made blase London sit up and take notice in a game at the Princess Rink in London, which is one of the real exclusive clubs of the big city, was told in a letter to Canada from Sergt. Goldie Prodgers, former Quebec Wanderer and Canadian star, with the soldier team. A big attendance was amazed and impressed with the speedy skating and clever work with a hockey stick of the soldier boys. Sergt. Predgers gave the line-up of the two teams, which was played five men a side, and who lined up as follows: goal, Lockhart; point, Reynolds; cover, G. McNamara; forwards, Burns and Keats. Goal, Montgomery; point, M. McNamara; cover, Prodgers; forwards, Arbour and Myers. It was a team selected by George McNamara against a quintette looked after by brother Howard, and George's team won by a score of thirteen to twelve, after overtime play. According to Prodgers they scored a lot more goals than they could towards the end of their season in the N.T.A. The ice surface in the Princess Rink is surrounded by a glass partition, and the chappies and their lady friends sit behind the enclosure drinking tea and eating cake while they watch the game. Sergt. Prodgers says that after he had been sent into the fence by a body-check from Gordon Keats one of the Englishmen remarked to his lady friend, "My word, isn't the game stunning," which "Goldie" thought was a lot more appropriate remark than the spectator intended it to be.

WIRE BOX PARAPETS

Ingenious Arrangement Used by Italians in Alpine Warfare

An extremely ingenious arrangement for constructing a temporary parapet was shown to me on a sector of the Alpine Front, writes a military man, where there is no sand or loose earth but an unlimited supply of loose rock. It consisted of six sheets of wire mesh so hinged that they opened up into a rectangular box about the size and shape of a five-gallon oil can. Folded up into a neat package, one was given to each soldier taking part in an advance. When the trench which was the object of the attack was occupied, the wire sides were unfolded, hooked together at the corners to form a box, and filled with loose fragments of rock. A row of these boxes formed the ideal parapet, an especial point in favour of which was that the wire mesh confined the rock fragments securely in case they were struck by a bullet.

STOP CATARRH! OPEN NOSTRILS AND HEAD

Says Cream Applied in Nostrils Relieves Head Colds at Once.

If your nostrils are clogged and your head is stuffed and you can't breathe freely because of a cold or catarrh, just get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm at any drug store. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic cream into your nostrils and let it penetrate through every pair passage of your head, soothing and healing the inflamed; swollen mucous membrane and you get instant relief.

Ah! how good it feels. Your nostrils are open, your head is clear, no more hawking, snuffling, blowing, no more headache, dryness or struggling for breath. Ely's Cream Balm is just what sufferers from head colds and catarrh need. It's a delight.

HUNGRY OUTLOOK FOR HUNS.

Germans Warned to Tighten Their Belts and Starve Gracefully.

A despatch from Geneva, Switzerland, via London, says that the food situation in Germany may grow worse, but it scarcely can become better. This is scarcely the outstanding feature of Germany's great problem.

The German people as yet are not starving, and they have yet provisions in adequate quantities to support life, while in the case of further decreases in available supplies there is still the institution of compulsory "soup kitchens," the most economical method of making all foodstuffs go as far as possible, to stand between Germany and any forced termination to the war through an absolute lack of food.

Life for the civilian population of Germany on the present scanty allowance of food, however, is far from pleasant, though the German newspapers are fond of referring to conditions last winter as exceptional. They also say that the short rations are due largely, to bad harvests and like to intimate that normal crops of grain and potatoes in the coming summer may end the principal food difficulties.

Very little help, Adolph von Batocki, president of the Food Regulation Board, stated in a recent address, can be expected from outside sources in the future. Neighboring countries, he said, being under the steadily increasing pressure of the British sea control, would have little or nothing available for export to Germany this year, and the Germans must pull in their belts a notch tighter and reconcile themselves to holding out on present allowances.

Bread From Unground Grain.

One reason advanced for the high cost of food abroad is the shortage in manual labor due to the war. An ingenious method of dispensing with a large part of this, hitherto considered necessary before the grain in the field can appear in the form of bread upon the table, has been invented in Italy.

According to Agricoltura Toscana, an excellent bread, not only highly nutritious, but delicious in flavor and appetizing of taste, is furnished by the municipal ovens of Bergame from wheat which has never been milled.

It is important that the grain should be of good quality and free from foreign material. It is first carefully washed and sifted and then placed in tepid water to soak for a period of from forty-eight to sixty hours, according to the degree of hardness. At the end of this time it has become "vitalized," i.e., it has begun to germinate, and has therefore become quite soft and tender and has undergone profound chemical modifications.

When the proper degree of vitalization has been attained the grain is fed directly into a kneading machine, where it is triturated and kneaded till it is ready to be molded into loaves. It is then allowed to ferment or "rise" for the proper length of time, whereupon it is placed in the baker's oven.

The bread is gray in color, and being made of the whole grain is much richer in food value than bread from flour, containing a higher percentage of mineral salts, lecithin and vegetable pepsin. There is a saving not only in manual labor, but in wastage, so that a given weight of grain yields a considerable larger number of loaves when unground than when converted into flour. Another advantage is that there is less risk of adulteration than when flour is used.

German Peace Terms.

The New Republic vouches for the accuracy of the German peace terms as printed in the Journal de Geneve as follows: "Evacuation of France, except the mining district of Briey, in exchange for a channel port (Calais or Dunkirk) and an indemnity of 15,000,000 francs; restoration of Belgium except that Belgium is not to be allowed to have a national army, permanent German garrisons in Namur, Liege, and Antwerp, control of Belgian railroads and ports, and favorable treatment in an economic treaty. We are able to say that the source of this information is reliable, and that the Journal de Geneve is substantially correct in its statements, though they are incomplete. The German Government is not yet prepared to renounce conquest, and the refusal to reveal her terms last January was due to knowledge on Germany's part that a statement of them would consolidate belligerent and neutral opinion against her. Her hope was to secure a conference, detach imperial Russia, and then extort these conquests from the isolated western powers. That is why the conference Germany proposed was impossible, and why President Wilson's request for an announcement of German policy was so gruffly rejected."

The Cedars of Lebanon.

It is believed that only about four hundred of the famous cedars of Lebanon remain, and they have been enclosed by a stone wall, necessary to protect the smaller trees from the ever-hungry mountain goat. The cedars stand on a small plateau at an elevation of slightly over six thousand feet. A winding road from Beherreh leads up the slope to the ancient trees.

A COALLESS COUNTRY

Italy's Amazing Feat to Produce Motor Power

An American paper writes: Perhaps the most amazing feat of Italy since the war began is the development of its munitions factories. It must not be forgotten that there is no coal in Italy, that there is no iron, except for one small mine on the island of Elba, and almost no copper. All coal and iron and nearly all the copper must be imported. England and Germany had been the great sources of supply. Germany cut off, and England needing all her coal and iron for her own factories, left Italy in a fearful quandary. The worst difficulty was coal. So Italy's factories learned to do without coal. Italy is rich in waterfalls, and these waterfalls were instantly put to work. Italy has led the world in the production of electric energy and water power, and cascade after cascade was harnessed to a giant turbine and started to producing electricity for running the factories, lighting the cities and furnishing power for the railroads.

Artificial Leg Built in 300 B.C. Still Intact

There is preserved in the Royal College of Surgeons, London, what is probably the very earliest specimen extant of an artificial leg, having been unearthed in 1858 from a tomb at Capua, which was built at least as far back as 300 B.C. It is made with pieces of thin bronze, fastened by bronze rivets to a hollow wooden core, and is modelled so as to accurately represent the form of a real leg. The outside is believed to have been enamelled flesh-color, and the upper part of the artificial leg was connected with the living stump by means of a circlet of sheet bronze edged with small rivets, probably used to fasten a leather lining.

The French Inflict Great Losses on The Foe

Germans Make Another Air Raid On England

The Austrian Statement Admits Very Heavy Sacrifices Of Troops

Official Report From Vienna States That Austrian-German Troops Suffered Heavy Losses at Hands of Russians---The Latter Captured More Than 18,000 Prisoners in First Two Days of Offensive---German Offensive Against French Cost Them Heavily Without Gaining Any Ground ---British Flyers Make a Raid.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

VIENNA, July 4.—Heavy sacrifices of Austrian-German troops are admitted by official statement to-day, which also states that positions taken by the Russians were regained by the Austrians.

PETROGRAD, July 4.—Russia's bag of prisoners in the first forty-eight hours of her new offensive was raised to more than 18,000 to-day. The War Office reported that during the attacks of Sunday and Monday 18,000 men and 300 officers were taken. In addition 28 big guns of various types and 33 machine guns were captured.

PARIS, July 4.—Undismayed by their terrific losses, the German army command throughout last night hurled great forces into battle in another titanic effort to break the French grip on the Californie Plateau. The French official statement to-day detailed the heaviest sort of fighting, but repulse of the German offensive at all points. "The Germans attacked all night all positions north of Jouy to Californie Plateau, engaging with big and effective forces and special attacking parties," the statement says. "They failed completely, losing very heavily. At a certain point in the attack their assaulting waves were annihilated. The Germans gained a few points at first from which they were later ejected by counter attacks everywhere. They did not keep a single yard of our positions."

Last night's was the fifth tremendous offensive blow the Germans have unsuccessfully launched at the French hold on the Chemin-Des-Dames front.

LONDON, July 4.—"Good results" were achieved in British bombing raids carried out over the Bruges docks and the Lichtervelde ammunition depots behind the German line Monday night and Tuesday, an Admiralty statement announced to-day. Several tons of bombs were dropped. All the British aeroplanes returned safely.

LONDON, July 4.—Berlin statement to-day declares that "In spite of the employment of fresh forces the Russians did not make any advance and suffered heavy losses. The repulse of French attacks east of Cerni are also reported.

LONDON, July 4.—All Field Marshal Haig had to report to-day from the British front was artillery engagements at numerous points.

LONDON, July 4.—The weekly sinkings by submarines or mines last week announced by the Admiralty to-day, is the lowest for the past month. Fifteen vessels of more than 1,600 tons were sunk. Five of less than 1,600 tons were destroyed. Eleven fishing vessels were lost. Sixteen vessels were unsuccessfully attacked.

AMSTERDAM, July 4.—Word received here to-day of the secret court martial and execution at Liege of Mlle. Grande Prez and her brother on espionage charges according to the report received here. Both were shot.

(By Frank W. Getty, United Press Staff Correspondent)

LONDON, July 4.—The result of Britain's great spring "comb out" to raise a new army of 500,000 for Sir William Robertson was eagerly awaited here to-day. Absolute secrecy has surrounded the details of Britain's latest effort to procure men. Whether the full complement of 500,000 has been obtained will not be known until the official announcement, but it is certain that several hundred thousand of those heretofore exempted have been drafted. The "comb out" plan started with the withdrawal of many men from formerly "protected" occupations, chiefly the munition factories where older men from less essential trades took their places. A rigid search for slackers was also instituted. Popular sentiment throughout England has supported the "comb out." This is almost England's last sweep of her manhood. If it has failed, or if still more men are required, one of two things is inevitable—Raising or lowering of the age limits or withdrawal of men essential in industry.

LONDON, July 3.—Two Canadian soldiers, at least, were in the right spirit to appreciate Dominion Day here. These were Privates F. C. MacDonald, 104726, of Foxwarren, Manitoba, and J. O'Brien, 73194, of Moose Jaw, who had just arrived in London after escaping from a German prison camp where for the past year they were held. MacDonald, who enlisted in the First Mounted Rifles, Winnipeg, was captured in June of last year, after being wounded in the knee and eyes from shrapnel, but recovered from both injuries. O'Brien, belonging to the 28th Battalion, was buried for two hours in a crater, but was taken out unhurt, both men being sent to Dahmen Camp. Wretched treatment from the officers combined with bad food and unhealthy surroundings made them determined from the outset to get away if possible. MacDonald made four attempts and O'Brien made two. Each failure was punished by periods of bread and water in dark underground cells with bare boards. Finally they managed to slip away while engaged in a working party—just how cannot be explained. They still retained their identity discs on wrists, which proved their story to Dutch authorities, who showed them every kindness.

General Turner assured both men that being theoretically prisoners they would not be sent to the front again.

Both MacDonald and O'Brien are Canadian born.

LONDON, July 4.—A Norwegian citizen, Alfred Sagrin, has been arrested here charged with espionage in behalf of Germany. Official announcement to-day said his case was "gravely important." He is being tried by a general court martial.

The British authorities do not give further details of the plot in which Sagrin is presumably concerned, but it may be in connection with the recent German efforts to destroy Norwegian commerce.

Month's Furlough For Salvation Army Officers

Adjutant and Mrs. McElhiney have been granted a month's furlough and will spend part of it at Jubilee Point and the other part at Chemong. Mrs. McElhiney's health has not been satisfactory for some time and an enforced rest at this time is quite of necessity for her future usefulness to her work and to her family.

Captain Foster will arrive on Thursday to take charge in their absence. A welcome meeting to the Captain will be held to-morrow night at the Temple, in which both band and songsters will take part. The service will be preceded by an open air service at the corner of Simcoe and George street.

Adjutant and Mrs. McElhiney will very likely start their furlough on Saturday.

CONVENTION HAS FAIR PROSPECTS IF IT IS LEFT ALONE

T. P. O'Connor Finds That Many American People Regard It as a Great Opportunity For Settling the Irish Question

ARE VERY HOPEFUL

By T. P. O'Connor

NEW YORK, July 3.—T. P. O'Connor, M.P., who arrived here last week to lay before the friends of Ireland the real issue in relation to a greater Ireland said to-day that he had found that the coming convention was attracting a great deal of attention in America.

"Many here regard it as a great opportunity for settling the Irish question and look forward to its proceedings with good wishes and with hope," said Mr. O'Connor.

"Of course, there are here, as there in Ireland, a certain number of people who denounce the convention," he continued. "They are already doing their best to destroy its chances. That, I think, is the object of some of the disturbances that have broken out in Ireland," he added. "Of course, the object is not to help towards a settlement to create anarchy; the hope being that out of this anarchy may come the chances of starting an insurrection for an Irish republic. I regard the purpose and the means as outside practical politics, and though I am sure the rank and file of the men who favour this method are honest, I cannot understand the intelligent and educated men accepting such incredible responsibilities.

"The object, and possibly the result of these operations of the Convention may be to make its task more difficult, if not impossible.

"There are two sections of Irish opinion, which have been hostile hitherto to the Irish demand which have been coming round to our side a good deal recently. The first of these sections is the Irish Unionist. These are of the South. These men have been amongst the most resolute opponents of Home Rule in the past. Some of them certainly are Catholic, but the majority are Protestant; and most of them have been associated with the landlord party, and therefore have been in fierce collision with the popular forces. But in recent years these gentlemen have come to the conclusion that Home Rule was inevitable; and as they were Irishmen, living in Ireland, with genuine Irish feeling, they desired to become on good terms with their Nationalist neighbors; and in an honest and friendly attempt to combine all

ANOTHER AIR RAID

German Aeroplanes Dropped Bombs on Harwich This Morning Inflicting 30 Casualties, Mostly Women and Children

EIGHT WERE KILLED

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, July 4.— (Bulletin.) — Fifteen German aeroplanes raided Harwich, on the Essex coast, at 7 a. m. to-day. Eight were killed and twenty-two were injured.

The War Office official report says the number of German aeroplanes was 12 or 14. Official list of casualties shows eight killed and 22 hurt, mostly women and children. Only slight material damage was done by bombs dropped. The squadron made off to sea at once after the attack. Harwich is a seaport town in Essex county, seven miles east of Manningtree. It is about 60 miles from London.

Flat Wheel On Street Car Annoys Residents

The street car on Charlotte street, west, carries a flat wheel that bumps along the track altogether too noisily, according to complaints from the residents which Aldermen Stratton and Duncan passed on to the Council last night. The Company will be asked to eliminate the nuisance. Ald. Stratton also referred to the speed at which the late cars travel on Park street. About 11 o'clock on the last trip or two, and again at midnight, when the system is open to the "owl" car that meets the trains, the rate is excessive and the cars roar along disturbing the residents in their first sleep.

Ald. Dobbin admitted that the Park Street line might be a fair speedway, but it was a mere turtle's path compared with George street. A year ago, he said, he had complained to the Company of the noise of the midnight car, but without redress.

Where Motorists Can Help a Lot

Peterborough has well over 600 motor cars—the city also has over one hundred returned soldiers, a number of them badly wounded. How many of the 600 car owners have ever taken a wounded soldier for a ride—how many have ever stopped to give him a lift when they see him hobbling down street on crutches or with a stick? Think it over, motorists. You have a golden opportunity to help the man who has done his bit. Ask the man in khaki to jump in when you pass him on the way down town, or if you want to take a party out for an hour or two let the War Veterans know. Many soldiers would be glad of the chance.

Enthusiastic Meeting of Local Branch of G.W.V.A. in Barrie Building Last Night---Fourteen New Members Approved Including Lieut.-Col. Johnston and Lieut.-Col. Mills.

CLUB IS FLOURISHING

The semi-annual meeting of the Peterborough branch of the Great War Veterans' Association was held last evening in the Barrie Building, when, at a large and enthusiastic gathering, the new officers to handle the affairs of the Club for the next six months were elected. The meeting was one of the best the Association has held and during the evening fourteen applications for membership were favourably considered, bringing the membership of the local branch up to seventy-five members in good standing, and this number will be considerably augmented in the near future. Among the new members were Lieut.-Col. T. J. Johnston, formerly of the 93rd Battalion and Lieut.-Col. Jos. Mills, of the 2nd Battalion, both of whom were in attendance at last night's meeting.

The election of officers was the big feature of the evening and as will be seen by the list given below the Association has shown good judgment in its selections. Every officer chosen has been on the firing line in France or Belgium and the slate is representative of many units in the Canadian Expeditionary forces, while Canadians in the Imperial forces have two representatives on the board in the persons of Sergt. Chas. Payne and Pte. Sidney Whatley, of the Wiltshires. There were contests for all the positions, except for the executive, the four members of which were unanimously elected.

Following is the list:

Hon. President—Capt. J. H. Burnham, M.P.

President—Sergt. W. Dalliday, late of the 3rd Battalion.

Vice President—Lance Corp. Fred Long, late of the 16th Battalion.

Secretary—Sergt. T. R. Cooper, late of the 4th Battery, C.F.A.

Financial Secretary—Pte. Fred Haggart, late of the 3rd Canadian Pioneer Battalion.

Treasurer—Sergt. Peter Victor, late of the 2nd Battalion.

Sergeant-at-arms—Pte. R. H. Muir, late of the 21st Battalion.

Executive Committee—Sergt. Chas. Payne, late of the 1st Wiltshires and 93rd Battalion; Lance Corp. R. Irwin; 21st Battalion; Pte. E. Mogley, 2nd Battalion and Pte. Sidney Whatley, 1st Wiltshire Battalion.

The new and old executives will hold a joint meeting next week.

THE PENSION PROBLEM.

Amongst the general business taken up was the discussion of a resolution forwarded for approval from the Dominion headquarters of the Association in regard to the present scheme of basing pensions. The resolution expressed the opinion that after a man had been pronounced physically fit by the various boards he has to face on going into the service, his pension should be arranged by a consideration only of his condition on discharge, it being understood that he was absolutely fit when taken on. At present there is a tendency for medical boards and consequently the Pension Board, to say in many cases, that a man's condition is due primarily to some ailment or

More Peterborough Soldiers Are Back From Overseas Service

Big Squad of Wounded and Invalided Soldiers Arrived in City Last Night---Another Quota Expected Soon--Many Units Represented--To-day's General Military News.

Another party of Peterborough soldiers invalided home from France and England, reached home last night, arriving on the 9 o'clock G.T.R. train. The squad was larger than the authorities expected, as word had been received telling only of a couple of men who were due to arrive. Ald Duncan was on hand to represent the city.

Among the most seriously injured in the party was Lance Corp. Wm. Saxby, Smith street. Lance Corp. Saxby enlisted here early in the war with the 21st Battalion, and after considerable service at the front was very badly wounded at St. Eloi early last spring. He has been undergoing treatment ever since and his arm is in very bad shape. Lance Corp. Saxby has two brothers overseas.

Another wounded man in bad shape who came home last night was Pte. Jas. Tierney, who enlisted here with the 59th Battalion. He went overseas with that unit and was transferred to the 24th Montreal battalion at the front. In the Somme battle last September he was badly wounded in the right foot, as well as receiving a dose of gas. He has had two operations on his foot and for six months was in hospital at Manchester, Eng. Pte. Tierney has to return to Kingston for two months' convalescent treatment.

Among the other soldiers who arrived in last night's party were Gunner Wm. McLaughlin, who went overseas with a draft from the 74th Battery, Pte. Wm. Field, Sr., who went over with the 59th, and Sergt. Wm. Jones and Fred Storey, members of the 93rd. They have been returned for duty in Canada and have been attached to the special service battalion at Kingston.

Pte. Chas. Keliele, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, was another member of last night's party. Pte. Keliele enlisted with the 93rd in the winter of 1915-1916, and after going overseas with Lieut.-Col. Johnston's unit was transferred to another Canadian battalion at the front. Last winter he was badly wounded in both legs.

Pte. Arthur Theobald, who enlisted here in January, 1915, with B squadron, 8th C.M.R., and went overseas with that unit, afterwards going to another Canadian Mounted Rifles battalion at the front, was another in last night's party. Pte. Theobald was in France for many months.

Pte. Tom Hatley, formerly of the Peterborough Fire Department, who went overseas with the 93rd Battalion returned with last night's party.

Mrs. Haylock, Ware street, has received the following letter from the Canadian Red Cross Society, 14-16 Cockspur street, London:

June 16th, 1917.

Dear Madam,—I beg to inform you that Private F. Haylock, No. 412473, 21st Batt., Can., who is now at Waverley Abby Hospital, Farnham, England, has been again visited very recently by one of our Red Cross workers, who reports that he had been out the day she went, that his face was improving. His recovery will be tedious but you must be thankful I am sure that he was not hit in a more fatal spot.

Yours truly,
Constance Scott,
M.T.B.

KINGSTON, July 3.— The thirty-three returned soldiers who arrived in the city to-day were driven to Barriefield Camp and taken on the strength of the Special Service Company.

There were 492 recruits enlisted in the 3rd Division in the last two weeks.

Dean J. C. Connell, of Queen's Medical College; Major D. E. Mundell, professor of surgery in Queen's, and Dr. W. Gibson, also of the college staff of the big military hospital here.

OTTAWA, July 3.—On June 22 there were 7,271 invalided members of the Canadian Expeditionary Force under the care of the Military Hospitals Commission in Canada, according to figures received to-day from the Commission's headquarters in Ottawa. The totals show an increase of 93 since June 15.

The latest returns from the Old Country show a decrease of 415 between June 1 and June 9.

Of the 7,271 in Canada, 5,949 are convalescents; 884 are in sanatoria for tuberculosis, and the remainder are in other institutions, chiefly general hospitals.

The Canadians invalided in the United Kingdom on June 8 numbered 22,087. Of these 10,941 were in Canadian hospitals, as against 10,881 on June 1. In the same period the number of Canadians in "British," or non-Canadian hospitals fell from 11,825 to 11,050. The number in sanatoria for tuberculosis, 76, was unchanged.

OTTAWA, July 4.—During the month of June, last ended a total of 8,750 recruits were secured in the Dominion. Canada's total enlistment from the beginning of the war now stands at 423,256. During the last two weeks of June Toronto division headed the list with 620 recruits raised, the Ottawa and Kingston district coming next with 452.

Wanted The King's Picture

Anyone who wishes to win the hearts of the Peterborough branch of the Great War Veterans can do so very easily. Just now the Veterans are in need of a picture of His Majesty, King George V. to hang in the Club Rooms. They have some excellent photographs there, but none of the King and as loyal sons of Empire they are anxious to have His Majesty's picture in the rooms. Who Will Help?

HELPING THE HARVEST.

The saying that the farmer feeds us all is not quite as true this year as others. We city dwellers are doing a good deal in the way of feeding ourselves. Never before have there been so many small gardens and vacant lots planted as this year, nor with better promise. But what we grow in the city is but a drop in the bucket. What we have to depend upon all through the coming winter is the crop of the farmers.

And that depends now a great deal upon the harvesting of it. What is said to be the chief need of the farmer now, in addition to warm, dry ripening weather, is help to harvest his crop. He got some help in seeding when he did not need that so much as he does help in harvesting. One grain will produce at least ten grains, and it will need ten more persons to help reap what one has own. The success of the harvest depends not a little on prompt saving in good condition.

There are many in town that can help; many not employed who could not only earn good wages, but give important national service in helping harvest the crops. We have many retired farmers, who, one would think, would like to have a few days on the farm again after the dullness of city life; like to have another smell of the fragrant hay or help gather the golden sheaves.

The call is to greater production; and the call to us city people who can do so is to help reap the harvest. To many it will be a holiday, and no holiday can be better spent than by getting a change of work, which "is as good as a rest," and by doing our bit, by helping greater production, which many are not in a position to do otherwise.

The Greater Peterborough Association seems to be as energetic and successful at play as at work.

GOOD ENOUGH TO BE KEPT.

That whisky and beer are not necessary lubricants of loyalty, is shown by the splendid success of the Dominion Day demonstrations throughout the province on Monday. In contrast with the incidents of great gatherings in other years, when loyalty to King Alcohol disputed the maintenance of peace and orderliness with sober citizenship, the day passed with a minimum of untoward incidents or a "morning after" mob at the police court. Everybody enjoyed the day better, and nobody was any the "worse" of liquor, or the worse for being without it. But thousands were much the better. Among the tens of thousands that gathered together on Monday, thousands were clothed and in their right minds, who would, if strong drink had been available, have been in rags and "in liquor;" thousands of wives and mothers were well clad, smiling and happy, to whom in the bibulous days a public holiday was marked by the greater drunkenness of the husband and father, and cowering, shrinking from ill-treatment at his home-coming. This has happened in many homes we know of, and in thousands and tens of thousands of homes we do not know. And all this is of untold worth. We are fighting, the world is fighting, to promote the conditions of home happiness, and we have in Ontario a silent, bloodless victory that brings happiness to the hopeless, and in addition makes for the material and moral betterment of the country. When we see and think of and appreciate the provincial benefit of twenty-two months of prohibition, there will not be many, if they let their hearts and their convinced judgment speak, who will cast an adverse vote to making prohibition as permanent as the Decalogue.

Hen-pecked King Constantine, in the case of Greece, put the fat in the fire; now Venizelos is putting the fighting fire in Greece.

THOROUGHNESS.

Britain evidently believes that what is worth doing is worth doing well. She applies that to all her national achievements at home, and she also applies it in the war zone. She does it in her preparations for fighting, and in her fighting, but either at home or abroad she does not demonstrate this cult of thoroughness any more thoroughly than in the building of roads. A correspondent at the front tells us that the British are converting the stones of the cities crushed by German explosives to making good roads. These roads are built, in the midst of the storm and stress of the sternest conflict; but they are built better than the roads the French people built for themselves in the days of peace. They are built for the temporary purposes of the war, but they are so built as to be a lasting monument to British thoroughness, and a lasting convenience to their ally, which will serve in times of peace the interests of France, as they are serving in the time of war to make a highway to peace that will be as lasting as the highways themselves. Herein is a lesson for us. We hardly do anything as thoroughly—build anything as solidly—as they do in Great Britain. Thus we have to do things oftener, not only to the ultimate increase of cost, but to the increase of loss that come from ineffectiveness in anything. We don't build our highways to last. We construct a street or highway that is to remain in public use for ever with less thoroughness than the British construct military roads that, as far as the use of the builders are concerned, will be useless in a few months—or a few weeks—as the war wave rolls on.

China is threatened with civil war—something to be comparatively welcomed, after the amount of uncivil war we have had.

THE FOOD PROBLEM.

Napoleon's traditional saying that "armies march on their stomachs," is as full of meaning to-day as it was a hundred years ago. The fighter to be successful must be efficient; must have bread as well as bravery. Lloyd George's "silver bullet" is largely useless unless it can be and is transmuted into food and munitions, and the greatest of these is food, for an army lacking in munitions, meeting an enemy in the same conditions, would be on equal terms, unless for this that the one that is best fed has the victory in its hands. The British government recognises this. Its tremendous naval superiority is employed to weaken the enemy by cutting off his food supply and to strengthen its own forces by providing adequate supply.

The Allies must be fed in order to fight; they are fighting for us, and we and our neighbours are the two chief sources to which the Allies can look for food resources. If we think that the chief duty and business and benefit of Hon. Mr. Hanna, as food controller, is to cut down food prices in Canada, we are mistaken. His chief duty as he sees it, and as it is, is to make food supply to our Allies the primary consideration, no matter what the effect on domestic prices, though incidentally much can be done to remove the conditions that artificially enhance the cost of living in the matter of food.

We are making big efforts at greater production, but though we may grow two heads of wheat where one grew before, the force of the injunction to saving and economical use remains the same or becomes greater.

Mr. Hanna goes into particulars as to our duty and urges larger employment of a dietary composed of perishable foods, so as to reserve for shipment food in more permanent form that can be shipped across the seas. A food controller can do little in the matter of conserving food supply without the cooperation of the people themselves. In the matter of saving the supply, the people have the matter in their own hands exclusively. Unless they cooperate, nothing will be done in this direction. As a people, Canadians are wasteful in the use of food as well as other things. They have not learned by necessity, unless till very recently, the virtue of economy; so that we can all the better answer the call for economy now—welcome it as a novelty. We may not see the necessity, and may reason that the little saving one of us can do will not count. By following Mr. Hanna's advice and using more freely of perishable foods to save others for shipment to our Allies, we can be of very substantial help. If by the saving use of food, each of our eight million people, save per head a single loaf of bread per week, we shall be providing for shipment to our Allies the wheat or flour equivalent of eight million loaves. So that the duty of individual effort to help provide the most important factor in winning this war, is evident. We can each do our bit and though it be small it becomes a part of a great, even a tremendous, service.

Not only will saving and cessation of waste in food have the effect of increasing supplies, but it will, in turn, tend to lower prices in the domestic market. Apart from the effects of food combines and cold storage segregation of supplies, the high prices for food depend a good deal upon the increased demand our extravagant, uneconomical use has created.

The fable of the mouse liberating the lion from the net, recalls how each of us, though humble our best effort, can help.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier's Relation To Two Conscription Situations

The political perplexities to-day have their origin, mainly in the general election of 1911. Two distinct campaigns were waged by the enemies of the Laurier Government. The English-speaking Provinces heard only the loyalty cry, which took the place of economic argument against the trade agreement with the United States. But reciprocity was not made an issue by the Government's opponents in French-speaking Canada. Mr. Bourassa found in the Naval Service Act a weapon more to his liking, and an opportunity to indulge his inveterate hatred of Sir Wilfrid Laurier as the chief impediment to his own ambitions, and to the Nationalist movement. To profit by the situation in Quebec, Conservative leaders betrayed the Canadian navy policy. Except in the constituencies where the English voters were in the majority or held the balance of power, the Conservative party in that Province merged itself entirely in the Nationalist propaganda. It followed Mr. Bourassa's leadership, and abetted his attempts to inflame race feeling and sow hatred of British connection.

Few English-speaking Canadians have an adequate conception of the malice and fury of the attacks upon the Liberal leader in his own Province. The Bourassas, the Blondins and the Sevignys played artfully upon the fears and credulity of a simple pastoral people. The habitant was told that his sons would be dragged from the plough by Laurier's minions and forced to serve on British warships, perhaps to be disembowelled by German cannon. The cry of conscription hurled at the Naval Service Act was repelled by Sir Wilfrid Laurier with absolute sincerity. It is, therefore, not a new issue in Quebec, as in the English Provinces. Sir Wilfrid Laurier has had to face it once before. In estimating his present attitude, it is but simple justice to recall the assurances he gave his compatriots when he was commending to them a great measure of co-operation with the mother country in naval defence. He feels, no doubt, that his honour was pledged in that campaign, and that he must escape the reproach of inconsistency if he is to maintain the personal authority which he hopes to exercise for national unity in the future as in the past. In addressing recruiting meetings during the present war he had also pointed to assurances of members of the Government that there would be no conscription, and he had joined in pronouncing against it, a view which he shared at the time, with nearly every public man in the country. Canadians opposed to his views ought to make allowance for the position in which he is placed by antecedent events. They ought also to remember with gratitude that he took his political life in his hands six years ago in order to perform a splendid Imperial service. If there are stormy times ahead he will be a unique moderating and reconciling influence, and will be animated as always, by the loftiest sentiments of patriotism.—The Globe.

disease of long standing, contracted before he joined the army, aggravated by the hardship of service, and to base pensions on this understanding.

The matter was discussed at some length by the local members last night and it was decided to write the Dominion Secretary for further details in connection with the resolution before taking action.

MEMBERSHIP BUTTONS.

Secretary Cooper reported that the Dominion Association had struck off a membership button for use in the various branches throughout Canada and that these would soon be available for all members who wished them. They are being sold at 75c each and will likely be in demand, as the wearing of one will carry a member into any branch headquarters in the Dominion.

NEW MEMBERS HEARD.

Lieut.-Col. Johnston who was voted to the chair during the election of officers and Lieut.-Col Mills were both called upon for addresses.

Lieut.-Col. Mills expressed his pleasure at the opportunity to be present—the first chance he had had to attend a meeting of the Peterborough branch. The Toronto and Hamilton organization he know were flourishing and he was glad to see that in Peterborough the Association was making good progress. Col. Mills spoke of the benefits to be derived from such an organization and expressed the hope that shortly the Peterborough branch would be able to move into larger quarters, where more facilities for amusement could be provided. He was confident that many Peterborough citizens would be glad of an opportunity to assist in that aim. In conclusion Lieut.-Col. Mills expressed his desire to help the branch in any way possible.

Lieut.-Col. Johnston briefly addressed the club along similar lines. There were many wrongs to be righted, he said, and much good work could be done locally by the club. There were returned men who were not getting a square deal and there were wives and families of soldiers, now at the front, who were having trouble in securing their pay and allowances. These were matters upon which the local club could do good work and he would be glad to assist them.

On motion, a photograph of the old board of officers, the founders of the Peterborough branch will be taken and one of the pictures will be given a place of honour in the club rooms.

BRIDGE DEBENTURES WILL ADD 2 MILLS

Unless Their Term Is Extended for More Than Twenty Years

If the bridge debentures are issued for a twenty year term, practically two mills will be included in the tax rate to raise the $24,802.90 representing the interest and sinking fund. These debentures will not be issued this year, and in the meantime the question of extending the term from twenty to thirty or forty years will be discussed.

At last night's meeting of the Council, Ald. Stratton moved, seconded by Ald. Smith, that this matter be referred to the Finance committee. It was stated that the amount of the annual payment, and consequently the tax rate, would be reduced by an extension of the term of the debentures.

Ald. Dobbin also suggested that, when the final plans are ready, the design and specifications be carefully scrutinized by an expert in concrete construction work. He was impressed by the number of failures in bridges built of this material.

LEGACY FOR THE CHILDREN'S AID SOCIETY

The estate of Robert Fife has been finally wound up by James Middleton and J. H. Fife. Money in the bank amounting to $1,200 was paid over to the Childrens' Aid Society, the residuary legatees, together with the transfer of a mortgage of $2,700. This money will be kept intact and only the interest used. It is hoped that legacies of this kind will in time make the Society self-supporting..

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

By a Trick Of Fate

By Izola L. Forrester

Copyright, , by T. C. McClure

Since daybreak there had been no change in the ceaseless lurching of the yacht or the dull roar of the waves as they swept in long, heavy seas over its sides.

Twice Katherine had tried to leave her stateroom and reach the cabin and had been forced back. Once the white faced stewardess had come to her door. There was no immediate danger, she assured her. They would be notified at once if there were. If she was nervous, Mr. Hetherington said he would come to her. And Katherine had sent back word that she was not at all nervous, and Mr. Hetherington need not trouble himself at all about her.

When the girl had gone, she had thrown herself on the couch and given full vent to the terror that had haunted her all night long. She was afraid, afraid with her whole heart, of the great, lashing, hungry sea, that tossed and played with the yacht like some huge monster with its helpless prey and threatened every moment to hurl it down to death.

If Hetherington had been with her, if they two could have faced eternity in each other's arms, with the old love strengthening them, she would have known no fear. But as it was, a wild, unreasoning, childish terror made her treable at every crashing wave, and she longed for even a sight of his face before the end should have swept them irrevocably apart.

The week at sea had passed like a troubled dream. They were to have made harbor the previous morning, and the storm had driven them off the course down the southern French coast. By this time she had thought everything would have been over—the brief, tearless parting with Hetherington, the meeting with her mother in Paris and the trip to Berbec.

Dear, lovely, lonely little Berbec up on the Normandy coast! The two summers she had spent there, in old Martigny's classes, had been the happiest of her life. She loved even the memory of the crescent shore line, with the old boats drawn up on the sand and the nets drying in the sunlight and the brown skinned fisher boys and girls gossiping over their baskets of silvery scaled fish.

It had all been arranged and settled so decently, as Hetherington said. There had never been any open quarrels between them for the servants and public to gossip over, merely a quiet, courteous antagonism which required no explanation. The marriage had not been voluntary.

"It was the blessed, stupid mothers," Katherine said with gay cynicism at their last interview. "We're not the kind who settle down, Bruce, and be married and then do nothing but give house parties and dinner parties and yachting parties and all the rest of it. You were rich and nobody in particular, and I was poor and a Lorimer, and the wise little mothers simply saw a chance to found a dynasty of mutual benefit, and we drifted until they landed us under the orange blossoms. It is a little tangle of fate's skeins. We can't go back and untangle it, but we can do the Alexander trick and cut it."

He had agreed to the separation too readily, she thought. Even acknowledging perfect indifference on both sides, a little hesitancy would have been desirable. He had almost seemed cheerful when he had asked her what she intended doing at Berbec.

"You haven't the ghost of a right to ask me," she had told him, "but there is nothing to conceal. Martigny keeps up his summer classes still. You know I studied under him there and in Paris, too, when we were poor, before"—She hesitated and went on with a light touch of bitterness—"before I was the fortunate Mrs. Hetherington. There is certain to be some of the old class left, and I can rest and study."

"And be happy," continued Hetherington. She had not answered.

She felt that he could not understand how she longed for the old quiet life away from the world. It was at Berbec he had first met her. Young and handsome, he had come to the little fishing hamlet on a yachting cruise and, with all the confidence of new riches, had expected to enter the little exclusive art and social coterie that gathered there. It had been her favor that had won him the entree, and before the ivy that clambered on old Martigny's garden wall had turned to crimson they were engaged.

It was not until after the wedding in Paris at Eastertide that Katherine had realized how the world, her world, was smiling at her in polite amusement. It was so palpably a mariage de convenance. Not a breath of the sweetness of the wooing at quaint Berbec had reached it. It was merely that Kitty Lorimer had married Bruce Hetherington for his money, and all the host of Nouveau riche Hetheringtons were to sweep into society under the shadow of the Lorimer wings.

And the knowledge of the world's judgment of them had bred a vague, mutual distrust, a fear born of love and pride that the other one might give credence to the world's rumor. After that the drifting apart had been swift, and the end had come deliberately. She had wished to spend the summer at Berbec alone. He had refused positively to permit it. If she went against his wishes, he would consider it final. Before she had fully realized what it meant she had tossed back her answer. It was final then. She would go to Berbec. The following week they had sailed for France.

A sudden, sharp rapping on her stateroom door startled her. She caught her breath as she rose unsteadily and clung for support to the side of the berth. The moment of danger had come, and they had sent for her. Not Hetherington, she knew. Until she called for him he would meet even death without a word. But if she could call, if there was only yet time, only a moment of grace, to reach him and tell him it was all a miserable mistake of pride, that she loved him with all her heart and wanted his presence with her now at the supreme moment when all the world had fallen away to nothingness, and there was only the mystery of eternity before her and his love to bear her on! The rapping sounded heavier and more imperative.

"Kit! Let me in!"

It was Hetherington's voice. She turned the lock with steady fingers, a sudden peace strengthening her. He paused in the doorway, tall and dark and storm beaten in his dripping oilskins, his face white and grim as he looked down at her.

"Has it come, dear?" she asked, lifting her face to him. "I'm not afraid—with you."

He caught her to him closely and pressed his lips to hers with hungry intensity.

"Not afraid in death, Kit," he said bitterly. "Then why in life?"

She closed her eyes and shrank closer to him. Death had become a friend to be met with smiling eyes and welcoming happiness. As Hetherington raised his head she waited, expectantly. The lurching and groaning had stopped. She wondered if they were sinking and tightened the clasp of her arms about his neck as she smiled up at him.

"How dear death is together!" she said softly. "I'm not one bit afraid."

His eyes lighted with sudden comprehension, and he stood back, loosening her arms.

"The danger is past," he said. "I came to tell you we had made the harbor at St. Hilaire. You can reach Paris by evening."

For an instant she hesitated in the revulsion of thought, then held out her arms longingly.

"Not alone," she said; "not alone now, sweetheart. I am afraid in life, too, alone."

ECZEMA ON FACE

WAS SO BAD HAD TO STAY IN HOUSE

All skin diseases such as eczema or salt rheum, itching or burning rashes, eruptions, ulcers, boils, pimples, etc., are all caused by bad blood, and while not usually attended with any fatal results, may sooner or later develop into some serious blood trouble and the entire system become affected.

Burdock Blood Bitters, that old and well-known remedy, will cleanse the blood of all its impurities, and by this means cure all skin diseases and other blood troubles.

Mrs. Ernest Andrews, Hamilton, Ont., writes: "My face was covered with eczema and was so terribly bad I had to stay in the house. I had ten different doctors but got so tired of their treatment that I went and bought a bottle of Burdock Blood Bitters, and it helped me, so I kept on taking it. Now I am cured, and have a lovely skin.

"People who used to see me when I was so bad and see me now will not believe it, but I always tell them that nothing cured me but Burdock Blood Bitters."

Survival of the Fittest.

The expression "the survival of the fittest" grew out of the publication of Darwin's "Origin of Species," in which he shows that animals, which were fittest to survive in the given conditions under which they lived, did survive in the struggle for existence, while the weaker—namely, the species less fitted for the struggle against their surroundings—died out. This is also applied to human species and has been generally applied to races, nations and civilizations, as well as individuals, those that survive being fittest to cope with conditions within and without.

Raw Food Must Be Washed.

"Gritting of sand between the teeth while eating vegetables raw is a certain sign that they have been cleaned improperly, if at all," says the New York Medical Journal and adds that because of improper washing it is often not safe to eat raw vegetables, salads or fruits.

Never Again.

"Does your wife ever make you exchange goods she buys and doesn't like?"

"She tried that once, and only once. I exchanged a silk dress for a meerschaum pipe."

Regulations For Plowing Match Changed This Year

Farmers May Plow on Their Own Property—County Match Will Also Be Held On Grounds to Be Chosen

At a meeting of the directors of the County of Peterborough Plowmen's Association held on Saturday afternoon in the Court House, arrangements were completed for the holding of a new kind of ploughing match, which it is proposed to hold this year. Owing to the fact that many farmers do not find it convenient to attend and take part in the county match each year and because also, a considerable number of ploughmen, who might like to compete, feel backward about doing so for fear they might not make a good enough showing, the proposal was made some time ago that prizes might be offered for the best ploughing done on the farms of competitors. In all $50 will be offered in prizes, divided as follows: $15, $12, $10, $8, $5. Competitors will have to plough five acres of land or upward on their own farms and have the work completed by October 15th next, and ready for the land to be examined by the judges. Entries must be sent to the Secretary of the County Plowmens' Association, Chas. Brown, R. R. No.—, Peterborough, by September 15th. The judges will be Messrs. Joshua Smithson and Wm. Cleghorn, of Otonabee. District Representative McRae is to take the judges around in his automobile to visit the farms of the competitors. Several of the local township councils have been asked to contribute $5 each towards the expense of this competition, and so far the townships of Belmont, Asphodel, Ennismore and Smith have responded. It is expected that the rest will do so shortly. It is hoped that there will be a number of entries for this competition. The directors feel that at least fifteen entries should be received before they will be justified in holding the competition.

County Match.

It is proposed to hold the county match this year in Smith township if possible. Messrs. J. H. Garbutt, H. Weber, John Gillespie, Wm. Cleghorn, and Joshua Smithson were appointed a committee to select a field. Mr. H. B. Cowan and Chas. Moore were appointed a finance committee.

HYDRO ENGINEER TO INVESTIGATE THE RADIAL SCHEME.

Mr. J. N. Stanley, engineer for the Hydro-Electric Commission, Toronto, passed through town yesterday, on his way to Coboconk and Minden, where he will meet Sir Sam Hughes and go over the territory contemplated to be served and used by the proposed electric railway between Cobocconk and Minden. It was expected that the chief engineer, Mr. Gaby, would be along also, but was unable to make the trip.

Those interested in the welfare of the scheme will be pleased to know that the visit of the deputation to Toronto recently is bearing fruit.

Parasol For Miss Dewart

Miss Clara M. Dewart, who has been teaching in the Warsaw Junior room for the past six years, and who has resigned her position, got a complete, but pleasant surprise, when, at the close of school, her little pupils presented her with a beautiful parasol and the following address:

Dear Teacher.—We, the boys and girls of your room wish to show you in a small way, our appreciation of your work among us. As our teacher, you have taken such an interest in each one of us, and have inspired us to do our best work, and we know that when you have been firm with us, it has been for our good.

We are sorry that you are leaving us, and we wish you to know that we shall always have happy recollections of our relations together as teacher and pupils.

Wishing you every success in your future life, we beg you to accept this small token. — From your pupils.

The address was read by Florence Clare and the presentation made by Marion Payne.

Miss Dewart was very lonesome leaving her pupils and replied briefly, thanking them for their useful gift and beautiful words of love.

HOME DEFENCE

The safeguarding of your home and all it means to you is not a matter of armies and ships alone. The comfort and happiness of your family are exposed to the attacks of enemies much nearer to them than the marauding Huns of Central Europe.

What will become of your home and your wife and your children, if you be suddenly stricken down as thousands of others have been?

Will there be any bulwark of defence to keep the home and the family from destruction?

You can most easily provide such a line of defence by means of a life assurance policy. Home Defence is its purpose and it fulfills that purpose as nothing else can.

Where You Cannot Prophesy — PREPARE !

NOT even the best-informed man in government or business circles dares to attempt a prophecy of conditions after the war. We hope for the best—meantime wise men are preparing now for anything.

How?

By regulating their expenditures according to their actual needs rather than by their prosperity—by husbanding the surplus—and by investing to the limit in Canadian War Loans that help so much to maintain present prosperity.

Money saved and loaned to Canada by Canadians is a twofold safeguard for the future. The lenders will benefit directly from the excellent interest return and absolute security—and indirectly because the interest thus kept in Canada will help to keep business good after the war.

Canadian War Savings Certificates are issued in denominations of $25, $50 and $100, repayable in three years. At the purchase prices of $21.50, $43 and $86 respectively, they yield over 5% interest. Buy them at any Bank, or Money Order Post Office.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

Exceptionally Heavy Board Of Cheese At To-day's Sale

Mr. G. A. Gillespie Bought the Entire Offering of 2,994 Boxes at 21 5-16c.—Grant of $10 to the Exhibition.

This morning's cheese board approximated record figures of production when 2,994 boxes were sold at 21 5-16 cents. Mr. G. A. Gillespie bought the entire offering. A year ago, 2,869 boxes brought 15 7-8 cents a pound, a contrast that was noted by the chairman, Mr. Robert Duff.

"You've got the best buyer you ever had in the English Government," Mr. Kerr replied.

The factories boarded as follows: Keene, 95; Warminster, 135; Shearer, 150; Selwyn, 170; Villiers, 100; Warsaw, 190; Westwood, 230; Oakdale, 110; Missing Link, 80; Pine Grove, 70; Myrtle, 190; Ormonde, 175; Young's Point, 160; Lang, 150; North Dummer, 90; East Emily, 140; Net. Pleasant, 60; Norwood, 229; Stoney Lake, 38; Fleetwood, 135; Killarney, 112; Apsley, 80; Lakefield, 105.

Total, 2994.

THE BIDDING.

Mr. Thompson opened at 21 cents and, by 1-16c bids, quickly reached 21 5-16 at which price Mr. Gillespie obtained the call.

$10 TO THE EXHIBITION.

A grant of $10 was made to the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition on a motion by Mr. Gillespie. The importance of stencilling the weights on all boxes was emphasized.

Mr. John Riddell spoke of the cost of colouring the cheese, owing to the advanced price of the material.

Instructor Ward stated that Peterborough had a world-wide reputation as a coloured cheese producing section. Colouring didn't improve the cheese, but the cost was recently estimated by Mr. Publow at only 1-8 cents a pound.

Mr. Gillespie replied that colouring cost two cents per 1,000 pounds of milk or 1-32 cents per pound of cheese.

This was a negligible cost, according to the salesmen.

FUNERAL OF MRS. SCOTT

The funeral of the late Mrs. Mary E. Scott, who died on Sunday, July 1st, at the residence of her son-in-law, Mr. Aloch Wilson, 243 Wescott street, took place yesterday afternoon at 3.30. A short service, conducted by Rev. Mr. Greatrix, was held at Mr. Wilson's home before proceeding to the Little Lake cemetery for interment.

McIntyre Boulevard Proposed As Improvement On Babb's Lane

With the best of intentions, the Council nullified its efforts last night to change the name of Babbs Lane to the less prosaic Babbs street. The by-law that carried the alteration reached its second reading with Ald. Duncan presiding, Ald. Dobbin remarked that anything but the word Babbs would be a concession to euphony, and proposed that it be called Bradburn street. Ald. Stratton seconded the motion, which carried, supported by Aldermen Duncan, Smith and Weir, and opposed by Aldermen Saunders, Langford, McIntyre and the Mayor. Aldermen Taylor and Worth were absent.

In the third reading, Ald. McIntyre pointed out that a two-third majority vote was necessary, and the Babbs supporters voting against the final reading defeated the by-law. Ald. McIntyre observed that there was a limit to "fooling."

Later in the evening, business was turned back to by-laws, Ald. Smith moving, seconded by Ald. Stratton, that the lane be called McIntyre Boulevard, but that was as far as the uplift movement reached.

"We will have to wait until there is a full meeting," said the Mayor.

Items From Council Meeting

TO REPAIR BENSON AVENUE.

The Utilities Commission reported that arrangements were under way to repair Benson Avenue, as requested by the Council.

REQUESTS REBATE.

Mr. George W. Powell, agent for the Children's Aid Society, wrote that he had used his butchers' license only three months, and asked for a pro rata rebate.—Referred to Finance Committee.

LITTLE OLD "HOGTOWN"?

Every effort was made to secure an aeroplane for the holiday, Mayor Duffus stated last night. Two of the best men at the Deseronto camp were home on leave, and there was a shortage of planes. Toronto was using all the available Camp Borden machines.

(Ald. Debbin—"They couldn't spare one for us, but Toronto had twelve."

IRONY IN THIS DISPOSITION.

The Kingston Whig quoted $1.25 a page for publishing voters' lists and solicited Peterborough's business.—Referred to Finance Committee.

NIBBLES FROM OTHER CITIES.

The City Clerks of Ottawa, Fort William, Hamilton and Ottawa have acknowledged Peterborough's request to express their disapproval of additional loans to the C.N.R. and G.T.R.

GRANTS TO SOCIETIES.

By-laws were passed granting $850 to the Horticultural Society, and $800 to the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition.

MR. EVANS APPLIES FOR AN INCREASE IN SALARY

Moved by the high cost of living, Street Commissioner H. Evans applied to the Council, last night, for an increase in salary. He has been in the employ of the city fourteen years. The communication was referred to the Board of Works.

WANT FLIERS.

Thomas H. Wood of Toronto requested the Council to nominate a local organization to secure recruits for the Royal Flying Corps. Referred to Ald. Dobbin of the Fire, Water and Light Committee.

THE GEMMEL FACTORY.

Gemmel and Co. were given permission to restore their building and enlarge it, as approved by the City Engineer—the east wall of nine inches to be extended through the second storey; the west wall to be fourteen inches wide in the first storey, and nine inches in the second, and to be moved nine feet west. "A fire by-law is no good in this town," commented Ald. Stratton.

ASHBURNHAM SIDING.

W. H. Denham of the Peterborough Hydraulic Power Co., wrote that the spur line recently reconstructed in Ashburnham was laid on the old right of way. To remove it would be very expensive and would necessitate a compound curve. For these reasons, Mr. Denham wrote, "it is impossible to comply with your request."

"They don't own the street," said Ald. Smith. They have no right there, and I, for one, wouldn't stand for having it there."—Referred to the Board of Works.

WANT STREET OIL.

Isaac H. Fife, Ryerson Ritchie, George Metcalfe, and others, asked that Stewart street be oiled between McDonnel and Smith streets. Chemong traffic aggravated the dust nuisance. Referred to Board of Works.

SNOW PLOWMAN SEEKS $150 FOR LOSS OF HORSE

Daniel McMillan, one of last winter's snow plowmen, lost his horse on Good Friday when it was killed on Weller street by an electric current from a "grounded" wire that had fallen during the heavy snow storm early that morning. He valued it at $150, and through Mr. F. D. Kerr, asked the Council to compensate him to that extent. Ald. Smith moved that he receive $100. Ald. Langford seconded the motion stating that Mr. McMillan was a poor man who could not afford the loss and it was only just that either the Utilities Commission or the Council should make good the loss.

Ald. Duncan said that the Utilities Commission should pay the money, but it was reported that the Commission's solicitor had found no liability. It was decided to transfer the petition to the Legal committee.

After presenting their case, Mr. Kerr and Mrs. McMillan retired, that the Council might freely discuss it.

"That's a precedent I would like to see followed," said Ald. Weir, recalling many and formidable delegations.

"If I came with a deputation to the Council, I'd like to see you put me out," remarked the Mayor.

"It wouldn't be fair to the Aldermen," was Ald. Langford's velvet tap for those to whom it was directed, and some one so lacked a sense of humour that he replied, "Oh yes it would."

Report of Property Committee.

To the Chairman and members of the Board of Education.

Gentlemen,—As authorized, your Committee advertised for tenders for the desks required for the Queen Mary School and have awarded the contract for the Preston desks to Mr. D. Belleghem, and for one teacher's desk and chair to Mr. A. Comstock.—Roland Denne, Chairman.

The Board will acknowledge the receipt of an enlarged photograph of the late Captain R. E. Picard, who was killed in action. The photograph will be hung in the hall of the Collegiate Institute, together with a number of others.

Will Deduce Amount.

The Secretary of the Board was authorized to deduct two and a half per cent. each month from the teachers' salaries in accordance with the recent Provincal enactment respecting the Teachers' Superannuation fund.

The matter of permitting the Playgrounds Association to use the King Edward School grounds was left in the hands of the Property Committee with power to act.

A communication signed by R. F. Downey, principal of the Central School, requesting extra remuneration for alleged extra work due, it is said to the removal of Mr. F. E. Keir to another school, was received by the Board, and no action taken.

The Board adopted a resolution of appreciation to those who are co-operating with the Board in the matter of securing a technical school for Peterborough.

The matter of reimbursing Alexander Irwin, Water street, for injuries sustained by his son, while playing in one of the school yards of the city, was left with the Property Committee, with power to act.

Number of School Children Afflicted With Minor Defects

Report of Miss Jory, School Nurse Submitted to School Board

That there are approximately six hundred and eighty children in the Public Schools of the city afflicted with minor physical defects, such as carious teeth, enlarged tonsils, adenoids, defective speech or vision, was revealed in a report that was submitted to the Board of Education at the regular meeting, held last evening. The report was from Miss Maye Jory, school nurse. Miss Jory also reported a number of cases where children are compelled to stay at home, owing to the inability of the parents to finance operations necessary to keep the children at school. It was suggested that the Health Association be asked to consider this matter, as the Board has no authority or means of dealing with such a matter. The total number of pupils examined during the month was 1313.

Number excluded from the schools on account of rash—8.

Number excluded for uncleanliness—25.

Number of homes visited—28.

The report also referred to mentally defective children, five of whom are located in one room of the city's schools. The whole report was turned over to the Supervision Committee, who have arranged to go into the matter at the close of the vacation period.

City Trust May Lend Money For Fire Apparatus

With the exception of profitable assistance from the City Trust, the by-law authorizing the borrowing of $10,000 for motor driven apparatus was held up by the Council after its second reading last night on motion by Mayor Duffus, seconded by Ald. Smith. Apparently the Council had learned that the City Trust has a nest egg from which they could borrow the money needed even for a triple combination pumper, chemical engine and hose waggon, or that the debentures could be sold to the City Trust with a considerable saving to the city. Hence the final reading of the by-law was suspended until the Council has conferred with the City Trust. And from last night's discussion the impression prevailed that the conference will likely bear the desired fruits.

English in France and Belgium

By CANADIAN OVERSEAS

Everywhere English is spoken; every village behind the line has its comfortable estaminet where Tommy Atkins can vary army diet by an indulgence in eggs, chips and confectionery; every school child has a smattering of English and the boys will always raise their caps to an English officer.

The faith of the Belgian in the cause for which we are fighting and in its ultimate vindication by the strength of the British Empire is shown by the way in which he is creeping back to his homestead. It is now a common sight to see a "bandbox" kind of dwelling knocked together and occupied within a few days. The normal population of many of the villages has been doubled these last few months by the homing instincts of the Belgian, and through the confidence in British troops to keep the Boche where he

These houses, while forming an odd collection of ideas in architecture, demonstrate the resource of the Belgian in making much out of nothing.

A good many of them have walls of nothing more substantial than cheese or biscuit boxes intended primarily for the packing of Army rations. Discarded tea tins packed with earth have been used in an attempt to bake a "bomb-proof" dwelling.

There are to-day hundreds of homes established out of the odds and ends inevitably wasted when troops are on the move.

Sometimes the design is in the form of a one-floor, but with a dividing wall of sacking between living room and bed room. A more popular style is to use half the shanty as a shop or a cafe and the rest as living quarters.

Invariably these mushroom houses are named in French or Flemish. They are always "villas." But more prominent than their names are the announcements of food and wares in English. One enterprising native renamed his place "Skindles" and styled it a restaurant for officers. The signet has been found in a big business and a popular rendezvous for all officers desiring to locate a friend out of the line.

THE SAPPERS IN FRANCE

By INFANTRY OFFICER

The Royal Engineers, or "Sappers" as they are called, are in the new armies, as they were in the old, one of the most efficient branches of the service. Although the Engineer's business is to work rather than to fight, he is always armed in the manner of the infantry; he has learned how to use his rifle and should occasion arise can hold his own with any enemy.

There are in fact certain weapons of offence which are placed solely in the sapper's care; for instance, the German invention of asphyxiating gas. Special "gas companies" of engineers (all volunteers and mostly men with a practical knowledge of Chemistry) are given this task of dosing the Huns with their own poison; and anyone who has worked with them has the pleasure of reflecting that now the Huns must bitterly regret that they ever introduced into warfare so sinister and unnatural a weapon.

Sappers are divided up into different "companies" each specializing in its own particular work. There are "army troops companies" whose duties are largely concerned with the "workshops" and the production of field engineering material; there are "bridging companies," and their title sufficiently explains their employment; there are "signal companies" who are responsible for the field telephones and telegraph wires which link up all units with each other, with Brigade Headquarters, Divisional Headquarters, Corps Headquarters and so right back to General Headquarters; and whether or not by some magic of the sappers, it is strangely easy to hear a voice through the field telephone even in a front line trench amidst the rattle and roar of every kind of explosive; finally there are "tunnelling companies" and "field companies."

Tunnelling companies are the people responsible for those little explosions which periodically throw skywards whole units of the enemy, together with many cubic feet of French territory. They are recruited very largely from men who in civilian life before the war were miners. These brave fellows work day and night far under ground worming mine galleries under the enemy's defences. They must take the utmost care to go undetected by the enemy who, of course, is always on his guard against such enterprises and countermining to frustrate them. Thus the new earth that is excavated as the shaft grows longer cannot be thrown over the parapet, for that would give the secret away at once, but has to be packed into sandbags and then laboriously carried to the rear. For the same reason the tunnellers must work without some of the most effective mining and boring machinery for they set up vibrations and all armies are now supplied with remarkable and sensitive instruments which detect and record any vibrations in the earth. It is among such difficulties and dangers, and with this perpetual need for extreme vigilance and care, that the tunnelling companies work.

Most of the large matters of trench engineering are in the hands of the field companies of engineers and the infantry working parties usually work under their instruction and guidance. In the routine of trench warfare their principal work is the deepening and widening of communication trenches; the building up of the sandbag and wire revetments which support the sides of the trench, the draining of trenches, and the construction of strong dug-outs. In an attack the business of the field companies is to reconstruct the communication between the old line and the new. Often they have to stand upright in the open under point blank machine gun fire digging the connecting trenches across what was once "no man's land."

The engineers in our new army are very fortunate in that they have been able to recruit not among the inexperienced but from the pick of the engineers of the Empire. Thus in one field company the commanding officer is a veteran with 2 years experiences of the South African war, the second in command was previously in the services of a great firm building bridges in India; the next senior officer comes from the Royal Military Academy in Canada; while of the remaining two, one is from the Canadian Pacific Railway and the other from Suez. They meet in France from all the ends of world, and turn to the engineering work of war as to another branch of that great and adventurous profession which was already theirs.

creeds and old parties in a common effort for the elevation of Ireland.

"I need scarcely point out that these leanings towards us will be gravely prejudiced if these Unionists be convinced the future of Irish self-government is to be in the hands of revolutionaries. Of all the hideous corpses of the past which were thrown up by the insane rebellion of last year, the worst was the recrudescence of religious feeling—a passion that so far as the South of Ireland was concerned, had died down. But here is an incident. A Protestant lady visiting the house of an old Catholic lady, who had been her life-long friend said that it was remarkable the houses that had most been wrecked by the insurgents were those of Protestants. The Catholic lady took her to her drawing room and showed all the panes smashed. It was a direct contradiction of the idea; but the reoccurrance of such an idea from the dead and gone past is a proof of the kind of dissension and passions which a rebellion brings back to being.

"As to the Orangemen of the North they remained undisturbed on the surface, but underneath there was the beginning of the break-up of the icy surface of irreconcilable hostility. As a matter of fact the Orangeman to-day who refuses conciliation is isolated: the whole Empire, the whole world is against him and he knows it. Besides after all, he is a good Imperialist, though he may not be a warm Irish Nationalist-Irishman in one sense of the word—and he knows that the Empire will be imperilled in war and shamed in peace until the Irish question is settled.

"Thus the Convention begins in fair prospect, if only it be left alone; and if only a determinist conspiracy is not organised to destroy it. The Emperilism I have described: let me say a few words on its composition. The Convention consists of 101 members, 102 including the chairman. There will be thirty-three chairmen of county councils—the popularly elected bodies that govern our rural population; of these thirty-three, twenty-eight are Nationalists. There will be representatives of all the great cities and all the towns; two of the three Lord Mayors are Nationalists—two of the mayors of county boroughs are Nationalists; only one is a Unionist; the four Catholic Archbishops will be Nationalists; two of the five labour members will be Nationalist—possibly three; in short there will be a clear Nationalist majority.

"What is, however, more important is that there will be an even greater majority if things go right against partition. The Southern Unionists are much against partition—that is to say against the separation of any portion of Ulster from the Dublin Parliament as the Nationalists; so, it is said, are some of the Protestants, even of the North. I do not think that any minority will ever be got to shoot the Orangeman into Home Rule; the Orangeman may place the government in a difficulty; if they persist in their irreconcilable attitude. But will they? It will be seen that if there be a overwhelming majority and a majority drawn from Southern Protestants, as from Northern Catholics against partition, the case of the Orangemen will be very difficult. It will indeed be impossible for then it will be clear to all the world that on them alone—unless, of course the Sinn Fein lunatics help them—the responsibility for the settlement preventing the settlement of the Irish question will rest. It is not a responsibility which anybody will want to accept. Everybody knows that Sir Edward Carson is profoundly anxious for a settlement; so is Col. Grain, the ablest and most influential of the Orange leaders. Of course, Lloyd George—especially with his knowledge of American opinion conveyed to him quite straightly through unofficial sources—is anxious for settlement. A settlement in the shape of some compromise at once respecting the apprehensions of the Orangemen and preserving the unity of Ireland, I do not at all dismiss as one of the possibilities of the Convention.

"There is one further consideration which I must mention. The Orange Ulster is the crux, it is not the only—it is not even the most important issue before the Convention. The most important issue is the enlargement of the Home Rule act already on the statute book, especially in the region of finance.

When the Home Rule act was passed, Ireland was a debtor nation to England the cost of Irish administration to England was thirteen millions a year; the yield of Irish taxes was eleven millions a year—that is to say there was a deficit of two millions sterling. This imposed upon the management and control of Irish taxation by the Irish government a number of restrictions—some of them rather burdensome. But fortunately the Home Rule act contained a provision that when the Irish deficit disappeared the financial relations arrangements had been revised. The deficit has disappeared under the enormous increase in Ireland, as well as in England, of war taxation; the revision, therefore comes automatically. England I am sure, and Lloyd George, who has never been a pedant on finance, is not in the mood in these days of gigantic expenditure, to haggle with Ireland over taxation. And I am sure therefore, that a new arrangement can be made on terms much more satisfactory to Ireland than those in the existing bill. On this question of finance there will, of course, be no difference of opinion among Irishmen; as Englishmen, rue fully though not quite accurately put it, all Irishmen will combine against the purse of poor John Bull.

This is only one of the many modifications which may be made in a convention, provided it got over the stumbling block of Ulster. It should be added that the Orangemen hold the curiously paradoxical position although they hate Home Rule, they prefer it, if it is to come, to a small Home Rule measure. They, therefore, if they can come to terms on Ulster, will back the Irish Nationalists in every demand for increased powers to the Irish Parliament. Would it not be a paradox if Ireland liberties got unlooked for, unhope for enlargement through Orange aid. Would it not be a still more remarkable paradox if when Ireland had thus the chance of larger liberties that anybody thought possible, the madness of some, the dishonesty of others of her son should finally stop the way."

BOWLING

PRINTERS TAKE TWO FROM KING PINS

Last night at the Water Street Alleys the Printers took two of three games from the King Pins in a league fixture. The Printers are now tie with the leaders. The King Pins had a higher total pinnage for the three games, but lost two out of three, and were somewhat handicapped without Lush and Ross, who are on the sick list; and had to play with two dummy scores. Borden, for the Printers, had high three games, with a 474 total, and also high single with a 166 count, while Jones, for the King Pins, came next with a 468 total.

To-night a great game is expected when the Grocers and East City teams meet. The following were last night's scores:

Printers—
Smith	152	81	106	339
Dolan	110	80	116	306
Myland	101	110	122	333

THE OLD DIVISION

(By N. DOWN)

We were sitting round the mess room fire, warm, well fed and content. Outside, the April snows did their best to blot out the assault courses and bombing trenches of the training camp.

Wilson knocked the ashes out of his pipe and strolled over to the window. The blizzard was at its height and deep snow drifts were forming against the huts.

"Heavens! Isn't it the limit!" he exclaimed; and then; "I'm glad I'm not 'out there' while the weather is like this."

We agreed with him. Some of us had been away from our battalions now for nearly a year and were anxious to be back in the thick of it once more. Some knew that, however keen they might be, they would never again be fit for service overseas. But not one of us at that moment would have cared from the bodily point of view to exchange the comforts of the mess for the doubtful allurements of a battered trench half full of water and quite without shelter. The very idea made us shiver in sympathy with our less fortunate brothers.

Simpson's voice came from the depths of a large armchair.

"Wonder where the Old Division is now, and what sort of time they're having?"

To us it is always the "Old Division."

"Last time I heard of them they were away back resting, practising the attack and all that sort of thing you know," contributed Reid.

"Looks as if they were 'for it' again," assented Wilson, returning to his seat by the fireside.

McDermott unwound his six feet three of lankiness, which has earned for him the nickname of Pull Through, and began to take notice. "They're back in the trenches again now—I heard from my old batman yesterday. The same trenches as we were in this time last year."

For a moment no one spoke, but the same thought was in every mind. Wilson was the first to voice it.

"But — but surely they can't be thinking of attacking there. Why! man! it couldn't succeed."

How well we remembered that ridge, line upon line of trenches gleaming in the sunlight, belt after belt of barbed wire thirty yards thick and four feet high, and on the crest that pleasant village with its red tiled houses and green copses through which every day we used to catch a glimpse of a German staff car. Advance there! Impossible!

"I should think not," from Simpson. "Do you remember how we used to say that we were in a 'cushy' spot there, because the Hun would never want to advance from such a good position and we should never be foolish enough to try and capture it?"

"And if we couldn't do it then," continued McDermott, "you could hardly do it now. Why since then we've been in about a dozen shows, and lost all the best men."

"Meaning yourself," broke in Reid. "They never valued you at your true worth, did they Pull Through, after that day you ran into the General round the corner of the trench and you sent him flying."

"Of course I didn't mean myself. But you know how it is after a battalion's been cut up a bit."

We all did. The best man always seem to go down the first, and how can any be found to take their place? Companies were commanded by former junior subs, one-time lance corporals were now sergeant majors. The constant drain must be telling on the morale. How could the Old Division be as good as it was in our day?

Reid alone seemed to think differently. "I don't agree," said he. "Though men are constantly changing, raw men taking the place of veterans, the spirit is the same, and what they may lose in men is more than made up in experience and fighting spirit. There wasn't much loss of more, I can tell you, when we went out to rest after Beaumont Hamel."

"Still, I don't mind betting that if they tried to attack there they'd fail miserably."

"Pull Through, you're a confirmed pessimist. I believe you—"

The entry of the mess orderly with the evening paper put an end to the conversation. Wilson, who was nearest to the table, picked up the paper. "Nothing, as usual, I expect," he grumbled as he opened the flimsy sheet, then, "Good Lord! Look at this you fellows. 'British capture Vimy Ridge. Advance on a twelve mile front to depth of two miles!'"

Jumping to our feet we crowded around Wilson. With thumping hearts we read and re-read the few lines of the official report.

Away on those snow swept heights was our 'Old Division.' The same 'Old Divlion.'

The young lettuce plants that are thinned out make perfectly good salad.

ARRANGEMENTS ARE COMPLETED FOR CONVENTION OF FARMERS

Prominent Speakers Will Be Present at Public Library on Saturday—Luncheon at the Empress Hotel—Many Farmers Coming

So many farmers' clubs in this district have replied favourably to the suggestion that the District Convention of the United Farmers of Ontario should be held in Peterborough next Saturday, July 7th, the arrangements for the convention have been completed. Members of the Omemee Farmers' Club are talking of visiting Peterborough in a body, and other clubs from the counties of Durham, Victoria, Peterborough and probably Northumberland and Hastings will be represented. The speakers will include Mr. John Kennedy of the Grain Growers Grain Co., Winnipeg, who is also director of the Home Bank of Canada. Mr. R. H. Helbert, President and Mr. J. J. Morrison, Secretary of the United Farmers' of Ontario, which now has 10,000 members in Ontario, Mr. C. O'Brien, auditor of the United Farmers' Co-operative Co., Limited, a company which has only been organized within the last three years, and did a business last year of half a million dollars and which during the first five months of this year has done over half a million dollars' worth of business. This statement indicates how rapidly the farmers' movement is taking root in Ontario.

The main object of the convention is to give farmers of this vicinity a chance to become more familiar with the farmers' platform, which was adopted at the last annual convention held in Toronto. The convention will open at two o'clock in the Public Library Hall. It will be open to all the farmers of this vicinity who care to attend.

At noon a luncheon will be served in the Empress Hotel in honour of Mr. John Kennedy, to which some of our leading business men have been invited to attend. In Western Canada the farmers and business interests have formed a joint organization known as the Council of Agriculture and Commerce, which holds frequent sessions and thus helps to keep farming and agricultural interests in closer touch with one another. Mr. Kennedy has been in close touch with these movements and has something of interest to say to our local business men.

PUBLIC OPINION

TARTAN.

The Scottish word tartan is supposed to have been taken from the Spanish and French "tire taine"; in Spanish, this means something thin and flimsy, from "tire tar," to shiver with the cold; in French, the term "tire taine" is applied to the mingled fibres of linen and wool, which is called sometimes linsey-woolsey.

Vacuum cleaners are not hard on carpets, as sometimes supposed.

Put an apple in the tin box with the cake, it will keep the cake moist.

Vote Will Be Taken On Thursday

Conscription Bill Will Carry With Sixty of a Majority, It is Thought

OTTAWA, July 4. — To-morrow the Nationalist-Conservative sub-amendment to give conscription a six months' hoist, will be defeated overwhelmingly. It will have only about a dozen supporters. The Laurier amendment calling for a referendum will then be put and will be defeated by a normal Government majority of at least thirty. After that the bill will be carried with about sixty votes to spare.

COALITION ATTEMPTS ARE AGAIN IN VAIN

OTTAWA, July 4.—It is said unofficially that coalition proposals have again fallen through. Perhaps "feelers" would be a better word than proposals, whereby to decide the efforts which Premier Borden had made to gain a union cabinet. Undoubtedly some of the many Liberal westerners who have been in Ottawa of late have been adroitly "felt out" as to their attitude, but the answer has generally been that there has been so much government mismanagement during the war that an entirely new deal had become necessary. Sir Robert Borden is therefore going ahead with his plans for cabinet reconstruction within the Conservative party.

The Government will is certain to require new labour representation as it is felt it is particularly weak in its standing with labour organizations. It is said that Senator Robertson will probably be taken into the cabinet. He represents the railway telegraphers, and railway men as a class have stood behind the government on the conscription list. The new cabinet will likely make a last effort at recruiting before attempting to enforce the Military Service Act.

Dominion Day At Hiawatha Reserve

The Hiawatha Indians held their annual picnic on Monday on their beautiful reserve fringing Rice Lake. Many visitors from the surrounding country were present and everybody reported a very enjoyable day. The Dominion Day celebration at Hiawatha is always a gala occasion and this year's was really of jubilee proportions. The Indian football team defeated Mather's Corners team by the score of 1 to 0. The results of the water and land sports were as follows:

Single canoe, professional—1, Zack Smoke.

Double canoe—1, Zack Smoke and Merrit Taylor.

Junior Singles—Dannie Muskrat.

Mixed canoe — 1, Alfie Crow and Mrs. A. Mather.

100 yards foot race—1, Nelson.

Married men's race—Merrit Taylor.

Hop, Step and Jump—George Paudash.

Putting shot—Peter Thompson.

Ladies' race—Miss Drummond.

Boys under 10—Fred Simpson.

Whiskey Was For Boarder Defense In Mrs. Sims' Case

Judgment was reserved by Magistrate Dumble this morning after hearing the evidence against Mrs. Sims, 260 Charlotte street, who was charged with unlawfully keeping liquor for sale. Eleven whiskey bottles, empty except for a few shots that remained in one of them, occupied a central position on the table before the Magistrate. They were big imperial quart bottles, and their vacant expression carried a rather doleful appearance. Their number suggested a little mystery in the disposal of the twelfth bottle, for as case goods they come in dozen lots, so the authorities say. And that absentee suggested to Inspector Stewart and the police that the twelfth bottle might have been sold. A search of the premises had failed to discover it, a rather accusatory circumstance. And like good shepherds the police were anxious for that last bottle. There was no doubt that whiskey had come to the Sims house. Eighteen quarts consumed in about six weeks indicated a long thirst somewhere. And the last dozen quarts had been consumed in as many days. The line of defence was that the whiskey was bought from Montreal for a boarder, and therefore while consigned to Mrs. Sims was paid for by the thirsty boarder. Sergeant Reid stated that he had received a complaint on Sunday night that a drunken man had staggered from the Sims house, and that this was not an isolated happening. Another witness said he had got a drink there on Sunday, but it was from the aforementioned boarder.

WEDDING BELLS

HICKEY—SULLIVAN.

The Church of the Immaculate Conception was the scene this morning at eight o'clock of an exceedingly pretty wedding when Aileen Mary, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John C Sullivan, became the bride of Mr. Francis Joseph Hickey, the Rev. Dean McColl performing the ceremony.

The bride looking very lovely, gowned in duchess satin trimmed with exquisite silver lace and the customary wedding veil in mob cap effect and carrying a shower bouquet of orchids, entered the church, which was beautifully decorated in roses, peonies and daisies, on the arm of her father. She was attended by her sister, Miss Mary Sullivan, who was charmingly gowned in pink Georgette crepe. Marcella and Mary McNulty, the two little nieces of the bride, in the daintiest of white net over taffeta dresses and pink satin coats white felt hats, with black velvet streams, made pretty little flower girls, each carrying enormous boquets of daisies. Mr. Butler Hickey, brother of the groom was best man. Mr. Fred Sullivan acted as usher.

During the nuptial Mass, Miss Geneviere Sullivan sang very sweetly Millard's "Ave Maria" and "O Salutaris," by Wiegand.

After the ceremony the wedding party drove to the bride's home, which looked its loveliest, with its beautiful grounds and profusion of peonies and roses. After a dainty buffet breakfast in the spacious dining room, beautifully decorated in roses, orchids and daisies, Mr. and Mrs. Hickey drove to the 11.37 C. P. R. train where scores of the friends of the young couple awaited them with showers of confetti. The bride travelled in a chic, sand-coloured silk poplin suit with caperine of crepe and ermine trimmings and large leghorn hat. On their return from their wedding journey in Montreal and the Thousand Islands Mr. and Mrs. Hickey will reside at 5 Fleming Place.

ADAPT MACHINE GUNS TO OFFENSIVE TACTICS

Allies Elevate Them for Spraying Distant Trenches and Roads.

BEHIND THE BRITISH LINES IN FRANCE.—Use of the machine gun as a weapon for offensive operations and for indirect fire by elevating the guns so that the bullets will fall into the trenches of the enemy is one of the recent developments of warfare. This change in the method of using the machine gun has been brought about within a year. It shows, British officers say, the rapidity with which methods of fighting are altered, and that systems learned by capable officers sent to the front from America might be out of date before their troops arrived in France.

Less than a year ago the machine gun was regarded primarily as a weapon of direct fire, that is, for mowing down an advancing enemy. It was thus chiefly a defensive method, and its usefulness was limited to the rather rare periods when the enemy was actually attempting an attack. But today the machine gun, though retaining its importance in this respect, has become still more a weapon of indirect fire, and by far the greater proportion of machine-gun casualties nowadays are caused through this use of the weapon.

In one highly-valued type of so-called indirect fire, a machine gun is trained by day on a stretch of road or communications which the enemy is using at night for bringing up supplies and reinforcements. The gun tripod is adjusted carefully to command this road. Then at night, although the road is invisible, the machine gun is turned on at intervals of perhaps an hour, sweeping the road clear of any enemy supply columns that may be there, and making use of the road difficult.

As in the case of the machine gun, evolution is constantly in progress in the use of the bayonet, in bombing, trenching, sapping and counter-attack. Nowhere, say army officers, can the latest developments of each of these specialties be taught so well as in the training camps just behind the trenches, where specialists direct from the fighting are at hand to instruct the novice.

No matter how well troops might be trained in the United States, it is held here, they would find the mele of actual battle psychologically very trying. War experts no longer laugh at psychology. "The training of the mind for the surprises and novelties of the battlefield is as important as the physical side of training," say the British authorities.

Three Months Of War Show America Is Doing Her Bit For Democracy

War Ships and Armies Have Gone Abroad, To Be Received Enthusiastically and Honoured With High Place in the Battle Line---Success of Selective Draft Assured.

GERMAN AGENTS ARRESTED

WASHINGTON, July 5.— The American nation yesterday celebrated a wartime anniversary with the consciousness of having written within the short space of a few weeks a chapter in national achivement unrivalled, in many respects, in the history of the world.

Three months ago yesterday President Wilson asked Congress to declare a state of war with Germany and to prepare the nation, after years of peace and military unpreparedness, to use all its resources to make the world safe for democracy. Yesterday American troops, summoned from the border and from foreign soil and carried overseas in defiance of the submarine menace, marched through the streets of Paris ready to take their places behind the firing lines on land, while American war ships in force hold important sectors of the great naval lines which command the seas.

Back of these major accomplishments stand others less spectacular, but no less notable or important in the monumental task of preparedness.

Draft Registration Large.

Upwards of ten millions of men have been registered under war legislation for military service and the work of organizing a universal service army is well under way.

Scores of American merchant vessels have been armed and have taken their toll of U-boats, and a colossal shipbuilding programme to crush the U-boat blockade is far advanced.

More than a billion dollars has been loaned to the enemies of Germany to relieve their economic needs. A two billion dollar bond issue has been floated with a large oversubscription.

To take a firm grip on the economic situation at home a food administration has been organized, an export control council created and the nation's enormous industrial resources marshalled for national service. A programme of food legislation nearing completion soon will enable enforcement of an efficiency which it took most of the belligerents years to attain.

German Agents Arrested.

Besides the Universal Service law, Congress has enacted an espionage act under which the country has been scoured for German agents, and many of them brought into custody. A war budget totalling more than three billion dollars has been approved to meet the initial costs of the war.

A bill empowering the President to direct what necessities shall have preference in commerce has passed both Senate and House and is in conference. Another to raise more than a billion and a half in war taxes has passed the House.

American destroyers were mobilized, outfitted and sent to the North Sea within a few days after war was declared. With them went their own supply vessels and numerous converted craft adapted to naval use. Their number and the exact duty they have assumed never has been revealed, but that they have been recognized as a formidable part of the grand allied fleet was evidenced by the designation recently of American Vice Admiral Sims to command all the forces in the important zone off Ireland.

Similarly in the South Atlantic the patrol of which was assumed by the United States along with the patrol of American shores. Admiral Caperton with a squadron of Pacific coast cruisers, has assumed command. All the French and British war ships remaining there are under his authority.

The first expeditionary force to France included regulars brought from the Mexican border and marines hastily transported from Haiti and Santo Domingo. They had to be recruited to war strength, equipped and supplied for months of campaigning, only one of the vessels used was ready for transport when the order came.

Navy Map Strength Doubled.

In three months the navy has been recruited up to 128,000 men from less than 60,000 and training given to thousands of gunners and crews for hundreds of submarine chasers. The Marine Corps has been recruited from 17,000 to nearly 30,000, and the regular army from about 120,000 to 280,000. Scores of new regiments have been organized and contracts let for artillery, rifles, machine guns and military equipment running into billions of dollars. The National Guard has been increased from less than 100,000, after men with dependents had been weeded out, to probably 150,000.

The arrangements for the new army to be drawn by the selective draft have progressed so far that exemption regulations have been prepared and exemption boards appointed, and another month will see the personnel of the first 500,000 active troops and 125,000 reservists selected and awaiting mobilization. Sixteen military cities to house them during training are under construction.

To provide officers nearly fifty thousand men have been selected, equipped and sent to training camps where they have been under instruction for six weeks.

Special camps have been provided for thousands of civilian doctors for military service, special hospitals built and many medical units already despatched to France.

Organization of nine special engineer regiments composed entirely of experienced railway men is nearly completed.

Preparations are under way for an aerial service of a size never before dreamed of; the first cost will be $600,000,000. The nation's automobile engineers have been mobilized to design a new, powerful aeroplane motor, the first of which will be ready for testing this month. The aid of technical schools has been invoked to help train the necessary thousands of aviators.

Submarine Chasers Constructed.

In the Navy Department plans have been drawn for a new type, swift, powerfully armed submarine chaser and hundreds are under construction. Additional destroyers also have been ordered and hundreds of merchant craft surveyed, armed, and many taken into the government service.

Among the war measures enacted is a law permitting the Allies to recruit their nationals in this country and recruiting campaigns here by several of the allied government are under way. A new bill about ready for submission by the administration would provide for government insurance of every American soldier and sailor.

Under a resolution of Congress ninety-six German vessels laid up in American waters have been taken over by the government, and most of them repaired and made ready for service in the merchant trade or as transports.

Agreement by railway, coal and other interests to co-operate with the government in giving a maximum of service for a minimum cost, the response of the people in oversubscribing by fifty per cent. the $2,000,000,000 Liberty Loan and in more than supplying the $100,000,000 humanity fund asked for by the Red Cross war council—these and many other developments convince officials here that the nation is awake to the emergency ahead and that the achievements of the first three months of the war will be duplicated many times over in the months to come.

Shortcake made with biscuit crust can be filled with any kind of jam.

An ounce of taffy on a stick is worth a pound of epitaphy on a tomb stone.

Yesterday's Debate On The Conscription Bill

E. M. MacDonald Attacks Dr. Michael Clark and Supports Laurier--Blames Everything on the Borden Government---Attacked White and Foster.

"AFFLICTED WITH HYSTERIA"

OTTAWA, July 5.—In the House of Commons yesterday afternoon, Mr. E. M. MacDonald, Liberal member for Pictou, N.S., resumed the debate on the conscription bill. Two objects, he declared, should be kept in view—first, to render all assistance in the Dominion's power to carry on the war to a successful conclusion, and, second, to retain peace at home.

Long ago, said Mr. MacDonald, it was the duty of the Prime Minister to confer with Great Britain, France and latterly the United States, as to the best manner in which Canada could contribute to the great conflict. There should have been conferences as to the food which Canada could supply, the minerals and the munitions Canada could provide, the ships she could build. In so far as the Premier had failed on a proper mobilization of all these things in so far was responsible for the fact that Canada had not done what she could have done.

From Hysteria to Hysteria.

"What have we had since the war commenced? We have bumped from one hysteria to another without regard for consequence." When machine guns were required the people were appealed to and the people gave, but without guidance or system. This was characteristic of all the Government's action.

From the first the shadow of a general election had been kept suspended over the heads of the people. The threat had never been withdrawn until now, when, seeing danger, the Government now cried out: "Don't talk politics. Let us eschew partizanship."

Mr. MacDonald referred to the "National Service fiasco," the "absolutely undignified correspondence" between the Prime Minister and the Minister of Militia. These things proved that the Government did not care much about filling the gaps at the front.

"I am afraid," continued Mr. MacDonald, "that some members on this side of the house have also been carried away by hysteria. Take the Honorable member of Red Deer for instance—"

"Hear, hear" from the Conservative side and loud applause.

"He was afflicted with hysteria," said Mr. MacDonald. "Let me remind that honorable gentleman that at the time of the South African War he was one of those who preached against participation therein.

"How does he explain his present hysterical stand? Again a little over a year ago we find that the honourable member was so proud of the position taken by Sir John Simon, who resigned from the Government in protest against conscription, that he congratulated him on his sturdy British Liberalism. When I consider those things I cannot help but feel that to-day he was succumbed to hysteria."

Attacked White and Foster.

Mr. MacDonald made a slashing attack upon Finance Minister White for not imposing an income tax. He also criticized the flotation of war loans in the United States. A great loan had been launched by the bankers without charging the U. S. Government anything. Sir Thomas White had never asked Canadian banks to take any such patriotic action.

The Labour Minister was next criticized by Mr. MacDonald for negligence in dealing with food prices, and for bungling the coal situation. Then he turned his guns upon the Minister of Trade and Commerce, who had adopted the policy of advancing millions to the Imperial authorities to build ships, but had not mobilized Canada's resources so she could build ships for herself. Not a ship was the Government building. There had been no adequate organization of land transportation either. The government had absolutely failed to deal with the railway situation.

Negro Section Fires Anew In East St. Louis; Militia Gets Mob Under Control

Rioters At First Smash Furniture Taken From Blazing Homes But Orders "Shoot to Kill Whites and Blacks" Alike Finally Overawes Throng.

WOMAN IS WOUNDED IN ATTACK ON TROOPS

EAST ST. LOUIS, Ill., July 5.—New trouble started just after noon yesterday in the race war when mobs started four times in the south end negro district and burned ten negro homes. Militiamen were called to the scene and aided in an attempt to save furniture from the burning structures, but their efforts did not accomplish much, as the mobs stood about outside and smashed furniture as rapidly as it was brought into the open.

That did not last long, however, for the militiamen had been provided with bullets and given orders to "shoot to kill" blacks and whites alike. They succeeded in dispersing the rioters without the necessity of using firearms. According to the police no negroes were known to be in the burned homes.

Scattered rioting was reported from half a dozen outlying districts soon after noon, but the despatch of ambulances and militia to the scene soon restored quiet.

A mob which descended on the home of George Jeffier, negro, beat him into insensibility when he was trying to protect his wife and children. According to his story afterward, he woke to find his wife shot through the head, his children gone and his home aflame.

A woman also was the victim when fifty negroes, men, women and children who were fleeing to Belleville, were set upon by a mob. The negroes fired on the militiamen who came to their rescue and the latter shot over the group. Then, when a pitched battle ensued, they fired on the negroes, one woman being shot through the lungs.

DECLARES SITUATION IN HAND

Adjutant General Dickinson declared that the situation was well in hand, the troops originally sent having been reinforced by six companies of infantry from Chicago and a troop of cavalry from Springfield.

East side morgues are congested with dead negroes, and the total of twenty-six dead so far recovered is believed to be but a small part of the total that will be reported when it becomes possible to search the ruins of the burned district. Many now in the morgue died in the flames. Four white men have been identified among the dead.

Private advices from Washington indicate that government officials believe German agents to have been behind the rioting and it is possible that General Barry at Chicago may make an investigation or take charge of the situation for federal authority.

Governor Lowden arrived to take personal charge of the situation and instigate the necessary investigations.

At a meeting of the Chamber of Commerce at noon members blamed the Illinois militia for the deaths and property damage resulting from last night's rioting. Adjutant General Dickinson, who attended the meeting was told that the entire trouble resulted from a lack of discipline and disorderly conduct by the militiamen.

POLICE ARE CRITICISED.

The police force, which numbers sixty, also was charged with negligence. Of all the incidents of the riot related to-day, not one told of a single act of bravery on the part of the police or militiamen. Anxious citizens, who inquired of individual militiamen why they did not stop the plundering and murders, in many instances under their very eyes, received grins for their replies. Some of the soldiers were disarmed by the rioters.

To-day some of the negroes walked out of town on the railroad tracks, more crossed to the Missouri side, still others, assured of protection by the augmented force of soldiers, returned to their homes. Some, whose homes were burned were cared for in a camp hastily arranged by the Chamber of Commerce.

A newspaper reporter, who was in the thick of the trouble, related that a white man, observing a cowering negro, approached and said:—

"Come with me into this alley, you'll be safe there." The negro followed in the alley. The white man calmly shot his victim through the head and sauntered back into the street, presently joining a mob intent on a rope and lamp post lynching.

Last night brought rumors that many bodies had been thrown in the river, but the waters gave up no dead to-day. One negro badly injured was discovered in a sewer manhole, where he was thrown after being badly beaten.

BLAMES STRIKEBREAKERS

Michael Whalen, president of the Central Trades and Labour Council here and likewise City Clerk, gave one explanation of conditions which he thought led to the rioting.

"Last summer," said Whalen, "4,500 white men went on strike in the packing plants of Armour & Co., Morris & Co., and Swift & Co. Eight hundred negroes from the South came into the plant as strike-breakers. When the strike ended the negroes remained at work and an equivalent number of white men failed to get their jobs back. Since then there has been a stream of negroes arriving. At least twenty-five hundred negroes have come from the South in the last year. Many of them failed to obtain work or to hold jobs once obtained. Burglaries, highway robberies and petty crimes began. The people became exasperated and determined to drive them out of town."

The Grand Jury meets July 9. The leaders of the mob are said to be known and the Grand Jury will deal with them.

Of the ninety-three cases in which those arrested were charged with inciting to riot, all but three were dismissed for lack of evidence. Three others accused by witnesses of dragging a negro through the streets with a rope around his neck were held to the Grand Jury.

To Quickly Remove Ugly Hairs From Face

(Beauty Notes)

Beauty-destroying hairs are soon banished from the skin with the aid of a delatone paste, made by mixing some water with a little plain powdered delatone. This is spread upon the hairy surface for 2 or 3 minutes, then rubbed off and the skin washed to remove the remaining delatone. This simple treatment banishes every trace of hair, and leaves the skin without a blemish. Caution should be used to be certain that it is delatone you buy.

CHAPTER IX.

HE WHOM THE CAP FITS—

Several minutes had elapsed between the two unexpected visits. During those minutes a somewhat acrimonious discussion broke out in the dining room. Bates went to reassure his wife, and Hart sauntered back from the kitchen. He was received by Grant and Furneaux more in sorrow than in anger, a pose on their part which he blandly disregarded. He helped himself to the remains of the decanter of port.

"The next point of vital interest in the narrative is to establish, by such evidence as is available, who Owd Ben is, or was," he said. "I presume, since he has attained local celebrity as a ghost, he has passed over, as the spirits say."

"Sit down!" cried Furneaux savagely.

Hart sat down, and began filling that portentous pipe.

"You fellows merely ran into each other outside. I take it," he said apparently by way of a chatty remark. "The crack of the pistol shot and the supposed resurrection of Owd Ben threw Mrs. Bates temporarily off her balance, so I helped in reviving her. Between such a cook and such a ghost, who would hesitate?"

"When Furneaux was really irritated he swore in French.

"Nom d'un bon petit homme gris!" he almost squealed, "why did you whip out that infernal revolver? You spoiled everything, everything! Have you no sense in that picturesque head of yours? Your skull is big enough to hold brains, not soap-bubbles."

"Did your French father marry a Jap?" inquired Hart with sudden interest.

"And now you are insulting my mother," yelped the detective.

"No I. You know nothing about the finest race of little women in the world, or you would not even imagine such rubbish."

"But why, why didn't you tell me that you saw someone outside?"

"You would not have believed me. The goblin was disappearing. I had to shoot quick."

"Why shoot at all?"

"Sir, there are certain manifestations I object to on principle. What self-respecting ghost ever wore whiskers?"

"This was no ghost. You shot the man's hat off!"

"Then what the blazes are you growling at? Had I, in blood-curdling whisper, told you that once again there was a face at the window, you would have scoffed at me. The ill-looking scamp caught my eye after his first glance at Grant. He was mizzling when I fired. You would have sat there and argued about hypnotism, with our worthy author's skilled support. And there would have been no hat! I do an admirable bit of trick shooting, yet I am only reviled for my dexterity. Really, Charles Francois!"

"Ah! You remember, at last!" and the detective smiled sourly.

Parfaitement! as they say in Paris, where you and I met once, though 'twas in a crowd. But I didn't steal the blessed pearl. I believe it was that blatant patriot Domengo Surarez."

"You've got some brains, then. Why not use them? Don't you see what a fix we three would have found ourselves in had you shot the man!"

"But, consider, Cerlo, mio! A spook with whiskers! What court would find me guilty? Let me produce the authentic record of Owd Ben, and I have no doubt but that the Lord Chief Justice himself would have potted his representative. He'd be bound to confess it."

Furneaux was cooling down.

"You have shaken my confidence," he said. "Unless I have your promise that you will never do such a thing again while in my company, I shall ban you from this inquiry with bell, book and candle."

"Very well. It's a bargain. Now let us ponder Exhibit A."

He stretched a long arm over the table and took the hat.

"Put it on!" commanded the detective.

Hart did so, and scowled frightfully. Furneaux bent forward and squinted.

"Notice the line of those bullet-holes," he said to Grant.

"Any man wearing that hat must have had his scalp ploughed up," said Grant instantly.

"Well we know that nothing of the kind happened. Why?"

"It was perched on top of a wig," drawled Hart.

Furneaux was slightly disappointed—there was no denying it. Being a vain little person, he liked to show off in a minor matter such as this.

"Yes," he admitted, "and what's the corollary?"

"That the wearer is probably a clean shaven person with thin hair, a daring scoundrel, who is well posted in the leading characteristics of Owd Ben. Charles le Petit, time is now ripe for details of that hairy goblin."

"Where did you dig him up from anyhow?" said the detective testily.

"Mrs. Bates recognised him from my vivid description."

"Her husband can tell us the story," put in Grant. "I'll fetch him."

He had not moved ere the front door bell rang a second time.

"Here is Owd Ben himself, I expect," said Hart.

"If it's that Robinson——" growled Furneaux vexedly, hastening to forestall Minnie.

But it was Doris Martin, and very pretty she looked as she entered the room, her high colour being the joint outcome of a rapid walk and a very natural embarrassment at finding the frankly admiring eyes of a stranger fixed on her.

"I don't quite know why I am here," he said, with a nervous laugh, addressing Grant directly. "You will think I am always gazing in the direction of the Hollies, but my room commands this house so fully that I cannot help seeing or hearing anything unusual. A few minutes ago I heard what I thought was a muffled gunshot. I looked out and saw your window thrown open, though the light was dim, and only a candle was showing in the smaller window. I was alarmed, so came to inquire what had happened. You'll pardon me, I am sure."

"Say you don't, Jack, I implore you, and let me apologize for you," pleaded Hart.

"Doris, this is my good friend, Wally Hart," smiled Grant. "Won't you sit down? We have an exciting story for you."

"Father will be horribly anxious if he knows I have gone out."

"Nevertheless, there was sufficient spice of Mother Eve in Doris that she should take the proffered chair.

"Sorry to interrupt," broke in Furneaux. "Did you meet P. C. Robinson?"

"No."

"Then came by way of the bridge?"

"There is no other way unless one makes a detour by Bush Walk."

The detective whirled round on Grant.

"What room is over this one?"

"Minnie's."

"She's in the kitchen, with her mother. See that she doesn't come upstairs while I'm absent. You three keep on talking."

"Thanks," said Hart.

"Doris, more self-possessed now, read the meaning of the quip promptly.

"Mr. Grant has often spoken of you," she said. "You talk and we'll listen."

"Not so, divinity," came the retort—"I may be a parrot, but I don't want my neck wrung when you're gone."

"Dont' encourage him, Doris," said Grant, "or you'll be here till midnight."

"If that's the best you can do, you had better leave the recital to me," laughed Hart.

Meanwhile, Furneaux had stolen noiselessly to the bedroom overhead. The casement window was open—he had noticed that fact while in the garden. He peeped out, and was just in time to see Robinson emulating a Sioux Indian on the war-path. The policeman removed his helmet, and was about to peer cautiously through the small window. The detective's blood ran cold. What if Hart discovered yet another ghost?

"Robinson—go home!" he said, in sepulchral tones.

The constable positively jumped. He gaped on all sides in real terror. He, too, had heard hair-raising tales of Owd Ben.

"Go home!" hissed Furneaux, leaning out.

Then the other looked up.

"Oh, it's you, sir!" he gasped, sighing with relief.

"Man, you had the closest shave of your life! There's a fellow below there who shoots at sight!"

"But I'm on duty, sir."

"You'll be in Kingdom Come, if you gaze in at that window. Be off!"

"I——"

"Robinson, you and I will quarrel if you don't do as I bid you. And that would be a pity, because I want to inform Mr. Fowler that he has a particularly smart man in Steynholme."

"Very well, sir, if you are satisfied I must be."

And away went the eavesdropper, crushed, still tingling with that fear of the supernatural latent in every heart, but far from being convinced.

Furneaux tripped downstairs. The routing of Robinson had put him in a real good humor. He found the three in the dining room gazing spellbound at the felt hat.

"Now, young lady, you are coming with me," he said grinning amiably. "The Sussex constabulary is quelled for the hour."

"But, Mr. Furneaux, I recognize that hat!" said Doris, and it was notable that even Hart remained silent.

The detective looked at her strangely, but put no question.

"I am almost sure it belongs to our local Amateur Dramatic Society," went on the girl. "It was worn by Mr. Elkin last November. He played a burlesque of Svengali. I was Trilby, and caught a horrid cold from walking about without shoes or stockings."

"Don't tell me any more," was Furneaux's surprising comment. "I will do the rest. But let me remark, Miss Martin, that I experienced great difficulty, not so long ago, in persuading friend Grant that you were the only important witness this case has provided thus far. Playing in a burlesque, were you? We've been similarly engaged to-night. The farce must stop now. It makes way for grim tragedy. Not one word of to-night's events to anyone, please.... Are you ready?"

Doris stood up. Hart thrust the negro's head at the detective.

"Fouche," he said, "do you honestly mean slinging your hook without making any inquiry as to Owd Ben?"

FEW DROPS AND CORN LIFTS OUT

Says There Is No Excuse For Cutting Corns and Inviting Lockjaw

Sore corns, hard corns, soft corns or any kind of a corn can harmlessly be lifted right out with the fingers if you will apply directly upon the corn a few drops of freezone, says a Cincinnati authority.

It is claimed that at small cost one can get a quarter of an ounce of freezone at any drug store, which is sufficient to rid one's feet of every corn or callus without pain or soreness or the danger of infection.

This simple drug, while sticky, dries the moment it is applied and does not inflame or even irritate the surrounding tissue.

This announcement will interest many women here, for it is said that the present high-heel footwear is putting corns on practically every woman's feet.

"Impossible."

"Not at all. His work is perfect."

"A blind painter? His work is perfect? Why, what does he paint?"

Did Him Good.

A provincial clergyman during his sermon caught sight of a member of his congregation wearing a very worried look. Suddenly the man's face brightened, and during the remainder of the service his appearance betokened a perfect freedom from care.

"I am pleased to think, William," remarked the clergyman after the service, "that my words helped you somewhat this morning. I noticed during my discourse that your face lit up and the sunshine of smiles chased the clouds of worry away. Now, what portion of my sermon appealed so strong to you, eh?"

"To tell the truth, sir," replied William, "I wasn't payin' so much attention to your preachin' as I ought to hev done; I was balancin' up the week's cash in my mind and found myself two and threepence short. I worried and worried about that money, but couldn't fit it in no how.

"Then I happened to catch a word or two of what you said about the preparations that man made for his prodigal son, and it came into my mind like a flash of lightnin' that I'd spent two and threepence for a new horsewhip to give my boy Jim a thunderin' good hidin'. It's wonderful, as you say, sir, what help a chance word may be. Good mornin', sir."

The Lesson of Epictetus.

"If we cannot be happy," says Sir John Lubbock, "the fault is generally in ourselves. Epictetus was a poor slave, and yet how much we owe to him! 'How possible,' he says, 'that a man who has nothing, who is naked, houseless, without a hearth, squalid, without a slave, without a city, can pass a life that flows easily! See; God has sent you a man to show you that it is possible. Look at me, who am without a city, without a house, without possessions, without a slave. I sleep on the ground. I have no wife, no children, no praetorium, but only the earth and the heavens, and one poor cloak. And what do I want? Am I not without sorrow? Am I not without fear? When did any of you see me failing in the object of my desire or ever falling into that which I would avoid? Did I ever blame God or man? Did I ever accuse any man? Did any of you ever see me with a sorrowful countenance? And how do I meet with those whom you are afraid of and admire? Do I not treat them as slaves? Who, when he sees me, does not think that he sees his king and his master?'"

Sure Enough.

"Yes, sir," said the station master, "Safety first has spread all over this country. And nobody that comes to Beaver Hill will ever git in no accidents fer want o' warnin' signs about. Just look at that now!"

The stranger gazed appreciatively at the sign nailed on a nearby telegraph post. Its stern message was:

"It is dangerous to walk or stand on these tracks while a train is passing."—Everybody's Magazine.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Her Own Detective

A Girl Suspect Clears Herself

By ELINOR MARSH

We were a "bunch" of a dozen boys and girls, averaging in age perhaps seventeen years. We were young enough to get up parties on the principle of "Dutch treat" and not old enough for a boy to feel that if he asked one of the girls to go to an amusement he must hire a carriage for the purpose of taking her. We had informal dances in each other's houses and each boy was detailed, as they say in the army, to escort a particular girl to the dance. In this way all the girls were transported without doubling up.

All went well, and we were having a merry time when Roy Stivers, one of the boys who had gone sweet on a girl outside the set, insisted on introducing her among us. We girls were not pleased at the introduction of one we knew nothing about, but we yielded gracefully, and I consented to Roy bringing her to a dance that was to come off at my house.

It is marvelous how a nice, well bred boy will go daft on a girl entirely out of his sphere and in every way beneath him. The moment we girls saw Roy's friend, Sarah Stearns, we knew that a firebrand had been introduced among us. But it is easier to let a person into a social clique than to get him or her out. Roy was one of our nicest fellows, and we did not wish to offend him. Sarah Stearns was not invited again to any of our little dances, but Roy asked her to go with him on excursions, theater parties and the like. He was the only son of a widow who gave him all the money he wished and, among other luxuries, a splendid motorcar. He was accustomed to take us all out in it between dances when we were holding our informal parties, and also took us on longer rides. Of course we could not object to his inviting Sarah to go on excursions in his car, and while so engaged we endeavored to treat her civilly.

Just before the spring opened Roy invited us all to go to his mother's country place for a week end. Of course Sarah Stearns would be of the party, Roy being at liberty to invite whom he pleased to his own home. Two-thirds of our "bunch" accepted, and Roy took us to our destination in his car. The others would not go on account of Sarah Stearns being of the party.

I wished very much to enjoy the fun, but Eleanor Trevor was my particular girl chum, and she was one who intended to stay away. I persuaded her to go, however, since my pleasure depended on her doing so.

Roy's mother acted as chaperon and did all in her power to make our stay in her house enjoyable. One evening we were dancing when all of a sudden the electric lights ceased to glow, and we were left in total darkness. My friend Eleanor was dancing with Charlie Hunt at the time. Charlie, like Roy, was given everything he wanted, and among other things he possessed was a valuable gold watch. Soon after the lights were extinguished there was a tug at his watch chain and, feeling for it, he found it broken. His watch was gone. He was dancing with Eleanor when the darkness came, and of course they ceased to whirl and disengaged themselves. Five minutes later, when the lights continued to glow, they were still standing near each other.

Charlie, not wishing to mar our festivities, said nothing at the time about the loss of the watch, but the matter soon leaked out. An unpleasant feature of the matter was that he was dancing with Eleanor when the lights went out, and the logical inference was that she had relieved him of it. Nevertheless, none of us believed anything of the kind.

Our host was very much troubled. It was evident that there was a thief among us. So far as circumstantial evidence was concerned it pointed to Eleanor Trevor. She knew nothing about Charlie's loss or the position in which she stood until I told her. She was not a person to cringe under such circumstances. With woman's intuition she at once spotted Sarah Stearns as being at the bottom of the trouble. She did not believe that Sarah had stolen the watch for the watch itself, but that she might inculpate Eleanor. Eleanor's theory was that Sarah had seen her dancing with Charlie when the lights had gone out and an opportunity had appeared to her of punishing the girl who she knew was in favor of ostracising her from our set.

But Eleanor told no one except me of her suspicion, and I confess it seemed to me rather farfetched, though I did not say this to Eleanor.

"I've got a detective problem on my hands," said Eleanor to me, "and I'm especially interested in working it out. I wish you would give me the cold shoulder and ask the other girls to do the same."

"Why so?" I asked. "There's not one of us that believes for a moment that you are a thief."

"It will put Sarah Stearns off her guard and give me a better chance. If she took the watch—and I am sure she did—she must get rid of it. I'll take all possible pains to see that she doesn't send it away. I shall keep an eye on her all the while and note everything she does."

"I will aid you in that," I said.

The incident occurred on Saturday evening. All day Sunday either Eleanor or I kept watch on Sarah. Sunday afternoon she started with a letter in her hand for the postoffice. I told her that I had written a letter that I wished mailed. She offered to mail it for me. I went to my room for it, and when I came down had my hat and coat on and told her that I would go with her. To that she assented with at least apparent willingness. Whether or no she was going to get rid of the watch, she had no chance to do so, for I did not let her out of my sight for a moment.

Eleanor interfered with her going out later in the evening to take the air on the porch. We all went to bed early, or at least to our rooms. We girls were roomed on the second floor, and each was given a room to herself. Eleanor was in my room till 11 o'clock. She said she expected to be up all night to see that Sarah Stearns did not get rid of the watch, and her watch would not commence till all in the house were supposed to be asleep.

"What are you going to do?" I asked.

"I'm going to stay in the hall."

"Go to bed," I urged. "None of us believes that you are a thief. Besides, you are acting on a theory. You will lose your sleep for nothing."

"I have more chance of success than you think," she said. "Charlie has been very nice to me and has told me certain things about the watch that it is well for me to know."

"Then he knows you are hunting for it?"

"No, what he told me was said casually. But he does not believe I robbed him. At least he says he doesn't."

"But I don't see how any mark on the watch can do you any good except to identify it when you have got it, and you will have to get it before you can identify it."

Eleanor made no reply to this. She simply kissed me good night and went to her room. I was a long while getting to sleep, but when I did I slept till 4 o'clock in the morning, when I was awakened by her. She told me that she had been awake all night and asked me to get up and continue the watch that she might get some sleep. I did as she asked, but it was evident that she had failed, and I believed she was on a wild goose chase.

She was up for an 8 o'clock breakfast and looked quite fresh, considering that she had gone to bed so late. During the day I helped her occasionally in her vigil and again prevented Sarah Stearns from going out alone. This time I could see that she suspected me, though she concealed the fact quite well.

"The party is to break up tomorrow," said Eleanor to me. "We were only invited till Tuesday morning. Either I must get that watch tonight or remain smirched for the rest of my life."

I assured her that she was not nor ever would be smirched by any one of us, to which she replied that Sarah Stearns would spread the matter abroad in a way that could not be countered.

Boy took us to drive during the afternoon. Eleanor feigned a headache and remained at home. She charged me to keep my eyes upon Sarah Stearns every moment. I suggested to Eleanor that she was remaining at home that she might search for the missing watch, but she said that would be useless, for if Sarah had left it she had undoubtedly hidden it in a safe place, but she believed Sarah had it with her, and Eleanor relied on me to see that she did not get rid of it during the ride. I did my work, but without results.

That night, when Eleanor and I went to our rooms, as we passed Sarah Stearns' room I saw Eleanor look up at the transom. Then she went with me into my room and took from my closet a bamboo stick with a hook on one end and carried it away to her room. Just before 3 in the morning she came into my room and, holding her watch to my ear, asked me if I could hear it tick. I told her that I could hear it very distinctly. She removed it farther and farther from me, with each removal asking me if I could still hear it tick. When she had taken it some four or five yards from me I could still hear it.

"That will do," she said. "Your ear is far more keen than mine. It is now a few minutes before 3. Come with me."

She led me by the hand through the darkness to Sarah Stearns' door. Then she took the bamboo stick with the hook on the end and, feeling carefully for the transom by means of the hook, pulled it partly open, accomplishing the work without the slightest sound. This done, she put her arms around my knees and lifted me so that my ear was near the transom. She had held me there perhaps three minutes when I heard what sounded like a far distant chime faintly strike the hour of 3.

"Put me down," I whispered to Eleanor.

"Have you heard anything?" asked Eleanor.

"Yes; a chime."

She lowered me to the floor and, throwing her arms around my neck, gave me a bear hug.

"Now go and awaken some of the girls and bring them here," she said.

I did her bidding and collected every girl in the hall. Then Eleanor turned on the electric light and knocked gently on Sarah's door.

The door was unlocked, and we all went into the room. Eleanor went to the bed and from under a pillow took out the lost watch.

There was a chime strike in it, and Eleanor, knowing this, had based her operations on hearing it. But since the watch was under a pillow no one except with the keenest sense of hearing would have detected it.

The matter was hushed up on Roy's account, but we were no longer troubled with Miss Stearns.

WHEN YOU CAN'T SLEEP

YOU SHOULD USE
MILBURN'S HEART and NERVE PILLS

Sleeplessness is caused by the nervous system becoming deranged.

Perhaps too much worry has gotten on your nerves, perhaps you have overworked yourself, or have been excessive in your use of tobacco, but whatever the cause, the nervous system must be built up again before restful sleep can be assured.

Those whose rest is broken into by frightful dreams, nightmares, sinking and smothering sensations, who wake up in the morning as tired as they went to bed can have their old, peaceful, undisturbed, refreshing sleep back again by using Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

Mr. John Sloan, Haley Station, Ont., writes: "Over a year ago I was very nervous. I could not sleep at night, and I would faint at the slightest fright. I tried several doctors, but they did me practically no good. I noticed your advertisement, and immediately tried Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and I am proud to say they cured me."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c a box or three for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

QUICK WORK ON SHIPS.

Twenty-one Months Required to Build Battleship in England.

There is no exaggeration in the statement sometimes made that this war has given England's industries, all of them put together, a new speed—a new enthusiasm for organization and for investigations and for education—really almost a new life. If there ever was a case of a phoenix rising from its ashes, it is the case of this England, the mother of modern industry, very old and very tired, rising from the pyre of war again renewing its youth.

I have seen a battleship, a battleship of first-class size and of more than first-class engine-power, steaming to the Grand Fleet ready for action, on the twentieth day of the twenty-first month from the day on which the drawings for her were received by the shipyard!

I talked with one of the engineers who helped to build her. He had no notion that England, "the world's workshop," had nothing to learn from other countries. That sort of complacency in England had received a body-blow. When he found that I knew something about the methods used by a certain firm in New England, I had to promise him to go to that firm and, if possible, get their latest results and send them to him.

Such interest in scientific management in organizations existed only recently in England two years ago. It begins to exist here now mightily. I know a Canadian who spent many years in the United States and there became greatly skilled in methods of organization for factories and offices. He now has a large office, a large scientific-management school in London. He and his assistants conduct "surveys" and install "systems" and give courses of instruction for employers and for employés not only in London but in many other places all over England. He is very busy and very successful. Two years ago he would have been lucky to have one-tenth of his present clientele.—William Hard in the Metropolitan.

A Short History of Fans

THE use of fans has come down to us from remote ages. In the British Museum there is a bas relief which represents Sennacherib surrounded by a group of women attendants, all of whom are carrying feather fans. Similar examples of this ancient use of fans are seen in Egyptian sculptures at Thebes, in the ruins of Persepolis and in other places. Perhaps the oldest fan in existence to-day is in a museum near Cairo; it is a wooden fan-handle, showing holes in which feathers were inserted, and it is known to date from the Seventeenth Century B. C.

In the Middle Ages fans were used in certain church ceremonies, according to the new Encyclopaedia Britannica. These fans were made of silver or silver gilt, and were sometimes round in shape with little bells attached. Mention is made of such fans in the cathedral records of St. Paul's, London, Salisbury, and in many church records also. They are no longer used for these purposes in the western world, but are still retained in some Oriental religious ceremonies.

Japan and China play a large part in the history and development of fans, and many of the most beautiful and original designs were worked out by the skillful artisans of those countries. Folding-fans originated in Japan, but were soon imported to China. The shape in which these earliest folding-fans were made is still used to-day—a segment of a circular piece of paper pasted on a radiating frame-work of bamboo. Some of them were decorated in many colors, others were of plain white paper. The latter were made for the carrying out of the complimentary Chinese custom of requesting a friend or a distinguished guest at any great occasion to write appropriate remarks on one's fan. This custom still prevails in China.

In these two oriental countries, men and women of all classes and professions carry fans—even workmen using them with one hand while working with the other; and the different designs and styles, of course, are numerous. The loveliest Chinese fans are made of very thin plates of ivory, elaborately carved, often on both sides. The plates are fastened together with a ribbon. Sometimes Japanese fans have the outer guards of the sticks made of extremely thin, light beaten iron, inlaid with gold or other metals.

Coming down to more modern times and countries, we find that Portuguese ladies of the Fourteenth Century carried fans as well as those of France and England. In France, fans were brought into very general use by Catherine de Medici, who brought with her from Italy the more elaborate tastes of that southern country.

The ladies at the court of Henry VIII. of England were accustomed to hold fans in their hands, as we may see in Holbein's portraits of noble ladies. Queen Elizabeth was painted at least once with a round feather fan in her hand, and an inventory of her private possessions, taken in 1606, informs us that she owned no less than 27 fans.

In the Seventeenth Century, Paris became the European centre for the manufacture of fans. Here were made the sticks, of wood or of ivory, and the carefully prepared vellum which had been found much stronger and better to use than paper. Often the decorations were put on to the vellum in Paris, but sometimes unpainted fans were sent to Spain to be decorated by Spanish artists. Dutch fans of ivory were imported into Paris and there decorated by painters by a special process of colorless lac varnish. Queen Victoria owned several fans of this kind which were exhibited at Kensington in 1870.

Under the Stuarts, the manufacture of fans became well established in England, and Charles II. was petitioned by the fan-makers not to import fans from India. In response to their request, a duty was levied on Indian fans; but the fashion of importing fans from India and China spread and, in France, the trade in them with those countries surpassed that with Italy.

The over-ornamentation and magnificence of the Eighteenth Century made itself seen even in such small things as fans, which grew more and more elaborate. The sticks were made now of mother-of-pearl or ivory, and were carved with remarkable skill in France, England, Italy, and other countries. Taffeta silk and fine parchment were used to cover the sticks and occasionally even the finest point lace. Sometimes little circles of glass were inserted into the sticks to be looked through. The painting on the fans was from designs by such famous painters of the day as Boucher, Watteau, and Lancret, and often it represented contemporary political scenes and personages. A little later, fans were often decorated with hand-colored prints.

Of course, the great expense and elaborate decoration expended on fans decreased rapidly after the French Revolution, but there are today in Paris well-known fan-makers who carry on a large business, and artists of note still sometimes design and paint the mounts. The best modern designs are figures.

In England, the manufacture of fans was greatly stimulated by the exhibition at the South Kensington Museum in 1870, to which reference has already been made. This museum contains a large collection of Eighteenth Century fans, French, English, German, Italian, and Spanish notably. Modern collections of fans date from the time of the French Revolution, when fine ladies gave theirs away as souvenirs or were forced to sell them.

THE ISLAND OF SERPENTS.

Quaint Legends Cluster Round Historic Spot.

Less than thirty miles east of Sulina, the only important Black Sea port remaining in the possession of Roumania since Field Marshal von Mackensen captured Constanza, is the tiny Island of Serpents, around which cling many fantastic legends of fascinating interest, as well as several historical episodes which at one time threatened to become of international moment.

Unlike the monotonous reaches of reed-covered marshland which stretch for fifty miles along the Roumanian and Russian shores to the north and south of the Sulina mouth of the Danube, and seldom attaining an elevation of more than two feet above the level of the Black Sea, the Island of Serpents, or Fido-nisi, thrusts its precipitous cliffs above the water to heights ranging from fifty to one hundred feet. It is a mere fleck of rock in a sea whose depth a few yards from the shore is twenty fathoms. The islet is scarcely more than a mile in circumference, but it has been a beacon guiding ships to the Danube for many centuries, its elevation being in such striking contrast to the delta-land of the great river.

In ancient times Fido-nisi had a variety of names, but Grecian poets and travellers referred to it most frequently at Leuce or the White Island, on account of the numerous seafowls which at certain seasons of the year swarmed over its cliffs.

It was to this island that Thetis, the marine goddess, is supposed to have carried the ashes of her son Achilles, hence the temple erected here in honor of the hero of the Trojan war. Another legend relates that Thetis snatched the body of Achilles from the funeral pyre, that he was restored to life and that thereafter he lived on the island of Iphigenia, the daughter of Agamemnon, who had been saved from sacrifice by the goddess Artemis.

One of the most poetic descriptions of the island and its temple is given by Arrian in the account of his voyage around the Black Sea in the second century of the Christian era. He wrote:

"It is related that Thetic gave this island to Achilles and that he still inhabits it. His tempel and statue, both of very ancient workmanship, are seen there. No human being dwells on it; it has only a few goats which mariners convey to it as votive offerings. Other offerings or sacred gifts are suspended in honor of Achilles, such as vases, rings, and precious gems.

"Seabirds, divers, and fowl innumerable frequent the island and the birds alone have the care of the shrine. Every morning they repair to the sea, and, dipping their wings in the waves, sprinkle the temple and afterwards sweep with their plummage its sacred pavement."

The name Island of Serpents grew out of the fact that numerous black snakes from four to five feet long were discovered here by mariners. Many of the reptiles are said to have fallen in the cisterns of the island and polluted the waters, which are now undrinkable.

The Amazons are supposed to have attempted to seize this island on one occasion, but the ghost of Achilles appeared and so terrified the horses of the female warriors that the riders were thrown and severely trampled upon, whereupon the expedition was abandoned.

This meager rock brought England and Russia to the verge of war sixty years ago, following the treaty of peace which ended the Crimean conflict. The island was not mentioned in the terms of the treaty and when Turkey sent a small party to relight the lighthouse which had been dark through the struggle of 1853-56, Russia attempted to take control of the beacon which stands as a guidepost to the Danube's mouths. England protested, and sent a fleet across the Black Sea to enforce her demands in behalf of her recent ally, the Sultan. Russia, after a brief resistance, yielded. The island passed into Ruman hands, when that nation threw off the Ottoman shackles in 1877.

BAD DREAMS ARE SYMPTOMS

Ill Health the Cause—Many Alarming Symptoms of Woman's Ailments—How Cured.

Paterson, N.J.—"I thank you for the Lydia E. Pinkham remedies as they have made me feel happy and healthy. Some time ago I felt so run down, had pains in my back and side, was very irregular, tired, nervous; had such bad dreams, did not feel like eating and had short breath. I read your advertisement in the newspapers and decided to try a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It worked from the first bottle, so I took a second and a third, also a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Blood Purifier, and now I am just as well as any other woman. I advise every woman, single or married, who is troubled with any of the aforesaid ailments, to try your wonderful Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier and I am sure they will help her to get rid of her troubles." — Mrs. ELSIE J. THE BOXER INDEMNITY

SHADOW OF DEBT HANGS OVER CHINESE REPUBLIC.

Conditions in the Far East Have Changed Greatly Since League Was Formed for the Purpose of Exterminating the Foreigners—Nations May Decide to Remit Part of Enormous Fine.

THE Boxer indemnity is one of those things which the newspaper reader all over the world takes very much for granted. He has been accustomed to see articles, news items, and editorial comment upon it in his daily paper for fifteen years and more. He may not have made any study of it, or any inquiry as to how it came about; but from what he reads about it, plunging, every now and again, into the midst of things, he notes, with feelings of satisfaction or regret, or even of complete indifference, certain facts regarding its estate. He learns that the payments due to this country or that country are in arrears; that this country or that country is seriously contemplating the possibility of remitting a part or the whole of its share; that some part of it has been remitted; that the whole thing is fast coming to be regarded, in certain responsible quarters, as an anomaly, considering the changes that have, in recent times, taken place in China; and that the China on which this indemnity was imposed, as the due reward for the outrages of the Boxer rising of 1900, bears no resemblance, in status or intent, to the China of 1917, doing its best to put its own house in order, and succeeding quite creditably in achieving its purpose.

During the last few weeks the Boxer indemnity has, once again, found a place in the political sun. It was stated as being one of the inducements put forward to China by the Allies to break with Germany, that, if China would take such a course, the Allies' share of the Boxer indemnity would be remitted to her; whilst China's willingness to break with Germany was said to be considerably augmented by the fact that such a course would necessarily lead to her repudiation of her debt to Germany in this connection. After all, it is not difficult to understand that China would be glad to be well rid of the whole sorry business, for many other reasons besides the relief which it would afford her financially. The existence of the obligation, stretching on as it does to the year 1941, is a constant reminder of a condition which all that is best in China would be glad to forget, and to see the whole country well beyond.

The rise of the Boxer movement, now more than twenty years ago, had for its object nothing less than the extirpation of the foreigner, and the rehabilitation of China in all the dignity and splendor of that ancient isolation which she enjoyed before the coming of the "barbarian." When the prefect of Shantung, however, began to gather round him that curious crowd, inspired by motives, half religious, half political, which afterwards developed into a great movement, the rising was no doubt regarded as no more important than the many similar risings which had taken place, in different parts of China, during many years. But the I 'he ch'uan, that is, "the righteous league of fists," or the Boxers, as the Europeans came to call them, had a way of persisting and growing worse all the time. The small flame of 1896 was fanned by many winds. It was a time when the foreigner was making himself specially aggressive in China, demands for concessions were becoming insistent, and a lamentable tendency was being displayed amongst the Powers to wrangle amongst themselves over Chinese property. The righteous league grew and prospered, and outrages on the lives and property of westerners became more frequent, until, at last, in 1900, when the country was ravaged by famine and the troubles at the Court at Pekin had reached an acute stage, an anti-missionary rising developed throughout the country. The Dowager Empress, who, all along, had given the movement her secret support, who had, indeed, with consummate statecraft, transformed what promised at one time to be a revolutionary movement into an anti-foreign movement, openly sided with the league. By her famous coup d'etat of September 20, 1898, she had succeeded in making the young Emperor a virtual prisoner, had compelled him to restore the regency and put an end to the reforms which, at that time, were everywhere pending. The reactionary tide continued to rise steadily throughout the year 1899, and the murder of a missionary in Shantung, early in 1900, clearly indicated the direction in which matters were moving. Four months, from January to April, were consumed in negotiations, and meanwhile the righteous leagues, displaying banners with the device, "Exterminate the foreigners and save the dynasty," set out on a grand march through China, pillaging in all directions, destroying railways, and murdering missionaries and native Christians. On the 20th of June, after many other outrages, the foreign legations at Pekin were invested. The story of the two months' siege which they sustained, and of the relief which was ultimately brought by an allied force; of the siege of Pekin, its capture, and the flight of the Court, is well known. As the result of the great settlement which ultimately followed, an indemnity of 450,000,000 taels was imposed on China, and payments were required to be completed within fifty years. It is this debt, the Boxer indemnity, which China is still paying.

English Rulers And Their Meals

WILLIAM THE FIRST loved the tall deer as if he were their father; his favorite dish was venison. William the Second ate venison like his father, but preferred boar's head. Henry the First was so fond of lampreys that he eventually died of a surfeit of them. Stephen was the first king to introduce foreign cookery, that of the Empire, in an abridged form. Henry the Second returned to the old fish and vegetable diet of the Church with an occasional game pie as an interlude. In the reign of Richard the First meat and game and venison pasties were fashionable, and the preparers were called "Pasteiers." King John was exceedingly fond of lampreys and a royal lamprey pie with the Arms of Gloucester on it was presented at Court annually from his reign to the Diamond Jubilee of Queen Victoria.

During the reign of Henry the Third the Ancient Company of Cooks, founded in 1211, first became powerful, and roasting and boiling superseded pasties. Edward the First was very fond of roast ox, and introduced Welsh mutton into England after his conquest. Edward the Second favored French cooking as then known, a connoisseur of the kitchens, and pioneered the custom of householders having their meals professionally cooked.

Henry the Seventh opposed the Continental modes of his predecessor, and reintroduced English joints and pies, especially lark pie. Henry the Eighth dined at 11 a.m. and started with roast beef. Edward the Sixth was very fond of eggs and omelettes; he also named a dish of beef after his mother, Jane Seymour. Queen Mary was partial to sherry long before she married Philip the Second, and introduced garlic into English cookery. Queen Elizabeth's favorite dish at the Kenilworth festivities was peacock pie; and she loved the dainties of the Netherlands. James the First introduced haggis into England, and was more partial to French than German or Spanish dishes.

For the merit of roast beef Charles the First knighted it, and with his sword over the joint said, "Arise, thou famed Sir Loin!" The knighting of the sirloin is also ascribed to James the First and Charles the Second. Sturgeon has always been a royal fish, the king's perquisite without payment, and Charles the Second kept fisher-boats to catch them in the Thames for himself. James the Second attempted to introduce la haute cuisine of the Louis the Fourteenth period, William the Third introduced Dutch cookery—salads, cured and smoked fish—under a Dutch chef, Ulrich Horitiner. Queen Anne was a great culinary artist and inventor of maids of honor cakes, as sold at Richmond, so called because an archbishop calling on the Queen surprised her and her maids making cakes. George the First introduced German dishes, both ate and spoke German, was a gourmand, not a gourmet; in his reign catering first became international, and the English cuisine known as that of Queen Anne died out.

George the Second was very fond of mutton pies, and in his reign the Kit Kat Club was founded by Christopher Katt, a famous mutton-pie cook, who supplied the Duke of Marlborough, Addison, Walpole, and others. George the Third liked boiled mutton, carrots, and turnips best; in his younger days tench, mullets, and doreys attracted him, and he made "blomanges" fashionable. George the Fourth employed the famous chef Careme and set the fashion of French cuisine in England; his kitchen at Brighton, says the "Restaurateur," was the most up-to-date in England, and, according to John Wilson Croker, "possessed contrivances for roasting, boiling, stewing, and frying, steaming and baking, hot plates, hot closets, hot air, with all manner of cocks for hot water and cold water and warm water and steam, and twenty saucepans all ticketed and labelled, placed up to their necks in a vapour bottle." His favorite dish was roast neck of mutton and bubble and squeak.

William the Fourth was partial to whitebait dinners, which soon became fashionable at Greenwich. Apple dumplings and roast pork, with kidneys and bacon for breakfast, was the diet of the sailor Prince. Queen Victoria, in her younger days, was partial to turbot with festoons of lobster and a saddle of mutton; she gave her name to a consomme, a sauce, a garnishee for lobster, and a pudding. King Edward had a great partiality for tripe suppers, and gave his name to a mode of serving game with rice.

Maseppa.

Maseppa, according to some authorities, was by birth a Cossack, becoming when very young a page at the Court of John Casimer, King of Poland. Being discovered in an intrigue with a noble lady, the jealous husband caused him to be bound to the back of a wild horse. The animal bore him off to his native woods in the Ukraine, where some Cossacks released the exhausted youth. He became their leader, was made a noble by Peter the Great, but deserted the cause of Russia during the invasion of the Swedes under Charles the Twelfth, and after the disastrous battle of Poltava killed himself by poison. Pushkin made Maseppa the hero of his drama, "Poltava," and Victor Hugo wrote a poem on the subject. A portrait of Maseppa, painted from life, was discovered in 1880 at Kiev, in Southern Russia.

Ancient War Automobiles.

Among some interesting documents in the old Bohemian city, Saaz, on the Eger river, is a picture showing an attack on the fortress Glatz, in Silesia, in which war automobiles were used. The mechanically driven cars were flat vehicles, protected by huge shields in front, in which the soldiers turned large cranks, the rotary motion of which was transferred to cog wheels and to the road wheels. It is estimated that these fifteenth century "chauffeurs" got a speed of four miles an hour out of the armored cars.

WHEAT MARKET VERY INACTIVE

Manitoba Flour Down Another Fifty Cents—The Cattle Market

Manitoba flours were quoted another 50c down by local dealers yesterday, making a total decline of four dollars per barrel from the high point as quoted on May 15th last. This rapid decline has followed on the steady lowering of the wheat markets since the date referred to. The wheat market was very inactive to-day, with Chicago eliminated owing to the holiday, and practically nothing much doing at Winnipeg, the October option closing 7-8c below Tuesday's close. Corn and oats are firm.

Manitoba wheat—No. 1 northern; lake ports, $2.36; No. 2, Northern, $2.33.

Manitoba oats—No. 2, 81c, track, bay ports.

Manitoba corn—$1.82 1-2c, nominal.

Ontario oats—No. 2, white, not quoted.

Ontario wheat—No. 2 winter, per car lots, $2.35 to $2.40; No. 2 winter, $2.33 to $2.38, according to freight outside.

Peas—No. 2, nominal.

Barley—Good malting, nominal.

Buckwheat—Nominal.

Rye—No. 2, $2.05.

Manitoba flour — First patents, in jute bags, $12.50; second patents, $11.90; strong bakers, $11.50.

Ontario flour — Winter, according to sample, $10.15 to $10.25, track, Toronto, prompt shipments.

Mill feed—Car lots, delivered, Montreal, shorts, $38; bran, $31; feed flour, per bag, $2.60 to $2.90; middlings, $42.

Hay—Baled, track, Toronto, car lots, No. 2, $13 to $13.50; mixed, $9 to $11.50; straw, $9.

Cattle Markets.

Union Stock Yards—Receipts, 85 cars, with 507 cattle, 359 calves, 1,872 hogs, and 226 sheep and lambs.

The market was very slow and draggy. A few choice stall fed cattle sold around $11, but the grass cattle are off 50c to 75c for butcher steers and heifers, and butcher cows and bulls are weak at the decline of a dollar to a dollar and a quarter from last week's prices.

Stockers and feeders come under the general decline of 75c to $1, and a very good demand at that.

Good veal calves are holding steady.

Sheep and lambs steady.

Hogs strong and 25c higher at $16.75, fed and watered.

HAIG STRIKES IN ANOTHER PLACE

British Airmen Bomb Enemy Positions

The British Make Gains In The Neighbourhood Of Hollebeke

General Field Marshal Haig Reports an Advance South-west of Ypres---Withering Defensive Fire of French Stop German Attempts Around Laon and Verdun--Tons of Explosive Bombs Dropped By British Aviators.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

LONDON, July 5.—Continuing his tactics of "mixing" his blows at the Germans, Field Marshal Haig last night struck successfully at the enemy southwest of Hollebeke in Belgium. "We advanced our line slightly over a front of 600 yards," he reported to-day. This new "uppercut" at the Germans had its impact in that section near where the British achieved their gains by the Messines-Wytschaete Ridge victory. There has been but little fighting in this salient for a week. Hollebeke is three miles southeast of Ypres in the northernmost point in the sharp angle formed at Comines by the junction of the Ypres-Lille Canal and the River Lys. At the time of the Messines-Wytschaete victory the Germans were reported to be evacuating this angle because of the difficulty in defending its marshy lowlands, and because the two water ways hemmed in their forces. The evacuation, however, was mostly on the southern part of the angle, and the German lines held firm around Ostaevernem, Wambene and Hollebeke.

In the vicinity of Weiltje and Nieuport the British successfully carried out a number of night raids, capturing several prisoners.

PARIS, July 5.—Active artillerying in the regions of Moronvilliers, Prunay and Hill 304 was reported in to-day's official statement. The German massed infantry attacks south of Laon and around Verdun had apparently ceased in the withering defensive fire of the French.

LONDON, July 5.—Several tons of explosive bombs were dropped by British aeroplanes to-day and Wednesday night on German aeroplane sheds at Ostend, aerodromes at Ghistelles and Nieumunster, and the Zarren railway station, according to an Admiralty announcement to-day. The British machines all returned safely.

NEW YORK, July 5.—That there are several of Germany's ablest spies operating in this country is the view of many Government officials here to-day who have in the past been busy running down alien plotting.

The secret service agencies of the Government are busy on a nation-wide search for the person or persons who gave Germany the information of sailing transports bearing American troops to France. Officials here believe these spies are not listed as "enemy aliens," but as "American declarants," who have taken out their first or second papers.

AN ATLANTIC PORT, July 5.—The story of another victorious battle with a submarine was told by the passengers of a British steamer arriving here to-day. At 7 o'clock on the evening of June 26th, a U-boat appeared about 600 yards away from the ship which was immediately swung around to bring the guns into play. Following the shot clouds of black smoke arose from the submarine and it was not again seen.

PETROGRAD, July 5.—Teutonic army chiefs concentrated counter-attacks to-day to stop General Brusiloff's offensive, and at one point east of Brzezany the War Office announced the pressure of the enemy assault compelled a Russian retirement under artillery fire. The Brzezany sector is being desperately defended by the German and Austrian forces because it is regarded as the key to Lemberg, fifty miles further northwest.

LONDON, July 5.—Reports from Vienna received here to-day stated that an official manifesto has been issued in that city in an effort to allay the alarm of the Austrians caused by the Russian offensive.

LONDON, July 5.—A warning that the British have prepared and will likely deliver a vigorous offensive on the western front, was given in the Reichstag yesterday by General Von Stein, Prussian Minister of War.

ST. JOHN, N.B., July 5.—Lance-Corporal W. S. Hamm died this morning as a result of being shot when he disobeyed the order of a sentry at Fort Howe magazine to halt last night.

LONDON, July 5. — Reuter's correspondent says Germany has called out all seventeen-year-old lads to training camps to prepare for the front.

LONDON, July 5.—Germany has not yet started to shift men from the western front to the north to meet the Russian offensive, judging from evidence at hand, Director of Operations Maurice declared to-day.

According to General Maurice "It is impossible to over-estimate the moral effect of the Russian offensive on Russia herself and the Allies and Central Powers."

Since the start of the war General Maurice said the British had taken 317,776 prisoners and had 51,026 of their own forces captured during the same period. The British captured 737 guns and lost 133 to the enemy, later recapturing 37 of these. The figures, he said, did not include Africa.

TORONTO, July 5.—A special cable from London to the Toronto Telegram says: "A number of Canadians wounded in the capture of Avion a few days ago are now in London. According to a wounded private from Toronto Avion was strongly defended by the Fifth German Grenadier Guards, fine big fellows, scarcely one of whom was below five feet ten, and nearly all in excellent physical condition, but their morale was poor. They fought well behind machine guns which were numerous, nine being captured in one short piece of trench. But the Huns flatly funked fighting at close quarters and held up their hands. Just at the edge of Avion, when the Canadians were entering, a German voice in excellent English called: "Is that the ninth battalion?" Some one replied in the affirmative whereat a number of cylindrical bombs fell among the Canadian party who promptly cut off the German offenders' escape by dashing around the corner and firing a volley which almost wiped them out.

The Canadians declare they found plenty of food in the cellars of Avion. German privates were well supplied and the officers were living luxuriously on the best tinned foods and wines. The Germans also had plenty of equipment, and their artillery is still very good. It is quite evident from the amount of food and material in Avion that the Germans had no idea we would take it so quickly. One officer, who in civil life is a professor or solicitor, and who was wearing an iron cross on his cape, was captured by Lieut. Bob Pollock of Owen Sound. The Hun declared the Germans wanted peace but didn't want Germany wiped off the map as was feared.

Upholstered Chair To Mr. Jas. Browne

The management and staff of the Examiner presented an upholstered rocking chair yesterday to Mr. James Brown of the news room department as an accompaniment of their felicitations upon his wedding. It was a handsome piece, and with it goes the best wishes of the Examiner to Mr. and Mrs. Browne.

THE PETERBORO' RED CROSS TO HOLD TAG DAY

Proceeds Will Be Divided Equally Between French Red Cross and Peterboro' Prisoners of War Fund

TWO SPLENDID CAUSES

The monthly meeting of the Executive of the Peterborough Red Cross Society was held on Tuesday in the teachers' room of the Public Library — Mrs. Matthews presiding.

Great pleasure was expressed at the loyal and hearty manner in which the auxiliaries and societies were responding to the special appeal to endeavour to keep the supplies up during the summer months.

There is only one month's supplies in the London warehouses of the C.R.C., and in case of a big offensive they would very soon be depleted, so it is most imperative that there be no easing up in our labours, for not a single one of us could bear to think of our sick and wounded men wanting for anything that it is in our power to give them.

Miss Flora Davidson reported that the Packing Committee had shipped 20 cases during June. Two of the cases were for the C.W.C.A. (trenches). The cases contained the following:

10 Dressing gowns.
82 Day shirts.
216 Pairs pyjamas.
978 Pairs socks (252 pairs for the C.W.C.A.—trenches).
294 Sheets.
1210 Towels.
125 Many-tailed bandages.
80 Amputation bandages.

The following auxiliaries and societies sent in supplies, and the Executive tenders to them all its hearty thanks:

St. Andrew's Church Society.
St. Paul's Church Auxiliary.
St. Peter's Patriotic Society.
Trinity Church Society.
Ashburnham Patriotic League.
Murray Street Church.
Berean Bible Class (Knox Church).
Lakehurst Auxiliary.
South-End Auxiliary.

The Prisoners of War Department reported 41 prisoners in Germany. Six parcels of food are sent every month to each man.

Twenty-four acknowledgments have been received for the same by us during the month.

$800 was sent as usual to London in payment of the parcels.

It is earnestly hoped that relief and more humane treatment of the prisoners may be the outcome of the conference held at The Hague this week between British and German representatives.

It was unanimously resolved to hold a Tag Day on Saturday, 14th July, in aid of the French Red Cross and the Peterborough Prisoners of War, the proceeds to be equally divided.

The Executive feel that of all Tag Days ever held in Peterborough, that not one will meet with a warmer or more generous response from the citizens generally, young and old, than will this one.

France, our loyal and faithful ally, has been bled white, her men, thousands upon thousands, have laid down their lives crying "Vive La France." Her cities, towns and villages have been laid waste, her industries destroyed, her women, girls and children have suffered terrible horrors, and all this has been endured unflinchingly in support of a true democracy, of liberty and freedom, of national and individual rights. A most urgent and earnest appeal has come to Canada from the London Committee of the French Red Cross, asking for aid, and we feel we cannot refuse this request. Remember Verdun, and give to France.

Our Peterborough Prisoners of War Department also needs funds. $500 every month is sent to pay for the food that is sent to our own men in Germany, and so, instead of having two Tag Days, the Executive are combining the two appeals.

Peterborough, if convinced that a cause is needy and worthy of generous support, always rises to the occasion. We can conceive of no two more worthy causes for support than the Peterborough Prisoners of War and the French Red Cross—and we feel sure that one and all will, during the coming week, prepare for Saturday, 14th July, by practising self-denial in some form or other, by going without some little pleasure or outing, in order to be able to give liberally to those who are suffering for us.

SERGT. THORPE WINS ANOTHER BIG RACE

WITLEY, Surrey, Eng., June 16. — (Special by Mail to The Examiner)—Sergt. Chas. Thorpe, of Peterborough, a member of the 74th Canadian Battery, won the one-mile open race at the South African Sports meeting at Woking to-day, covering the distance in 4:36. There were sixty starters, but the Peterborough boy took the lead at the half-mile mark and was never headed. This is the fourth big race Sergeant Thorpe has won since coming to England. He is competing at Twickenham, Richmond, on Wednesday next.

More Members Of 93rd Battalion Have Returned To City

Ptes. Bird and Hunter of Lieut.-Col. Johnston's Unit Reached Here Last Night---Two Hastings Members of the Peterboro' County Battalion Are Also Home---To-day's General Military News.

Two more Peterborough soldiers reached home from overseas last night in the persons of Ptes. E. Bird and G. Hunter, of the 93rd Battalion, both of whom have been invalided home from England. Alderman Duncan and Alderman Dobbin and City Clerk Armstrong were at the station to extend a civic welcome. Pte. Bird, who is a veteran of the South African War, wearing both the King's and Queen's medals, did not get to the front in the present conflict, but has been on duty in England since last July.

Another member of the 93rd Battalion reached home on Tuesday night in the person of Pte. Cole, of Peterborough, while two other former members of Lieut.-Col. Johnston's unit have arrived at their homes in Hastings. They are Ptes. Chas. Gilders and Pte. Ernest Cann, who came over with the Peterborough party.

Lieut. F. Darrell Gifford, of Port Hope, who left with the 39th Battalion, has been awarded the military cross. At Vimy Ridge he showed great bravery in two engagements, where in both instances where his company commander was killed at the first of the engagement he successfully took command of the company and led them to their objective.

WINNIPEG, July 5.—Lt.-Col. A. L. Bonnycastle, who has returned after taking a battalion to France, says there are twenty-seven thousand Canadians discharged on account of wounds, unfitness and age in England at present, waiting for special boats to bring them back home.

HALIFAX, July 4.—A special hospital train with about 160 wounded soldiers left here early this afternoon and will go right through to the Pacific coast, travelling Intercolonial to Moncton, Grand Trunk to Winnipeg and C. P. R. for Regina, Calgary and Vancouver. The train consists of five hospital cars, Red Cross car, diner, a sleeper and baggage car. Captain J. B. Lambkin goes through on the train to its destination, looking after the welfare of the men. This is the first through soldiers' special that has gone from here to the coast.

Sergt. H. C. Jay, who went overseas with the 93rd Battalion, and was recently transferred to the 57th overseas company, has undergone an operation at Nicholls Hospital. He is making satisfactory progress.

Prizes Were Presented To Student Winners

Interesting Event at the Public Library Yesterday

At the Public Library yesterday afternoon the presentation of the medals and honourable mention cards awarded by the Art Association to the pupils of the Public Schools was made by Mrs. Mowatt, who, in presenting the medals, congratulated not only those who had been successful in winning the distinction of receiving the honourable mention card and medals, but those who had entered into the competition, all of whom had done such splendid work. It proved a difficult task to judge between the drawings. She said with the talent displayed in the exhibition she saw great foundation for entries in a larger art exhibition in the future.

Those who won medals were B. Orokshank, O. Smith, E. Staples, S. Whitcroft and E. Hall.

Special mention was made of the work of E. Hall, whose work promises to broaden into a wider artistic career.

Those winning honourable mention cards were Scott Medd, Jas. Wood, Lorne Pullyblank, Marguerite Mason, Olive Zinston, Ruby Corcoran, Doris Lancaster, Fred Tweddock, Phyllis Hall, Carol Grahame, Jim Matthews, Elinor Eastwood, Mabel Watson and Margery Lawrence.

Miss Maud Rush, who acted as one of the judges, congratulated the pupils on their work. The afternoon closed with singing the National Anthem.

Dramatic situations aplenty and to spare are to be found in "The Last Sentence," a five-real photoplay made by the Edison Company from a novel by Maxwell Gray.

Three generations are included in the story, the big moment being reached when a judge is about to pass the death sentence upon a young girl for the crime of infanticide and discovers that the prisoner is his own daughter. In spite of this fact he pronounces the death penalty, after the girl has been convicted on circumstantial evidence that is anything but overwhelming.

The situation which brings about the happy ending is quite beyond belief. The girl is secretly married to a wealthy young reprobate, and has given him her promise not to divulge the fact. He goes to the Maine woods in an effort to get rid of the drink habit and takes his baby with him—the infant his wife is accused of killing. Such an example of wifely sacrifice has never been equalled; rather than break her word she goes through the trial and her subsequent imprisonment, without speaking, and is saved at the last moment by the return of her husband.

Capt. Arthur Howson Arrives in Halifax

Captain Arthur Howson has arrived at Halifax, returning home on furlough. Following his graduation from Queen's University in the Spring of 1915, he went overseas, serving as a private for some months in the Duchess of Connaught hospital at Cliveden, England. Later he was transferred to the R.A.M.C. and after seeing service in France was sent to Greece, where, for the past year and one-half he has been attached to a field ambulance corps.

Canadians Drive Foe Raiders Back

Germans Attacked Advanced Post in Flooded Area South of Souchez River But Hurriedly Retreated When Guns Were Turned On.

ALL HOUSES RAZED

Canadian Headquarters in France, July 4.—The enemy raided one of our advanced posts in the flooded area to the south of the Souchez River last night, inflicting a few casualties among the defenders. Our artillery fire was promptly let loose upon the raiders, causing a hurried retreat.

Elsewhere in the region occupied by the Canadian Corps the artillery activity has become somewhat spasmodic. At times, however, it is extremely violent, reaching drum-fire intensity. It has been noted that the enemy tires of this activity more quickly than do our gunners, and that after these outbursts the fire sinks to subnormal proportions.

ALL HOUSES RAZED.

In the important mining centres of Lens and Lievin, in the Canadian zone, it is doubtful whether there is a single unshattered house to be found. In Lievin the contrast between the houses and the grounds surrounding them is startling. Near Bois de Riaumont yesterday the correspondent came upon a garden—behind a mansion torn to tatters by the shells of both armies—in which roses still bloomed profusely, overcoming with their perfume the tainted atmosphere of the adjacent battlefield. Not only were the shrubs and flowers uninjured, but strawberries, raspberries and red currants, which had matured in this deserted garden, which was until recently out in "No Man's Land," were to be had for the plucking. A week ago no one could have gathered the fruit without risking his life. The enemy front line was then only a few yards to one side of the garden, and one of our own outposts was a few yards on the other side.

Even many miners' cottages, smashed utterly beyond recognition under the shellfire, may still be identified by familiar flowers surrounding them, which bloom triumphantly amid the debris.

"NO MAN'S LAND" NEARER LENS.

As a result of our recent advances and despite the German counter-strokes, "No Man's Land" is now moved almost a thousand yards nearer the centre of Lens than it was a week ago on the Lievin sector.

In view of the renewal of the struggle on the Russian front, it is interesting to note that among the German units now facing the Canadian position there has been identified one regiment which had been sent to the Russian sphere of operations some months ago because it had failed to stand up under the British gunfire at the battle of Arras. After a course of training on the East front it has been sent back here to redeem its reputation.

Examination of the now easily apparent rapid deterioration in the morale of the German soldiers convinces one that the demoralization that is to be seen in many clashes with the Teutons is becoming more and more widespread in their ranks. It is not a decrease of German efficiency so much as a tremendous increase in that of the allied opponents—one of the opponents particularly—in the use of artillery, aircraft and gas, that has affected the result in the field of operations. Scarcely less important as an element in the situation as concerns the German morale is the feeling that is spreading among all ranks of the enemy that victory is no longer possible, and that Germany's dream of world power cannot be realized.

DYNAMITE FOUND NEAR C.P.R. BRIDGE BY BOYS TO-DAY

Twenty-Seven Sticks in a Bundle Lying in Shallow Water Near the Shore—Taken to Police Station

NO EXPLANATION KNOWN

Twenty-seven sticks of dynamite, or what is believed to be dynamite, were found thirty feet north of the C. P. R. Bridge about noon to-day by several boys who were swimming at the "boat-houses." Wrapped in a heavy brown paper, each stick is about nine or ten inches long by an inch or an inch and one-quarter in diameter. Water-soaked from immersion in the river shallows close to the shore, and faded from exposure, the "sticks" seemed so harmless that the boys were toying with them, and one of them intended to take some of the packages home to investigate the contents.

But gradually the boys, in their conjectures, realized that there might be something sinister, probably destructive, in these regularly shaped cylinders that certainly must have been placed there by some person, and for some reason. The boys decided to seek more experienced advice, and crossed to the Peterborough Machine Company's factory, where they interested Mr. Gerald Wood into inspecting the find. Mr. Wood returned to the factory and notified the police. P. C. Blade found that the sticks corresponded with his general idea of dynamite, and carried them to the Police Station, where they were stored away in an ante-room. Mr. Harry Evans, who examined them, stated that it was dynamite.

Strawberry Festival Was A Success

Several Peterboro' People Took Part in the Programme

The strawberry festival held yesterday evening at the Town Hall, Norwood, was a huge success. The people of Westwood and surrounding country and towns turned out in large numbers, doubtless in appreciation of the fact that the festival was of a patriotic nature, the proceeds going towards providing comforts for our boys at the front. The beautiful evening also brought the people out to enjoy the excellent tea so admirably served by the ladies of Westwood, and the excellent programme arranged for the occasion. Those taking part in the programme were all Westwood people, assisted by a few friends from Peterborough.

The programme was as follows:

Chorus by the Choir—'Away to the Battlefield.'
Chairman's Address— Mr. G. A. L. Humphries.
Recitation—Miss Roberta Anderson.
Instrumental and Violin—Miss Telgmann and Miss McFarlane.
Song—Mr. J. Ledell.
Address—Rev. Mr. Cook.
Song—Miss K. Masterson.
Recitation — Miss Marjorie Lawrence.
Song—Mr. V. Dredge.
Instrumental and Violin Selection—Miss Telgmann and Miss McFarlane.
Song—Mr. Ledell.
God Save the King.

Revenue Shows Big Increase

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, July 5.— The returns to the Department of Finance for the first three months ending June 30th of the present fiscal year show a total revenue of over sixty-three million dollars as compared with fifty millions for the same period last year. On the other hand the capital expenditures of the Dominion had declined three millions, chiefly public works and railways and canals account. Ordinary expenditure, which includes interest upon the war debt and pension, is practically the same as last year.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

THURSDAY, JULY 5, 1917

A GOOD DAY'S WORK.

The Greater Peterborough Association has added another bar to its medal by its successful management of the demonstration in honour of the Golden Jubilee of Confederation. Especial credit is due the committee of the Association which had charge of the chief features of the celebration programme. But in the items of credit due, the most important were not the parades, the oratory and the sporting events. By far the best work done by the association was that done through the agency of the demonstration in the interest of the Peterborough Health Association. No words, however warm, can be exaggeration in speaking of the splendid and beneficent work of the Association. It is a peace time Red Cross Society that binds up the wounds of disease and soothes the suffering of the otherwise helpless, untended and unbefriended. We all know in a general way, what the work of the Health Association is but no record, however complete, can give an adequate idea of the relief of suffering and the bestowal of comfort its activities bring. Such a work is necessarily limited by the limited means at the disposal of the Association, and it is a gratification to know that a sum of something over a thousand dollars, was on Dominion Day most fitly added to its treasury. It is more than a treasury; money goes into it, or, rather, passes through it on its mission of health-giving, nursing and comfort, and hundreds otherwise without care, or even hope, bless the fact that the money doesn't stay long in the treasury, but takes wings, of angelic import, on erands of mercy.

Two of the greatest—the oldest and the newest democracies of the world, are closing in upon the Kaiser's kingdom, closing in like the jaws of a stone crusher.

ETHICS OF MOTOR OWNERSHIP.

No man liveth unto himself, the Scriptures tell us. We are all our brother's keeper except those who have the spirit of Cain. Reciprocity, though some men think it a disloyal and unpatriotic thing, is, in the law of human relationship, according to the divine plan that makes it one of the two cardinal conditions of the inheritance of eternal life to love one's neighbour as oneself. It is our duty to help each other, and in no stronger way is this duty presented than in relation to those who have fought for us and returned home, invalided, scarred and perhaps maimed.

In the history of the past, "the most unkindest cut of all" has been ingratitude to the returned or discharged soldier. After he has spent his strength and lost health or limbs he has been cast aside as a worn-out garment. There have often been seen in the past the veteran soldier, hobbling on crutches, with his breast covered with medals—if he has not had to sell them to get bread — begging in the streets—the reward an ungrateful country gave him sometimes. But a good deal of that spirit of neglect is passed away and we have a better spirit at work. In no war have soldiers of the British army been so well cared for, so well clothed, so well fed, so well tended when wounded or sick, as in this war.

But that is not all. When the battles are over and our civilian soldiers return to the warfare of peaceful life, from which they were taken to fight our battles, they have splendidly won, the best we can do for them is not too much. In last evening's Examiner, a paragraph appeared showing how in one way owners of motor cars can do their bit in helping repay the unpayable debt of gratitude we owe the war veteran. A six or seven passenger car passing through the street carrying nobody but the driver, presents a splendid opportunity for giving a returned soldier a lift. Both the driver and the veteran will feel the better of it—one for doing a neighbourly and Christian act, the other for being the beneficiary.

A correspondent in to-day's issue makes an appeal to greater consideration by motor owners, for their less fortunate neighbours who do not own a car. This is a delicate subject upon which to obtrude advice;; but no such restraint is felt in calling upon motor car owners to be thoughtful and kind and attentive to our returned soldiers, to whom they, in common with our whole citizenship, owe a debt that can never be repaid. Such attentions cost nothing and count for much, and will be an object lesson to the rest of us to recognize and appreciate the work of our soldiers who have done their bit with untold, physical suffering and deprivation while in the trenches, and with a gallantry and courage that will find their record upon the pages of history, but will not furnish employment nor the many needs which the invalided soldier's sacrifices have disqualified him from providing by his own exertions.

We should show by practical action our appreciation of the returned soldier's past services and thus avoid the condemnation for ingratitude which, if we think aright, we should pass upon ourselves.

He that's ungrateful hath no guilt but one:
All other crimes may pass for virtues in him.—Young.

RUSSIA'S EXAMPLE.

The Russian Bear, in its capacity of "coming back," may be regarded under the similitude of a cat. Not once or twice, but thrice, Russia has come back after the whole word had thought her "taking the count"—after, to all appearances, she was down and out. According to all reports, the Russians have struck a mighty blow in the east, with the suddenness and effectiveness of smashing lightning from a clear sky; and, what is more, they have struck a timely blow. This blow has a two-fold incidence—its material and its moral force. It will have a reflex, as well as direct, action in the western front; its moral effect, acclaimed at home by all sorts of interests called into action by the revolution, will tend to consolidate the domestic situation and help permit Russia to throw the whole of her mighty weight into the conflict. Its moral effect on the Central Powers will tend to something like panic, and its effect on German sentiment at home, when the facts filter through the thinning veil with which officialdom shrouds the situation, will be most discouraging. Germany has suffered a double defeat, or set-back or rebuff, from Russia. The sneaky intrigues for a separate peace have failed, and the answer of Russia has been spoken in terms of the thunder of artillery, and the bagging of the equivalent of a division of the dwindling armies of the Central Empires. The Russian come-back and the Russian sweep forward, represent a biggish rift in the war cloud, that make the outlook much more encouraging. The pitiless, steady, advance of the British and French on the western front, almost as slow, but, at the same time, as resistless as the forward grind of a glacier, becomes more killing to German hopes with the entry of the United States into the war with the earnest of prompt action signalised by the landing day after day of American troops on the battlefront. The submarine menace with likely decreasing results, is less disquieting. The United States navy has greatly helped the situation and now we have signs that plucky little Japan is thinking of sending a fleet to the Atlantic.

The plot is thickening; Germany has been steadily defeated in all her plans of intrigue, as well as her war plans. The doom is closing in and, though the final struggle may be long and hard, the hardest part will be the dying struggle of German militarism, whose end is certain as the judgment day.

We are called to varied forms of participation in the war and we should be stimulated to action by the daily brightening prospect of approaching victory, which will come all the sooner with an end of our sacrifices, the more generally and promptly Canada responds, in all its elements to the demands upon her contribution and service. The manhood of the country is appealed to in order to hasten the end, and the call should be more promptly heeded because those who answer it will be in at the death. All our people in the various spheres they work in, should be encouraged by the steady trend of events towards the victorious end. Many calls have been made upon us, but the spirit and scope of the call that comes to all classes of the people of Canada cannot be more appealingly voiced than by the call of the Workingmen and Soldiers' Delegates of all Russia, who summon the country to concentration of all its efforts to help the army, in these words—

"Peasants! Give the army bread. Workmen! Let the army suffer no lack of munitions! Soldiers and officers! Form reinforcing detachments and regiments to go to the front at the first order. Citizens! Remember your duty and let no one seek at the present moment to evade the accomplishment of his duty towards the Fatherland.

"Soldiers and officers! Let your hearts have no doubts that you are struggling for the liberty and welfare of Russia and an early general peace."

The Provisional Government has issued an appeal to the Russian people urging all citizens to forget personal interests and to mass as a single man behind the army which "is marching to death to save the revolution and to free the Russian people."

The spirit and fact of such an appeal should come with greater effect upon the people of Canada. Russia appeals in the hope of the benefits of national enfranchisement. The call comes to Canadians who have experienced the reality of the benefits of freedom and have more well founded reason to fight for its continued possession.

China has changed its form of anarchy again.

HOW THE WORLD-WAR DEBTS OF THE PAST HAVE BEEN HANDLED

From time to time during the past year some speaker or some writer has sounded a note of alarm about the world's war debts. Dark pictures have been painted of the nations in bankruptcy and of the burdens to be borne by generations to come. One writer has expressed the opinion that it will take 500 years to set the world free from the financial burden imposed by the present war.

It would be impossible to say that the outlook is not on the surface alarming. But are things really as bad as they appear on the surface? The Journal believes they are not.

It would require a remarkably clever financier to figure just how things are going to work out in detail from the present mess. The Journal does not intend to try. But it thinks it worth while to present a few comforting facts for the consideration of its readers.

First, let us see how the past can assist us.

The most recent great war was that of 1870—that between Germany and France. When that was over France was supposed to have been financially ruined beyond retrieve, burdened as she was by the billion dollar indemnity imposed by Germany. In those days a billion dollars was a lot of money. It was Germany's intention to ruin France financially in order to prevent her becoming dangerous in a military way. What happened? In less than ten years France had not only wiped out the great indemnity imposed by Germany, but had become more prosperous than before the war.

Again, go back a bit further to the great world's conflict of 1800 to 1814. During that period the world was in relatively as great a mess as now. There were not actually as many men involved, because the population of the nations was much smaller then, but relatively the struggle was greater, as literally the whole of Europe was then involved. Spain, Holland, Norway and Sweden were all in it. As that terrible conflict went on financiers, as now, predicted the world's total bankruptcy. What happened? It took a very few years for Europe to settle itself—pass through the process of readjustment—and emerge into a greater prosperity than it had ever known. As a matter of fact, the world's greatest period of financial and scientific progress dated from the close of the Napoleonic wars. Since 1815 the world has grown in populations, wealth, general knowledge and comfort of existence.

This is not an argument for war, but the cold fact remains that after each great period of struggle, the world has emerged into better things, both moral and financial. Let us take comfort from history.

Then finally there was the experience of the United States after the Civil War. From an apparent condition of bankruptcy, the United States developed with a startling rapidity, into national greatness. War may not have produced the result, but the fact at least is that the war did not hamper to any extent the growth of the country. The present greatness of the United States began in 1865.

Are things financially really as bad as they seem? Billions of dollars are being accumulated in war debts it is true, and in the future we and our children will pay and keep paying principal and interest on our present war adventures.

But let us look at the thing on its brighter side. Where will all this money we pay go to? Not to some other planet to be forever lost. No. It will be paid back to ourselves. The money will be kept in the family of nations. Somebody will have the money and somebody will spend it. As it goes round again, we will all benefit.

Another point. Since 1812 the world has become bigger and richer. The world's present debt means no more to it proportionately than that of 1815 did to it then. We owe a lot of money now, but the total wealth of the world is vastly greater than its debt. The world is full of natural undeveloped resources of gold and silver.

Let us not worry. Things may look bad, but the world was never more virile, never more financially resourceful. Let us take comfort in the thought that after the smoke of battle has blown away there will be produced statesmen and financiers who will devise means for lessening our immediate burdens. The history of the past can help us to believe that the future will safely take care of itself.

Our main worry at present should be to win the war.

Judge Huycke Gave Address At River Road Union Sun. S.

Other Interesting Items From the Stewart Hall District

The annual excursion of the River Road Union S. S. took place on Friday June 29, per steamer Geneva to Bewdley, where everyone joyously partook of dinner. In the afternoon the boat called at Gore's Landing, leaving from that point for home. All report a very enjoyable time.

Mr. Walter Kidd, Indian River, convenor of the Teachers' Training Course of the Otonabee S. S. Association, was present at a meeting of those interested in the course in Stewart's Hall, on Wednesday evening, June 22, where a detailed discussion of the course took place resulting in the decision of several to immediately enter upon the study. Meetings for that purpose will be held every Wednesday, at 8 p.m. sharp, these same to be conducted by Misses M. Hanbidge on Mrs. C. Hanbridge.

Sunday School Anniversary.

The 23rd anniversary of River Road Union S. S. at present place of meeting in the hall, took place on Sunday, last. Due to the date being that of the jubilee of Confederation, the meeting was patriotic in character. The children of the school very ably acted as choir. During the taking up of the offering, which was for patriotic purposes, Miss Dorothy Collins and Master Herbie Cardwell sang, "By Order of the King," which was much enjoyed. Other special singing was nicely rendered by Marion Deyell and John Hutchison, and Misses Edith Thorn and May Ritchie.

The principal feature of the afternoon's meeting was an address from His Honour Judge Huycke. In his usual pleasing manner, the Judge drew from his store of knowledge concerning our Dominion's history, both educative and inspirational; even the children were impressed and their love and loyalty for flag and king and country stimulated to greater zeal.

Mr. Matchett, the superintendent, on behalf of the school, expressed pleasure at being so fortunate as to have His Honour the Judge, present on such occasion.

Rev. Mr. McConachie, the regular minister, who was present, also expressed his pleasure in hearing the Judge's address. His own address was, of necessity, short, but nevertheless very appreciative. His special prayer for our sailors and soldiers was particularly earnest.

Mr. W. McCabe, and Miss L. McCabe of Pontypool and Mr. S. Belfory, of Midland, were the guest of Mrs. Jas. Matchett for a few days last week.

Mr. and Mrs. T. P. Armstrong have returned from their visit to Collingwood.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Collins and family spent Monday, July 2nd at Hiawatha, the guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. Collins.

Mr. and Mrs. Gillespie of Peterborough, spent Sunday with their daughter, Mrs. C. Hanbidge.

Mr. Jim Stewart, Miss Mary Stewart, Mrs. F. Collins, Miss Miller and Miss Finnamore motored to Millbrook the other evening in his new car, the car of all cars, the Ford.

The Stewart Hall baseball team played a return game with Zion on Monday last before a large number of spectators. Mr. Charlie Edwards very ably acted as umpire and pronounced the score 11-10 in favour of Stewart Hall. Bravo, Stewart Hall, to win on foreign fields.

Miss Queenie Matchett is spending a week at Pontypool, the guest of Miss Lulu McCabe.

Mr. Frank Savigny has purchased a new 1918 model Chevrolet car.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Deyell and little Miss Marion, accompanied by their daughter, Mrs. Will Hanbidge and Master Ralph, left on Tuesday, July 3rd to visit relatives in Saskatchewan and other parts of the west.

Miss Hewey of Toronto, was the guest of Miss M. Hanbidge over the holiday.

GROCERS WIN TWO FROM EAST CITY

Last night in a league fixure at the Water Street Alleys, the Grocers took two of three games from the East City bowlers. The Grocers won the first game by a good margin, but the East City five came back in the second game and won out by 100 pins, the Grocers winning the third game by 58 pins. Outram for the grocers had high single for the night with a 175 count. "Dad" Matthews for East City was again high for three games with a 422 pin total, and is the only man to reach the 400 mark.

To-night the West Ends and the Tigers will come together for a hard battle.

The following were last night's rolls:—

BB NOW NEARING HIS WORLD'S RECORD

	A.B.	R.	H.	TB.	PC.
BB, Detroit	134	25	63	90	.470

DETROIT, July 4.—Tyrus Raymond Cobb is in a fair way to shatter all major league batting records in recent years this season as well as to surpass his own mark for consecutive hitting made in 1911, when he scattered eighty hits through forty-straight games and brought his season's batting figure up to .416, the average surpassed but once in the American League.

Cobb passed "Stuffy" McInnis of the Athletics in the matter of consecutive hitting on June 23, when he made four in the two games of that day. The Philadelphian's mark up to then, a record for the season, was seventeen games.

The present hitting streak began in the afternoon of May 31, when the Georgian got to Caldwell twice for safe hits. In two games, those of June 5, against Shawkey of New York and of June 15 against Walter Johnson, of Washington, Cobb batted for 1.000, and in three others he made a hit for .750. In the present run of 34 games Cobb has batted for the phenomenally high figure of .470.

KRAMER'S WORLD'S RECORD.

NEWARK, N.J., July 4.—Frank T. Kramer broke the world's record for the half-mile at the Velodrome here to-night, riding the distance in his trial in 59 seconds, and clipping one fifth of a second off the old mark made by Alfred Grenda on August 5, 1915.

The races were called off on account of rain before the final was contested.

The Perfect Girl.

The following are the attributes of the perfect girl as seen through Harvard eyes, some 50 bachelor graduates having recently, and after considerable discussion, agreed on them for the "girl that's worth while":

She is attractive, graceful, and healthy, but not necessarily pretty.

She can dress tastefully and entertain anyone and make him feel at ease.

She can make bread as well as fudge, and cake as well as a "rarebit."

Her dancing is not necessarily latest, her tennis is not necessarily up to the standard, but she is appreciative of the dance and of the sports.

She is broad minded, sympathetic, tactful, unselfish, optimistic, thrifty, of good disposition, and moderate in all things.

She can stand reverses without worry.

She is gentle to children and kind to older people, especially to her parents.

She has a broad education, but not necessarily a college one.

She is modest and true and home loving.

She has good social standing, is of a religious nature, and is not "too proud to pray."

Largest Flower in the World.

It is believed that the Island of Mindanao produces the largest flower in the world. Its habitat is high up the Parag Mountains, two thousand five hundred feet above the level of the sea. The natives give it the name of Bolo. Its full-blown blossom, five-petalled, is over three feet in diameter and weighs twenty-two pounds. The flower was first found in Sumatra and was called Rafflesia Schadenburgia, in honor of its discoverer.

Fifty Years Of Confederation

Address By Mr. Joseph Wearing

The following address was delivered by Mr. Joseph Wearing, at the Murray Street Baptist Church on Sunday morning.

The first fifty years in the life of this Canada of ours, as a self-governing Dominion within the Empire, has come to a close. To those of us, whether Anglican or Baptist, who sometimes pray: "Give peace in our time, O, Lord!" there must come today an anxious and solemn disquietude; for we face the fact that fifty years of confederation finds us with bloody conflict as our task abroad and racial antagonism, class dissension, and political deadlock as our portion here at home. That man is lacking a serious mind and a proper understanding who fails to comprehend the calamity of a country at war with a rival nation and who is not troubled in his heart as to the immediate future welfare of this land we love.

A Promise of The Future.

But because I know that there are many in this congregation who have a clear perspective of the times in which we live and who are seeking daily for a sign of certain hope for the future I would remind you that when we turn to the page of history dealing with conditions in this country immediately preceding the confederation of the North American provinces, and mark the evolution of this great Dominion from the chaotic conditions which then prevailed, we find there the foundation for our trust that the Canadian people will determine their destiny now as they did fifty years ago upon principles which shall make us greater with the growing years. We shall see there, too, in the genesis of the greatness of this the greatest of the self-governing Dominions of the Empire, the star of hope which led those great men, those splendid patriots whom we call the "Fathers of Confederation" and whose memory we cannot too much revere. . . We shall see the star of hope which led them from discord to unity, from strife to concord, from narrow provincialism to wide nationalism; that star of hope which is shining still behind the thunder cloud of war with brightness undiminished to lead us through these days of conflict and sorrow and bitterness, and distrust, not only to the victory which will surely be ours if we fight and faint not and the peace —the lasting peace for which we pray, but which will lead us also to a national greatness and glory beside which the glory of the past shall pale into insignificance and in comparison with which the achievements of the fifty years that have gone and the measure of our deeds of the present, glorious as those deeds may be, shall be completely overshadowed.

Confederation Out of Chaos.

It has been said that Confederation was born of war and political deadlock. When the Tache-Macdonald government resigned in June, 1864, it marked the end of three years of such political chaos in this country that during that time no less than four governments were overthrown and the passions of the people were fanned to flaming heat by two general elections. This country never experienced such storms of racial antagonism and party animosity. At the same time, with all the potentialities of civil war in our own land, there was raging to the south such a conflict within a nation as the world had never seen a conflict, which drove home to the minds of responsible statesmen here the truth that as a country united we might stand, but divided we would surely fall. Throughout the long centuries that this land of ours may, through the mercy of Heaven, have different as a Dominion, her people can never repay in grateful veneration the debt they owe to those two real patriots, John A. Macdonald and George Brown, who, for the love of their native land, whether by birth or adoption, and for her welfare alone, and with an eye single to the destiny which they believed in the fullness of time to be her's, sacrificed all ambition, all prejudices, all enmity, and all pride, that the consummation of a united country in one confederation might be made possible. No more memorable day has ever dawned in the history of this country than the 14th day of June, 1864, when these two leaders of their respective parties, implacable political foes, such bitter personal enemies that they had not spoken to each other for ten years, met on the floor of the Legislative Assembly, and in full view of the members present, clasped hands for their country's weal and the common good. From the embers of the sacred altar upon which these leaders made the sacrifice which the national need of the hour demanded there rose like the phoenix of old from the ashes of sacrifice the fabric of this great Dominion, which is the heritage bequeathed by those Fathers of Confederation.

The world moved on, and fifty years after the birth of this Dominion her people are confronted with many of the same problems as faced the men and women of those earlier days.

War still ravages the earth, and this war in which at this time we, ourselves, are unhappily actually engaged in driving home the same truth that united we stand, but divided we fall; domestic differences, too, are again calling with ever increasing insistence for the same spirit of abnegation and sacrifice as dominated the minds and animated the breasts of those leaders who can no longer lead us but by their great example.

To my mind three things are required in order that the momentous problems which confront us to-day may be solved in a manner which shall redound to the credit of our people and secure the best interests of this Dominion

Resolute Action Needed.

In the first place there is need today of steadfast purpose and resolute action. We shall be false to the cause of liberty which we have espoused and so nobly championed, and traitorous to the Empire whose destiny is ours if we deviate one iota from the task which we have undertaken or attempt to vary in the slightest detail the agreement which we have sealed with our best blood to see this war through with all the resources we can command. Let it be expected that as the demands become greater the protests of those to whom the cause of freedom means nothing will become louder. It has always been so. There comes to-day to those who waver the ancient exhortation, "Sursum corda!"—strengthen your hearts, that right may prevail. I fear that at the present moment we are allowing an artificial prosperity to dull our senses to the call for help which comes across the seas. This intolerable situation cannot continue. My own home has at last, as I believe, paid its tribute. Other homes in this congregation have done the same. Throughout the length and breadth of the land sons have gone forth to sacrifice. Their blood cries out from the shell-torn furrow of France — for the promise that they shall be avenged? No! But for the assurance that that end for which that blood was shed shall by our efforts be made certain.

Spirit of Federation.

In the second place there is a need for toleration and good will. These domestic differences that weaken our endeavour will never be settled by abuse and recrimination. The man who does not see eye to eye with you to-day may be right—and you may be wrong—and the future may prove you to be so, though now you load him with reproaches I cause he does not see as you see. When Joseph Howe at last became convinced that the destiny of Nova Scotia was determined by Confederation he had the courage of his convictions and the greatness to step out alone from among his people that the Province might join the Dominion. Then this man, who had been so great a hero as to be almost god-like among the people of that province by the sea, was branded as a hireling traitor, and his name became a by-word in that province where no man was his peer. Lifelong friends refused to speak to him and crossed the street as he came along. Girls in their 'teens, the young ladies of those days, walked beside him that he might hear their spoken insults. But Howe was right, and the majority was wrong, as history has so often proved it to be. Some months after the present war broke out a teacher in one of the Toronto schools was accused of teaching treason to his classes and hundreds demanded his resignation. That young man was the first Toronto teacher to give his life for the Empire in this war, and to-day in that very school a tablet honours the memory of the late Corporal Harry Lee. My friends, the times demand indeed that we shall be firm, but first, they insist that we be just.

Trust in God.

The last requirement of the hour which I shall mention is that attitude of mind and heart which makes men fear God and trust in Him. Serious-minded men and women cannot view these times and this country without a sadness which sometimes must reach despair because in so many things God is left out so much. The memory of man is short and the ways of the Almighty are soon forgotten. But He changeth not. He is the same yesterday, to-day, and forever. And the promise is to them that serve Him with fear, and obey Him with gladness!

I feel that I cannot do better at this the close of 50 years of Confederation and the dawning of a new day than to repeat with reverence and supplication the prayer for the Dominion of one of our own poets:

"Oh God of nations! who has set her place
Between the rising and the setting sun,
Her part in this world's changeful course to play,
Grant her to know the one true perfect love
That may give noble impulse to her onward way,
God's love, that doth all loves embrace,
Gird her with panoply of truth and right,
In which she may go forth her fate to meet,
Ithuriel's spear! to crush with angel might
The broods of darkness crouching at her feet;
With faith to nerve her will and clear her sight
'Till she shall round her destiny, complete."

No Increment?

It was the first anniversary of the Pnoodles' wedding day, and the good wife had prepared a special dinner in honor of the occasion.

"Priscilla," said Pnoodles after the feasting was over, "that was the best meal I ever ate. You are worth your weight in gold."

"A year ago today, Claude," Mrs. Pnoodles answered, "you told me I was worth my weight in diamonds."

"Did I? Well, dear, this is your first annual — er — revaluation." — Chicago Tribune

MUSIC IN THE HOME

WOMEN OF NATION URGED TO SING.

Well-known Leader of Volunteer Workers Believes Greatly in Music as a Stimulant.

Miss Maude Wetmore, whose name has long been associated with all forms of social welfare work, and who, since the entrance of the United States into the present war, stands prominent as the leader of the National League for Woman's Service movement, has a unique message to offer to the women of the country.

It is, "Sing the songs of your country as you work for your country."

"The time has come," she says, "when the woman-power of the country must come to the fore and do its share in the struggle for national strength and power. In urging the men to do their part, the leaders of the various military organizations have impressed upon the minds of the soldiers and recruits the value of song. 'A singing army is a fighting army' were the words of Major-General Bell, of Plattsburg, when he addressed the embryonic officers gathered there. I want the women of the country to bear those words in mind. They, too, are the members of an army an army that I know will prove in its own way of equal strength to that of the one on the battlefield. Just as the men in the trenches need the inspiration of 'Rally Round the Flag, Boys' and 'Pack Up Your Troubles in Your Old Kit Bag and Smile, Smile, Smile,' even so do the women of the country who are learning how to till the soil and who are making bandages for the wounded, need the courage and strength that comes from humming these melodies. Every potato sown to the time of 'Yankee Doodle' and every stitch made to the melody of 'Dixie' means so much more power to the singer as well as to the man who will eventually be the possessor of both.

A Singing Worker is a Successful Worker.

"I should not mind seeing every division of the League adopt a song of its own and sing it. That with its implication of happiness certainly would be one form of assurance of the success of the work they are doing. That more than anything else would proclaim to the people of the world that the power of this nation is made up of grit and of iron, of stick-to-it-iveness to an ideal and confidence in its culmination. A singing worker is a confident worker and a confident worker is a successful worker. Let the women of the nation sing—let them sing the songs of their country, and let them make known to the world that their hearts are full of the glory and the strength of their nation. They are fighting not for petty ends, not for sordid aims, but for an ideal of freedom, and that ideal can best be expressed by the melodies that have endeared themselves to the people. Let them till, sew, cook and drive, but also let them sing. The reward of the willing hand is great, but it is immeasurably greater if it is accomplished by the song of a national spirit."

YSAYE PLAYED AS PISTOL MENACES.

It Cannot be Said the Violinist's Heart Was in His Work, But Four Westerners Liked it and Jigged.

The dollars in the floor of the Palmer House barber shop were still bright, when Ysaye, the violinist, made his first tour of the United States. The impressarios had just discovered the Far West, and Ysaye's enterprising agent booked him for a recital in Montana.

For his debut in the land of the six-shooter, Ysaye chose the programme with which he had conquered Berlin. But, when he got up on the opera house stage, and faced his audience of the Rocky Mountain aristocracy, he decided that Kipling was right when he said counterpoint is a question of longitude. He had a hasty whispered, consultation with his accompanist, who then announced that Wieniawski's "Souvenir of Moscow" would be substituted for the sixth sonata for violin solo by Bach.

And So He Played.

The concert had been a success. Ysaye was in his hotel room, packing, and four moon-faced giants stalked in solemnly to the center of the carpet. They were a male and three females, and the male spoke: "Me and my daughters read about that Bach sonata, Mr. Wyzay and we came twenty miles in a waggon and bought four $5 tickets to hear it. Now we're going to hear it. Play!" and he drew his pistol out of his pocket. Ysaye never hesitated. He unpacked his violin, fixed his eyes on the washbowl and dug into the opening chords of the sixth sonata. The prelude, the Loure, the Gavotte, the two minutes and the Bourre were played without so much as a semi-colon between them.

He stopped to tune before the final jig and stole a look at his audience. The pistol was still in evidence. Ysaye played the jig facing the enemy. At the end of the fourth measure, three large right boots gave tremulous signs of sympathy with the dancing rhythm; at the end of the eighth, six boots were jigging six-eight; the heels were in it at the sixteenth measure; with four measures to go, the father of three patronesses of Montana music rose and did a frog-step to the final flourish of Ysaye's violin.

The father pocketed his gun and seized Ysaye by the hand. "You're a good fiddler, Mr. Wyzay, but the next time you come to Montana, remember that if you don't like Bach, we do"—and the strange quartet reformed in single file and stalked out of the room as gravely as they had come.

Telling the story, Ysaye adds. "But if I had played the first sonata,—jigless, joyless—he would not have put up his gun."

EXPERT KNOWLEDGE.

In a Broadway restaurant some years ago the orchestra was playing with great feeling a beautiful composition for strings. How long ago it was may be judged by the fact that the piece was Ethelbert Nevin's sugary, "Narcissus," which at that time was in the full tide of its popularity. Col. Jack Chinn a well-known Kentucky figure was "among those present," and the Colonel, despite many virtues, was not musically educated. It happened that one of the men at the table was listening carefully to the music, while Col. Jack was telling a dramatic story of a horse-race. The neighbour of the man listening to the music said in a low tone "What piece is that?" The answer came "Narcissus, by Nevin."

"You're mistaken," said the Colonel. "Young man, Narcissus is by Topgallant. I ought to know, 'cause I bred him."

Some of us have only a few more years of life left—how few days we little know. An Edison Instrument will brighten those days and bring happiness and contentment into the home such as nothing else can. Would you let a small sum of money stand between you and all that enjoyment? It would be a pleasure to deliver an instrument to your home for a demonstration. The J. M. Greene Music Co., Charlotte street.

CHEAP OPERA.

A Faust Company travelling through Canada recently fell foul of the Montreal critics because of the poverty of the production. There was no adequate chorus and the Kermesse scene as well as the church scene had to be omitted. The principals struggled through the various roles well enough, but the whole "show" was threadbare and run on shoestring capital. There is no doubt that a professional company depending upon the money of the public invites disaster by such a course. One reason lies in the fact that we have become educated to grand opera de luxe. We want our musical meat and potatoes with all the trimmings, with horseradish and tomato sauce, with new-ground pepper, with celery salt. Otherwise we are resolved not to eat at all. There might be room for criticism concerning such a high taste, and yet, on the other hand, the only reason for Grand Opera is to reinforce the music by an appeal to all other senses. It is well known that in many Continental Opera Houses, particularly in the smaller cities, performances are often perfunctory and the settings threadbare. It is endured there, not because the people prefer that sort of thing, but rather because any Opera is better than no Opera. The audience is interested primarily in the music, and if the orchestra is reasonably good, no one complains. On this Continent fifty-cent opera is an abomination and five dollar opera is too expensive. We have no middle ground. Even the best company Canada ever had, the Montreal Opera, could not make ends meet. There seems no immediate prospect of a new effort in this country. In Toronto the main need at present is a Symphony Orchestra. Not until that is established on a sound basis and maintained for a few years will it be possible to create a musical public sufficiently large to demand a regular Opera season.

God's greatest gift to humanity was an appreciation of music and music's ability to stir the human emotions. Have you ever realised how necessary music is in your life? If you contemplate this thought seriously, you will appreciate the absolute need of a New Edison Disc Phonograph in your home. The J. M. Greene Music Co., Charlotte street.

OVERSTEPPING THE MARK.

Perhaps the eighth wonder of the world is how titles are found for the scores of new pieces of music that make their appearance each month. They certainly represent a set of combinations of letters of the alphabet not unlike a cipher code. The sleuths who run down new titles for the popular hits as they are born, must be experts in geometrical progressions. Indeed, some infant compositions seem to be christened by one suffering from hay fever, which left him no other alternative than to sneeze the name.

A host of songs about lilies, roses, "her" beautiful eyes and love may become the objects of jocular derision, and deserved fun-poking but when it comes to using the Deity in the same manner it is high time to proceed along some other line. A correspondent in the British press bewails this growing tendency. He says: "A recent song in which the Deity was invoked in a fairly legitimate way, met with a large measure of success. The name of God figured in the title but in a reasonably inoffensive way. Now however, we have a whole crop of songs in which the Deity is dragged in, not only in the text but in the title, with the result that one's good taste, to put it mildly, is considerably disturbed; for it is obvious to any person that the Almighty would not be thanked for this, or invited to grant that in these lucubrations, had it not been for the success of the first song."

Speaking of such songs, it is rather remarkable that some soloists have a somewhat elastic judgment when it comes to choosing a sacred number. There has been many a good song listed in the sacred class that by no stretch of imagination could it be pronounced at home in that category. Although an extreme illustration, it is told of a star performer with a company appearing at a seaside town that when the management decided to put on a sacred concert one Sunday evening the Star Performer's selection of a suitable sacred number was "'Neath the Shade of the Sheltering Palm." This he rendered with all the solemnity due an excerpt from an oratorio. No doubt he knew that palms were mentioned in the bible. There should be no difficulty in distinguishing between sacred and secular compositions.

BROTHER OFLOCAL WOMAN ESCAPES FROM GERMAN PRISON CAMP

Pte. James MacDonald of Gordon Highlanders Captured Just After Mons Gets Away After Making Many Attempt—Is a Brother of Mrs. P. Anderson, 14 Kirk Street.

The following most interesting story from the Weekly News, published in Scotland refers to Pte. James Macdonald, a brother of Mrs. P. Anderson of 14 Kirk street, Peterborough. It is well worth reading.

One of the happiest men in Scotland to-day is Private James Macdonald, of the Gordon Highlanders, who has just returned to his home here after escaping from Germany, where he was confined as a prisoner of war for two and a half years. Private Macdonald was a reservist when the war broke out, and was among the first to be called up to rejoin his regiment.

He took part in the battle of Mons, but was captured during the glorious retreat which followed. From the first moment of his capture Private Macdonald was imbued with the idea of escaping, but it was only after making the attempt four times that he was successful.

Underneath Private Macdonald relates exclusively for the "Weekly News" his experiences as a prisoner in Germany.

I made my first effort to escape from the Germans almost as soon as I was captured. It was just after the battle of Mons, and while we were being disarmed and all was confusion, I thought I saw a chance, and taking advantage of the uproar I dropped on my knees and crawled into the wood. The dim light favoured me, and I managed to cover a good distance in this fashion.

Unluckily, a small band of Germans stumbled on me just as freedom was almost within my grasp, and I was hauled back to the road again, a prisoner.

We were confined all that day and the next in a church, then we were marched back to Mons and taken by train to Sennelager.

My first six months in Sennelager were a nightmare. We were simply starved, and our sufferings from the wintry cold and wet to which we were exposed were terrible.

There was no provision made to dry our clothes. When we returned from work at night soaking wet we had to lie down as we were on a layer of straw, and our only protection from the biting wind was the thin canvas of the tent in which we slept.

At the end of six months I was sent to work on a farm along with 20 Englishmen and 60 Frenchmen.

I was four months here before I saw a chance to escape. One night my opportunity came while the sentry was at the other side of the farm, and an Aberdeen lad called John Cameron and I got away.

My, what an exultant feeling of freedom we felt as we sped across the fields. We walked all night and hid in a wood during the daytime, eating small portions of biscuits and chocolate we had hoarded out of our parcels from home. This continued for five nights, and our hopes ran high as in imagination we saw ourselves across the frontier and safe.

RUN TO EARTH.

On the fifth day we were sleeping in a wood as usual. Suddenly I heard a shot fired close at hand.

"Johnny," I whispered hoarsely, "waken up. The soldiers are on us."

Cameron rubbed his eyes and sat up. We listened tensely, but could hear nothing but the thumping of our hearts.

"Oh, it's all right," said Cameron at last. "We'll lie here till dark. They'll never find us."

Scarcely were the words out of his mouth, when we heard the crackling of twigs. Then a louder noise as of someone slashing at bushes. They were almost on us, and as silent as ghosts we stole away.

A little distance off we started to run, making for the edge of the wood.

"Halt!" The command came with stunning force, and we looked up in dismay. Just outside the wood three men were stationed with levelled rifles. But there was something curious about them. Like a flash it dawned on me that they weren't soldiers at all, they were sportsmen, and the men in the wood were beaters driving the game out to them.

Our position was desperate, but I wasn't going to give in so easily, and calling on Cameron to follow I dashed back into the wood. We thought one of us might have a better chance to escape if we separated, and Cameron took to the right while I took to the left.

The beaters had now been warned of the additional "game" the wood contained, and a thorough search was begun. From the shouts all round I could hear the wood was surrounded, and in despair I crept under some bushes, hoping I might not be detected.

In a few minutes the beaters were abreast of my hiding place. Suddenly a crazy plan of escape shot through my mind, and, watching my chance, I got hold of a stick and cautiously joined the beaters.

Would my plan succeed? I held my breath, watching those on both sides of me warily from the corners of my eyes. But it was not to be. I saw my neighbours look suspiciously at me and began to draw together, talking meanwhile in low tones, and I turned and fled.

Some distance off I scrambled up a tree, but a young German with a gun soon discovered me, and with the gun pointed at me I had to descend. In fact, I came down more speedily than I intended, for a branch snapped under me, and I landed on my back on the ground, a prisoner again. Half an hour later Cameron was also captured.

Three days later we were sent back to Sennelager, and sentenced to twenty-one days' confinement on bread and water in a small cell 9 feet by 6, with only a hard board bed and two thin cotton sheets to sleep in. After that we had to undergo a further fourteen days' detention. I wondered if there was anything more to come, but I was not kept long in doubt.

MARKED MEN.

When we got out I learned that we were marked men—marked with a vengeance—for our clothes were taken from us and decorated with a broad red strip up the jacket sleeve and a yellow strip across the back. They couldn't have made us more conspicuous although they had decorated us with horns and a tail.

I was kept working about the camp for another six months, then sent to a farm to work in the month of March. Two days later I escaped again.

This time there were five of us—James Gilroy, of the Gordons, an Englishman; Peter M'Arthur, G. H., from Glasgow; Drummer Douglas, of Hawick (who got one year and nine months' imprisonment later for refusing to work); and Private Johnson, of the Canadians.

Following the same procedure as I had adopted on my previous attempt, we walked by night and slept in the woods during the day. In this way we covered about 115 miles in eight nights.

The little stock of food we had managed to save before setting out soon became exhausted, and we were almost at our last gasp when we saw a river in front of us which I knew was close to the Dutch frontier.

The sight of it put new strength in our tired limbs, and our flaggering steps quickened as we approached the bridge to get across. This was the first mistake we made, and dearly we had to pay for it.

Having seen no sentries on the bridges we had already crossed, we jumped to the conclusion that this bridge would also be unguarded. With flying feet we made for the other side, when all at once a sentry sprang out on either side of the roadway, and we were pulled up short under the muzzles of their rifles and captured. This time we were sent to Minden camp.

I was not long back when I was sent off to fell trees some distance away. A couple of Irishmen, accompanied me, and we were put up in the dilapidated remains of an old hotel.

There were a lot of Russian prisoners here, and they were in a miserable condition. They seemed to be literally starving.

By this time I had picked up a smattering of the different languages and I managed to converse slightly with them. They told me they had to work in a coal mine, and that they never got sufficient food. In addition they suffered cruelly from the brutality of their guards.

This was anything but cheery news for us. "We'll have to get out of here boys," said, turning to my companions. "This won't do for us."

"But what can we do?" they asked.

"We'll refuse to work though we have to fight for it," I replied.

A CRUEL PUNISHMENT.

In the morning we were roused at daybreak and given about a pint of gruel. This was our breakfast. Then the officer in charge, evidently warned of my attempts to escape, ordered us to take off our boots and put on clumsy clogs.

"You'll not escape far with these clogs on," was the burden of his talk. And it was true. Walking far across country in them would have been torture.

We refused to put them on, and told him point-blank also we weren't going to work.

For refusing to work we were placed in a cell and compelled to stand facing the wall for three days and three nights, our only respite being at meal-time.

No one can have any idea of the torture this seemingly simple punishment inflicts except those who have come through it. On the third day one of my companions fell to the floor—his legs had given away from sheer exhaustion. My comrades counselled submission, and I agreed, but I vowed I'd escape on the first opportunity.

Seventeen of the Russians were sent along with us to work in the woods. The sequel was distinctly amusing. The sentries, in their eagerness to see that we did not escape relaxed their vigilance over the Russians, and three of them got away.

Poor beggars, they didn't get far. They were soon caught and fourteen days' dark cells was their reward. Then they were sent back to the mines.

For our work here we were offered the equivalent of 5d per day, but I told them to keep their slave's money.

AN OBLIGING DOCTOR.

The sentries saw we were going to give trouble, and began to get afraid the Russians would follow our example. The officer in charge saw this also, and one morning when in an attempt to get off we told the doctor we were sick, I heard the officer say to a sentry—"Tell the doctor Britishers no good for work. Send them back to camp.

The doctor, like a good, obedient soul, followed the advice, certified us sick, and we were sent back to Minden.

Six months of doing odd work around the camp and on the canal followed, and then our bad luck took a hand in the game again. But we didn't know that at the time.

"You are to go and work on a farm," were the orders snapped out at us one morning as we assembled. That, I thought, sounded all right. What a surprise was in store for me.

We marched off, but there was no sign of a farm when we reached our destination. Instead, stark and black against the sky loomed the massive frame and headgear of a coal mine.

"By guns, I'm not going down there," I said emphatically. I had never been down a pit in my life, and the sight of it from the top effectually stifled any feelings of curiosity I had in regard to the matter.

Another batch of prisoners had evidently been told also that they were going to work on a "farm," for about 200 Englishmen drew up alongside of us with blank amazement written on their faces. What followed is something that leaves me dazed even yet to think about.

A pile of old worn-out shoes and clothes was lying in front of us, and we were lined up and told these were our pit togs. We refused to take them.

"You'll take them though I have to get an army battalion to make you," shouted the officer, in a fury.

A TERRIBLE ORDEAL

Well, he didn't get an army battalion exactly, but he got thirty soldiers with rifles and bayonets, selected ten of us at the head of the line, and told us we'd get three chances to pick up the clothes.

The third chance found no trace of yielding in us, and then it seemed to me as if a tornado had fallen on our luckless heads. The soldiers rushed at us and smashed us to the ground with the butts of their rifles, and then proceeded to kick us soft where we lay. Some of them even took short lengths of iron piping and battered us silly. Flesh and blood could not hold out in the face of such cruelty, and we had to submit and agree to become "miners."

If bad dreams ever trouble my sleep in the future I'm sure they'll centre round that pit. I never experienced the like of it. We had eight hours of it each day, and only some soup and half a pound of dry bread for rations. It was not enough to live on, let alone work.

On the second day one of our men, a London chap, lost his way coming to the pit bottom at night, and fell down an old shaft that led to a lower seam and was killed. Another young chap of the Queen's got so depressed with the work and poor food that, in desperation he shoved his arm under the wheels of a loaded car drawn by a horse, thinking he would be sent back to camp.

Did he get off? No fear. Although his arm had two ghastly furrows across it and was black from the shoulder to the finger-tips, he had to stay where he was, with his injuries roughly bandaged by a comrade. What use he was down a pit I don't know, because as long as I saw him he was to all intents and purposes a one-armed man.

By this time I was crazy to get away myself, and I arranged with a chap named Shand, from Aberdeenshire, to make a dash for liberty as we marched to the pit in the morning.

Our first attempt was successful, and we dashed into a wood at the roadside. Somehow Shand and I got separated here, and I never saw him again.

I followed my usual course of hiding in a wood by day and walking by night, and made good progress, though I suffered from lack of food. Otherwise my luck was in the ascendant. On the first day I saw one of the search party after me approaching the wood where I lay concealed, but he passed by and never guessed I was lying under his nose.

On the fourth night I knew I was near the Dutch frontier, and I determined to take no risks. I even went the length of taking off my boots and walking in my stocking soles. In the darkness I almost ran into a couple of German sentries, and I think my heart stopped beating. Had they heard me? I stood frozen to the spot. Then, as nothing happened, I edged cautiously back into the wood, and made for where the coast was clear.

In a way this incident helped me, for I was sure the men were German sentries on the frontier, and that every step I took now was taking me away from their hateful country. Two miles farther, and I knew I was really across the frontier and safe.

When daylight broke my hopes were confirmed. I saw I was in Holland.

And now I am back in my home in Alyth, though I can hardly believe it yet. But the horror of my exile is fast melting away, and I've another little son here to help me to forget. He was born shortly after I was taken prisoner, and my wife has had him christened Gordon Kitchener Macdonald, after the gallant men who have won fame in the war.

His name will always recall to me the brave comrades who fought beside me at the front, but I sincerely hope he will never have to undergo an experience in any way approaching that which I have just passed through.

Williams New Scale Piano

Top of the Heap

There are other good ones, but the Williams New Scale is in a class by itself, away up on top.

It is selected by Great Artists as the exclusive piano, to be used by them in their Canadian tours. They are unstinted in their praise of the high qualities of this Canadian Made Piano. Their opinion can safely be accepted as a sufficient guarantee of the richness of tone, and beauty of finish of this great instrument.

A very large range of the different styles in which the Williams New Scale is turned out, are always on display in our large warerooms, and all who are interested in the better class of music, are invited to call and inspect them, note their handsome appearance and hear their full, pleasing tone.

No importuning to buy if you call to look. We welcome you as a visitor to our modern music store.

Vote Will Be Taken To-night

Debate on Conscription Will Be Closed To-day

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, July 5.—A division will be reached on the conscription bill to-night and the Laurier referendum amendment will be defeated by a majority of approximately 46. The six months' hoist will be lucky to get 11 votes and will have about 100 against it. The bill itself will get its second reading with over 80 of a majority. These figures may be slightly changed by reason of pairs, but the majority of 46 is approximately correct. Ontario members are expected to vote 64 to 6 against the referendum. It is noted that Ontario alone provides about as many votes against the referendum as the whole of the rest of Canada provides for it.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—In last evening's Examiner I read on the first page an item "Where Motorists Can Help a Lot." Yes, you are right, they can help a lot in the way you suggest. You really had to publish that item drawing the attention to the majority of the men that drive cars or they never might have thought enough to do so—to give our returned soldiers a ride.

Many a man has a neighbour that only knows him when they are both walking or are near home. Readers, how many times have you been asked to have a ride in a car? How many times has the same man in the car turned his head when he was passing you?

The other day I saw a gentleman who lives in East City, stop on Water street with his car and call to a lot of men, mostly elderly men, at work, to fill up his car.

A medical gentleman is also another man that will not pass you if he is out driving without being in a hurry.

Out of the six hundred car-owners in this city one can count on one's fingers those that will give one a ride, especially an aged man in working clothes.

They will say that they are not required to do so; neither they are; but they are required to drive with more care and blow their horn before passing crossings. I have seen many a close call to a bad accident in the last few days. The people are kicking against such driving, but nothing is ever published.

One evening last week a car running on McDonel street was running so fast that everyone stood still and remarked that if a child had been on the street, or someone driving across McDonel street they would have been killed. Mr. Editor, you have only started drawing the attention to the automobile drivers, keep busy; they don't own all the city—only half of it.

Yours truly,
MAURICE E. KETCHESON.

Unusual Growth In South Monaghan

A fine sample of this season's growth reached the Examiner office this morning in the form of a sample of wheat, timothy and peas. The wheat measured six feet six and a half inches in height, the timothy four feet four and a half inches and the peas four feet six inches. Each of the three samples are well developed. They were grown on the farm of Mr. W. C. Dawson, of South Monaghan.

Knocked Down By Automobile

Viola Cooney, the seven-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. Cooney, 340 Aylmer street was knocked down by an automobile about six o'clock last evening. The child was playing outside her home when the accident occurred. She sustained a number of severe bruises.

Special Notice to Drivers

JULY 3rd, 1917.

On and after July 1st, the local regulation giving the right of way to vehicles going north and south over those going east and west, will be cancelled, and the following amendment to the Highway Travel Act substituted therefor:

"Where a person travelling or being upon a highway in charge of a vehicle or on horseback, meets another vehicle or person on horseback, at a crossroad or intersection, the vehicle or horseman to the right hand of the other vehicle or horseman shall have the right of way."

Drivers of all vehicles are therefore requested to note carefully the amendments to the law, and govern themselves accordingly.

By order,

DANIEL THOMPSON.
Chief of Police.

Garden Party Was A Success

Enjoyable Affair at St. George's Church Grounds

The garden party or lawn social held in the grounds surrounding the Anglican Church dedicated to Saint George, the Martyr, the patron saint of England, last evening was another of those quiet, successful social functions for which the congregation of this small church is so justly famed.

The fete began at 3 o'clock, but only a comparatively few came to the opening session of the function, but after supper quite a crowd assembled, chairs being quite at a premium, the grounds being well filled.

The weather was all that could be desired. The dullness of the morning had given way to a bright afternoon and a balmy evening, whose beauty was heightened by a refulgent full moon.

There were to be found the usual forms of temptation by which current coin of the realm (or paper for that matter), can be inveigled from the pockets of the owner. There were fishponds, where all was fish that came to the net, "throws" for cushions and such like articles.

There were refreshments and ice cream, and candy and fancy articles, all temptingly displayed in their various booths, presided over by ladies of the congregation.

As on all occasions there was a considerable sprinkling of staunch friends from the Mother Church of St. John's present, while others who were unavoidably absent in body, showed their sympathy by tangible proofs that they were present in spirit.

As usual the band of the 57th Regiment, ably conducted by Lieut. Gliddon, offered their services, only too gladly availed of, and from eight until after ten discoursed acceptable popular music.

As dusk came on the grounds were lighted up by electric lights and shortly after ten the successful proceedings were brought to a termination by the singing of the National Anthem, "God Save the King." The walk home with a particularly pleasant young lady was not the least enjoyable part of the evening's proceedings.

Appended will be found a list of the various booths and the holders and attendants thereof:

Useful Articles and Fancy Work Stall—The Mesdames Price and Barnes, Misses Price and Lillian Cole.

Candy Stall—The Misses Jay, Cole and Jubb.

Refreshment Booth—The Mesdames Rue and Cole.

Ice Cream Booth—Mrs. Cooper and several assistants.

Fish Pond—Messrs. Frank Burton and Harry Rue.

The Rev. Jas. Price, Mrs. Price and the ladies and gentlemen who worked so well, to make the affair a success are certainly to be congratulated on the result of their efforts.

Fort William Fondly Farewells Mr. G. H. Williamson

Mr. G. H. Williamson, formerly general secretary of the Y.M.C.A. in Peterborough, on the occasion of his departure from Fort William for Brantford, was the subject of a very enthusiastic appreciation of his services during his ten years in Fort William. The following from the Daily News-Chronicle gives an idea of the appreciation by citizens of all classes of Mr. Williamsons' work in Fort William:

One of the most remarkable and spontaneous expressions of good-will and friendship on the part of citizens generally towards one single individual in particular was that manifested last evening at the Y. M. C. A. when over two hundred representative citizens, both ladies and gentlemen, including people prominent in every walk of religious, political, civic, commercial, industrial and social life, foregathered to bid farewell and do signal honour to G. H. Williamson, for ten years the faithful and efficient secretary of the institution, who with his estimable wife and son Andrew leaves in the very near future to take up similar work in the city of Brantford.

This spontaneous exhibition of affection, which was given tangible expression in the presentation to the Chief as he is familiarly called, of a handsomely framed illuminated address and a purse containing $500 in gold, and for Mrs. Williamson a sterling silver mesh bag, was a fitting culmination for the ten years' connection of Mr. Williamson with this city, a connection which for faithfulness, public spirit and wholehearted devotion of purpose has never been excelled in any one person in the history of Fort William. All the speakers emphasised these characteristics.

Interspersed with the addresses of farewell were songs which gave the proceedings that note of variation which was just what was needed. At the conclusion of the programme the young ladies' club served dainty refreshments.

In addition and as further evidence of the warm place Mr. Williamson has gained in public esteem in Fort William, the Times-Journal says, editorially, under the heading, "From the Hearts of the People," the following:

"The farewell to George H. Williamson last night was more than an official expression from the Y. M. C. A., as an institution, to a departing official; it was a spontaneous overflow of general public sentiment towards a man who has been much more than a Y.M.C.A. secretary in Fort William and who has, during the years that he filled that responsible position, identified himself with every phase of civic and religious work, and won for himself a place in the city entirely apart from that given to him by his official status.

"How widely his personality had diffused itself was shown by the gathering last night, which embraced every class in the city, and it may be said, without fear of contradiction, that there have been very few presentations which have been accompanied with greater goodwill, or towards which the contributors have given with more pleasure and spontaneity.

"It were mere vain repetition to attempt a rehearsal of the peculiar virtues and good qualities which George Williamson has heralded during his residence here—the farewell tendered to him was sufficient tribute to their reality, for among the traits that have been most marked in his association with the many-headed public with which he came into daily contact, was the quality of "wearing well." It was not by any process of suave self-effacement and complaisance that he attained popularity, but by the more rugged method of standing for what he thought was right, with, at the same time, a broad sympathy for the other fellow, and frank admission that no one, himself least of all, was infallible.

GEORGE H. WILLIAMSON.

"Abou Ben Adhem had nothing on George Williamson as one who loved his fellow men, and wherever his work may take him, first to Brantford, and then, perhaps, elsewhere, the community, which has the good luck to acquire him as a member, will have its ranks enriched by a very just and upright man."

"A CHARMING WILDERNESS."

Algonquin Park, 2,000 feet above the sea, offers all the attractions that appeal to the lover of God's out-of-doors. PIC-NIC WAS A GREAT SUCCESS

HAULTAIN AND SOUTH BURLEIGH, July 4.— A very successful picnic and sale of work were held in the church grounds of Holy Trinity church, Haultain, on Thursday, 28th June. The proceeds amounted to $130, which will be devoted to the church building fund. During the afternoon there were races of various kinds and tugs of war for men and boys, ladies and girls. The grounds were prettily decorated and the weather delightful. Dinner was served at mid-day and lunch in the afternoon, on tables placed under the trees, and enjoyed by all.

Johnston, of Otonabee and Mr. Norman Moncrief, brother of the bride. The bride entered the church on the arm of her father. The wedding march was played by Mr. King, organist of Trinity church. The bride was attired in a natural shade of silk suit and wore a Leghorn hat, trimmed with patches of pink She wore a corsage houquet of sweetheart roses and carried a white kid Bible with streamers attached.

Mr. and Mrs. Beatty left on the afternoon train for Toronto and points west.

OBITUARY

MARY O'CONNOR.

Friends and relatives of Mary O'Connor, daughter of Mr. Jas. O'Connor of Douro, will be shocked to hear of her death by drowning at Moosejaw, on the holiday. Only meagre news has come to hand, but it is stated that the deceased and another young lady, who also lost her life, were in a canoe when it upset and caused the fatality.

The late Miss O'Connor was a resident of the city for some years, going West about seven years ago. Her mother predeceased her just a few months ago. While living here she made many friends who will deeply regret her death.

CHARLES JAMES.

Charles James, nephew of Mrs Charles James, Sherbrooke street, died last night at the family residence, 174 Stewart street after an illness of several weeks' duration.

Mr. James was born in London, England 45 years ago, and came to Canada 11 years ago. He was a member of the Church of England and in business an employee of the Henry Hope Company. He leaves to mourn his loss, besides his wife, three daughters, Doris, Daisy and Olive, all residing at home, a brother, Samuel, Aylmer street and two cousins, Mrs. Evans and Mrs. Webb, Sherbrooke street.

The funeral will take place on Saturday afternoon to the Little Lake cemetery, Rev. Mr. Grobb officiating.

ELIZABETH FREEBURN.

The death took place this morning, Thursday, July 5th of Elizabeth Freeburn, relict of the late Harvey Pearson, Sr., at the age of eighty-four years.

The late Mrs. Pearson was a resident of Peterborough for sometime and resided at 238 Dublin street.

She leaves a family of seven sons and one daughter. Mrs. E. A. Thompson of this city and Silas and Frank of Lakefield, Harry of Smith Township, Nathaniel of Buckhorn, William, Harvey and Samuel of this city.

The funeral will take place from the family residence, 238 Dublin street on Saturday, July 7th, at two o'clock and proceed to Lakefield for interment.

Girl Injured When Hit By Automobile

The necessity for a speedy and effective remedy to the motor car problem in connection with the little children who know no other playground than the city streets, was brought to a head yesterday, when Viola Cooney, a little nine-year-old child, residing at 340 Aylmer Street, was run down by an automobile in front of the Fire Hall and badly bruised and shaken up. The little girl was evidently making a dash across the road before the lady who was driving the car could slow up.

A strange coincidence in connection with the accident is one which dates back since Fire Chief Howard undertook his position as Chief. It has been his custom, being in sympathy with the children who are not provided with a place to play, to encourage the little ones to keep off the road and play on the platform in front of the Fire Hall. Since this the menace of the motor car has grown to such an extent that the Chief has four times warned the officers and men to prohibit children from playing on the road in front of the Hall and indulge in a game inaugurated with the motor car called "last over." It was only yesterday at 1.30 that the Chief again issued the order, and at 6.20 p.m. the accident occurred some feet below the Hall.

Youth Acquitted Of Serious Charge

Edgar Alcombrack, a young man of eighteen years was acquitted in police court this morning of indecent assault against a Hastings girl who came to Peterborough with an excursion last week. The defendant met the girl on the street and together they wandered to the Nicholls Oval where Mr. Kitney, the caretaker, noticed them. The evidence showed that the girl had not opposed the approaches of Alcombrack, and, to that extent, she had been a consenting party. It was also brought out that the early arrival and interruption of the caretaker saved the incident from its worst features. In acquitting the defendant, Magistrate Dumble said his actions had been those of a blackguard, and otherwise read him a lesson he should not soon forget. Mr. G. N. Gordon appeared for the defense.

GOOD CROP OUTLOOK IN ENNISMORE AND SMITH TOWNSHIPS

Grain Crops Are Doing Fairly Well and the Roots Crops Are in Excellent Condition—Haying Has Commenced on a Small Scale—Season Has Favoured the Dairy Industry

FARM HELP IS SCARCE

So much of an optimistic nature has been said about the crop prospects that a great number of people are about ready to accept the prospective results as a foregone conclusion. Let it be known that anything could happen within the next few weeks to seriously depreciate the value of the present crop. The crop is never safe until it is in the barn. A severe storm a few weeks' drought, or the presence of any one of the many forms of blight, such as rust, and away goes the big crop prospects. This observation is not intended to dampen the expectations of those who have been viewing the situation from an optimistic standpoint. It is to be hoped that such a spirit will continue and that every expectation will be realized. The observation introduced here is more for the purpose of emphasizing the importance of the crop situation in the light of what might or could happen within the next month. On the high wave of prosperity and good crop prospects it is difficult to realize what it would mean to this country if such blessings were suddenly snatched away. We would have to do as the Germans do—tighten our belts and starve gracefully. Such a condition is not anticipated. Given a fair brand of good weather and the present crop will reach much larger proportions than last year's crop. There will be plenty for everybody, but not a crumb to waste.

THE SITUATION IN ENNISMORE

As a means of getting some first-hand information on the crop prospects of Peterborough County a trip was made into Ennismore, Smith township and other points in the northern part of the county.

Ennismore is a township, comprising seventeen thousand five hundred acres. The land is rolling and lends itself readily to cultivation. The crop this year in this particular township promises to be fairly good. In some places the fall wheat will be on the light side, but as a whole, grain crops should turn out fairly well. In the words of Mr. John Young, Reeve of Ennismore township, "The crop outlook is good." Mr. Young has as much to say in favour of the potato and root crops, the growth is unusually heavy. When seen by the Examiner, the Reeve of Ennismore township was preparing to cut a small field of hay. This is about the first hay to be cut in that part of the country. Mr. Young reports that there is every prospect of a good yield of alsike and present indications also point to a good clover crop. A couple of farmers in Ennismore township were preparing to cut the first crop of clover, with the view of ultimately letting the second crop mature and produce a crop of seed.

THE DAIRY INDUSTRY.

Speaking of the dairy industry Mr. Young states that there is an unusually large flow of milk due to the good quality of the pasture fields and the favourable weather. Mr. Young like many another good farmer, laments the diminishing herds that are to be seen scattered throughout the country. He himself could keep twenty-five cows, whereas he only keeps ten, because it is difficult to induce the young folks on the farm to take an interest and do the work required in connection with that particular branch of farming. "The young folk look more to pleasure now said Mr. Young." Consequently one of the most profitable branches of farming industry has to be sacrificed."

Referring to the hay crop, Mr. Young says that the new meadows are better than the old ones of two years or longer, and will give larger returns.

CUTTING ALFALFA.

Mr. Timothy Crough who resides on the 4th Concession of Ennismore is not quite so enthusiastic about the crop outlook. To use his own words "The fall wheat is not worth writing home about." Mr. Crough says that the weather has been too cold at nights for good growth. The temperature at night has ventured close to the frost line on several occasions, and the growth during the heat of the day has been almost nullified as a result. Mr. Crough was cutting a fairly good field of Alfalfa when seen by the Examiner.

Coming down into Smith township you strike a range of farm land representing all phases of development. For the most part the crops are good, although the fields that lie close to the road do not always indicate that. Mr. Jas. A. Young, who resides near Central Smith Cheese Factory has a field of fall wheat that is worth looking at. There are also several good fields of peas in the same neighborhood.

Mr. A. Sanderson, residing on the Chemong Road has a very promising field of alsike. He has also a good field of fall wheat and is rushing the haying season to the extent of cutting a small field of hay in the orchard.

PLAYING A LONE HAND.

Mr. Robert Scott who resides on the same highway is one of the many farmers who has suffered through lack of help, yet despite this severe handicap, Mr. Scott's crops are in promising condition. His only son left early in the season for New Ontario where he is working a farm on his own account. This left Mr. Scott alone and made it all the more difficult to perform the seasonal labours.

HAYING HAS COMMENCED

Some farmers are beginning to view with no inconsiderable concern the approach of the haying season. It is a time when a maximum effort is required and there is very little relaxation in prospect until the last of the crop is tucked away in the barn. This is a time of the year when the shortage of help will be more keenly felt. A number of farmers are planning to exchange help with one another and in this way partially overcome the difficulty. This season, more machinery will be brought into play than ever before and several farmers stated that it was difficult to get some of their orders filled owing to the big demand. In many cases the purchasers of farm machinery have essayed to set it up themselves as the agents find it difficult to cover all the ground. This class of machinery will help to lighten the burden on the farmer and expedite the work of harvesting the crop.

ROME NEARLY A MILLION.

Slowly Regaining Population of Its Prime in Second Century.

ROME—Wartime Rome is slowly regaining the 1,000,000 population of the city in its prime during the second century, according to the recent census report which places the present population at 646,701, without counting a large number of troops and wounded soldiers. The annual floating population is estimated at 100,000, with 350,000 permanent residents.

Rome had a population of less than 20,000 in the year 1367 when Cola di Rienzo temporarily restored the ancient republic. With the return of the popes and wealth in 1870 the population slowly increased to 85,000 souls in the sixteenth century, and at the close of papal rule in 1870 the population was 221,000. The census of 1901 placed the population at 424,-943 and that of the year 1911 at 526,-000.

CATTLE PRICES WERE LOWER THIS WEEK

Grass-fed Cattle Now Constitute Bulk of the Receipts—Hogs Were High

The first heavy receipts of cattle off the grass for this season arrived for the Monday market this week. Their arrival was the signal for the usual break to midsummer prices. In a few instances drovers were caught "long" of the market, having paid the high prices in the country which have for some time prevailed. In most cases, however, the drovers had acted with due caution, and so were not caught entirely unawares when the break came. The decline started in Monday's market, gained further emphasis during the week, and, commencing with 25 to 40c off, had reached to a general decline of 75c to $1 before the end of the week. At this level there was a steadier tone to the market on Thursday, and with a light run of fresh cattle on hand, the held-over stuff from previous markets was mostly disposed of at the lower prices as compared with the weeks before. But while prices are lower, the quality is poorer. A large proportion of the cattle marketed during the month of June included some of the very best of the season's stall-fed cattle. These, of course, raised price levels to the unusually high averages recorded for that month.

Quality considered, there is no reason why comparatively high prices should not continue to prevail for some time to come, though not at the high levels of May and June. There is bound to be a good steady demand for all the fair quality butcher cattle that are available for the summer season.

Stockers and feeders also went off in the general decline, with a slow market and 75c to $1.00 below the prices of the previous week.

Calves held steady to strong all week.

Spring lams good and firm. Heavy sheep dull.

Hogs were strong through the week, but eased off a little at the close.

CATTLE RECEIPTS.

Union Stock Yards—Total receipts this week, 418 cars, 4,280 cattle, 894 calves, 7,[illegible] hogs, 607 sheep and 1,988 horses.

City Cattle Market—55 cars, with 618 cattle, 298 sheep and lambs, 170 hogs, 278 calves and 298 horses.

Rich Auto City Gets Chance to Spend Its Money.

WASHINGTON, July 4.—Detroit is to be asked to adopt the French town of Soissons, which has been subjected to so many sieges during the war, and restore it. The French Minister of Fine Arts and his associates on the committee of the French Restoration Fund have telegraphed to James Keating, the American representative, suggesting that he ask Detroit to adopt Soissons.

"We are at Soissons," the message said, "and have just completed a survey of the devastation. Soissons must be adopted at once. There are forty communes dependent upon Soissons that have been absolutely destroyed. The people have neither home nor church nor school."

Soissons was a city of 20,000 inhabitants at the outbreak of the war.

An Advance In July Wheat

Prices Weakened Toward the Close —Yesterday's Quotations

There was a little excitement in the wheat pits yesterday, when for a time July wheat and July corn occupied the stage to the exclusion of all other options. July wheat went bounding to as high as $2.20 before being halted. July corn was given drastic treatment in order to make it behave. This option was ruled out of the game entirely, being placed on the prohibited list for further trading. With the July corn out of the way the market became more settled and prices began to come down again. July wheat fell from $2.20 to $2.10, at which point it closed, being [illegible] above Thursday's close. At Winnipeg the market was almost equally excited, the October option closing 5 5-8c. above Thursday's close. Cash quotations show very little change, No. 1 Northern at lake ports going up 1c. Manitoba oats came down 1 3-4c. while corn, American No. 3 yellow, goes up 3c., track Toronto.

Weak, anaemic, run-down, nervous persons will be glad to know that they can be restored back to their youth vigor by the discovery of this new drug called Ferrated Phosphorus with Iron.

It is spring time now and every person needs something to build them up. Now you know as well as any doctor will tell you, the curse of spring time is impure blood. It takes many people to their graves, ruins health, makes you weak, runs you down and finally you are a physical wreck.

This new drug is a combination of iron and phosphorus. The iron acts directly on the blood while the phosphorus soothes and strengthens the nerves. You start today and take two or three tablets of Ferrated Phosphorus with Iron after meals and in 5 to 10 days you will be 100 per cent. stronger.

This drug does not act like other iron tonics you have taken, but instead, it does not blacken the teeth, upset the stomach or make you constipated. This new drug is dispensed by one druggist in each city. F. O. Weber dispenses it for Peterborough.

CHAPTER X.

THE CASE AGAINST GRANT.

Next morning, after a long conference with Superintendent Fowler, from which to his great chagrin, P. C. Robinson was excluded, Furneaux went to the post office, dispatched an apparently meaningless telegram to a code address, and exchanged a few orthodox remarks with Doris and her father about the continued fine weather. While he was yet at the counter Ingerman crossed the road and entered the chemist's shop.

"Let me see," said the detective musingly, "by committing a slight trespass on your left hand neighbor's garden, can I reach the yard of the inn?"

"What the eye doesn't see the heart doesn't grieve over," smiled Doris. "Mrs. Jefferson went to Knoleworth early to-day and took her maid. By shopping at the stores there, they save their fares, and have a day out each week."

"May I go that way, then?" he said. "Suppose you send that goggle eyed skivvy of yours on an errand."

This was done and Furneaux made the desired transit.

Now, Tomlin, to whom the comings and goings of all and sundry formed the staple of the day's gossip, had seen the detective go out, but could "take his sollum davy" that the queer little man had not returned. He, too, had watched Ingerman going to Siddle's. Ten minutes later Elkin came down the hill and headed for the same rendezvous. Five minutes more and Hobbs, the butcher, joined the others. Tomlin was seething with curiosity, but there were some casual customers in the "snug," so he could not abandon his post.

When You Feel It Coming

—When that old Headache sends its warning that you are going to suffer—take ZUTOO. When you feel a Cold coming on take ZUTOO. At the first sign of a pain—at the first feeling of sickness—take ZUTOO.

You will be all right in 20 minutes if it's a headache, or the next morning if it is a cold. Pain all gone, and the whole body refreshed.

Don't wait—don't take chances. Get ZUTOO Tablets to-day—and have them ready to take at the first sign of a Headache or cold and TAKE THEM.

25c a box—at dealers or by mail postpaid S. N. Robinson & Co. Regd., Coaticook, Q

Soon, however, Ingerman led Elkin and Hobbs to the inn. Evidently the "financier" had been making some small purchases. He was in high spirits. Ordering appetisers before the mid-day meal, he announced that he was returning to London that afternoon, but would be in Steynholme again for the adjourned inquest.

"No matter how my business suffers I mean to see this affair through" he vowed. "You gentlemen can pretty well guess my private convictions. You were good enough to give me your friendship, so I spoke as openly as one dares when no charge has actually been laid against any particular person."

"Ay," said Elkin, with whom sunshine seemed to disagree, because he looked miserably ill. "We know what you mean, Mr. Ingerman. If the police were half sharp they'd have nabbed their man before this... Did you put any water in this gin, Tomlin?"

"Water?" wheezed Tomlin indignantly. "Water?"

"Well, no offense. I can't taste anything. I believe I could swallow dope and not feel it on my tongue."

"You do look bad, and no mistake, Fred," agreed Hobbs. "Are you vettin' yerself? Don't. Every man to his trade, sez I. Give Dr. Foxton a call."

"I'm taking his medicine regular. Perhaps I need a change.

"Ave a week-end in Lunnen," said Hobbs, with a broad wink.

"Change of medicine, I mean. I'm not leaving Steynholme till things make a move. My next trip to London will be my honeymoon."

"You look like a honeymooner, I don't think," guffawed Hobbs.

"You would not laugh if I told you what you really look like," cried Elkin angrily. "Bet you a level fiver I'm married this year. Now, put up or shut up!"

Furneaux peeped in, through a door, always open, which led to the stairs.

"Can I have my account, Mr. Tomlin?" he said. "I'm going to town by the next train."

"You dont mean to say, Mr. Furneaux, that you are abandoning the case so soon?" broke in Ingerman.

"Did I say that?" inquired the detective meekly.

"No. One can't help drawing inferences occasionally."

"Great mistake. Look at our worthy landlord. He's been drawing inferences as well as corks, and he's to the world."

Tomlin was indeed gazing at his smaller guest open-mouthed.

"Help me!" he gurgled. "I could ha' swore——"

"Bad habit," and Furneaux crooked a waggish forefinger at him. "Even the wisest among us may err. Last night, for instance, I blundered. I really fancied that I had a clew to the Steynholme murderer. And where do you think it ended? In the loft of your club room, Mr. Tomlin. In a box of old clothes at that. Silly, isn't it?"

"Wot? Them amateur play-actin' things?"

"Exactly."

Elkin grunted, though intending to laugh.

"Not so sharp for a London 'tec, I must say," he cried. "Why, those props have been there since before Christmas."

"Yes. I know now," was the downcast reply. "Twelve hours ago I thought differently. Didn't I, Mr. Tomlin?"

Tomlin tried hard to look knowing.

"Oh, is that wot you wur drivin' at?" he said. "Dang me, mister, I could soon ha' put you right 'ad you tole me."

"Well, well. Can't be helped. I may do better in London. What do you say, Mr. Ingerman? The city is the real mint of money and crime. Who knows but that a stroll through Cornhill may have some bearing on the Steynholme mystery?"

"May be you'd get a bit nearer if you took a stroll along the Knoleworth Road, and not so very far, either," guffawed Elkin.

"Who knows?" repeated Furneaux sadly.

"Good day, gentlemen. Some of this merry party will meet again, of course, if not here, at the Assizes. Don't forget my bill, Mr. Tomlin. By the way, one egg at breakfast had seen vicissitudes. It shouldn't be rated too highly."

"I'm travelling by your train," cried Ingerman.

"So I understood," said Furneaux over his shoulder.

There was silence for a moment after he had gone. Ingerman looked thoughtful, even puzzled. He was casting back in his mind to discover just how and when the detective "understood" that his departure was imminent since he himself had only arrived at a decision after leaving the chemist's.

"That chap is no good," announced Elkin. "I'll back old Robinson against him any day."

"Sh-s-sh! He may 'ear you," muttered the landlord.

"Don't care if he does. Cornhill! What the blazes has Cornhill to do with the murder at The Hollies?"

Ingerman appreciated the value of that concluding phrase. Elkin had used it once before in Siddle's shop, and was quietly reproved for his outspokenness.

Ingerman, however, did not inform the company that his office lay in an alley off Cornhill. He elected to rub in Elkin's words.

"Mr. Siddle seemed to object to The Hollies being mentioned as the scene of the crime," he said. "I wonder why?"

"Because he's an old molly-coddle," snapped the horse dealer. "Thinks everyone is like himself, a regular slow-coach."

Tomlin closed the door into the passage, closed it for the first time in living memory, whereat Furneaux, on the landing above, grinned sardonically, and ran downstairs.

"Wot's this about them amateur clo'es?" he inquired portentously. "Do 'as the key of that box?"

"I have," said Elkin. "I looked it after the last performance, and unless you've been up to any monkey tricks, Tomlin, the duds are there yet."

"You're bitin' me 'ead off all the mornin', Fred," protested the aggrieved landlord. "Must the gin was wrong, an' now I'm supposed to 'ave rummidged yur box. Wot for?"

Furneaux popped in.

"My bill ready?" he squeaked.

"No sir. The train——"

"Leaves at two, but I am driving to Knoleworth with Superintendent Fowler."

The door closed behind him. Tomlin whoot his head.

"Box! Jack-in-the-box, I reckon," he said darkly, turning to a dog-eared ledger.

Neither at Knoleworth nor Victoria did Ingerman catch sight of the detective, though he was anxious either to make the journey in the company of the representative of Scotland Yard or arrange an early appointment with him. True, he was not inclined to place the strange-mannered little man on the same high plane as that suggested by certain London journalists to whom he had spoken. But he wanted to win the confidence of the "Yard" and the belief that he was being avoided, was nettling. He found consolation of a sort, in the illustrated papers. One especially contained two pages of local pictures. "Mr. Grant addressing the crowd," with full text, was very effective, while there were admirable studies of The Hollies and the "scene of the tragedy." His own portrait was not flattering. The sun had etched his Mephistophelian features rather sharply, whereas Grant looked a very fine fellow.

Ingerman would have been more than surprised were he privileged to overhear a conversation which began and ended before he reached his flat in North Kensington.

Furneaux, who had jumped into the fore part of the train at Knoleworth, and was out in a jiffy at Victoria, handed his bag to a station detective, and turned into Vauxhall Bridge Road, one of the quietest of the London main thoroughfares. There he met a big man, dressed in tweeds, whose manifest concern at the moment seemed to centre in a rather bad wrapping of a very good cigar.

"Ah! How goes it, Charles?" cried the big man heartily, affecting to be aware of Furneaux's presence, when the latter had walked nearly a hundred yards down a comparatively deserted street.

"What's wrong with the toofa?" inquired Furneaux tersely.

"My own carelessness. Stupid things, bends on cigars. Well, what's the rush?"

"There's a train to Steynholme at five o'clock. I want you to take hold. I must have help. Like your cigar, this case has come unstuck."

Mr. James Leander Winter, Chief Inspector under the Criminal Investigation Department, whistled softly.

"Tut! tut!" he said. "One can never trust the newspapers. Reading this morning's particulars, it looked dead easy."

"Tell me how it struck you. Sometimes the uninformed brain is vouchsafed a gleam of unconscious genius."

Winter appeared to be devoting his mind to circumventing the vagaries of a fragile tobacco leaf. He was a man of powerful build, over forty, heavy, but active, deep chested, round-headed, with bulging blue eyes which radiated kindliness and strength of character. The press photographer described him accurately to Grant. The average Londoner would have taken him for a country gentleman on a visit to the Agricultural show at Islington, with a morning at Tattersall's as a variant. Yet Sam Weller's extensive and peculiar knowledge of London compared with his as a freshman's with a don's of a university. It would be hard to assess in coin of the realm, the value of the political and social secrets stowed away in that big head.

"First, I must put a question or two," he said, smiling at a baby which cooed at him from the shaded depths of a passing perambulator. "Is there another woman?"

"Yes, the postmaster's daughter, Doris Martin."

"Shy, pretty little bird, of course."

"Everything that is good and beautiful."

"Is Grant a Lothario?"

"Excellent chap. Quarter of an hour before the murder he was giving Doris a lesson in astronomy in the garden of The Hollies."

"Never heard it pulled that before."

"This time the statement happens to be strictly accurate."

"Honest Injun?"

"I'm sure of it. If anything, the death of Adelaide Melhuish cleared the scales off their eyes. Those two have never kissed or squeezed—yet. They'll be starting quite soon now."

"How old is Doris?"

"Nineteen."

"But a really good looking girl of nineteen must have had admirers before Grant went to the village."

Home Health Club

(Edited by Dr. David H. Bercu, Chicago, Ill.)

The Fly Season.—It has begun late this year, but just so sure as there are careless housekeepers and careless farmers and stablemen, there are flies. They are not only an unnecessary nuisance but a real menace to health and life. We do well to prepare in advance to defend our lives our families and our homes against the danger of destruction by human enemies. They do not come against us often but if we are wise we are always ready to defend ourselves.

It is the small hardly noticed foe that does the most deadly work, however. No matter how often we put screens on our doors and windows or fly nets on our horses, the crop of flies that are hatched from the filth of our own careless creation comes back to pry upon us and upon our cattle.

How I wish I could use words of sufficient force and in such convincing style that what I write might gladly be copied in every paper or periodical in all countries where flies breed and plague the people. Why won't you, why don't you clean up the barnyard?

At an expense of much painstaking effort and many thousands of dollars the Department of Agriculture established by your Government and my Government and paid for by you and me, has demonstrated to us in plain view through well illustrated pamphlets that flies can only propagate in piles of manure and other filth, seldom however, in any other place than manure. Every pound of manure that is spread upon the fields in a fresh state is worth as fertilizer two pounds of old manure and when the fresh manure is scattered in the fields the flies cannot breed in it. Flies requite about a week or ten days in which to deposit their eggs and hatch the young flies. They must have the warmth and moisture that is supplied by the wasting, fermenting manure pile.

If the stable waste is thrown directly on to the manure spreader or on to a wagon and taken to the fields and scattered even once each week, Mr. Fly is killed before he is born. The fields receive the fertilizer before the best of it is lost and the horses and cattle are saved from the cruel bites of the dangerous pest.

I believe I am safe in saying that if all the money spent in the U. S. alone each year for window screens, screen doors, fly nets and fly traps, fly poison and other expense incurred trying to defend ourselves against flies, were used in a straight from the shoulder compulsory fight, compelling the abatement of the nuisance called breeding places for two or three years, we could, with the money saved, buy a manure spreader for each 200 acres of farmed land and by compelling the constant use of the spreader and the systematic care of other breeding places, avoid in the future any necessity for the great annual expense of fly protection. The mosquito nuisance and danger could be eliminated by the same crews of workers that are employed to eliminate the flies.

We must do everything possible now to conserve health, strength and effort. Prevention is better than cure. Kill flies and mosquitoes by destroying their breeding places and save the fight against flies and grow food with the energy saved.

CLUB NOTES.

I will gladly answer all inquiries for information on health subjects from readers of this publication if same are addressed to Home Health Club, 5039 Cottage Grove Ave., Chicago, Ill. Send full name and address with 4 cents postage.

Dear Doctor,—I have concluded to come to you for advise. My wife is now 75 years of age, her usual weight is from 165 to 173 pounds and her height 5 feet 5 inches. Mother of six children, two living. She still is, and always has been a hearty eater, rather over-burdened with flesh; is generall ya sound sleeper.

Some years ago she was driving to town accompanied by two of the children. The horse ran away, hitting her hard on the left knee and she was laid up for quite a while. Since that time she has been troubled more or less with pain in the knee and occasionally, while walking, she will make a misstep or slip and is almost unable to get about. Lately the pain has appeared on one side of the knee cap again, keeping her awake during the night. When getting up in the morning after sitting down a while, she has to exercise the joint for a while before she can walk. She was persuaded by a friend last week to call on a physician. When he had exmined her knee he told her the trouble was caused by Uried Acid in the blood and it was his opinion that she should take a treatment for a number of months. When I read your lecture on "Diet and Rheumatism" it seemed to me best to write and ask your advice if that or a similar treatment would be of benefit in her case.

I will add that we eat breakfast at 7 a.m. and dinner at 2 p.m. and an apple or two in the evening. I persuaded her some time ago not to drink no more than one cup of coffee a day and no tea—an easy matter, as I use neither. She is fond of meat but we do not buy much as I prefer fresh fish and we have all the eggs we need. I also raise all kinds of vegetables in my garden so as to have an abundance for use during the year. Likewise a great variety of fruit, fresh, dried and canned, is on our table at all times. I have tried in my feeble way to lay the case before you. Hope you can help.

L. S.

(Answer.)—The method of treatment described in the lecture you refer to would be of great value in her case; in fact it would be more effective than such a course as that recommended to her by the visiting physician. It will cost little if anything to give it a thorough trial, and will not do her any harm but great benefit. A massage or rubbing of the knee once or twice a day would also prove very beneficial, first applying warm vinegar and then rubbing with a little warm olive oil, continuing the rubbing for at least a half hour. The improvement will be very decided in a short time.

The Bitter Orange.

The bitter orange-tree was originally introduced to the shores of the Mediterranean by travellers from India and China. Most of the Spanish and Sicilian crop goes to London to be made into marmalade, since very few people in the south of Europe seem to understand the simple art of composing their preserve. There is also a valuable oil contained in the rind, known as essence de bigarade, to distinguish it from that of the sweet orange, essence de Portugal. The distillers extract it by pressing the rind forcibly against a flat sponge, which absorbs the contents of the crushed oil-cells. They wring out the sponge under water and skim off the floating oil. This oil, after careful purification, is used as a flavoring agent in curacoa and orange bitters; it is one of the ingredients of eau-de-Cologne and other perfumes; and a drop of it on sugar in a tumblerful of hot water makes the popular eau sucree of the Parisians. Like oil of lemon, it cannot be extracted by distillation in the usual way, since a high temperature injures its flavor.

The fruit-buds of the bitter orange also give an essential oil known as essence de petit grain; and from the white flowers is extracted a delightful perfume called essence de Neroli. That is prepared chiefly at Nice, Cannes, and Grasse, in the south of France. All the flowers of a fine tree will yield only a single ounce of Neroli oil. The peel also yields an aromatic principle that the ancient Arab physicians esteemed highly as a tonic; it is still considered a useful stomachic.

Will Raise Cotton.

The Government of British India has sent an expert to the United States to study American methods of cotton production and other agricultural questions.

CRUDE THOUGHTS FROM THE EDITORIAL PEN

Setting a young man afloat with money left him by his relatives, is like tying a bladder under the arms of one who cannot swim; ten chances to one he will lose the bladders and go to the bottom. Teach him to swim and he will not need the bladder. Give your child a good education. See to it that his morals are pure, his mind cultivated, and his whole nature made subservient to the laws which govern man, and you have given what will be of more value to him than the wealth of the Indies. You have given him a start which no misfortune can deprive him of.

There is a certain species of reptile found in all parts of the known world, its home is not so much in the jungles and wilderness as one might suppose. This serpent frequents the haunts of men, showing by this that it is of a sociable nature; cities, villages and the sparsely populated neighborhood, each and all claim its attention. The name of this serpent is slander. We hope that it has no abiding place in the home of any of our readers. The Home Circle Department is the best antidote yet discovered for this vile reptile and seldom fails to drive from the home its weekly visits.

As birds sing oftener on lowly roofs than palace domes and roses love best to climb o'er lowly window sills and cottage eaves, so to the poor God's blessings come, freighted with dearest wealth, and to the humble heart His love is sweetest. They who have oftenest bowed to earth with deep afflictions are nearest heaven; and as the rose never gives forth all its sweetness until it is crushed, so human hearts need the good Father's hand to press the blossom of purity, and love and faith, that He may not have imparted to them their heavenly fragrance in vain.

REMEMBER MOTHER!

This is the month of roses. It should also be the month for mother to have a vacation. One of our exchanges hits the nail on the head when it says all of the family usually has a vacation each summer—except mother.

But mother, who is the very basis of the family, and who works night and day for the children—well, mother doesn't seem to be recognized. Too often she does not have any extended period of change or rest until that day comes when she is "worked out."

—x—

Mother isn't asking for a vacation—but that is only the greater reason why she should have one. She is so busy cleaning up the house, getting Gertrude's vacation things ready, helping John get ready for the Officers' Training Camp, and working occasionally in the garden, that she doesn't have any time to think about any vacation. Mothers never did have the faculty of thinking about themselves very much, anyway. All of their thoughts are of others.

If you wait until mother suggests a vacation for herself, mother will never have a vacation. But why not compel her to take a vacation? Why not get the railroad time cards, and pick out a fine little spot and then send her there with some other member of the family and have the return ticket so made out that she won't get back in less than six weeks?

Because mother never asks for a vacation is no reason why she would not enjoy one and profit from one. Because she works with the dishes and ironing and reading to Grandpa every day is no reason why she wouldn't enjoy a few weeks spent in the north or even a little cottage along the river. Because she never had a vacation before is no reason why she shouldn't have one now.

Send mother on a vacation.

"Get out the old grey bonnet with the blue ribbons on it"—and fix her out with some real vacation togs and a steamer trunk and some extra yellow bank notes—and let the real head of the house have a time of rest and change and comfort this summer.

And remember this! Don't wait until she begins to beg for a vacation—because mothers seldom beg for a vacation.

This is July and with July the vacation season begins.

Remember mother!

—x—

Do not—mother at your housework; father in your study—do not be always too busy. The little heart wants an outlet, the upraised bud wants a kiss, the little hearts have something to tell you, a little grief to bring, a small joy, a game of play expected now and then. Ah, beware! Those requirements will slacken and will cease, if it be too often. "Now run away, dear father is busy." "Don't be troublesome, dear, mother must do her work."

—x—

There is food for thought in the story that is told of a young lad who for the first time accompanied his father to a public dinner. The waitor asked him, "What will you take to drink?" Hesitating for a moment, he replied, "I'll take what father takes." The answer reached his father's ear and instantly the full responsibility of his action flashed upon him. In a moment his decision was made; and in tones tremulous with emotion, and to the astonishment of those who knew him, he said: —"Waiter, I'll take water!"

THE CRIPPLING OF RUSSIA.

Pro-German Influence Was Handicap to Armies.

The political aspects and meaning of the Russian revolution lie outside the field of the military commentator. I desire to point out only this: The influence of pro-German elements in Russia had succeeded in paralyzing the national effort and in crippling the national armies. Artillery sent from France to the Roumanians last fall was lost in the Ural Mountains. Ammunition sent for these guns was held up in Archangel until it was destroyed by German agents at that port.

The national organization of the Zemstows, which supplied much that was necessary for the army, was paralyzed, by Protopopoff and Sturmer. A deliberate effort was made by Sturmer to conclude a separate peace with the Germans last year. It was a matter of common agreement in London and Paris when I was there a month ago that the Russian situation as it existed was hopeless, and that unless there was some change no effective help could be expected from Russia during the summer campaign.

It is plain that those who now control Russia's destiny mean to continue the war and that every effort to supply the armies and to equip the millions still available will be made. It is a German view that the disorganization incident to the revolution may prevent Russian interposition for many months, but a similar result had already been achieved by the treachery and treason of those who directed the Russian Government, and it may easily turn out that the Russian revolution will have the same effect upon Russian armies as the French Revolution had upon the French armies, and that we shall see a new activity and a new energy in the Slav forces.

My own judgment is that Russian armies will very shortly be put to the test, for there are many indications that point to new German attacks either toward Odessa or toward Petrograd. At present it seems to me inevitable that the military effect of the revolution will be beneficial to the Allies that it will be increasingly beneficial as the war proceeds, and that if the war lasts until next year, as I expect, it may be one of the decisive elements in the struggle. Men will recall that it was a change of rulers that saved Frederick the Great in the Eighteenth Century. It would be an odd circumstance if another change of rulers should doom Prussianism in Europe and in the world.—From "German Retreat in France-Bagdad-Petrograd," by Frank H. Simonds, in the American Review of Reviews.

FLED FROM GERMANY ON SECOND ATTEMPT

Persistence of a Canadian Sergeant Rewarded — Hardships of Prison Life and Early Days at Front

Interesting stories of life in the front line trenches during the first months of the war and of the hardships which the entente allied soldiers underwent when taken prisoners were told by Sergeant Francis Edwards, one of the members of the original Princess Patricias Light Infantry. After being wounded twice and taken prisoner by the Huns, he was successful in escaping from Germany and landing back home safely on Canadian soil.

When the first troops landed in France, he said that they did not have their trenches in as good condition for living in then as the Germans, owing to lack of material. They were in water up to their waists most of the time and had to fight in the day time and make sand bags for trenches at night. During the battle of St. Eloi, the regiment came under heavy German artillery fire and Edwards was wounded and taken to the base. Many days later he returned to join his unit, which had been shifted to the Ypres front. It was there that the battalion was badly cut up and he along with a number of others were captured.

Lined Up to Be Shot

He told of being lined up with a number of other prisoners against a wall to be shot. One boy of eighteen was shot through the shoulder and died from loss of blood. The officer in charge after killing two men, decided to send the wounded men on to Germany. They were two days without medical treatment, and when they were marched through the street to the Giessen camp, civilians turned out and spit in the soldiers' faces. Living conditions were very hard for the prisoners, he said, until parcels containing food and tobacco were received from the British Red Cross.

Efforts to Escape

Along with two other Canadians, Edwards made his first attempt to leave Germany in the month of January. They were successful in getting to a border town, when they were spotted by the patrol and marched back to camp. After undergoing many days in the cells they were taken to a working camp. From there they once more tried to make good their escape, and were caught at the Holland border. Many months later they were working on a farm, and in the evening, while supper was being served, made good their escape, and after many days in the open landed safely in Holland. They were warmly received by the Hollanders, and after being taken to the British consul at Rotterdam were sent to the records office at London, where Edwards was informed that he had been reported killed in action.

WHAT ESSEX LAD DID

Winning Medal for Bravery at Seventeen Years of Age

One of the youngest British soldiers to be decorated for bravery in the field is Private Frederick Howcroft, of the Essex Regiment, who was awarded the Military Medal. Private Howcroft, whose home is in Stepney, was only sixteen when he joined Kitchener's Army, but his sturdy appearance enabled him to pass for nineteen. When he performed his exploit he was only seventeen.

His family heard of his bravery in a letter from his colonel, stating that he had been recommended for the medal for rescuing several of his comrades from a shelled trench. Subsequently, young Howcroft wrote describing how a shell burst in his trench, killing and wounding several of the men: "I ran the trench while the Germans were still shelling to get stretcher-bearers, and as I was going by our company's headquarters I met our captain, who asked me to run a message to the corporal in the corner of the trench to withdraw all the fellows.

"You can bet I found the trench nicely blown in. I got there and carried several men out. The captain said he was pleased with my work, and was going to see the General Headquarters. And that is all I know about it." Private Howcroft was wounded in the British advance, a bullet and several pieces of shrapnel finding his right thigh. He afterwards spent many months in hospital.

FRENCH CANADA'S HEROES

Should Abrogate Treaty to Enlist More of Them

"Why can't Canada ask England to request France for an abrogation of the Treaty of Paris in order to lay the foundation for making Canada a nation of one language and one universal law? Special privileges to certain provinces must cease. The men of the French battalions at the front see the problem and recognise the need of a vigorous policy in winning this thing. The French-Canadian must be cleared of all suspicion of being a poor soldier or a coward." The French-Canadian will fight just as well as the British-born Canadian, but the trouble is we can't get them in sufficient numbers. The 14th Battalion was just as good as any other battalion in the first division and the 22nd Battalion has done well."

Such were the words of a high military authority who returned from the front temporarily on an important mission to confer with prominent officials of Canada. In one of the most earnest and emphatic interviews which any army official gave to Canada, this authority in unpublished remarks reviewed the situation. He made the above suggestions with the firm conviction that they had the endorsement of the Canadian army and the support of British officials.

Many Military Absentees

As the result of a "round up" in the neighbourhood of Strutton ground, Westminster, early in the week seventeen absentees were brought up at the police court and handed over to escorts.

A hood of gray cretonne for the back of the dining-room chairs is a comfortable thing in summer time.

CANADIANS AT VIMY ENJOYING SUNSHINE

A Canadian civilian writes as follows of scenes in France where the Canadian battled for Lens: "On we walked, through Vimy and petit cloisters of shattered brick houses on the plane below the ridge—scenes of fierce fighting. Our front line stretches far in advance of these. Rusted and torn the barbed wire entanglements of the Hun still stand in spots. Dead rats and mice lie here and there stricken by deadly gas shells. In the blasted trees sparrows chatter. Canadian soldiers are here and there enjoying the warm weather. Always the screech of our missiles going over fills the air and the downward shriek of the odd Hun answering shell—not one to our five. Death is always at hand but none seem to worry.

"Assurance and hopefulness are written on every face. Is not this the land they won? Was not that long, desolate ridge behind them the strongest fortress on the whole front? Well worth the price. Thelus wood. Farbus wood, farther along the ridge. Not as big as you might imagine. Many an Ontario farmer possesses a bigger sugar bush than either. Farbus could be duplicated at many places near Toronto. The writer stopped to pick up a few daffodils among the battered hard woods of the latter. Standing at its eastern edge one may with a glass observe occasional Huns moving cautiously in the distance. Fresnoy village, fringed with shell smoke lies out in front. Even as we walk out through the trees a party of Hun prisoners emerge, and as they trudge back to safety and the rear, their own artillery showers them with shrapnel and high explosive."

TRAGEDY FROM SKY IN SUNNY ENGLAND

Where German Aeroplanes Endangered Canadian Babies at Folkestone—Canada's Hospitals Useful

Picture a clear summer sky, dotted with fleecy white clouds, above a green landscape, wherein the white blossom of the hawthorn edge the Kentish lanes. Picture crowds of women and children revelling in the sunshine of Folkestone, England's great seaside resort. Then, imagine a sudden, queer, loud humming far overhead, and upturned faces gazing at sixteen silver specks in the blue vault. Suddenly from one of the silver birds a white puff shoots downwards, a hissing greets the ear, and presently a roar like thunder. Another and another roar, as these devils of the air sweep nearer. Women scream and children cry as the crowds seek shelter. In a moment wrecked houses, broken glass, mangled and wounded people appear where just before all was peace and content.

Canadians Render Aid

Thus did death descend on the people of Folkestone and vicinity—death meted out to babes and women by the Kaiser's airmen. Scarcely had the noise of the bombs died away when the telephone at Westcliffe Canadian Hospital started ringing. Calls for help came from all parts of Folkestone, and Colonel Courtenay's staff were presently up to their eyes in work. Pitiful was the condition of many. Some survived only a few minutes. Patients were immediately inoculated with anti-tetanus serum to prevent lock-jaw from their wounds, and as soon as they were able to move were sent to the hospital at Shorncliffe, where Col. Hutchison, of Montreal, chief surgeon for the Grand Trunk, looked after them. In fact, Canadian doctors and hospitals looked after nearly all those injured in the raid.

Survivor's Account

Some of the Canadian women, wives and children of soldiers in England and France who lived thereabout, had narrow escapes, but only one was injured. "I was just returning from tea with some friends," stated one Toronto officer's wife, "when we heard a strange humming in the air. Suddenly came a puff of white smoke, and a bomb fell. For the next few minutes the most terrible uproar ensued. And yet the source from which it was coming was almost invisible. I dashed off in a great fright to see about my baby. . . . Thank goodness, he was safe, but bits of shrapnel had fallen in our garden."

To the Youngest Tennyson

"He gave his life to serve his God, his King, and his country in defence of truth, liberty, and justice," says the inscription on a memorial erected in Freshwater Church, Isle of Wight, to Sub-Lieutenant Harold Tennyson, R. N., youngest son of Lord Tennyson.

When Princess Christian opened the Springbok Club in Richmond the Springboks gave her three hearty cheers, followed by their Zulu war-cry.

Armour of Light

Some years ago, to be exact, in 1898, Mrs. Eddy was asked by a certain newspaper for an opinion concerning the efficacy of statesmanship and diplomacy to settle international difficulties by peaceful means. She insisted, in her statement, that the immortal qualities of mercy and equity reflected in human consciousness and acts, alone had the power finally to accommodate all differences satisfactorily. She said, however, "But if our nation's rights or honour were seized, every citizen would be a soldier and woman would be armed with power girt for the hour." (The First Church of Christ Scientist, and Miscellany, p. 377).

It is unquestionable that when Mrs. Eddy wrote these patriotic words, she held in view an ideal of right and honour based upon divine Principle, and distinctly worthy of universal defense. Any ideal less than this has no honour and no right, however much mortals may have deluded themselves into various acceptances of lesser standards. The right or the honour, the defense of which in crucial hours, calls every man and every woman to be be a soldier and to gird themselves with power, must be something so vital that it is virtually the right and honour of all mankind. Whatever threatens this right and honour, threatens the very foundations of human well-being, and is therefore essentially evil, "enmity against God," and must be so seen and overcome.

The armour of light can be nothing less than the spiritual understanding of the omnipotence and omnipresence of God, and of divine Mind's all-sufficiency to destroy the enemies of the idea of Truth. The soldier in the trench is as truly protected in the armour of light as is the citizen who quietly directs affairs at home. It is only necessary that each, in his place, be steadfast in the effort to realize that there is no power but Spirit, and that there is no enemy to destroy but the carnal mind. Shrapnel, poisonous gases and the deadly thrust from the deep, are not in themselves the works of darkness which are to be proved powerless to destroy Life and reality. These evil things are but the outward manifestation of the subjective belief of an evil mind fashioning destructions within the secret chambers of thought. There would, obviously, be no outward thrust to parry, if the evil animus were overcome. This was what Paul so well understood when he wrote to the Christians at Ephesus, "We wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places,"

Every individual everywhere must decide whether his faith and hope and activity shall be on the side of divine Mind, whose manifestation and object is "on earth peace, good will toward men," or whether his thought shall concede the reality of carnal mind and its manifestations, and thus prolong the strife between good and evil. Evil is never a person, nor a reality, nor a power. Those individuals who understand this metaphysical fact, are they who have put on the armour of light and are equipped, through scientific knowledge of God, to overthrow the pretense of evil, and thereby help to rescue the evil-doer from his belief in evil. Mrs. Eddy sounds a solemn reminder of individual obligation when she says on page 450 of Science and Health, "The Christian Scientist has enlisted to lesser evil, disease and death; and he will overcome them by understanding their nothingness and the allness of God, or good."

In just the ratio that individual and collective consciousness of a nation recognizes Principle as the only power, and ideals that reflect God as the only right and honour, the guidance of Principle will certainly be with the armies of that people if, in the limited human understanding of spiritual power, armies seem temporarily necessary. Whether a man's human duty lies, for the moment, within his country's army or outside of it, it is the metaphysical soldier of Principle, going forth in the armour of light, who will see, and be the first to demonstrate to others the protecting presence and power of divine Principle; as, indeed, Isaiah saw when he said concerning the ideal of Truth appearing in every age, "So shall the Lord of hosts come down to fight for mount Zion, and for the hill thereof. As birds flying, so will the Lord of hosts defend Jerusalem; defending also he will deliver it; and passing over he will preserve it."

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Her Lesson

By C. B. LEWIS

Copyright, 1917, by C. B. Lewis

There was but one passenger to alight at Snow Hill, on the Southern Pacific road, and in the cattle and Indian country, and that was Miss Bessie Vaughn of Chicago. Her schoolmate, Nettie Long, whose father owned and managed the big Long ranch and who was now living with him out in the wilds, had written that a person would meet Bessie at Snow Hill with a hackboard and bring her safely to the ranch. The "person" proved to be a young man of twenty-five, dressed as a cowboy, but having rather a distinguished look about him. While he was hastening along the platform and yet thirty feet away the girl acknowledged to herself that his features were good and that his face showed character and ambition. Perhaps it was for these reasons that, while he was covering the other thirty feet, Miss Bessie suddenly decided that he ought to be snubbed.

"This is Miss Vaughn of Chicago, I presume?" he said as he lifted his hat and smiled a welcome.

What right had he to presume? By what right did he smile a welcome and seem ready to shake hands? The girl looked coldly at him and slightly nodded her head, and that was snub No. 1. The young man took it so; but, though he colored up, he did not lose his smile.

"You will give me your checks, please, and I will put your trunks aboard, and we will be off."

There was a touch of authority in his tones that nettled the girl, and she turned away and delivered up the checks with her own hand. She would also have loaded the trunks on the vehicle if she had been strong enough. Snub No. 2 had followed fast on the heels of snub No. 1.

"We have fifteen miles to drive, and the road is rather rough," observed the young man as they got seated.

No reply. Snub No. 3.

"I take it that you have never visited this section before?" was remarked after the silence had lasted for a mile.

"No."

"But I trust you will find novelty and pleasure."

Miss Bessie looked straight ahead and shut her teeth hard. What was it to one of Colonel Long's hired men whether she enjoyed the west or not? The man was presumptuous, and she meant her silence to be another snub. Whether it was so taken or not, it was not more than five minutes before a voice which had a touch of the paternal in it remarked:

"You don't look overwell, and a couple of months of this bracing atmosphere will do you a world of good."

"Sir, are you a practicing physician?" asked Miss Bessie as she turned to look the young man square in the eyes.

"Well, no," he slowly replied.

"Then you need not bother to take charge of my health."

That was what the boys would have called a settler, and it hung the young man up for the next ten minutes. When he spoke again, however, it was as if nothing had happened.

"It was on that hill over there," he quietly said, as he pointed with his whip, "that four of our men were surrounded by fifty Indian warriors two years ago."

Miss Bessie deliberately turned to look in the opposite direction, and she felt that he was smiling as he continued:

"One of the boys was killed, but they killed twelve Indians and held their ground all day."

What was it to her whether one or the whole four cowboys were killed? Indeed she found herself almost wishing that all had been wiped out. She hadn't the slightest interest in the affair—not that day.

"And over there in that valley is where a drove of steers ran over and trampled the life out of two of our men last spring. We didn't even find their boots."

Miss Bessie looked straight ahead and made no reply.

"And you wouldn't believe, would you, that this insignificant creek we are crossing was a mile wide and ten feet deep last May? We lost a thousand head of stock in that flood."

Still no reply. It was snub after snub, and she meant to tire him out. This time the silence lasted for fifteen minutes, and she it was who broke it at last. The horses had shied at a coyote dodging for cover and started away on a tearing gallop. The young man kept them on the trail, but made not the slightest effort to check the pace. On the contrary, he hummed a popular air as they bid down to their work. The visitor stood it as long as she could, and then turned and exclaimed:

"Can't you see that the horses are running away?"

"I have seen it for some time past," he quietly replied.

"Then why don't you stop them?"

"I will if you so wish, but a run of a few miles won't hurt them any."

She did wish it from the bottom of her heart, for the vehicle was jumping like a goat, and it took both hands to hold her hat on her head, but she gritted her teeth and decided to be smashed into jam before she would prefer the request. The horses ran for three or four miles and then slowed down, and the young girl felt that she had snubbed the young man again by not being afraid.

"Who is that man you sent to the depot after me?" she asked of her schoolmate almost before she had taken off her hat.

"Who? Why, that's Tom. I'll formally introduce you some day."

"You needn't mind. I found him rather presumptuous and had to snub him."

"Tom presumptuous? Why, he's the nicest"—

And then she suddenly skipped to some other subject, and Tom was forgotten till the next day, when he was bold enough to approach Miss Bessie as she was alone for a moment and ask:

"What sort of a gait do you prefer in a horse—a trot or a lope? I am to select one for you today."

"Thank you, but you needn't go to any trouble on my account," was the reply, and Tom ought to have felt duly crushed as he walked away.

He was not seen again for four days, duty having called him away. The two girls rode out every day on ponies selected for them, and on the fourth occasion something happened. The pony ridden by Miss Bessie suddenly bolted, and when she found him beyond control she could only cling to the saddle and hope he would tire himself out after running a couple of miles. But he didn't. He kept a straight course and a headlong gallop for mile after mile, and the girl was thinking of throwing herself from the saddle when a cow pony ranged up beside her, a hand grasped her loose rein, and a voice said in her ear:

"Keep your head, Miss Vaughn. I could pull him down and end his run here, but there is need of even more speed."

"W-what is it?" she asked as she turned her head and saw Tom beside her.

"Indians! There are five or six in chase of us, and I am racing for that hill with the rocks on it. Cling tightly, and don't be afraid."

After a terrific race for another mile both animals were suddenly pulled up, and, dismounting and lifting the girl from the saddle, Tom half pulled her up the steep side of the hill to the shelter of the rocks.

"We are all right now," he cheerfully said. "But you keep crouched down till I have a little talk with these noble red men."

The "talk" was his Winchester, and before it was over he had killed one and wounded another. Their loss, together with the alarm of the firing, sent the remaining Indians scurrying away.

At the ranch house, after the story had been told, Miss Bessie asked for the second time:

"Who is this man Tom?"

"Why, he's an old Yale man and belongs to one of the best families in the east. He came out here for his health, you see. Did you have to snub him again today?"

"I—I don't think so."

"But are you going to some other day?"

"No, never again. I'm so sorry and ashamed—and I think—think"—

Well, there's a rumor afloat, and it may be true.

A Carlyle Letter.

Carlyle's letter declining to give a valedictory address as lord rector of Edinburgh university is in Dundee museum. It is a mournful, kindly letter of little general interest, except perhaps in its somewhat conventional advice to the students:

"Bid them in my name, if they still love me, fight the good fight and quit themselves like men in the warfare to which they are as if conscript and consecrated and which lies ahead. Tell them to consult the eternal oracles (not yet inaudible, nor ever to become so, when worthily inquired of) and to disregard, nearly altogether in comparison, the temporary noises, meanings and deliriums. May they love wisdom, as wisdom if she is to yield her treasures must be loved—piously, valiantly, humbly, beyond life itself or the prizes of life, with all one's heart and all one's soul. In that case (I will say again) and not in any other case it shall be well with them. Adieu, my young friends, a long adieu."

Hunting With Falcons.

Hunting with falcons was revived in Scotland some years ago by Sir Henry Bethune. A writer on field sports says: "The falconers had an old setter dog which hunted till he found a covey of partridges. The falconer then threw off a hawk, which rose in circles till very high, then hovered above the dog. The dog looked up to see if the hawk was ready and then ran in and roused the birds. Swoop went the hawk. If he missed, the birds generally went into a hedge and the hawk soared again and hovered over the birds. The old dog then went off after them and got another point. If the hawk killed its bird, the falconer went gently to it and picked it up; if not, he had to fetch the bird with the lure, a dummy bird with a bit of pigeon on it. He called the hawk 'Killy, killy, Voiyook,' a sort of view hallo, and hurled the lure in the air. The hawk stooped to it and began to eat the pigeon, and he then succeeded in picking it up."

An Empty Invitation.

An Englishwoman traveling in Mesopotamia tells this experience of her party: "The cook came in with a pleasing expression. 'What will you have for supper?' he asked. 'What can we have?' we answered, with the caution arising from long experience of limited possibilities. 'What you wish,' he said, with as much assurance and affability as if he were presenting a huge bill of fare. I knew what one could expect in these places. 'Get a fowl,' I said. 'There is not one left here,' he answered. 'Eggs, then,' I suggested, with the humor of desperation. 'No fowl, how eggs?' he answered, with pitying superiority. 'Well, we will have what there is,' I said faintly. 'There is nothing,' he answered."

Celtic Japanese.

The Ainus, the Celtic race of Japan, live in the island of Yeddo, although the race has become so reduced that there are now not more than 16,000 or 17,000 of them left in the country. The most noticeable peculiarity about Ainu women is that they have tattooed upon their upper and lower lips what resembles a moustache. The women are not considered attractive, and their matrimonial prospects are quite injured without this decoration. The moustache is begun when the girl is quite a child. It is done gradually, a little each year, until it extends partly across the cheek, the material used being the soot from burning bark. The face is cut and the blood rubbed in [illegible]

We always class children, birds and flowers together. And why? Because they should be equally beautiful, innocent and happy. We should never rob childhood of its ideal loveliness. Even old people should be gay, and happy and good; too good to overcloud the children's horizon with angry eyes and lowering brows, nor turn their merriment to discord by continual fault-finding. Allow them all the freedom consistent with absolute safety. Let them play and be happy, but teach them self-control in this: "He that is slow to anger is better than the mighty, and he that ruleth his own spirit, is greater than he that taketh a city."

Skeptic and Pessimist.

Mr. Dolan looked at his visitor with an expression of confirmed opposition, and during the friend's argument he further emphasized his disagreement by an occasional emphatic shake of the head.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

BY JOHN W. S. McCULLOUGH, M.D., D.P.H., CHIEF OFFICER OF THE PROVINCIAL BOARD OF HEALTH.

POLLUTING STREAMS.

SOME OF THE WORST epidemics of typhoid fever have been in mountain towns where the people drink the clear water of some tumbling mountain stream. No doubt the thought of the city fathers is that water that is so limpid and so filled with air by falls and rapids cannot be impure.

Whenever it has been possible to run down the source of infection it has been found that some group of people have been polluting the stream, thinking they were doing no harm because "running water purifies itself," according to the popular idea.

Every year a certain number of campers come back to their homes suffering from typhoid fever. In many instances it has been found that the unfortunates had camped on the bank of some beautiful mountain stream. The water in this stream was so cold and clear that the campers had no hesitation in drinking it freely. Ofttimes a mile or so up the stream another party of campers stopping on the banks of the stream were polluting directly or indirectly by polluting its banks.

Among the campers who take to mountains are many typhoid convalescents and carriers. When such pollute a stream there is a fair chance that typhoid will develop, for the rapid flow of a mountain stream carries the bacilli to down-stream consumers before there has been time for purification.

The following are the Provincial laws regarding pollution of waters, (Sections 90-91 Public Health Act, Ontario):

"The Provincial Board shall have the general supervision of all springs, wells, ponds, lakes, streams, or rivers used as a source for a public water supply with reference to their purity, together with the waters feeding the same; and shall examine the same from time to time when the necessity for such examination arises, and inquire what, if any, pollution exists and the cause thereof." 3 Geo. V. c. 58, s. 90.

"(1) No garbage, excreta, manure, vegetable or animal matter or filth shall be discharged into or be deposited in any of the lakes, rivers, streams, or other waters in Ontario or on the shores or banks thereof."

"(2) The owners and officers of boats and other vessels plying upon any such lake, river, stream, or other water shall so dispose of the garbage, excreta, manure, vegetable or animal matter or filth upon such boats or vessels as not to create a nuisance or enter or pollute such lake, river, stream, or other water."

"(3) Residents of a health resort or summer resort shall so dispose of garbage, excreta, manure, vegetable or animal matter or filth as not to create a nuisance or permit of its gaining entrance to or polluting any such lake, river, stream, or other water."

"(4) Any person who contravenes any of the provisions of this section shall incur a penalty not exceeding $100." 2 Geo. V. c. 58, s. 91.

VACCINATION AGAINST TYPHOID FEVER.

Those who go camping or who visit summer resorts where there may be a question about the purity of the water or as to the general sanitary conditions would do well to have their doctor vaccinate them against typhoid and paratyphoid fever. The record of the Canadian Army for 1916 in respect to these diseases is an object lesson worth considering.

The Department of Militia and Defence have just announced that for the twelve months ending December 31st, 1916, 167 cases only of Typhoid Fever were reported as having occurred amongst the many thousands of men of the C. E. F. in Canada, and this, notwithstanding the fact that Typhoid Fever is a disease especially affecting young adults from seventeen to thirty years of age, and a disease which is endemic in all parts of Canada.

This comparative freedom on the part of the C. E. F. is seen to be most striking when it is recalled that, during the Boer War, one man out of every nine in the British Forces in South Africa was invalided through this disease, and that in the Spanish-American War, of 107,000 men in the Camps at Tampa, Florida, and elsewhere, who had not left the shores of the United States, 20,000 contracted the disease. The remarkable change can only be attributed to the process of inoculation.

The Provincial Board of Health for Ontario has supplied to date all the Typhoid and Paratyphoid Vaccine used by the entire Canadian Expeditionary Force (about 450,000 men). In all, nearly 600,000 doses have been supplied free of cost.

Typhoid inoculation is simple, devoid of any danger whatever, ensures almost certain safety against typhoid, and is supplied free of charge to anyone.

GREAT PIRATE PROBLEM

SERIOUS FIGURES OF GERMANY'S SUBMARINE EFFORT.

Editor of the Scientific American Believes That the Allies Will Have to Destroy Three U-Boats Daily in Order to Defeat Desperate and Ferocious Campaign of the Huns.

IF Germany concentrates her whole manufacturing energy on submarines, how many can she turn out in a year? It is the editorial opinion of The Scientific American that the number is in excess of one thousand, and it bases its belief on the existence of German yards having a capacity of over 500 submarines at once and on an estimate of six months as the average time of construction. In this possibility the editor sees "the immediate danger-point" of the great conflict into which the Allies are engaged. It is obviously necessary to see that Germany's submarines are destroyed faster than she can build them, or at the rate of, say, three a day. It is impossible to say how many have been already destroyed, but The Scientific American is inclined to think that the mortality among them is by no means as great as had been represented. Says the editor:

"It is only recently that this journal has been able to obtain a conservative estimate, in quarters where reliable statistics are available; and we are informed that a total loss of one hundred would be, if anything, an overstatement of the truth. This figure includes many boats which were supposed to be lost because they were believed to have been heavily hit by shell-fire.

"For some months we have had a growing conviction, based upon a very close study of the campaign, that the submarine losses were not nearly so large as represented, and that with the growth in size, speed, and sea-keeping qualities of the submarine, the problem of meeting and smashing up the so-called blockade is becoming increasingly difficult.

"Of course, the only plan by which Germany could build a thousand submarines in a year would be by what has come to be known as the manufacturing method, of which a notable example is found in the great Ford plant at Detroit. It is pretty safe to say that she has adopted a standard type of craft, the details of which are based upon the experience of the past two and a half years, and that she has enlisted the waste of her ship-building plants, public and private, and a correspondingly number of her engine-building plants in this work.

"We have made investigation of the capacity of the German yards as regards building ways, and it discloses the interesting fact that, without laying down any additional ways, she could have under construction at any given time about 330 submarines of the size of the U-53 which came to Newport last year. The 800-ton submarine requires about 36 feet of clear width in order to allow a working space around the hull, and its length is something under 250 feet. Each of the three 625-foot drydocks at Wilhelmshaven, for instance, would permit of the construction of six submarines on its floor, and eight boats could be constructed in each of the larger docks, 832 feet in length. Also the floating docks, of which the Germans have so many, would form excellent building ways. The smaller drydocks, 500 feet or less in length, and the floating docks would take two, three, or four submarines, as the case might be. Moreover, ways suitable for submarine construction can be built rapidly on foreshore or river-bank, and the actual shipping and dockyard capacity, so far as building ways is concerned, could quickly be doubled. If the Germans thought fit, they could have a thousand submarines under construction at the same time. . .

"The Central Powers may have two hundred submarines afloat (and we think it is possible that they have many more than that), and if, as is more than likely, they have some five hundred on the ways at the present time, this would mean that in six months they would have seven hundred U-boats available, and twelve hundred by next spring.

"But the crews? The German naval personnel numbers over 150,000 men. Her idle battleships can supply all the men required to man the submarines as they are successively set afloat.

"Here, as we see it, is the immediate danger-point in this great conflict. It is here that the United States should apply, and should at once apply, their whole effort."

A Kissless People.

The Maori women of New Zealand know nothing about kissing. Nose-rubbing is their form of salutation, and when two friends meet they hold each other by the hands, bend their heads until their noses touch, and then rub them gently from side to side. This form of greeting is not confined to the women, but is practised by the men; they seldom meet without rubbing noses. In times of lamentation the Maori women will sit for hours with their noses touching, and moan for the loss of some chief whom they have in all probability never seen.

On a Desert Island.

What could the reader do if he should be cast away on an uninhabited island with only a pocket-knife in his clothes? An English missionary who met this fate gave his answer to the question in Charles Dickens' "Household Words," and it is reprinted in "Castaways and Crusoes," recently published. He opened oysters with his knife, for food; made fire with two sticks by friction, made a fish-hook from a shark's bones; got salt by evaporation; found a substitute for tobacco; devised a trap to catch wild pigeons; made pottery; built a house, and won the approval of the natives who finally rescued him as "a good Maori" for his ingenuity. Unlike Robinson Crusoe, however, he failed to capture either parrots or goats to relieve his loneliness.

Sunday Sermon For Those Who Do Not Go To Church

(By JAMES SUTHERLAND)

Acts 2, Chap. 4th Verse. And they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and began to speak with other tongues as the Spirit gave them utterance.

Jesus after His resurrection had, through the Holy Ghost, given commandment to his disciples, that they should not depart from Jerusalem, but wait for the promise of the Father, saying that they should receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you, and ye shall be witnesses unto me in Jerusalem, Judea Samaria and unto the uttermost part of the earth. When He make this promise they were with him on the Mount of Olives, they were with him for the last time and while they looked steadfastly toward Heaven as he went up, a cloud received him out of their sight, then they returned to Jerusalem, and went up into an upper room, the disciples the women, and Mary the Mother of Jesus, and the brethren, in all about 120 persons. These all continued in prayer and supplication, all being of one mind and one accord, this prayer meeting continued for nine days, till the day of Pentecost, their great festival. Pilgrims had come from all quarters of the world to celebrate this great feast. The city was crowded with visitors from every nation, while there was general rejoicing on every hand, this little band of faithful ones continued in prayer and supplication, all of one mind, all of one accord, all in one place. It was the first day of the week, which was by confirmation of it to be the Christian Sabbath; the day which the Lord had made to be a standing memorial in his church of the two great blessings, the resurrection of Christ and the pouring out of the Spirit, both on that day of the week. We should take note of these two great events in our praises and in our prayers. It was a wonderful sight to see the unity and love that now existed among the disciples. We cannot forget how often while their Master was with them, there were strifes among them which should be the greatest; but now all these strifes were at an end what they had received already of the Holy Ghost when Christ breathed on them had disposed them to holy love. They had prayed more together of late. If we would have the spirit poured out upon us from on high, let us all be of one mind and one accord, let us agree to love one another, for where brethren dwell together in unity, there the Lord commands his blessing. When a company of believers are of one heart to seek and hope for the pouring out of the Holy Spirit, a revival of true religion may be expected, for the promise stands sure that these gifts shall be imparted to those who pray for them. An audible summons was given them to awaken their expectations. It was a rushing mighty wind, it came with great force. This was to signify the powerful influence and operations of the spirit of God upon the minds of men, and thereby upon the world, that they should be mighty through God to the casting down of the strong holds of sin. It would awe the disciples and put them into a reverent frame of mind, for the receiving of the Holy Ghost. Thus the convictions of the Spirit make way for his comforts, and the rough blasts of the blessed wind prepare the soul for the soft and gentle gales. Here is a visible sign of the gift they were to receive. There was an appearance of something like flaming fire lighting on every one of them, which formed the resemblance of tongues, with part of them divided, thus there was an outward sensible sign, for confirming the faith of the disciples and convincing others. The sign given was fire, according to John Baptists, saying concerning Christ. He shall baptise you with the Holy Ghost and with fire. They were now in the feast of Pentecost, celebrating the giving of the law upon mount Sinai, and that was given in fire. The spirit like fire melts the heart, separates and burns up the dross and kindles pious affections in the soul, in which as in the fire of the altar, the spiritual sacrifices are offered up. The fire appeared in cloven tongues; the operations of the Spirit were many; that of speaking with divers' tongues was one and was singled out to be the first indication of the gift of the Holy Ghost, to that this sign had reference. They were all filled with the Holy Ghost more powerfully than before, they were filled with the graces of the spirit, more than ever under his sanctifying influences, more weaned from this world, and better acquainted with the other. They were more filled with the comforts of the Spirit, rejoiced more than ever in the love of Christ and the hope of Heaven; in it all their griefs and fears were swallowed up. They were also for the proof of this, filled with the gifts of the Holy Ghost, which is especially meant here. They were endued with miraculous powers for the furtherance of the Gospel. They began to speak with other tongues, beside their native language, though they had never learned any other. They spoke not from previous thought of meditation, but as the Spirit gave them utterance. This was a very great miracle; a gospel miracle—for in the mind words are framed. They were commissioned to preach the gospel to every creature—to disciple all nations, but how could they obey the command without the knowledge of the various languages? Therefore to prove that Christ could give authority to preach to the nations he gives ability to preach in their respective languages. At that time there were great numbers of Jews and proselytes in Jerusalem who had come up to celebrate the feast, and when these extraordinary events were rumored abroad, the multitudes came together to the place and were astonished to hear themselves addressed in their own language, by means of common education and employment, natives of Galilee, who could only be expected to speak in their own tongues. They also remarked that they spake of the wonderful work of God, even of those great things which related to the Gospel of Salvation, the strangers who understood the languages were fully satisfied of the truth of the miracle, but the inhabitants of Judea, being prejudiced against the disciples of Jesus, decided that they were drunken. The diversity of languages introduced at Babel has always been a great hinderance to the diffusion of useful knowledge and true religion, the instruments which the Lord saw fit to use in propagating the Christian religion could have made no progress without this gift, which was a proof of their authority from God, and though we expect not such miraculous powers as were communicated to the Apostles on the day of Pentecost, yet the pouring out of the Spirit, in his ordinary influence and operations will always produce a measure of the same effects as this extraordinary communication did. Some will be astonished at the change made in persons, before known to be ignorant or careless; others will treat it as delusion of hypocrisy. Peter's address is recorded for our instruction, his sermon is evidence that he was thoroughly recovered from his fall, and restored to the Divine favour, he who had denied Christ, now boldly confesses him. He spake with boldness, so as to silence the mixed conversation and fix the attention of the people. He observed that the imputation of drunkenness must be totally groundless, on account of the time of the day, nine o'clock in the morning. The effects that they witnessed were the fulfilment of the prophecy of Joel, concerning the pouring out of the spirit, in the last days those of the Messiah, which was now begun to be accomplished. His account of the miraculous diffusion of the Spirit is designed to awaken his hearers to embrace faith in Christ and to join themselves to his church. Two things he resolves it into—that it was the fulfilling of Scripture, and the fruit of Christ's resurrection and ascension, consequently proof of both. Though Peter was filled with the Holy Ghost and spake with tongues as the Spirit gave him utterance, yet he did not set aside the Scriptures, nor think himself above them, much of his discourse is quotation out of the Old Testament, to which he appeals and with that he proves what he says:—Christ's scholars never learn above their Bible, and all that practice its teachings shall be saved.

Yours sincerely,
JAMES SUTHERLAND.

GUARD BABY'S HEALTH IN THE SUMMER

The summer months are the most dangerous to children. The complaints of that season, which are cholera infantum, colic, diarrhoea and dysentry, come on so quickly that often a little one is beyond aid before the mother realises he is ill. The mother must be on her guard to prevent these troubles, or if they do come on suddenly to cure them. No other medicine is of such aid to mothers during hot weather as is Baby's Own Tablets. They regulate the stomach and bowels and are absolutely safe. Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Portugal in the War.

A recent interview with the Portuguese Minister of Foreign Affairs reveals the fact that a large detachment of the soldiers of Portugal are serving with the Entente Allies in France. Senhor Soares spoke frankly and feelingly to The Associated Press correspondent in regard to the part his country is taking in the war and the trend of Portuguese sentiment toward England and France before the declaration of war by Germany. He leaves the impression that Portugal would not have declared war, on its part, but would have maintained the attitude it took in the seizure of German ships in its harbors, if Germany had not chosen to force belligerency upon it; but he shows that his country entered the conflict with a will to do its share bravely, and has been doing more, thus far, than the rest of the world has taken note of.

Besides its relatively large contingent of troops in France, it has an army in East Africa which, in cooperation with the English and Belgian forces, has practically occupied all of the German territory there. Conquest was not the purpose of the Portuguese Government; traditional friendship with England and the natural sympathy of a Latin country with Italy and France led her to antagonize the Teuton plan of world control. She was ill-equipped for war. But, although her republican form of government is yet in its very infancy, she has been strengthened and uplifted by her new sense of duty to her ideals. In fact, in the world war the Republic of Portugal has found herself. The martial spirit aroused in a just cause develops nations as it develops men.

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" Brought The Joy Of Health After Two Years' Suffering

MADAM LAPLANTE

35 St. Rose St., Montreal, April 4th.

"For over two years I was sick and miserable. I suffered from constant Headaches, and had Palpitation of the Heart so badly that I feared I would die. There seemed to be a lump in my stomach and the Constipation was dreadful. I suffered from Pain in the Back and Kidney Disease.

I was treated by a physician for a year and a half and he did me no good at all. I tried "Fruit-a-tives" as a last resort. After using three boxes, I was greatly improved and twelve boxes made me well. Now I can work all day and there are no Headaches, no Palpitation, no Heart Trouble, no Constipation, no Pain or Kidney Trouble and I feel like a new being—and it was "Fruit-a-tives" that gave me back my health".

The Disappearing Desert.

At the present time there are many young Australians who are reaping good crops from areas which were marked on the maps as "deserts" when these young fellows went to school in Australia; in fact, some of the most prosperous districts were not long ago shown on the school maps as "deserts" or uninhabited spaces, but, as settlement has pushed on, and the land-seeker has had to go farther for his selection, these blanks have been filled with prosperous settlements. Thriving towns are growing here and there, and, instead of being shown "deserts," the school children in Australia are being taught the names of these agricultural towns. The same thing applies to Australia as a whole. Maps get out of date rapidly on account of the changes being effected throughout the country. Active railway construction policies are assisting the settler, and before many years have passed spaces now uninhabited—though being almost inaccessible—will be shown as scenes of activity and prosperity.

Had Lots of Fun.

An ardent uplift worker sat in the midst of the McNamara family, expostulating with them in a pained voice, says Harper's. "You should provide some kind of wholesome amusement for your family," said the philanthropist, sternly, to the abashed McNamara. "You should do something to lighten the burden of toil. Every life needs a little sunshine in it." "Oh, missus," chimed up one of the girls, "we has lots of fun. There's always a fight or somethin' entertainin' goin' on in the tenement. Why only last week a gentleman stabbed a woman, then shot her and dragged her past our door."

School Children's Essays.

In Wigtownshire recently the children attending a certain school were requested to write essays based on a lecture on "Health and Alcohol," which they had heard. One pupil wrote, "When we breathe through our mouth the germans go into our mouth, and then into our inside and effect the stomach, and we feel not well." Another scholar wrote: "Alcohol is the greatest enemy of mankind, while, if you form the habit of taking it, there is only one way in which you can be cured, and that is death alone." A third scholar's contribution was—"When men drink alcohol they get into a terrible mystery."

An Old Bank Note.

The longest time during which a note has remained outside the Bank of England is one hundred and eleven years. It was one of twenty-five pounds, and it is computed that the compound interest during that long period amounted to no less than six thousand pounds.

Laugh When People Step On Your Feet

Try this yourself then pass it along to others. It works!

Ouch! ! ! ! ! ! This kind of rough talk will be heard less here in town if people troubled with corns will follow and simple advice of this Cincinnati authority, who claims that a few drops of a drug called freezone when applied to a tender, aching corn stops the soreness at once and soon the corn dries up and lifts right out without pain.

He says freezone is an ether compound which dries immediately and never inflames or even irritates the surrounding tissue or skin. A quarter of an ounce of freezone will cost very little at any drug store but is sufficient to remove every hard or soft corn or callus from one's feet. Millions of American women will welcome the announcement since the inauguration of the high heels.

A "White Australia."

When the war began, Andrew Fisher was Prime Minister of the Commonwealth of Australia. With his declaration that his country stood with Britain "to the last man and the last shilling," Australia started her career as a Pacific ocean power. And Australia is bigger in territory than Continental United States, although her population is less than that of Greater New York. She now has 300,000 men under arms. Her efficient young navy already has rendered signal service.

Before the war, the Commonwealth firmly and passionately stood by a great national policy—"White Australia!" Australians of all classes and political affiliations regard that policy much as Americans regard the Constitution. It is their most articulate article of faith. The reason is not far to seek. The Commonwealth is the most sparsely populated of all the civilized countries of earth; it has about one-and-a-half persons to every square mile. And the Commonwealth has windows looking out upon Asia with its teeming millions, for whom some outlet would seem an imperative and immediate necessity. China (and dependencies) has, on the average, 92 persons to the square mile, Japan (and dependencies) over 273. Or, take it another way: Australia has 5,000,000 people; China, 320,650,000; Japan, 71,921,775. "White Australia" was all that hindered Asiatics from swarming all over the island continent in overwhelming numbers. If the integrity of the country were to be preserved, if the land were to be kept for the unrestricted development of an English-speaking, white democracy, Hindus, Chinese and Japanese had to be excluded.

A Polish Astronomer.

Koppernigk was a noted Polish astronomer, who is known by the Latinized form of his name, Copernicus. He was born in Thorn, Prussia, in 1473. After years of mathematical and astronomical study and investigation he began in 1507 his famous "De Revolutionibus Orbium Caelestium," which he completed in six books in 1530. He hesitated about publishing the work because of religious scruples when friends said its deductions were at variance with the Scriptures. When he finally published it in Nuremberg in 1543 he dedicated it to Pope Paul III. History says that Copernicus died a few hours after he saw the first copy. This work describes at length what is now known as the Copernican System, the foundation of which is the theory that the sun is in relation to the planets at rest with the planets revolving about it. He was not the first to advance this theory, but was the first to contribute such a learned and elaborate dissertation upon the physical features of the universe.

The farmer and the gardener this year, and probably for years to come, are soldiers enlisted for vital war-time service. So are the birds. They are the agriculturist's invaluable allies. Wherever they have been killed or driven off a farming region it has been proved past question how greatly he depends upon their presence.

As controllers of weeds and destroyers of noxious insects and vermin, they are worth more times over than could be computed all the patent weeders and the insect preventives in use on all our lands.

Our photographer has succeeded in getting an interesting group of photographs of some of the kinds of birds particularly valuable.

The Red Headed Woodpecker destroys an incredible number of ants and plant lice. The Quail or Bob White is a great destroyer of insects of all kinds. The Virginia Eared Owl and the well-known Screech Owl live principally on mice and vermin. The Sparrow Hawk, Catbird, Meadow Lark, Robin and Crow are valuable allies. The Turkey Vulture shown here is a species now almost extinct in Ontario. It lives mostly on dead fish and refuse. The Red Shouldered Hawk and the Cedar Waxwing are well known to every one.

It is altogether safe to say that when taking stock of our resources our birds deserve a place in the foremost rank.

LONDON AGAIN ATTACKED BY THE ENEMY AIRCRAFT

Approached Metropolis From the North-west and Crossing the City Dropped Bombs at Various Places---No Reports of Damages or Casualties Announced in the Early Despatches---German Chancellor to Make Announcement.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

LONDON, July 7.—A fleet of "probably twenty aeroplanes" raided London to-day. Lord French made this preliminary announcement this morning. At 9.30 hostile aircraft in considerable numbers and in two parties, were sighted off the Isle of Thanet and the east coast of Essex.

"The enemy aircraft approached London from the Northeast, and proceed north and west," Lord French stated. They crossed London from the northwest to the southeast, dropping bombs at various places. The enemy aeroplanes were attacked by anti-aircraft guns. No reports of damage or casualties were announced in Lord French's first statement of the raid.

LONDON, July 7.—The largest number of German airplanes that have ever raided London dropped bombs over the city to-day. Twenty machines were seen. The damage and the casualties from the bombs has not yet been announced, but judging from the general alacrity with which Londoners sought their cellars, the losses will probably be reduced over previous ones.

Apparently profiting by their poor aim in previous raids due to the great height at which the bombs were released, to-day's German air pirates flew very low. They were plainly seen from the street. This was in direct contrast to the great raid of June 13th when the sixteen German raiders flew at such a great height that they were practically invisible. The curiosity of Londoners heretofore responsible for many deaths because of the rush to the streets, to gaze at the invaders, has now worn off. It was noticeable that as soon as the sound of the anti-air craft guns engaging the raiders was heard, most of the populace hurried into their cellars. The peppering of the guns firing at the Germans, gave ample warning.

Late this afternon (Saturday) it is still impossible to give definite details of the casualties. The reports indicate the the Germans reached the heart of the Metropolis and for a quarter of an hour rained down bombs on the crowded streets. The invaders were hotly engaged by both the Royal Flying Corps and the Royal Naval Air Service at tremendous heights. It is expected that several enemy machines were brought to earth. This is the first raid since the big one of June 13th.

On that date 16 German aeroplanes killed 157 persons and injured 432. The largest casualty list of any such raid since the start of the war. There have been other raids since that time over Essex and other coast counties but none of the aerial visitors reached London.

Thousansd of persons crowded the streets, many of them women and children, and the police and soldiers had difficulty in holding back the people. Many persons were seen at windows. The anti-aircraft guns throughout the city and the British airplanes immediately engaged the hostile craft and for a time the sound of exploding bombs and the vicious reply of the guns, was deafening. Straight over the city flew the squadrons of raiders pursued by bursting shrapnel. The sun was shining brightly but the sky was overcast with a haze. Notwithstanding the haze the Germans were plainly visible to the people in the streets. The raiders appeared most suddenly and few persons realized that a raid was in progress until the sound of bombs began to be heard. The Germans travelled at tremendous speed. After they had gone the streets were littered with glass from broken windows. The people in the capital are urging that a quick reprisal be taken.

From some portions of London the German raiders and their operations were discernable for half an hour. As they crossed the suburbs of London they suddenly tobogganed with a fierce sweep still in close formation, till they seemed to be within a thousand yards of the surface. The anti-aircraft guns were working swiftly and formed a veritable curtain of fire on all sides of the invading machines, but they continued to hold their course and did not commence to discharge their cargo of deadly explosives till they had reached the densest part of the city. Up to this hour (5 p.m. London time) there is still no official report of the casualties.

AMSTERADAM, July 7.—German Imperial Chancellor Von Bethmann Hollwegg is to announce German's adherence to the principle of "No annexations and no indemnities" in a speech at the Reichstag to-day, according to reports received here. Germany, it was indicated, looks to the speech as affording immediate opportunity for the opening of peace negotiations. The term "Peace without annexations and without indemnities," was agitated in connection with the German efforts to call a "Social peace conference," at Stockholm.

Canadian Headquarters in France (via London) July 6.—Fosse 5, the pithead which overlooked our outposts in Avion, disappeared yesterday in a cloud of dust and fire. It had been for some time a mark for our heavy artillery but whether the destruction was caused by our shells or by the Germans themselves is not known. If they anticipated a further advance of our men they may have blown up the mining works themselves, for it is their policy to leave behind them nothing that would aid in the speedy resumption of mining operations in this important coal area.

Much evidence of the lowering of German morale continues to be discovered in captured trenches and raided houses. A remarkable letter was found recently, which had been written to a Bavarian at the front three weeks ago. The letter said in part:

"One can well understand that you are sick of this horrible business. I believe that the climax has been reached, for now one hears nothing but complaints. The German Social-Democrats have announc-

DYNAMITE STICKS DUMPED IN RIVER BY A DELIVERYMAN

Was Told to Dispose of Them Because They Had Become Mouldy —Were Probably Harmless

C. P. R. WAS AROUSED

Chief Thompson's investigation of the antecedents of the twenty-seven sticks of dynamite, found a few days ago north of the C.P.R. bridge, disclosed an incident that borders on burlesque and yet is not without a serious aspect. A leaking roof at the dynamite storehouse close to the river in Monaghan was the first innocent agent in this serio-comic affair. Mr. R. Kingan, of the Kingan Hardware Company, discovered that some of the dynamite had become mouldy, and ordered a delivery employee to dispose of the sticks, which were regarded as damaged beyeond further value. The driver gathered up the sticks some time ago and drove down Dalhousie street to the river, where he threw them in the shallow water near the shore.

For several reasons this was scarcely a prudent diaposal. The sticks could be seen and retaken from the water, or a launch or canoe landing at that point might have grounded on them with results that were not within the delivery man's expectations. Again, the fact that they were found near the bridge quickly reached the ears of the C.P.R. officials in both the Montreal and Toronto terminals.

A special detective arrived from Montreal this morning, and the Havelock men have been working on the case for several days. Thus, the reported presence of dynamite near the Peterborough bridge gave rise to considerable uneasiness in the C.P.R. departments.

Even when the finding was reported in the Examiner, the delivery man made no move, supposing he was aware of the report, to inform the police of the simple circumstances which were finally revealed when Chief Thompson sent his men to interview the hardware dealers this morning.

RABIES MAY BE IN THE COMMUNITY FOR YEARS

"All dog lovers and others who wish to see the quarantine on dogs raised, had better assist in every way to stamp out what may continue for years if rabies becomes established in the community. All animals are susceptible to rabies, and when live stock, dogs, cats, rats and mice commence to spread the disease, we will then have it with us for all time."—Dr. C. H. Amys, Medical Officer of Health.

PTE. HERB. NICHOLLS OF 93rd BATTALION DEAD FROM WOUNDS

Peterboro' Boy Makes Supreme Sacrifice in France--Two Other Peterborough Soldiers Are Wounded---Capt. Gordon Campbell Home--To-day's General Military News

DIED OF WOUNDS.

Pte. Herb. Nicholls, late of 93rd Battalion, 272 Charlotte street, Peterborough.

WOUNDED.

Pte. Joseph Hobbins, Canadian Infantry, Queen street, Peterborough.

Pte. William Edward Fair, Canadian Infantry, Peterborough.

PTE. HERB. NICHOLLS.

Mrs. Maud Nicholls, 272 Charlotte street, has received official word from Ottawa that her son, Pte. Herbert Nicholls, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, is officially reported died of wounds in No. 7 Casualty Clearing Station on June 30th. Pte. Nicholls was reported dangerously wounded several days ago. To-day's message stated his injuries, which consisted of gunshot wounds in the hand, side and head. He went overseas with the 93rd Battalion and was transferred to another unit at the front.

PTE. JOS. HOBBINS.

Mr. Dennis Hobbins, Queen street, received official word from Ottawa that Pte. Jos. Hobbins, Canadian Infantry, is officially reported wounded on June 28th. Pte. Hobbins enlisted outside of the city.

PTE. W. E. FAIR.

Mrs. Margaret Fair, Peterborough, was notified from Ottawa to-day that Pte. Wm. Edward Fair, Canadian Infantry, is officially reported admitted to No. 4 General Hospital, Camieres, on June 28th, suffering from gunshot wounds which are described as multiple and severe.

Captain Gordon ("Pete") Campbell, arrived home on furlough from overseas yesterday and is visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Campbell. He is being given a warm welcome home by his numerous friends. Captain Campbell went overseas with the first Canadian Division as a subaltern with the 15th Battalion (48th Highlanders) and has seen long service at the front.

The old Board of officers and committeemen of the Peterboro branch of the Great War Veterans' Association are asked to have their photographs taken as early as possible next week at the Roy Studio. Members will make their own arrangements, as the photographs will be individual ones.

Will the persons who had the Great War Veterans' flags on Monday, please return them to the Barrie building as soon as possible as they are needed?

Mrs. G. L. Stevens has received a cable from her son, Flight-Lieutenant Leslie Stevnes of the Royal Naval Air Service, that he is sailing for Canada on furlough. Lieut. Stevens has been in some of the hottest air fighting in France in the past few months and recently shot down the commander of a German air squadron.

The following letter was received from Sergt. D. F. Byers, by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Byers, Baliieboro. Sergt. Byers enlisted with the 139th Battalion of Northumberland, and gave up his stripes to get to France. Since then he has won them back.

Somewhere in France,
June 7th, 1917.

My Dearest Mother, Father and Cleve,—Just received four letters and a package of papers from you.

We have been parading all day, at least the troops have. My ankle is almost O.K., but needs a few days more rest.

Could you imagine my surprise on receiving a parcel of socks from Garden Hill Club. Harold Little sent them over, so you see I am kept well supplied with such necessities.

You asked me if I had received my wrist watch. Yes, why yes! I wrote back immediately to let you know, but it must have strayed from the long and narrow path. Ha! Ha! Don't feel at all nervous if you fail to receive a letter, except every two or three weeks, because only one ship leaves per month with mail. Also we expect to take over the line shortly and that will make writing more difficult.

The climatic conditions have varied and we are now enjoying an occasional shower of rain. Thus the hot dusty days are surpla nted by cool, clear ones.

Major Snider is out in France second in command of a battalion (have not found his address yet). Cairns Snider, his son, is adjutant of the same battalion, so they will be together through the campaign. All or nearly all the old battalion are with the Fourth Canadians, and were over the other evening to see me. We had a fine talk over old times. Conscription at last! Almost time! When the news came in about it, every one let out a cheer. If the boys in Canada only knew what they were thought of out here, I believe they would have enlisted months ago. Also the report that all deserters or rather refugees, who beat it to the United States were being rounded up, was received with even greater pleasure. Enough talk on war! but what about Hill 60? Fritz is out of luck on this front.

Kind remembrances to everybody in dear old Bailieboro.

From your loving son,

Fergus.

Recruits wanted for the C.A.M.C., Kingston. Splendid opportunity for promotion and training in First Aid, and Hospital Work. Apply for further information before conscription arrives to Sergt. Major W. Hughes, C.A.M.C., Barrifield Camp, Kingston.

British Make Gains On Belgian Front

PTE. HERB. NICHOLL
Formerly of the 93rd Battalion, who is officially reported died of wounds.

Field Marshal Haig Reports Drive by British Which Gained Ground East of Wytschaete in Same Sector as Thursday's Gain.

NOTHING FROM LENS

LONDON, July 7. — Field Marshall Haig struck to-day east of Wytschaete, advancing the line slightly according to his formal report to the War Office.

On Thursday Haig reported a drive by the British which had gained them additional ground around Hollebeke. To-day's report is of another push forward in practically the same region, probably around Oostaverne. Both cities lie in the sharp angle formed by the River Lys and the canal from Ypres to Lille. Two waterways converge at Comines. For several days now Haig has not mentioned any fighting around Lens, confining his reports to the Belgian front.

RBITISH BRING DOWN THREE OF THE AIR RAIDERS

Met Baby-Killers' Squadron Forty Miles From the East Coast and Sent Three of Them Down, Two Falling Into the Sea

BRITISH MACHINES SAFE

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, July 7.— Three German aeroplanes which participated in the raid on London, were brought down by British machines as they were returning to their base, the Admiralty announced this afternoon. "Enemy aeroplanes returning from the raid were met forty miles off the east coast," Admiralty statement said. Two crashed into the seas and a third fell flaming into the Scheldt. Our machines returned safely.

CASUALTIES WERE 178

37 Were Killed in To-day's Raid on London

LONDON, July 7. — Thirty-seven men, women and children were killed and 141 wounded, when the fleet of twenty German aeroplanes bombarded London early to-day, General French officially announced the casualties this afternoon. Of the dead 28 were men, six were women and three children. The injured included 74 men, 38 women and 37 children. The Admiralty announced that three of the German air raiders were brought down over the North Sea, and Lord French announced the declaration of another which was brought down at the mouth of the Thames river.

Four Are Killed In Collision

Special to The Examiner:

SAULT STE. MARIE, Mich., July 7.—Mrs. John R. Stover and her daughter, and Mrs. W. K. Brooks and daughter, all of Blind River, Ontario, are dead here to-day, and Ralph Glynn, a well known lumber man, is at the point of death as a result of their automobile being struck by a Canadian Pacific passenger train.

The Veterans' Moonlight A Big Success

The moonlight excursion, under the auspices of the Peterborough branch of the Great War Veterans' Association last night was an unqualified success and the crowd which turned out was so large that the steamer Geneva could not accommodate all who wished to attend. Many people who had bought tickets were unable to get on board the steamer, and for their benefit and also for the benefit of those who could not get tickets last night, the War Veterans are holding another moonlight in the near future. Tickets not used last night will be honoured on this occasion, and the prospects are bright for another big attendance. A section of the Salvation Army Band voluntarily gave their services to the War Veterans last night and gave a programme of patriotic airs and other selections.

The War Veterans' Association wish to express their appreciation of the action of the musicians.

Apsley Woman Is Fined $200 For Keeping Liquor

A woman living in the Village of Apsley, in the northern part of the county, was fined $200 and costs by Magistrate O. A. Langley in the county police court this morning for keeping liquor for sale. The complaint was laid by License Inspector Stewart. Mr. G. N. Gordon appeared for the defendant, and Crown Attorney Hatton for the prosecution. The woman pleaded guilty.

Expects Fair Crop In Saskatchewan

Special to The Examiner:

REGINA, Sask., July 7. —Hon. W. R. Motherwell, Minister of Agriculture for Saskatchewan, stated yesterday that, despite reports of damage to the crop in some districts of the province, he looked for a crop of equal or even better volume than that of last year, providing really favourable weather conditions pervails between now and harvest.

SATURDAY, JULY 7, 1917.

THE BITER BIT.

On the head of its submarine warfare, Germany is pinching its own stomach. It has sunk tons of food stuffs, and this destruction of the food supply has led the United States, one of the chief sources of food material, to forbid the supply of food grain to neutral countries, through which it might filter into Germany. Thus the Teuton supply is largely cut off, thanks to its own diabolic success, in destroying food by her submarine activity. If Germany has to tighten the belt, and her own domestic supply of food is be depleted that every little source of supply cut off counts, she has herself greatly to blame.

The submarine policy of destruction of Germany, is failing, and will be another addition to the failures that have come to all the plans, plots and intrigues of the Hohensollern Hun since the war began. Germany's policy of frightfulness has alienated nearly the whole world and contributed to not only the failure of her own sub-sea enterprise to starve Britain, but has contributed largely to starve herself.

When Yankee meets junker, then comes the tug of war.

CANADA'S PRODUCTIVE CAPACITY.

Canada is essentially an agricultural country, and its progress in production has been great in that department as in others. At confederation the total field products of Canada amounted to 196 million bushels. In 1915, the latest date of complete returns, the field crops of Canada totalled 1180 million bushels—a more than twenty-five-fold increase—doubled amount every two years. While this increase is, in some ways gratifying, it is by no means the measure of Canada's productive ability. We are not much nearer reaching our limit of capacity in production, than we were fifty years ago. We have just touched the fringes. In the next half century we shall very probably increase production in a far greater ratio than in the past. In that event, the total of the field crops of Canada, in 1967, will probably be, instead of 1100-odd million bushels, nearer like 30,000 million bushels, that is with a 25-fold increase in the fifty years. Our land doesn't produce one-tenth of what it might produce. Canada is "land poor." We have so much in proportion to our population and the individual area of tillage is so great that its result is small; its cultivation is not intensive enough. There is one little garden plot in this city, on Charlotte street, the hobby of a lady, of less than 500 square feet that will yield a rate per acre a hundred times greater than any of the average farm acres of the country. In our farming operations generally, we have not yet learned the truth of the saying, that what's worth doing is worth doing well, but, perhaps an explanation consists in the scarcity of the labour that makes close cultivation possible, compared with the great acreage per man.

Canada's export of wheat was eighty times greater in 1916 than it was in 1867.

HAVE PITY ON PRISONERS AND CAPTIVES.

There is little hope that the pending congress at the Hague between British and German representatives, will result in any amelioration of the treatment of Canadian and other prisoners in Germany, or tend to make unnecessary, or less urgent, the need of help to the prisoners of war there. The leopard cannot change his spots; and it will take more than a conference to make the Teuton human.

Our praying in church every Sunday, for the Lord's mercy "on all prisoners and captives," shows that we appreciate the calamity of being a prisoner under the best conditions; but being a prisoner in the hands of the Prussian Philistines, is something to shudder at—ill-treatment and semi-starvation—without the help of their friends at home. We who sit three times a day at well-filled tables, and come and go at will, must feel pity for our friends and brothers starving in German prison dens, and feel compelled to do our bit that they may have their bite.

The opportunity to do this bit is to be presented on Saturday, July 14th, when the Peterborough Red Cross will hold a tag day in the interests of the French Red Cross and the Peterborough prisoners of war. The prisoners' fund appeal comes home to us of its own weight, and the appeal of the French Red Cross of London. The French and the British are fighting side by side in the same great cause—fighting for us and our dearest liberties. One in cause, one in conflict, one in suffering, the entente is complete, or will be made completer, by our helping.

In this tag day a chance is offered for us all to do our bit, from the highest up to the humblest. Between this time and July 14th, we can all forego some luxury or pleasure, and give its equivalent to the Red Cross fund. Six parcels of food are sent every month to Peterborough prisoners of war in Germany. We can picture the joy with which they are received, but cannot appreciate the disappointment if they fail to arrive. Let us think of this when we rise from our bountiful meal in the morning, and come out for the work of the day, next Saturday. These prisoners without our help, cannot get a bountiful meal, and can't get out.

The tag day of the Red Cross for the French Red Cross and the Prisoners of War is warmly commended to the public of Peterborough

REASONS FOR A FINISH FIGHT

Knowledge and science, as it is usually interpreted, are supposed to be accompanied by or tend to moral and esthetic refinement. But it appears that the cult of militarism, the doctrine of force, inherent in and taught by the German militarism, is a corrupting and brutalising influence. A United States consulting engineer, just returned from France, tells a grusome tale, which for the re dotiforeryeevrfi—2- credit of humanity it is hoped could be disproved. The engineer, a Mr. Cole, declares of his own knowledge that German physicians have prostituted their scientific knowledge to the cultivation of colonies of deadly and loathsome diseases. With these they have forcibly inoculated by hypodermic injection French men, women and children. The people thus loaded with the germs of disease were turned loose to spread these diseases amongst the wretched remnant of the population. This monstrous charge has been investigated by responsible physicians. They have examined the victims and have been told from their own mouths the details of the treatment they received under the rule of the Hun. There is not only the proof of the existence of these diseases, and the word—the dying declaration—of the victims, but there is the evidence of probabilities. Any nation that can sanction and practice the murder of women and children by Zeppelin-thrown bombs, in pure deviltry and lust of destruction; that can poison wells, drop poisoned sweets in villages, and resort to every form of brutal outrage, are capable of such an act as destroying life by the injection of disease germs.

This Prussian display of savagery illustrates several things. It shows the difference between the morality of a Christian people, and the bestial immorality of Prussianism. Great Britain has been urged to make reprisals and drop bombs among the defenceless residents of German cities. Of course neither Britain nor France could for a moment entertain such proposals. Reprisal would be stultification—a denial of the ideals of humanity and human well-being, for which this tremendous war is being fought. This new evidence of Prussian frightfulness shows that there can be no peace while the head and front of it has the power to give it effect. The war must go on till Prussian militarism and all its works are utterly destroyed or made powerless. It also demonstrates that there is to be no rest for us till our share in the war has contributed to the accomplishment of this result. We must fight with men and money and munitions, food production, food saving, and every form of sacrifice, the situation demands. The conscription measure that has been enacted is only one form of sacrifice we must make. All our resources are called upon, and we must meet the call if we would avert the penalty that would come upon us and the world by the impossible and intolerable fact of the triumphs of Prussianism.

With the passage of the bill to conscript the manhood of the nation, rush a bill through to conscript the money of the classes.

SUFFERINGS OF THE SERBIANS EMPHASIZE THE NEED FOR RELIEF

The sufferings of the people of Serbia at the hands of the ruthless invaders are untellable. Some idea of some phases of the work of driving the people out of their devastated homes are described in the circular issued by the Serbian Relief Fund committee:

"The survivors were few, compared with the numbers who fled. The hardships were terrible, and the enemy was at their heels, showing no mercy. As many as 68,000 women and children are said to have been killed by the enemies, in the retreat.

But the journey killed more. Records of it are terrible to read. It was a march of 250 miles; the last part over mountains, 7,000 feet high. Trains helped some for part of the way. Many had their ox-carts; but the oxen, starved and frozen, lay down and died, so that few vehicles got through to the mountains; and for the journey over the mountains there were only pony trails. Most of the people tramped all the way, in the rain, cold and snow, without shelter, without sufficient food, for long periods with no food at all. By the time they reached the Albanian mountains many were already exhausted; and few survived the journey across them. It is estimated that 750,000 persons joined in the flight; only 80,000 reached the places of refuge. The remainder perished on the way. In the icy cold of the mountains, babies were the first victims. When the baby in the mother's arms died, it was hastily buried by her companions in the mud and snow, and she took the next youngest and trudged on. Old people fell dead as they walked, or sat down beside the roadside to die, and were left. Of the men, 140,000 are said to have died in the mountains.

The most pathetic case is of the boys, the soldiers of to-morrow, whom the invaders were particularly anxious to get hold of. These boys, from 8 to 14 years old, were, by order of the Government, collected from the villages by the Serbian soldiers as they retreated, and accompanied the army, in bands of 300, 400 and 500, over the passes out of Serbia. They would start from their homes in high glee, some having rifles given them and as much ammunition as they could carry, with which for the first day they fired at every bird in sight. But they soon tired and had to be driven along, with whips even, and in tears. At the Serbian frontier they parted from their guides, and seem to have gone over the mountains alone, eating roots and bark and rotting fruit, huddling together in the snow to sleep, decreasing in numbers each day, until of 63,000 who were, according to the last estimate, taken from their homes, but 13,000 reached the sea. Fifty thousand boys died on the way, chiefly in the mountains of Albania. Those who reached Avlona, on the Adriatic Coast, "had nothing human left of them but their eyes." They were covered with vermin and full of contagious diseases, and there was no hospital to receive them. They were placed on a small island, now called the Island of the Dead. There they died at the rate of over 100 a day, until but 7,500 were left, who were in time nursed back to health, and are now at school in France, Switzerland and Great Britain."

EFFICIENCY "MADE IN GERMANY."

Prussian "efficiency," which has left unaccomplished so many military, industrial and social marvels, now adds another leather medal to its collection. Actors in modern plays are forbidden to wear new clothes in future, soldiers' uniforms are made of weeds and paper and students at Würzburg University are going to lectures barefooted. The great Prussian military machine whose "efficiency" was advertised as a miracle worker is shown again to be a shoddy "made in Germany."

Every day brings new evidence that Prussia was efficient only in attaining a successful start on a journey; true efficiency is based on a successful beginning and a successful ending. An automobile that runs wild and maims its passengers but whose engine continues running amid the wreckage in a ditch is just as "efficient" as the Prussian military machine to-day. The exploding engine may harm the passengers more or the gas tank may burst into flame and sear innocent persons, but the machine fails to answer the purpose for which it was built. Every German actor with his old clothes, every soldier in his paper uniform and every barefooted student thus becomes a living advertisement of the fact that the machine "made in Germany" is not giving the service its builders promised. — New York Herald.

ANOTHER CHANCE FOR ECONOMY.

Among the reasons assigned by one of the big milk companies for making yesterday another advance in the prices to be paid by its customers there was presented the fact that bottles now cost $2 per gross more than formerly. As reasons go, that isn't altogether a bad one, but it would have more merit if the milk companies were to take more pains to prevent the enormous destruction of milk bottles that is constantly going on—a destruction the results of which are visible daily on city and suburban highways and are a constant danger to children, not to speak of being the bane of the automobilist's life.

Both the milk waggon drivers and the buyers of milk could properly be held to a stricter accountability for these eminently respectable receptacles, and if somebody had to pay for every one that goes out of the distributing stations and is not returned, the $2 per gross advance could easily be made up, and more.

Just how much of the breakage is due to the carelessness of drivers, and how much to that of the customers is something that the companies should be able easily to discover, and both classes are amenable to discipline, or in other words do fines, in the one case taken out of wages and in the other out of a reasonable preliminary deposit such as is demanded and received in the case of many other not unlike containers of liquids, some of them as innocent as milk and some that are on the defensive.

And if milk goes up now, as the season when pasturage is cheapest, and best, to what dizzy altitudes is it not to fly next Winter?—New York Times.

SCOUTS TO DIG POTATOES.

800 Boys Go to Virginia to Take Places of Farmhands.

NEW YORK, July 7. — National headquarters of the Boy Scouts of America announced that two special trains carrying 800 of the Boy Scouts of America had arrived on the eastern shore of Virginia to gather a potato crop of 4,000,000 bushels. These Boy Scouts were from Washington, Baltimore, Wilmington, Richmond, and Petersburg. Labour has practically deserted this territory for the better paying ammunition factories. The workers that were left demanded 25 cents a barrel for picking the potatoes up in baskets, as against 10 cents a barrel last year.

The boys are housed in six camps, schoolhouses being used. Each camp is under a skilled scout master. Each scout will probably earn the highly-prized war service medal given to each member of the organization of 239,000 who proves he has done his bit well and faithfully. They will get 15 cents a barrel, and each will earn a minimum of $1.50 a day. This will be paid to the boys at the end of the crusade, and in the meantime each scout is allowed 50 cents a week spending money.

A Dominion Express Money Order for Five Dollars costs three cents.

A SURE INVESTMENT.

War Savings Certificates Bear Splendid Interest Rate.

Every bank and every money order post office sells War Savings Certificates. The National Service Board in its thrift and saving campaign has made it possible for every individual to do a war work which will help himself as well as helping the man at the front. Money is needed for the prosecution of the war. The Government is raising that money through its War Savings Certificates. They are issued in three amounts. They bear interest at over five per cent. They are redeemable at the end of three years or the purchaser can secure his money back at any time plus the interest on his investment. The certificates are registered at Ottawa. They cannot be lost. The purchaser is protected by the Government and assured of a splendid return on his money. By investing his money, he is helping in the mobilization of the financial resources of the country which is essential if victory is to be secured. He is lending his resources to Canada-at-home, where the most profitable national use can be made of them. Patriotism and good business demand the investment of your money in Government certificates. Returned Soldiers' Organisations

By J. S. DENNIS

Chief Commissioner of Colonization and Development, Canadian Pacific Railway

THE question of caring for her returned soldiers is one that demands the very best thought that Canada can give. We Canadians owe these men our very best efforts. Our debt to them is not to be discharged by merely providing club rooms and pool tables, hot by empty demonstrations and banquets. Many of these men are coming back to civil life under severe handicaps. It is our duty as individuals to do our bit to help them in every practical way possible to overcome these handicaps.

It is quite natural that the men returning from the front should organize into clubs and societies. It will be to the shame of the nation if we as citizens do not fall in line and assist in the work that has called these organizations into being. We who have been privileged to stay at home cannot do less than organize an army of "big brothers," which will help these returning soldiers of ours fight life's battles.

The treatment given her soldiers after previous wars, is not one of the brighter pages of British history. The treatment of her disabled soldiers from the Crimean war, the Indian mutiny, and the Afghan war, carry little to thrill the Britisher with pride in motherland traditions. Nor can we point to Britain's treatment of her soldiers after the South African war with any degree of pride. An impartial view of these records shows that the Empire accepted the services of her soldiers as duty, which ended only when the soldier was no longer physically fit to endure the hardships of battle. Men who have given their blood for the empire have been practically forced to spend their remaining days in almshouses sanctioned by the government and cared for only as a part of the regular grist of paupers. No attempt has been made to assist these disabled soldiers and sailors in their attempts to re-establish themselves in civil life. No effort has been made to help the partially disabled to overcome their handicaps so they might maintain themselves through their own efforts.

But England has not been alone in neglect of war veterans. The veterans from the Northern States after the civil war were practically forced to organize that they might obtain something of just treatment from the nation they had helped to save. After the surrender of Lee and the grand review of the Union Army at Washington in 1865; the soldiers were turned back to their home communities in regiments and companies. Of course the coming home brought gala days and fetes. For the first few months the veterans were heroes and the centre of thought on every hand. Then the nation turned from four years war and destruction to peace and re-construction, the soldiers were gradually forgotten. No practical plans were worked out by the home folks for assisting the veterans. It was left to governmental red-tape to provide the only material assistance in the way of meagre pensions.

The authentic histories of those reconstruction days in the United States carry a striking lesson and admonition for Canada. First the veterans formed Blue—clubs, then state organizations, and finally a national society which developed into the Grand Army of the Republic. The "calls" for those first state meetings of soldier clubs started the urgent necessity for organization to protect the rights of the veterans. Later, the scope of the demands was broadened beyond the boundary of rights into those of special privilege. Pension expenditures in the United States have been questioned many times on the ground that total pensions paid by the United States Government in 1915-6 on Civil War claims were greater than in 1875, ten years after the close of the war. The pension appropriation has increased with each new Congress.

No one will question the duty of the State to care for disabled soldiers. The payment of a pension upon the most liberal basis possible is quite a small recompense to the men who have risked their lives for the Empire. The fact that our great army is composed entirely of volunteers, makes the debt of the State to the returned soldiers a double one.

Through our Hospitals Commission and the various provincial organizations we have made a start toward the proper care of our returning soldiers. It is indeed gratifying to note the plans for re-training the injured men, so that they will be able to earn even a larger income, in many cases, than before they were disabled. But we have only made a start, and an exceptionally small one at that. With only a small percentage of the disabled Canadians as yet returned to our shores, our facilities for handling them are at this moment taxed to the limit.

The returned soldiers in some sections are even now passing resolutions of protest against their treatment by the state. This is to our shame. We must not leave this work to the Government. These are matters for the municipalities, boards of trade, manufacturers' associations and similar public organizations to take up with serious thought and definite action. Conferences, are, of course, quite necessary in dealing with such important matters, but so far we in Canada have been too prone to allow our opportunities slip by while we are making time in talking about what we should do.

Our after the war soldier problem will call for the best and united effort of all our leaders. We will have labor problems to solve and industry to re-adjust. Our agricultural production must be increased to raise enough to feed our own people. The boys in khaki must be the pivot about which all of these various problems will be worked out.

Taking it for granted that the war will continue for several months, we have but a very short time to properly organise our forces and prepare to grasp the opportunities as well as perform the duties which will confront us. To my mind, the best way to do this is through a federal convention of leaders in industry, in finance, in education, in agriculture, from all sections of the Dominion. We cannot afford to place the entire burden of such important work upon the Government.

(1) Appoint a Demobilization Commission, consisting of three civilian and two military members.

(2) Charge the Commission now with the duty of making all arrangements for demobilization of our army so soon as peace is declared.

(3) Base the plan of demobilization on the following:

(a) The different battalions and units as they arrive in Canada to be returned to a central depot in the province from which they came. This to be done irrespective of whether the returning battalion or unit consists of a majority of men originally recruited in such battalion or unit or of drafts from other battalions or units subsequently attached.

(b) On arrival at the depot, arrange to immediately muster out such men as can prove that they have a home to go to, or a position waiting for them, having first cleared their pay account and taken over their arms and equipment, except such uniforms, etc., as they are allowed to retain.

(c) Consolidate the men who have no home or immediate occupation to go to into proper units for administration.

(d) Retain at these depots a certain number of battalions of men willing to remain in the army for a year after the close of the war, so as to provide a nucleus for re-mobilization if necessity arises.

(e) All officers and men to be mustered out of the service on condition that they agree to mobilize for two weeks in each year; they being paid a small annual retainer and usual pay during these yearly manoeuvres. Unless this is done the army, which has cost such an enormous sum to mobilize and train, will be lost to Canada.

(f) The men retained at the central depots to be employed in making permanent improvements at the depots, and classes in elementary agriculture, vocational training, etc., to be established so as to give the men a chance to do better in civil life after they are discharged.

(g) Immediately on appointment, the Commission should proceed to make a vocational census of men in the army and determine as far as possible what men in each unit have homes or occupations to go to on returning to Canada.

(h) The Commission should provide the necessary staff so that an official shall accompany each troopship returning to Canada, and during the voyage complete a census of men on the ship, with fullest information as to those having homes and occupations to go to; those desirous of taking up land; those looking for employment, etc., and this report should go to the Commission headquarters and the Demobilization Officer at the central depots immediately on arrival of the ship.

(i) The Commission immediately on appointment should proceed to make a labor and occupational survey of the Dominion, so that they may be available at headquarters, and at each depot, a statement of positions available for men seeking work.

(j) So soon as the men having homes and occupations to go to have been mustered out, and the remaining men consolidated into proper units, the officers commanding depots to make a complete census of the employment or occupation wanted by men retained in the service and men to be given their discharge only as it is clear that they have a position to go to.

(k) The Commission to forthwith make arrangements that all agencies in the Dominion requiring skilled or unskilled labor shall apply for such labor at the Demobilization Commission, and their requirements filled by men from nearest Provincial Depot.

The foregoing is, of course, the merest outline of the scheme and the details require most careful consideration. In my opinion, unless something along the proposed lines is undertaken, we will have serious trouble. Any attempt to muster men out indiscriminately, and immediately on arrival, will be followed by parades of men seeking work and public meetings to demand work for the men who have fought. In the end it will be cheaper for the country to proceed with demobilization only as the men can be absorbed into civil life, though the natural tendency for the Government will be to demobilize quickly and save pay and subsistence.

Marshal's Baton Has Long Story

THE winter of 1870-71 was a terrible one for France. For the first time since the allied columns had poured into Paris, after Waterloo, a foreign army passed down the Champs Elysees. There was, however, this vast difference between 1815 and 1871, that the veterans of Blucher, the regiments of the Emperor and the Tsar, and the troops of Wellington came to restore the Bourbons to their own. If the Tricolor was hauled down, it was to hoist the White Flag, and Royalist France, at all events, could feel a measure of satisfaction. In 1871 all this was changed. Moltke's men, marching down the Champs Elysees, had overthrown the Emperor of France, not to raise up another Frenchman, but simply to proclaim their own victory. One marshal of France was a prisoner, accused of a traitorous surrender of a great fortress and a great army; another was a prisoner, whose army had been crushed in the decisive battle of Sedan. Thus the line of the marshals of the Empire came to an end, during the orgy of the Revolution. When, however, the German army of occupation had vanished towards the Rhine, and France had turned her attention to the great effort of reconstruction, one of the few officers who, in spite of everything, had managed to cover himself with glory, was selected by the Government of the Republic for special honor. The marshal's baton was offered to the commander of the army of the Loire, General Chanzy. That soldier, however, declined to accept it. It was not, he declared, a fit reward for a soldier who had been beaten in the field. Keep it, he said, until you can give it to the man who commands the army of revanche. Whether or not the action of Monsieur Poincare's Government was actuated by that impulse or not, it is to General Joffre, as commander of the army of revanche, that it has given the twenty inches of metal, wrapped in velvet of the royal blue of France, once stamped with golden fleur-de-lis, but in this instance with stars.

The first of these marechaux de France was Alberic Clement, one of the commanders of the forces of Philip Augustus. But the marshal as a military officer was a descendant of a long line of great officials, whose business, in the days of the old Frankish Kings, had been to govern the stables of the reigning Prince. These mariscalci became of more and more importance with the development of cavalry in the medieval armies, so that in time they came to surpass in authority the constable himself. The constable is, of course, an even older officer than the marshal. His origin goes back to the days of the Roman Emperors, whose comes stabuli, or count of the stable, grew up by a similar process of evolution, till he became the greatest military officer of the kingdom. Still, whether it be the constable of an English village, or the marshal of a western mining town, the origin of the office is that which gave birth to the constable of France and to the earl marshal of England. In France the title never became a hereditary one; but the office of William the Marshal of the reign of Henry II. grew into that of the line of the earls marshal of England, just as the earl marischal of Scotland survived in the family of the Keiths for ten generations.

In Germany the old Frankish office of mariscalci descended in the line of the Princes of Saxony, and the title of the ers-marschalk survived down to the date of the extinction of the Holy Roman Empire. But in England the title disappeared with the extinction of the line of the earls marshal, and was revived in the persons of the field marshals, introduced into the British army by George II. in imitation of the German feldmarschalls. They were a wonderful enough race of men, these marshals, but, of course, the most wonderful of them all are to be found in the long line of the marechaux de France, who became for a while the marechaux de l'Empire, and now again have become, in the person of le Marechal Joffre, once again marechaux de France.

Was there no Turenne, the man who was astonished when he heard Cromwell's redcoats cheering as they went forward against the battalions of his great rival, Conde; and Conde himself, who flung the twenty inches of blue velvet tipped with gold, far into the enemy's line at Fribourg, bidding his soldiers follow him in the recovery of it. Then there was Vauban, the engineer who built those rock galleries at Verdun, which have defied the German artillery of to-day, when modern fortifications have been crumpled up like pie-crust; a wonderful man this Vauban, truly not only a great soldier, but, in the very atmosphere of the Ancil-de-Boeuf, a politician abreast of the ideals of to-day. A fellow soldier of Vauban was the terrible little duc de Luxemburg, the immediate predecessor of the four marshals who fell in turn before the invincible "Malbrook." And after them, Maurice de Saxe, the general who traveled with his camp theatre, his valets de chambre and maitres d'hotel.

But, of course, the great moment of the marshals was the moment of the First Empire. That was the hour of Ney and Massena, of Augereau and Lannes, of Davoust and Soult, and half a score of others, of whom perhaps the least known was Moncey, the only marshal ever deprived of his baton, and deprived of that because, at the command of Louis, he refused to preside over the court-martial on Michel Ney. And now the Kingdom and the Empire have given place to the Republic, and there comes the first of the Republic's marshals, the three hundred and twenty-fifth of the marechaux de France, Monsieur le Marechal Joffre.

TRADE ON HER WORK.

Hard Work and Economy Will Solve Problem of Debt.

The speech recently delivered at Melbourne by Mr. G. T. Milne, British Trade Commissioner in Australia, on his return to the Commonwealth after visiting the important trade centres of the United Kingdom, Russia, and Japan, was particularly interesting, as affording another view of the important question of trade after the war. Mr. Milne took an encouraging view of things. He had found, he said, strong evidence of the intention of home manufacturers to give more attention to the Australian market after the war. Several members of the 750 firms he had interviewed had expressed the intention of sending responsible representatives to the Commonwealth. It was, moreover, satisfactory to find, as he had found, that the question of trade, upon the return of peace, was being taken up with energy in the United Kingdom, both officially and unofficially. Evidence was being collected from all possible quarters as to the trade conditions which might be expected, and the services of the best business men in the country had been requisitioned to deal with the matter. As the result of what he had observed, he could see that when the war was over the great question before the United Kingdom, Australia, and other parts of the Empire, would be how they could most rapidly recuperate from the effects of the war and lighten the burden of debt. The answer to that question was, in his opinion, by minimising expenditure on nonessentials and, above all, by increasing production.

It is welcome to have the matter put thus simply. The whole question of trade, like the allied question of finance, is, to a very great extent, a closed book to the average man; but, like all great questions, its salient features are quite capable of being expressed simply. The remedy for shortages is economy and production; in other words, economy and labor. All other devices for making good deficiencies have no economic foundation. It is simply a matter of history, for instance, that France and not Germany was the ultimate gainer by the huge indemnity which Bismarck imposed on France, on the conclusion of the France-Prussian war of forty years ago, the reason, of course, being that France worked and produced, in the years that followed, as she never had worked and produced before; whilst Germany, with money to spare, rested on her industrial oars. Almost at once, the great indemnity began to flow back into France in payment for the products of French labor. In less than ten years, it had all come back, and much more besides; whilst Bismarck growled over what he described as an "absurd miracle," namely, the financial regeneration of France. What regenerated France, after 1871, was labor and economy; and the solution of the trade problem after the present war will be found to be the same.

Proud Stomachs.

The utmost vigilance of the censor has not been able to hide the fact that one of the consequences of the German submarine blockade of the coasts of France and the British Isles has been the demise of the sea lions domiciled in the Jardin des Plantes in Paris. It is a sad story. Sea lions, it seems, have excessively dainty appetites. They decline to eat anything but certain little fishes which the fishwives of the Halles have been accustomed to set aside especially for their daily epicurean feasts. The misfortunes of war have brought about a situation which makes it impossible to obtain these particular little fishes. And the sea lions of the Jardin des Plantes have chosen to die of hunger rather than dine upon the soles, flounders, and such like common articles of sea food which their keepers have provided as substitutes. The comfort is that the Museum has had only this single occasion all this past winter to put on mourning. Or almost so. It is true that a litter of lion cubs who committed the imprudence of being born in the month of January succumbed to bronchitis during a severe spell of cold weather which followed hard upon their arrival. And one of the boa constrictors died of angina pectoris about the same time.

Otherwise, the world is officially assured, all the beasts who are staying guests there are in rude health in spite of the Germans—all except a hippopotamus who caught cold and broke out in scales all over his hide. They were obliged to grease him thoroughly, the process involving such a lavish expenditure of fat as must have caused mingled grief and rage among the Kaiser's lean civilians notoriously on short allowance of everything of that description. Possibly the censor, knowing this, passed the whole story out of pure malice.

Sparrow-Hawks in London.

It is believed that hawks would soon settle in London if not molested. During the Middle Ages kites were the city scavengers, as they still are in Cairo. Three years ago a pair of sparrow-hawks made a brief stay on the saddle-back tower of St. Albans, Holborn, to the terror of the pigeons. The late Sir George Dasent recorded that when he was a Westminster schoolboy a pair of peregrine falcons nested every year on the Abbey towers until one of the birds was shot by a clerk.

Japan's Seven-Day Week.

Although the Japanese worker has no Sabbath, he gains nothing in the long run, for in one case in which figures were available and which may be considered fairly typical, the laborers only worked from 23 to 27 days a month, the rest of the time either being indisposed or actually too sick to work. The number of "substitutes" hired by the factories is very large, and few laborers can keep up even the leisurely pace to which they are accustomed for any long period.

THE VOLUNTEER'S MOTHER.

He was so beautiful—my baby son!
His sun-kissed curls clung close around his head,
His deep blue eyes looked trustingly in mine
I did my best to keep his beauty fair
And fresh and clean and dainty, for I knew
I never could be satisfied with less.

He was so strong and well, my little son!
I gave my days and nights to keep him so—
Called in fresh air and sunlight to my aid,
Good food and play, all healthful things of life,
I wanted physical perfection, for
I never could be satisfied with less.

He was so bright and clever, my big son!
I sent him to the very best of schools,
Denying self that he might know no lack
Of opportunity to do his best,
Or feel no door of progress closed to him.
I never could be satisfied with less.

And yet—but now—my well-beloved son,
For your perfection can I pay the price?
Or would I have you play the coward's part
With selfish, shriveled soul too small to dwell,
Within so fair a frame? Is that my choice?
I sought the best! Shall I be satisfied with less?

Nay, I would have you honourable, my son—
Just, loyal, brave and truthful, scorning fear
And lies and meanness ready to defend
Your home, your mother and your country's flag.
He's gone! Dear God! With bleeding heart I know
I still could not be satisfied with less!

MR. FORD MAKES LOTS OF CARS

While it is a dull time for makers of many brands of automobiles, reports from Detroit say that the Ford plant continues to turn out cars at capacity rate. Neither the declaration of war by the United States nor the flotation of the Liberty Loan affected the demand for the most famous "flivver," which, in many parts of the country has developed into a necessity for business as well as an additional element of pleasure in these difficult days. Manufacturers of other low-priced cars who have had to look at diminishing sales sheets of late take courage when they see Mr. Ford's activities unimpaired, and wait for signs of a brodening market. Some automobile makers say signs of the sort are already in evidence.—New York Times.

A NATIONAL DUTY.

Support the National Service Board in Its Great Campaign.

The man who cannot fight, who is not engaged in industrial work, who is not doing a direct war service can help his country by investing in War Savings Certificates. The woman who is not nursing, who is not connected with war and patriotic activities, whose whole time is taken up in the home can do national service by practising thrift, reducing expenditures, eliminating domestic waste and refusing to purchase luxuries. By saving and giving to the country, all these people can have a direct part in the great struggle for victory. Those who are doing war work can join with them. The "serve by giving" campaign of the National Service Board offers a form of war work common to all. The whole nation should co-operate with the Board. The monetary resources of the Country can be strengthened in a hundred ways by the exercise of individual economy. Every dollar saved and invested in War Savings Certificates is a dollar devoted to a patriotic and esential purpose. If the splendid financial sacrifice of the country is to be maintained it can only be by individual sacrifice and individual thrift. Are you helping the nation? Are you economizing? Are you investing in War Savings Certificates. B-10.

G. T. R. Engines Disturb Slumbers Of Citizens In Early Morning

Although Divisional Superintendent McMillan of the G.T.R. has assured the Council that train crews have been instructed not to cause citizens residing near the local yards unnecessary disturbance, especially at night, Ald. Langford reported last night complaints from Mr. James Bland, of Aylmer street, that the neighbourhood's sleep is broken about four o'clock in the morning by engines that come in for water. On Thursday and Friday mornings of this week this annoyance was repeated.

Ald. Duncan moved, seconded by Ald. Worth that the clerk notify Mr. McMillan of these occurrences.

Ald. Smith remarked that continual reports to the company might "only get them sore," but the Mayor and Ald. Duncan, who interviewed Mr. McMillan a short time ago, stated that he desired to prevent this annoyance as much as possible. The letter will include the Trades and Labour Council's request that trains entering the city from the south travel at a slower speed than heretofore.

The Mayor informed Ald. Saunder's that Mr. McMillan had estimated the cost of a stand pipe below Ware street at $5,000, and had expressed the opinion that the residents of that vicinity would probably find it as objectionable as the water tanks uptown seem to be to certain residents nearby.

THE SOUL OF THE WORLD

BY EDGAR SALTUS

At the beginning of the war, in an address to the Army of the East, the Kaiser called for the death and destruction of all and sundry who disbelieved in his mission. One may conjecture whether among the all and sundry he then included this country (the United States.) In any event he includes it now. But at the time and very simply, he added: 'God, who speaks through my mouth, so orders.'

God in His omnipotence may have enabled the Kaiser to look in a mirror without being nauseated. Yet, assuming that miracle, there it ceased. Recently Loti said that what spoke through him was a hyena. Loti is looking in literary sobriety. When a hyena has eaten he is at peace with the world. But when were crime and folly ever filled? They are insatiable and so is this crocodile now licking his chops over the savoreus thought of gutting New York.

Mirabeau, who had no objection to other people's cigarette stumps, said after Voltaire had said it for him—that Prussia's national industry is war. It is difficult to improve on Voltaire, yet Mirabeau had the chance and missed it. For war he should have substituted burglary. Burglary is the natural instinct of the Hohenzollerns, in addition to being a family trait. The kingdom of the fat Frederick was made up of loot—"acquisitions" as the valets of history describe it. To-day Prussia is the Carouche of nations. But that is a comfortment, therefore comforting; consequently treason.

Cartouche, though a burglar, was a wit, and the only wit that ever emanated from there was dispensed gratis by Schopenhauer, who in recognition of Teuton stupidity, gave, devised, and bequeated to Germany his entire contempt.

Barring Cartouche, burglars generally are stupid, but they may be formidable, and their might and consequently their right, as Bismarck conscientiously put it, is in proportion to the quantity and the calibre of their guns. "Do not think," he barked at Alsatian Deputies in the Reichstag, 'that we took your country for your country's good. It was for our benefit that we annexed it." A burglar apostrophising the sack of a sideboard could employ no saner words.

Long since the old felon has gone, but Hohenzollern methods endure. If they prevail in Europe nothing earthly can prevent this country from becoming the vandal translation of an American book. Eventually the text may be reconstructed. But the pirated original will be lost.

Geniuses protest that it is impossible. Nothing is impossible. When Roberts warned of "the day," England would not listen. Yet England, in addition to seeing its dawn, foresees now, as Mr. Balfour told us, a night that may blot out civilisation.

A generation ago we fought for Cuba. What is Hecuba to us in comparison with the Anima Mundi? What is the Gem of the Antilles, which certainly we did not want and obviously did not keep, beside the soul of the world? Yet there are Americans who wonder what we are doing in this galley and contend that it is no concern of ours.

The Australians, the New Zealanders, the Maoris even, might have argued similarly and, not being blind omitted to. The Japanese followed their excellent example. The Gurkhas went to the front. The Sikhs went with them. In a London recruiting office Agra Khan, a rajah, whose ancestry fades into mythology, offered himself as a private. The roll call is splendid.

But though in this respect we are one with the Orientals, yet otherwise their mental processes differ from ours. It is perhaps the same way with the Huns. Whatever contempt we may have for them is flattery beside the contempt that they have for us. To improve their manners, we think of handcuffs. To improve ours, they think of Kultur. The gangrene of the latter Belgium displays.

From the bacilli of that virus the one prophylactic is a serum of billions of money and millions of men. These ingredients, which are native products, only the blind begrudge. Only the blind fail to see that the soul of the world is at stake.

Buffalo Plants Able To Furnish 3,500 Aeroplanes By January 1

BUFFALO, N. Y. — It is stated unofficially here that the Curtiss aeroplane plants alone are ready to supply the government with as many as 3,500 training or combat aeroplanes by January 1st. It is understood that steps are under way now to provide by the acquisition of present adaptable factories and the building of new ones, for double that capacity.

Glenn H. Curtiss heartily approves the project of the Aircraft Production Board for the building of 100,000 aeroplanes. He is convinced that America's mastery in the war could most thoroughly be accomplished by this means, and has prepared his forces during the last two years for such cooperation with the government. Recently at the meeting of the Aircraft Board in New York he pledged his fullest cooperation in any programme approved by Congress. Mr. Curtiss adds:

"The great difficulty we face in the United States is the lack of pilots for high speed machines. Before the aeroplanes now being developed can be used on the fighting lines it will be necessary first to train flyers for the combat aeroplanes. Engineers are working out that problem by devising rugged training types which will be miles faster than the ones that are now used.

"Because of the fact that the Curtiss 'J.N.' has been made the standard training machine of the British and the French armies, and in that field has supplanted all other types, the impression has unfortunately obtained that the American industry has not produced anything more than a toy. That is not true. A training machine is operated by amateurs, and its construction and design must be of greater ruggedness than the combat aeroplanes. It must be designed for slow landings and for resistance against breaks to which it is subjected in the training field.

"There are, therefore, probably, more refinements in this type of machine than in the others, where much must be sacrificed to speed of operation, although there are some who think that these training machines lack refinement of design and construction. They are better made than the machines which sweep their wings over the battle clouds in aerial combats, and which in fifteen minutes may end their usefulness to the armies."

Orders are expected soon on the first lot of the 100,000 aeroplanes, which the aircraft Production Board of the United States decided should be America's first contribution to the war. In all the discussions there has been a repeated note of disparagement for the American aeroplanes —the statement has been made frequently that none of the American aeroplanes has been useful as a combat machine over the German trenches in France.

"It has been stated frequently that the foreign machines are faster and more sensitive to control than those made in the United States," Mr. Curtiss said. "It is possible for our firm and for others in the United States to make flying machines for fighting purposes which will exceed any performance by those used in the French and the British armies. The fastest speed that has been claimed by the British and French engineers has been 127 miles an hour. Lately I have developed a combat machine which will fly 145 miles an hour. This is a triplane with stream line struts. With the present engine in it it has sped through the air at a rate of 135 miles an hour. Underway, we have a combat air plane of slightly different design which under normal performance, should do 140 miles an hour."

The British and French admiralties have placed another order in Buffalo. It goes to the Curtiss Company and calls for the immediate construction of twenty-five of the giant "flying whales." The order will be for more than $1,500,000.

TRADES AND LABOUR NOTES

By The Official Scribe

(By the Official Scribe.)

There was a fairly good attendance at the Council's meeting this week, J. J. Hartley of the Bricklayers presiding with customary ability.

The 57th Band's Proposition.

There are quite a number of machinists in the 57th Band, good union men, and while not wishing to cast any aspersions at the Salvation Army Band, it was felt that the City Council had not acted just right in making equal grants for the season. It must also be remembered that the 57th Band are not receiving any regimental assistance at present, so that makes the reduction more severe.

A committee from the Trades and Labour Council will open negotiations with the city fathers upon this question.

Labour on Conscription.

When comes the time for responding to the call of the country, are the foreign-born going to step into the jobs of native-born Britishers? It looks like that. In that case organized labour is going to protest and that strongly. It has been shown that the worker has borne his full share of the present war, now comes the probable additional burden of witnessing foreigners enjoy lucrative positions while natives are compelled to accept $1.10. A lively discussion ended by a committee being appointed to watch and wait developments.

Labour Day Celebration.

Dominion Day was a success, but Labour Day is going to eclipse all that happened last Monday, for a live committee of labour men are going ahead with a programme which will be far better than any yet attempted.

LABOUR MEN'S OPINION OF GRANTS TO BANDS

Asked Council to Give $400 to the 57th Regimental Band.

A communication from the Trades and Labour Council requested the City Council to apportion the Band grants on the basis of $400 to the 57th Regimental Band and $200 to the Salvation Army Band. The accompanying reason was that the 57th received no aid from the Regiment and, as a consequence, was dependent upon the city's grant.

Ald. Weir endeavoured to re-open the question by moving that the by-laws be amended. Ald. Dobbin seconded the motion, but it was lost.

A Nervous Breakdown

Can Be Averted by Feeding the Starved Nerves With Rich, Red Blood

Nourish your nerves—that is the only way you can overcome life's worst misery, nervous exhaustion. The fits of depression and irritation, the prostrating headaches, the weakness and trembling of the legs, the unsteady hand and the imperfect digestion that mark the victim of nerve weakness, must end in nervous breakdown if neglected.

Nourish your nerves by the natural process of filling your veins with rich, red, health-giving blood. Your nerves are crying out for pure blood and the mission of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is to make new, rich blood. This explains why these pills have proved successful in so many cases of nervous disease that did not yield to ordinary treatment. For example, Mr. Wilfrid Donald, West Flamboro, Ont., says:—"Before I began the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills I was in a serious condition. I was not only badly run down, but my nerves seemed to be completely shattered. I slept badly at night, and when I got up in the morning was as tired as when I went to bed. I seemed to be on the verge of a nervous breakdown. At this stage I began the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. In the course of a few weeks I felt much relief, and continuing the use of the pills they completely restored my health. I can now sleep soundly, eat well, and am enjoying complete freedom from the old nervous troubles."

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills through any dealer in medicine, or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

DOG MEAT RESTRICTIONS.

Butchers Limited by Germans in Sales to Families of Ghent.

Amsterdam, Netherlands, July 7.—According to the Antwerp correspondent of the "Handelsblad" the German authorities at Ghent have issued an administrative order granting permission to the city of Ghent for the erection of a dog slaughter-house. One of the regulations provides that no dog-butcher may supply more than about two pounds of dog meat a week to each family.

In the opinion of the correspondent quoted, there is no doubt this example soon will be followed in other towns of Belgium, for want is increasing day by day.

Air Waves Break Windows Near The Quaker Oats Plant

Concussion from the blasting operations at the Quaker Oats plant has annoyed some of the citizens living on Sheridan and Brock streets to the extent that they have asked the Mayor to endeavour to have the charges lessened. Debris had been blown up over the hill, and windows broken by the force of the blasts.

Ald. Duncan stated that he was replacing for the company windows that had been broken, and the property owners seemed satisfied if the damage was repaired. Yesterday he had put in five windows in Mr. W. A. Logan's house, and also several in the nearest house on Hunter street.

City Solicitor Gordon stated that the city was in no way lisble. It was decided to write the Leonard Construction Company requesting them to modify their blasts if possible.

BRITISH GOVT. AFTER ALL WHEAT IN SIGHT

Millers of Ontario are Also Anxious to Get a Look In.

WINNIPEG, July 7.—Ontario mills are keen after Manitoba wheat and their agents are pushing the British and Allies' agents keenly for supplies. Ontario millers are willing to pay considerable premiums over market prices, but offerin are very light, and British Government is after every bushel to fill ocean tonnage. The Government is also after every bushel of oats in sight.

Finished Work On Lighthouses

LINDSAY, July 7.—The government tug "Bessie Butler," has been making Lindsay her headquarters during the last few days while she has been straightening up the lighthouses on Sougog River, between here and Sturgeon Lake. She finished the work yesterday at noon and will next be at Chemong, where there is some work to do. She is in charge of Captain Johnston. Supt. Jas. W. Laidlaw went with the steamer to-day to see that all was ship-shape on the Sougog.

The Paris Markets

The Municipal council of Paris is considering a proposition for the removal of the "Halles"—Central markets—from the centre of the city to the outskirts, along the line of the present fortifications.

The great wall of Paris, with its moats and casements, was doomed to destruction after its uselessness was demonstrated in 1870-71. Its disappearance will leave a broad space available for all kinds of public improvements, including parks, playgrounds, sporting arenas and boulevards. A new hospital to replace the Beaujon hospital will be erected near the Neuilly section and farther north and east, in close proximity to the Saint Martin's canal, it is suggested, a location can be provided for the markets where they can be reached directly by water and rail, reducing by more than half the cost of rehandling the provisions of Paris.

The future "Fair of Paris," to be organised somewhat on the lines of the recent "Lyons Fair," may, also be located on the site of the fortifications. It is proposed to build an exposition palace, reserved more especially for industry and commerce than art which finds its place in the Grand Palais, and the favorite sites are the emplacement of the fortifications near the Porte Maillot or the Porte d'Auteuil.

Windows Broken By Death Of CHILD--TOOK HEART PILLS

LINDSAY, July 7.—Much sympathy is felt for Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Kelcher, Melbourne street, who lost their two-year-old son after a short illness of two hours.

It appears that the boy was playing about the house and while his mother was looking after a younger child Moris climbed up on a chair and succeeded in getting some 'heart pills' from a shelf, which had been prescribed for Mrs. Kelcher. It is not known how many the young lad took, but ordinarily one would be sufficient to cause death.

A doctor was hurriedly summoned, but within two hours the little fellow had passed away. He is survived by his parents and one sister, Jessie Lorraine.

WOMEN AT WORK IN LUMBER YARD

CHICABO, July 7—Women in overalls, doing the work of men just as women have been doing in England, made their appearance here to-day when a group of grinning, healthy-looking women went to work in the lumber yard of the Ryan Car Company. Superintendent Christopher Davidson explained:

"Labour is becoming more and more scarce and we advertised for women a few days ago Five hundred replies were received. In a week or so there will be fifty or sixty at work and eventually two hundred. They do men's work and received men's pay. We have rest rooms for them and other accommodation."

Only strong women were taken. Those who appeared too frail were rejected.

HOME DEFENCE

The safeguarding of your home and all it means to you is not a matter of armies and ships alone. The comfort and happiness of your family are exposed to the attacks of enemies much nearer to them than the marauding Huns of Central Europe.

What will become of your home and your wife and your children, if you be suddenly stricken down as thousands of others have been?

Will there be any bulwark of defence to keep the home and the family from destruction?

You can most easily provide such a line of defence by means of a life assurance policy. Home Defence is its purpose and it fulfills that purpose as nothing else can.

MILLINERY ALTERATION SALE STARTS MONDAY

PRICES DOWN TO HALF AND LESS

Every Hat and Shape in the Store is on the Bargain List

Carpenters will soon be busy with hammer and saw in our Millinery Department. The Second Floor is to undergo big alterations, especially, in this section. Therefore the motive of this sale is to sell our entire millinery stock, otherwise it would have to be continually shifted to make way for the workmen. Original prices have not been considered, we have a single purpose and are intent on one goal—a final clearance, and make no mistake the prices are such that success is insured.

Our Exclusive Stock of Pattern Hats will be Sold at Exactly Half Price

The original prices of these hats were up to $12.00, and a few over, and now they will be sold at exactly half that figure, though they have lost none of their style, and the $12.00 models still represent $12.00 worth of value in millinery, and likewise the lower prices. You will find leghorns, crepe covered, meline, silk and straw combinations, etc. They have served their purpose all season as patterns, and now we will part with them for half price.

Sport Hats and a Sprinkling of Trimmed Millinery Left from Early Spring $1.19

At the outset we want to state that the sports hats are worth from $1.50 to $1.75, and the trimmed straws much more. The sport hats are of palm beach cloth, and patterned with large spots, stripes and many unique patterns that would be difficult to describe. You will find them ideal for outings and morning wear. Regular $1.50 to $1.75 value. Millinery Alteration Sale price $1.19

Smart Tailored Hats worth up to $8.00 Sale Price $2.98

This group includes a number of trimmed hats other than our pattern models, but with sincerity we can say "that in many cases they are equally as charming." It is useless to enumerate the shapes, braids, trimmings, etc. It's enough to say they are light and dark straws from this season's stock and were marked up to $8.00. The Millinery Alteration Sale price will be $2.98

An Immense Assortment of 50c, 75c and $1.00 Bunches of Flowers & Foliage at 25c

If you are one of those diligent women that trim their own hats, you will find much of interest in this assortment..... Flowers, fruits and foliage at, a bunch..... 25c

Also several broken bunches of straw—a wide variety of colors. Price, bunch 5c

145 Shapes, in Every Case They are Marked at Exactly Half Price

Turbans, sailors, tricorn—every shape imaginable in fact, and strange, indeed, is the woman who cannot here find a model to her liking. They are not old unfashionable shapes from other seasons, but fresh numbers left after this season's selling. The straws are lisere, milan, tagel, etc., and the shapes as mentioned above. A big assortment of blacks and colors. Every shape in the store at exactly half price. None have been reserved.

Ald. Duncan Is Chief Magistrate During Absence of Mayor Duffus

Mayor Going to Kingston to Take Military Course and Will Be Away About Two Months.

The Council granted Mayor Duffus leave of absence last night for the period of his military course at Kingston, and appointed Ald. Duncan chief magistrate until his return. Mayor Duffus stated that he intended to go to Kingston next week and would be away from six to eight weeks. It was necessary, therefore, that some member of the Council be selected to carry on as acting Mayor, sign the city's cheques and assume the other attendant duties. Although a motion was not required, as a form of courtesy, Ald. Smith moved, seconded by Ald. Saunders, that the Mayor be given leave of absence, and that Ald. Duncan who, as alderman, holds the seniority of service, be appointed Mayor temporarily. The motion was unanimously supported.

Ald. Duncan acknowledged the honour, thanking the Council and stating that he would do the best he could while Mayor Duffus was away.

"There is no doubt about that," replied the Mayor.

Who at a special meeting of the City Council held last evening, was appointed Acting-Mayor during the temporary absence of Mayor Duffus on military duty.

Visitors To The Omemee Club

On Thursday evening, June 28, the members of the Omemee Farmers' Club were the hosts and entertained right royally the members of the Linden Valley Farmers' Club, a considerable number of whom drove over in automobiles, including their Secretary, Mrs. Webster, who is said to be the only woman secretary of a farmers' club in the Province, and who is doing excellent work for her club. Visitors were also present from the Realboro and Dunsford Farmers' Clubs. An excellent programme, including a quartette and solos was furnished by the members of the Omemee Club as well as refreshments. The president of the Omemee club, Mr. W. C. Veals, presided. Speeches were made by Mr. Cullis, president of the Linden Valley Club; Mr. Reid of the Realboro Club, and Mr. Thurston of the Dunsford Club. The principal speech was delivered by Mr. H. B. Cowan, Editor-in-Chief of Farm and Dairy, who related interesting incidents in connection with the growth of the farmers' movement in Western Canada, as well as in Ontario.

To Have Perfect Skin Throughout the Summer

These days the face needs special care and attention. Flying dust and dirt, the beating sun, are severe on any skin. Their dispelling effects are best overcome by the application of pure mercolized wax. This keeps skin and pores in a clearly condition, the complexion beautifully white and spotless. Discolored, freckled and roughened cuticle are actually absorbed by it. One ounce of mercolized wax, obtainable at any drug store, is sufficient to completely renovate a clouded complexion. It is used like cold cream, allowed to remain on over night, and washed off in the morning.

As the skin tends to expand in warm weather, causing wrinkles to form, a good astringent lotion should be used. Dissolve a pwd. powdered saxolite in ½ pt. witch hazel. Bathe the face in this during the heat of the day or before going out for theatre or social affair. It is a remarkable skin tightener and wrinkle eraser.

If you plant honeysuckle, remember that it takes all the nourishment from everything else.

YOUR VACATION

What Are You Going to Do With It?

By H. Addington Bruce

What are you planning to do when vacation comes this year? You are planning, I hope, to do something that will really help make you mentally and physically fit.

This is no year to spend a vacation foolishly and uselessly. It is no year to think merely of having "a good time."

We are in the throes of a great war. Our nation demands of every one of us effort and efficiency and sacrifice.

"Let George do it" cannot be our slogan. Man or woman, boy or girl, patriotic effort of some sort is required of us.

And vacation time is pre-eminently a time when we can renew our vigour, so that whatever we find to do for our country we shall be in first-class condition to do it.

Vacation time, in fact, offers us a chance not only to upbuild ourselves, but also to do some patriotic work in the process of upbuilding.

We are city dwellers and many of us are sedentary workers. We have little opportunity to get exercise outdoors. When vacation comes we instinctively flee to the country.

Very well. Let us go to the country as usual this year.

But instead of giving all our time to tramping or rowing or mountain climbing, to baseball or tennis or golf, let us do a little work on some farm or in a garden.

This, remember, is a year of great food shortage. Every additional pound of food that can be raised and harvested is of exceptional value to the nation.

For this reason the farmers need all the help they can get. And vacationists, if only they will, can give the farmers really useful help.

Even one hour a day during a fortnight's vacation will count for much if spent in garden or harvest field. It will help to solve the food problem. And it will help the helper to put himself in better shape for his own job back in town.

Which, after all, is the great purpose of vacations. The man who wastes his vacations in mere loafing or pleasure-seeking or an inert sort is of a certainty making a tremendous mistake.

He goes back to work jaded, bored, unfit. He might as well have taken no vacation whatever. He has entirely missed the main object of release from his accustomed labours.

It is well never to make this mistake. It is doubly well not to make it this year.

For this year the nation expects every man to shape himself to work at his highest possible level of efficiency.

Go into the fields, then, and into the garden. Hoe, mow, and harvest. Breathe deeply of the pure, country air. Exercise your muscles to honest fatigue. Keep decent hours. And sleep.

Follow this programme and you will return to office, store or factory really invigorated. You will have no vain regrets for a vacation unwisely spent. On the opposite, you will feel that you have had one of the most profitable vacations in all your experience.

DEMANDS SPIES IN U. S. BE HANGED WITHOUT A TRIAL

WASHINGTON, July 6. — "Hang the German spies without ceremony."

This was the demand of Senator Chamberlain, chairman of the Senate Military Committee yesterday. Simultaneously he declared he had no doubt that the spies in Government departments in Washington are constantly sending information to Berlin. Following revelation that German army and navy headquarters are getting a steady flow of military secrets from the United States, as evidenced by Berlin's war moves and publication in German newspapers, opinion at Washington resolved itself into a concerted demand for exposure and execution of enemy agents.

Recently it was openly charged on the Senate floor that there are 100,000 German spies actively working in America. Now some officials want to know whether the Government must wait until a transport is blown up and American boys in khaki slaughtered before starting a "spy drive" that will outdo even Great Britain's efforts to crush the espionage menace.

"It is my belief that information in this country is sent to Germany through wireless stations on the east coast of Mexico and in Venezuela," declared Senator Chamberlain to-day. "The Navy Department has the facts about those stations. When the traitors are found they should be strung up without the formality of trial by jury."

RELIEF COMMITTEE FOR SUFFERING SERBIANS

A branch of the Canadian Serbian Relief committee has been formed in Peterborough, with the following local membership committee: Convener, His Honour Judge Huycke; Hon. Secretary, Mr. W. R. Morris, 375 Water street; Hon. Treasurer, Mr. W. H. Dunsford, Manager Canadian Bank of Commerce; the Rt. Rev. M. J. O'Brien, Bishop of Peterborough; Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P.; Mr. R. R. Hall, Mr. T. F. Matthews, Mr. W. G. Morrow, Mr. H. Rush, Mr. Francis D. Kerr.

The appeal to the public will be made through a circular, which will detail the spoliation, outrage and plunder that have reduced the Serbian sto a condition of unspeakable destitution, that appeals in the most powerful manner to the sentiments of the most indifferent humanity.

Self-Praise By U. S. Condemned As Treacherous

NEW YORK — The Wall Street Journal published the following editorial:

"It has more than once been remarked abroad that Americans have an insatiable appetite for praise. We cannot deny the soft impeachment. On the contrary, it has become our settled habit to forestall a possible shortage of imported appreciation by turning out a huge quantity of the same stuff at home. In ordinary times the industry may have been comparatively harmless, but it holds no end of possible mischief for a nation straining under the colossal burdens of this war of wars.

"Hardly an American newspaper has failed to speak of the movement of the first contingent of our troops to France as something 'wholly unprecedented in magnitude, promptness and all-round efficiency.' In the absence of exact data as to the number of troops, quantity of supplies and equipment, and ships involved, there was, of course, every opportunity for exuberant glorification. Perhaps it was justified, but we do not know.

"It would be just as well to remember that the first contingent of Canadian troops, transported only a little shorter distance by water, was 33,000 men. Is it either safe or becoming to us to assume that more than that number of our own soldiers are already at Pershing's disposal? What of the half million which Britain moved three times the distance in the Boer War.

"Those first glowing descriptions of the vast new mercantile marine, with which, on paper, we averted Great Britain's peril have even now been laid aside for sober blueprints of shipyards yet to be. We have felt the first thrill over our armada of the purple twilight painfully transformed into a realization of the months of slow industrial processes that must intervene before we essay our first big drive overhead. Yet we struggled for words to express our exultation over the unquestionably fine success of the Liberty Loan, which will finance our belligerency for less than a year.

"Americans have never had much use for pessimism and they do well to despise it more heartily to-day than ever. The point is that their appetite for praise, particularly for self-praise, is sure to get in their way, to prevent their speeding up to the necessary war pace, unless they get it under restraint. We need to think less about the magnitude of what we have done, which is after all only a good beginning, and more about what we have yet to do. Confidence in ourselves and our leaders let us have by all means but there is such a thing as the blindness of complacency."

MILLIONS OF AUTOMOBILES.

The number of automobiles in operation in this country last year was 3,512,996, according to registration figures gathered from the various States by the Department of Agriculture. The increase in 1916 over 1915 was $1,067,332, or 43 per cent. The gross revenue collected by the States in registration and license fees was $25,855,389, and of this $23,910,841 was applied directly to the construction, improvement, and maintenance of highways. In 1899, says a bulletin of the department, only 48,000 motor cars were registered in the United States, and the gross income from licenses amounted to no more than $190,000.—New York Times.

Germany Building Big Mercantile Fleet

That Germany is building a tremendous mercantile fleet, including the largest ship in the world, was declared by Herr Ballin, general manager of the Hamburg-American line, in an interview with the Hamburg correspondent of the Frankfurter "Zeitung."

The ship referred to is the Bismarck of 56,000 tons, being constructed for the Hamburg-American line. There is also the turbine ship, Tirpits of 32,000 tons under way, and the list also includes three others of 22,000 tons. At the Vulcan yards, Bremen, nine ships are building, four of them having a carrying capacity of 18,000 tons, these being the world's greatest freight steamers.

In addition, Herr Ballin continued, three big liners are under way at the Fiensburg yard. Two more steamers of 13,000 tons, and three larger passenger and freight steamers are being constructed. Two cargo ships of 17,000 tons each, are being constructed especially for the Panama Canal trade at the Tecklenburg yards at Geestemuende. The North German Lloyd is building at Dantsig two fast liners of 35,000 tons, the Columbus and the Hindenburg. These are to be speedy, designed to cut down the time between the continent and New York. The same company is building twelve other ships of 12,000 tons; the Munchen and the Zeppelin, of 16,000 tons each. The Bremen-Africa line is constructing six steamers, the Hansa line eight, and the Cosmos line ten, ranging from 9,000 to 13,000 tons.

A NATIONAL NEED.

Universal Economy Essential to Victory.

"Let us be done with new streets and new sidewalks, new town halls and new railways till the war is done. Let us walk in our old boots on the old boards, patriots all, with dollar pieces jingling in our pockets adding up to twenty-five for the latest patriotic loan."

Such is the plea of Professor Leacock in a pamphlet written for the Government which has printed a quarter of a million copies. It is part of the campaign of the National Service Board for national thrift and economy. "Serve by giving" is the Board's motto. It should be the motto of the country. Expenditures should be cut to a minimum. Waste should be regarded as an offence against the State; luxuries as a crime.

The country's dollars are needed for war work. By the practise of thrift by every man and woman in the Dominion millions can be saved for investment in Government War Savings Certificates. Those millions must be saved and invested if the country is to be worthy of its soldiers. B-2

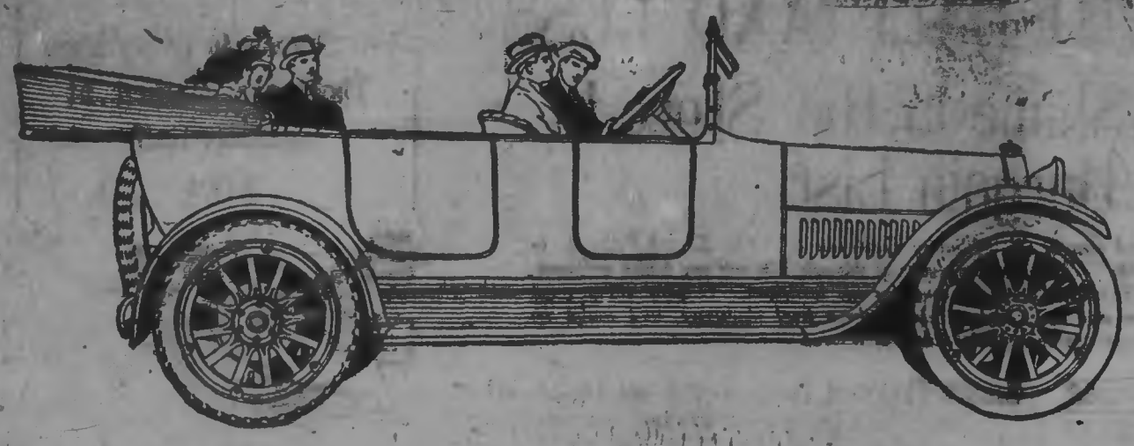
Studebaker



The Studebaker Car

Economy—a Reason for Its Leadership

THE Studebaker Car is economical to buy because its first cost is comparatively low.

The Studebaker Car is economical to operate because its splendid quality reduces maintenance costs to a minimum.

In ratio to power it is one of the most economical cars on the market in consumption of gasoline.

It is not only light in weight, but so perfectly balanced that Studebaker owners frequently get from 8,000 to 10,000 miles on a single set of tires.

Repair parts may always be conveniently obtained at relatively low prices.

The Studebaker Car is economical to own because in ratio to first cost, a Studebaker has an unusually high second hand value.

On the coast and in the great Western Provinces, where people test and prove their cars on the longest, hardest, hilliest drives in the entire Dominion, Studebaker cars stand up and give the service at a minimum cost for upkeep and repairs.

If economy is a consideration with you, follow the example of thousands of others—buy a Studebaker car.

English Women Replace Men in Aircraft Plants

LONDON. — The construction of airships is being carried on in Great Britain largely by women.

A writer here gives the following interesting account of a visit to an air ship works:

"Until a few days ago, when I visited a royal naval air service station, I did not know that our great airships partly owe their being to the work of women. Yet, this is so, for many of the smaller but none the less important parts of the air monsters are entirely the result of feminine labor.

"In the huge sheds, where several ships rest when they are home from coast patrol, men and women were hard at work patching the envelope of one of the aerial giants which here spend their leisure hours, both inflated and deflated.

"The girls work in sensible and quite becoming brown overalls, the men in the navy blue of their service; and all appear so intent on their job that they obviously have no inclination to fritter away the time in which they can do work of such real importance to the country.

"That was my impression and it was corroborated by the capable forewoman who took me around the other buildings in which the women work.

"In one large and airy room I saw girls machining small seams in portions of what would one day form the envelope of a ship. At this time it was merely rubberproofed linen material, not yet covered with the substance which renders it silvery in appearance and absolutely gas-tight. When the seams were stitched other girls stuck the edges closely down with a solution and later tape is fastened tightely over, thus rendering the joints of the material equally gas-proof.

"In this room a great many small parts of the airships are completed—patches with wonderfully scalloped edges, which are fixed to an envelope for the attachment of rigging, eyelet holes through which the wire passes, and many other small but perfectly completed accessories.

"In a further room women were at work upon miniature airships and balloons, which will be used for experimental purposes and for targets.

"Here, also, I watched a beautiful performance. A propeller—a thing of exquisitively graceful lines—which had been linen covered (to prevent splintering) and painted by two girls—was now tried upon the balancer. The tiniest overweight of one blade would spoil its perfect motion, but this one was absolutely correct.

"Then I was hurried along to the welders' shops, where one woman is now employed, replacing a laborer, and doing excellent work. In addition to these departments there are several women tracers and mathematicians, women clerks and telegraphers, all of whom have superseded their male predecessors during the last year."

COLOSSAL OPERATIONS.

Demand Mobilization of Country's Financial Resources.

More than one million pounds of high explosives was blown up under the German forward trenches on the first day of the British advance in the Ypres salient. It is a war of unprecedented magnitude. The tremendous amount of high explosive used on one day only supplies an indication of the colossal nature of the whole struggle. Expenditures of money are on the same giant scale. The Dominion is carrying a financial burden unprecedented in its history. If it is to be carried successfully, the financial resources of the nation must be mobilized and utilized.

It is for the purpose of such mobilization and utilizatinn that the National Service Board has launched its present national campaign for thrift. The object of that campaign is to save every possible cent that it may be invested in Government War Savings Certificates and so help directly in the winning of the war.

True economy dictates investment in the War Savings Certificates. Your money is guaranteed and the return is excellent. In addition you are doing real war service. Save and give. 8-2

TRIPLE LINK CLUB HAD A GOOD OUTING

The Triple Link Club ran their first moonlight excursion down the river last night, per steamer Stoney Lake, and had to refuse admission to large numbers owing to the size of the crowd.

Tucker's Orchestra supplied excellent music for dancing, and everybody enjoyed themselves thoroughly.

Dawson Bros. did everything possible to supply excellent refreshments.

Those who have tickets and were refused admission can have their tickets exchanged for tickets for moonlight No. 2 on July 20th, by returning them to any of the committee.

FIRE CHIEF'S RUNABOUT WHAT COUNCIL ORDERED

And Strength of Department will Soon be Full Complement.

The Fire Department lacks but one man of being at full strength, and Ald. Dobbin reported to the Council last night that it was expected that this vacancy would be filled probably in a few days.

On Ald. Worth's suggestion the Department will be requested to flush George street, within the central business section. If this could be done once or twice a week during the summer months the street would be kept much cleaner, a condition that would not only please the merchants, but would also appeal to all citizens.

Ald. Dobbin made it clear to Ald. Smith that the Chief's runabout was exactly as approved by the Whole Council. It provided room for a chemical tank and two men.

Ald. Saunders suggested that a self-starter would be an additional facility, and if the Council can afford the money, the crank now used will eventually be discarded.

Summary of the Week's Market

Sugar Prices Inclined to Advance Eggs and Butter Are Easier

The following comment on the market situation as regards foodstuffs appeared in the Canadian Grocer this week:

There is an uncertain tone to the flour market, due to the possibility in large measure to speculation as to what the Canadian food controller is likely to do. In the United States it is anticipated that the food controller may take full control of the purchase and distribution of wheat and that millers will come under this control. This would place the handling of the flour in the hands of the Government. Should this be effected in the United States there is strong probability that it might have a bearing on the Canadian situation as the food controllers of both countries are avowedly working in harmony. There was a decline in flour during the week.

Sugar held in steady positon, although there was a disposition to look for higher prices in view of the advancing market in the United States. Consumption of sugar is reported to be increasing, as the preserving of fruit necessitates heavier drains on stocks. Strawberries will be at their point of heaviest production during the latter part of the present or first part of next week.

Butter was in easier market, declines having been recorded, due to the big production. Eggs are also easier in price, but there is a disposition to anticipate the bottom of the market is somewhere near on eggs. Live hogs commanded considerably higher prices, with fairly heavy arrivals. Poultry arrivals were better during the week, but the demand is light and prices have declined. New potatoes are reaching the market in larger quantities from the United States and prices are now down to a basis of old potatoes.

Among the lines in which changes were recorded in an upward direction are cotton clothes lines, cotton twine, lampwick, hand cleaner, shoe polish, salt, sulphur, jar rings, vinegar, rolled oats, cornmeal, cornflakes. Business continued to be quiet during the week.

PRINCESS STREET SEWER WORK INDEFINITELY POSTPONED.

Labour Wages High and Water in Trench an Additional Difficulty.

The construction of the Princess street sewer will not be resumed until the labour and working conditions are more favourable the Council decided last night. Ald. Weir reported that the new trip hammer for driving the steel sheeting had arrived, and Ald. Saunders urged that it be used at once. "We didn't buy it to look at it," he said.

Ald. Weir replied that labourers were now receiving $3.50 a day from the Leonard Construction Company. Consequently it was unlikely that men would work on the sewer at $2.92 a day, when higher wages were offered elsewhere.

Ald. Taylor moved, seconded by Ald. McIntyre that the work be resumed leaving the question of wages to the City Engineer and Ald. Weir. The motion was defeated however, the majority of the Council taking the position that at the present high cost of work it would be better to postpone the construction until later in the year.

SOUTH ENDERS ARE STILL LEAGUE LEADERS

Last night at the Water street alleys the South End took two of three games from the Can. Gen. Elec., and are still the league leaders. Both teams were a little off colour, the South End winning the first game by seven pins and the second by six pins. The Can. Gen. Elec. five came back in the third and won out by a good margin. Fielder for the Can. Gen. Elec. had high three games with a 480 total, and a single count of 207 in the last game. McDonald was high man for the South End with a 3-game total of 409.

Following are the scores:

JESS WILLARD IS NOW IN WEALTHY CITIZENS' CLASS

NEW YORK, July 8.—Jess Willard, one time cowpuncher according to tradition and present world's champion heavyweight, and circus owner, may also be billed now as Willard the capitalist. At least Jess has climbed into the circle of plutocrats, if the statement of Tom Jones, late pugilistic chaperone to the Pottawatomie mastodon, is to be accepted. Of course severance of connections with Willard and contemplated legal action for financial redress may play its part in Jones' statement.

However, Tom blew into Chicago, and in passing the time of day deposed as follows: "Willard is worth between $500,000 and $600,000 to-day. Of that amount about $[illegible],000 is stored away in cold cash on deposit in Chicago banks. One bank on the loop carries $90,000 in Willard's name, and another has $60,000. There is still a third neighbourhood bank near where Jess lives that carries a healthy check account. All of this has been salted away since Jess slapped the pugilistic crown from the ebony dome of Jack Johnson down in Havana on April 5, 1915.

"Things have been breaking pretty safe for Willard since he won the crown. [illegible] he made inventory after the Havana [illegible] his financial sheet [illegible] a surplus of $32,75. But [illegible] very fat and juicy with the [illegible] Willard's percentage ran as high as $6,000. Sums slightly below that were ordinary. And always the amount totalled up handsomely. In addition to the actual money which Willard has on deposit, he owns a farm of 3,000 acres, another of 600 in Michigan, four bungalows in Los Angeles and his home in Rogers Park, Chicago."

If Jones' statements are true Willard has gathered in an average of better than $5,000 a week since winning the title.

NORTH WARD UNOILED.

Ald. McIntyre Complains that Even Main Streets Are Dusty.

When Ald. McIntyre was chairman of the Board of Works last year and thereby chief dispenser of the road oil, it was remarked that the north ward streets were oiled early and in all directions. This summer, he stated at the Council meeting last night, his ward is suffering from lack of oil, particularly some of the main thoroughfares, while even side streets and in the West Ward had already been treated. He maintained that the first oiling every year should be on the main streets of the city.

Ald. Smith commented that Ald. McIntyre might inform his neighbours that Ashburnham streets have not had oil yet.

It may be excusable to add that Park Street from the DeLaval factory north past the C.G.E. Works is entitled to the earliest possible consideration, and as a busy thoroughfare part of it is in an extreme state of dustpoie.

Harden Upholds Ousting of Constantine
Writes Daring Article Justifying Entente

ROTTERDAM, June 24.—Maximilian Harden in the latest issue of Zukunft completely justifies the attitude of the Entente Powers toward Greece in general and Constantine in particular. He writes:

"England, France and Russia, who delivered Hellas from the Turk and created the new Greek State, giving the crown by the London Treaty of 1863 to the Danish Prince Wilhelm, stand firmly on their treaty rights. According to the eighth article of the older treaty of 1830 they may, if at once, even without the consent of the Greek State, send troops to that territory. That they have done.

"The King, who against the recognizable will of the people, dissolved the Chamber, who dismissed the Cabinet of Venizelos notwithstanding its unshakable majority, who forced new elections while the army was mobilized, who evacuated Fort Rupel to the Bulgarian enemy of the protecting powers—this King was guilty of a breach of the treaties of protection; as by his actions Greek neutrality has been violated and the independence of Greece reduced.

"The opinion that to the protecting powers belonged the right to control by occupation never has been contradicted. Constantine believed he was King by the grace of the protecting powers. He would long ago have been dethroned if the dynastic feeling of his Russian royal relatives had not protected him. If report is correct, he has accepted a yearly payment of $100,000 offered him by the protecting powers.

"He is scarcely dangerous any longer to the protecting powers, and the whole incident is far below the heights of tragedy. Should Venizelos return to Athens he will hold the strongest trumps in his hands."

Voting Reform In Great Britain To Be Drastic

The text of the Representation of the People Bill, issued in London, shows some details which are new and interesting.

A woman cannot be registered as a Parliamentary elector until she has reached the age of 30 years. It is provided that the registration officer, before registering any woman as a Parliamentary elector, may require her to make a statutory declaration as to her age. Most registration officers will surely rejoice that the putting of this most delicate question is left to his discretion.

There are special provisions to ensure that no person shall exercise more than two votes at a general election. The following questions may be asked of any voter at a poll:

1. In the case of a man voting in respect of a residence qualification: "Have you already voted at this general election in respect of a residence qualification?"

2. In the case of a man voting in respect of a qualification other than a residence qualification: "Have you already voted at this general election in respect of a qualification other than a residence qualification?"

3. In the case of a woman: "Have you already voted more than once at this general election?"

The following declarations must be made at university elections:

(In the case of a man)—"I have not voted at this general election in respect of any qualification other than a residence qualification."

(In the case of a woman)—"I have not voted more than once at this general election.

Special provision is made for the registration of persons on war service for any constituency for which they would have had the necessary qualification but for the war. This section applies to any person who, in connection with the war, is abroad, and is:

(a) Serving as a member of any of the naval or military forces of the Crown; or,

(b) In service of a naval or military character for which payment is made out of money provided by Parliament; or

(c) Serving in any work of the British Red Cross Society, or the St. John Ambulance Association, or any other body with a similar object.

There is also to be an absent voters' list. Any person with the necessary qualification may be placed on this list, if the registration officer is satisfied that there is a probability that, by reason of the nature of his occupation, service, or employment, he may be debarred from voting in the constituency. A ballot paper will be sent to each person on the absent voters' list, to be marked by him, and returned to the returning officer.

The method of proportional representation by a transferable vote which is proposed for a constituency returning three or more members, is thus defined:

The expression "transferable vote" means a vote—

(a) Given so as to indicate the voter's preference for the candidates in order; and

(b) Capable of being transferred to the next choice when the vote is not required to give a prior choice the necessary quota of votes, or when, owing to the deficiency in the number of the votes given for a prior choice, that choice is eliminated from the list of candidates.

The enactments repealed include two passed in the reign of Henry VI. on the qualifications of "electors of knights of the shires."

Student, 60, Wins Honour in Class Numbering 264

NEW YORK, July 7.—Two hundred and sixty-four young men and William Mackellar Brittain received their degrees at the seventy-first commencement of the College of the City of New York. Mr. Brittain is 60 years old and completed his college course entirely at the night sessions of the institution.

He was one of the honour men of his class and in recognition of his achievements was recipient of a special prize bestowed upon him by Lee Kohns of the board of trustees. Mr. Brittain left a gift behind him in departing from the college which he has seen chiefly after nightfall. He gave $300 in Liberty bonds as the will be added to in the future by others will be added to in the future by other graduates.

The oldest graduate in the class of 1917 was not present to receive his diploma. He is in the service of the government for the duration of the war. Many other degrees were conferred upon absent graduates who have already abandoned the cap and gown for khaki or the sailor's blouse.

VICTORIA DEALS WITH LICENSING BY NOVEL METHOD

FIRST TEN YEARS IN EXPERIMENT SHOW SATISFACTORY RESULTS.

SYDNEY, N.S.W.—One of the most interesting experiments yet attempted in liquor licensing legislation has just completed its first stage of ten years in Victoria, and most people who have watched the results deem them an unqualified success.

Prior to 1906 [illegible] the uncertain and inequitable option law. As in Maine, [illegible] the inadequacies of the system were pronounced, and something better was sought. So an act was passed having for its object the reduction of the number of hotels, the improvement of the quality of those that remained and the fair compensation of the hotelkeepers forced out of business.

The system, which was to be tried for ten years from 1906, was roughly as follows: The number of licensees in each district was fixed on a population basis, and all licenses in excess of the stipulated number were to be gradually cancelled. There were then 3,446 licenses in Victoria, which total was 1,368 in excess of the number to be permitted. The compensation payable to owners and licensees put out of business was based on the value of the hotel during three years prior to 1906. A compensation fund was created by an annual levy of 5 per cent. of the cost of the liquor purchased by each hotelkeeper. As many of the excess hotels were to be wiped out each year as the money thus made available would allow. A license reduction board took charge of the experiment.

1,000 HOTELS DELICENSED

The ten years expired on December 31. In that time £545,045 was paid into the compensation fund, and with £540,851 in this, 1,054 hotels were delicensed. When the board started operations, almost all the districts were over-licensed, and as the board's policy was to cut out the drinking shop and the badly conducted hotel, there was keen competition among hotelkeepers to appear pleasing in the sight of the board. The effect, from a public point of view, was excellent. But as the board's operations continued, the number of districts not over-licensed increased, and these licensees, having no particular inducement to be otherwise, were in some instances guilty of unsatisfactory conduct.

With the expiry of the ten years, Victoria was to revert to the local option system, and the first vote was to be taken at the first general election after January 1917. The licenses reduction board has become a licensing court. But, on account of the war, the first local option poll has been postponed until the second general election after January, 1917, and the licensing court has been instructed to proceed in the meantime "as it reduction had been carried in every licensing district throughout the state." The licensing court is now proceeding, with enthusiasm, to deal with those licensees who have been conducting their houses in a disreputable manner, and defying the licensing board because they thought they were safe in an under-licensed district.

Labour World Does Not Agree With President Watters

MONTREAL, July 7.—The Labour World, the official organ of Union Labourism in Montreal, does not stand behind President J. C. Watters on the conscription issue, and his advocacy of a general strike. In an editorial to-day it says: Several labour leaders have lately advocated the drastic measure referred to by Mr. Watters as being the only means to prevent compulsory military service from being established in Canada. We are of the opinion that no officers of the labour organizations ought to commit themselves on such a serious and far-reaching measure before securing the opinion of the rank and file and also that of the executive of the American Federation of Labour, under whose jurisdiction the local unions of Canada are placed.

Dr. Edwin F. Hatton Visits Peterborough

Retires From His Official Position in Grenada on Pension After Thirty Years Service

Honourable Edwin F. Hatton M. D., and Mrs. Hatton are in the city, the guests of Dr. Hatton's mother, Mrs. David Hatton, 480 Charlotte street. Dr. Hatton has been chief medical officer of Grenada, one of the Windward Islands of the West Indies group. He has held this position for thirty odd years; and for some years he was a member of the legislative assembly and has during his stay in the Island held a position of important prominence and influence. After thirty years of service he has retired on pension. On his departure from Grenada he was parted with with regret and honoured by distinguished attention the Governor of the Island, conveying Dr. and Mrs. Hatton, in his private barge to their steamer. He and Mrs. Hatton will take residence in England; but their many friends in Peterborough regret that they did not select their old home, Peterborough, as a permanent residence. Dr. Hatton's only son is in uniform at present at Petawawa.

Two German Agents Arrested at New York

NEW YORK, July 7.—Agents for the Department of Justice yesterday afternoon arrested two Germans, described as Carl Heynen, a German organizer and an authority on Mexican affairs, and F. A. Burgemeister. The latter is alleged to be a spy paymaster.

Heynen, once German Consul at Mexico City, and, prior to that, connected with the Hamburg-American Line, was mentioned in connection with munition contracts, alluded to in correspondence seised by the British in von Papen's effects at Falmouth, while the former attache was returning to Germany. The Federal agents who made the arrests said the men were taken into custody by order of the authorities in Washington.

Sweden Is Worrying Over Food Outlook

STOCKHOLM, July 7.—Washington despatches forecasting the sharpest limitation or possible discontinuance of all exports to neutrals are causing anxiety. Crops here are likely to be below the average. Manufactories in various lines are closed by lack of raw material. Others cannot maintain production much longer. Benzine and petroleum are nearing exhaustion. Leather is so scarce that a pair of ordinary shoes costs from ten to twelve dollars. Automobile tires bring $500 apiece.

Australian General Is Killed at the Front

LONDON, July 7.—General William Holmes, C.M.G., D.S.O., was killed and Premier Holman of New South Wales, Australian wounded, when a German shell exploded near them while they were visiting the Australian lines in France. General Holmes commanded the 5th Australian Brigade at the Dardanelles. He was born in Australia in 1862, and served in the South African War. Premier Holman's complete recovery is expected.

COUNCIL HANDLES COAL OFFER GINGERLY, BUT THE FIVE CARS MAY BE, EVEN NOW, ON THE WAY

The nearer the Council approaches the actuality of purchasing an auxiliary supply of coal for the protection of the citizens next winter, the closer it finds itself to a dilemma on either horn of which the aldermen fear they may be caught. The problem of to buy or not to buy is discouraging from both angles. If the city establishes a yard, the retail price may drop below the city's, leaving a certain loss, for civic loyalty, the aldermen realize, cannot be trusted in an extremity. The experience of the Co-operative Society is sufficient guide. If the city declines to enter the market, the scarcity of last winter may be even intensified, and many citizens may suffer. It is a gambling chance that frequently confronts, in its principal elements, the retail coal dealers,, but the Council realizes that the chance it may take is with the citizens' money, and should the market decline below the city's prospective price, some of the ratepayers may forget the present uncertainties of the market.

Hence a letter from Sophie Kohen, a woman speculator, with whom the Council has come in touch, stating that she had in Scranton five cars of egg coal for the city provided a round of discussion at last night's Council meeting that dealt with apparently every phase, present and prospective, of the local and even international markets.

Ald. Worth left an uneasy feeling when he remarked that the letter read to him that the coal was likely on the way to Peterborough. And the city hadn't the money nor the legal right to buy it if it came. Mrs. Kohen quoted $6 at the mines, which would mean $8.44 on the cars in Peterborough.

Ald. McIntyre and Worth moved that the city buy the five cars. But the Mayor pointed out that the city hadn't the money yet.

Ald. McIntyre—Why didn't you say we didn't have it. Here we've talked all around this as if we could take some action.

It was finally decided to telegraph Mrs. Kohen to hold the coal, if she had not already forwarded it, and in the meantime Ald. Dobbin was to go to Toronto, where she is expected in a short time. She is now in one of the coal districts in the Eastern States.

Ald. Dobbin stated that J. E. A. Fitzgerald & Co. had quoted $9.20 for coal to be supplied the city buildings, fire hall and isolation hospital, and the R. Hicks Co. $9 for large coal, practically the same as broken coal, and $10 for egg size. Some of the aldermen believed that a saving could be made by bringing in the five cars of egg if there was sufficient local demand for it. Ald. Weir stated that most of the egg requirements had already been contracted for by local consumers. If the cars were stove or nut coal, the offer would have appeared in a different light.

ed that if a single shot is fired in August revolution will follow. The situation is no longer good. They are on the track of the German Kaiser, too, and if it lasts much longer it will be the end of Prussia, for the Prussians and the English are the masters. These two alone are carrying on the war. The others are merely in their hands."

If much of that sort of stuff is reaching Prince Rupprecht's men, the decline in fighting spirit of the Bavarians is removed from the realm of a matter for wonder. I understand that our casualties have been very light during the past two weeks and exceptionally so in the killed and missing classes.

LONDON, July 7.—Russia has started her offensive now on the Pinsk front, according to a Reuter despatch received here to-day. Violent fighting near this city was reported. Russian artillery is levelling away all obstacles in the way of an infantry advance, and the city of Pinsky is already in flames.

PARIS, July 7.—Germany has apparently become convinced of the fruitlessness of her countre offensive against the French south of Laon. To-day's French official report detailed a cessation of fighting in that region and a resumption of artillery activity at another part of the line, east of Rheims, in the LaRoyere-Pantheon, and south of Morrenvilelrs. The night was calm elsewhere. In the period from June 21 to June 30 the statement said 18 enemy airplanes and one captive balloon had been downed. Four others seriously damaged were seen to fall.

Four Runaways At Same Time Caused Some Excitement

Four runaways, staged simultaneously yesterday afternoon, enlivened the C.P.R. freight yards for a short time. The delivery horse of J. E. Lillico's grocery store ran east on Charlotte Street, having started from some place out in the West-End. Its driver, V. McManus, and another boy, jumped from the waggon at George Street. The animal finally brought up up the C.P.R. yards, where it immediately started three other runaways. W. J. Crough, of Ennismore, was loading a waggon at one of the sheds. His team bolted when the Lillico horse pulled up with a rattle and a cloud of dust, and ran south to Sherbrooke Street to Aylmer and north. At the corner of Hunter and Aylmer Streets, James Goselin caught the waggon, jumped in and, grabbing the reins, brought the horses to a standstill at Brock Street. Foster's express horse had followed the team, and stopped when they were quieted. A Peterborough Cereal team ran around the C.P.R. yards until they were headed off, thus completing the quartette. None of the horses were injured.

DEATHS.

SWAILES.— Suddenly, on July 7th, 1917, at Peterborough, Annie Swailes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Swailes, 257 Princess street, aged 31 years.

The funeral will take place Monday afternoon, July 9th, 1917, at 2 p.m.

BODY WAS RECOVERED

The body of the late Miss O'Connor, daughter of Mr. James O'Connor, Otonabee, who was drowned on Monday at Edmonton, was recovered on Wednesday, and the funeral took place this morning in Edmonton.

Belgium's Governor At Point of Death

AMSTERDAM, July 7.—It is reported by Les. Nouvelles, of Maastricht, that General von Falkenhausen, Governor-General of Belgium, is dangerously ill and that hope of his recovery has been abandoned.

THREE RECRUITS

French-Canadians from Montreal Had Stolen Ride on C.P.R.

Three French Canadians, arrested at Havelock for stealing a ride from Montreal on the C.P.R., were each fined $4.60 in the Police Court this morning. They expressed a readiness to enlist and a recruiting Sergeant took charge of them. If they did not pass the Doctor they were to report back.

Russian Priest Declares Revolt

PETROGRAD, July 7.—Estratidas, a priest of Feodosia, in the Crimea, having been forbidden to preach and sent to trial in an ecclesiastical court on the charge of speculating in charity funds, declared a revolt. His adherents seized a church from the militia, after which the church was surrounded by troops.

When the militia raided the house of Estratidas, he resisted and the bishop ordered his arrest and internment in a monastery.

The Russkaya Vedomosty reports that the peasants of two cantons near Odessa, in view of their inability to obtain clothing, have passed a resolution to organise "processions of naked men."

AN IRISH TROOPER.

Passing through a military hospital, a distinguished visitor noticed a private in one of the Irish regiments who had been terribly injured.

To the orderly the visitor said: "That's a bad case. What are you going to do with him?"

"He's going back, sir," replied the orderly.

"Going back!" said the visitor, in surprised tones.

"Yes!" said the orderly. "He thinks he knows who done it."

United Farmers' Luncheon Largely Attended To-day

About one hundred and ten farmers attended the luncheon at the Empress to-day, given in honour of Mr. John Kennedy, vice-president of the Grain Growers' Grain Company who was the principal speaker and the central figure of this afternoon's convention of the United Farmers' clubs of this district.

Prosperous and progressive farmers accompanied by their wives filled the dining rooms of the hotel providing striking evidence of the growth of the seed of unity and co-operation that has so long lain dormant in rural Ontario. The dinner, with its large attendance was the outward expression of the new spirit of trust that is linking the farmers of this province as it has already wrought a powerful federation among the farmers of the West. And from the West there is the promise of a new vision, new enterprises, new ideals offered in compensation to the old province for the loss of many of its best farmers who answered the urge of western opportunities.

Mr. Kennedy looks like a big business executive, and he is, but he is also a farmer living near Rosser, Manitoba. In his address at the luncheon, after he was introduced by Mr. F. E. Ellis, Mr. Kennedy laid before the hundred farmers the gospel of rural interests as it was given to the West. The Farmers were not entering into competition with the merchants. In the West they handled only half a dozen bulky articles that were largely used on the farms. Shelf-goods remained for the merchants. The Grain Growers had in their own purchases eliminated the big middlemen, and they approached the merchants, urged and assisted them to organise and particularly to free themselves from the wholesale middlemen. Thus, Mr. Kennedy pointed out, the merchants were actually assisted, and the farmers desired to assist them, and to maintain the regular order of retail trade.

Mr. Kennedy spoke on the question of direct taxation which he stated the Grain Growers and United Farmers strongly advocated and without which they would not be satisfied. They also required direct legislation by which a closer control could be exercised over elected representatives. Mr. Kennedy's speech was non-partisan, and plainly indicated, as did the applause of his audience, that the old party idolatry is fast breaking up. The evils of land speculation, the greed of the "land hogs," and the resulting retardation of the growth of the country, these were the conditions that would be remedied with direct taxation. The greatest legalized stealing the world has ever known, was Mr. Kennedy's opinion of the present system of taxation protected by the government of to-day.

TWO DOG FINES.

Permitted Dogs to Run at Large—Little Girl Bitten.

Mrs. Webb, of Harvey street, was fined $4.60 for permitting a breach of the dog by-law. Her dog was allowed out on a leash in charge of a three-year-old boy, from whom it broke awa yand bit a little girl.

Another $4.60 fine was exacted from a south end man for allowing his dog to run at large.

D. Scollard, of Enniamore, paid $4.60 for driving his horse past a street car that was not moving.

Neutral Countries Will Be Hard Hit By The American Embargo

After July 15th No Vital Foodstuffs or Supplies Can Be Sent Abroad Without Licenses From the Department—Will Prevent Supplies Being Re-exported to Germany—Holland and Switzerland Will Suffer.

WILL HAVE TO LINE UP

(By Carl D. Great, U. P. Staff Correspondent.)

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, July 9.—America's embargo, plus internal German troubles, promise soon to hang two new mill stones about Germany's neck. The embargo curtailing supplies to neutrals, lest they be re-exported to Germany, will be effective July 15. There after no vital foodstuffs, munitions, fertilizer or metals can be sent abroad without licenses from the Department of Commerce. Certain Congressmen strongly favour having the President so screw down these limitations that the neutrals will have to align themselves with the United States unless they wish to starve. Meantime, according to press reports, Germany is confronted with troubles from within, a demand for parliamentary reform and a general political situation wherein new peace terms are apparently forthcoming.

THE ALLIES FIRST.

The pressure from without and from within seems likely to be such as to give the Teuton authorities some difficult months ahead. Neutrals will suffer more unless they divert their tied up shipping to Allies' uses and likewise permit a patrol of the Scandinavian coast to bag submarines, now using territorial waters as a safe outlet to the sea. In issuing regulations on the embargo, President Wilson pointed out that the United States wants to heed neutral needs, but he just as emphatically showed the prime need of feeding the United States and its allies first and of shutting off any re-export of supplies to Germany through neutral nations. The Scandinavian countries and Holland and Switzerland will be hard hit by the embargo.

ST. JOHNSBURY, Vt., July 9.—The police and county authorities are searching for the body of little Olive Bradshaw, who is believed to have been murdered. States Attorney Campbell and County Sheriff Worthen announced that Miss Etta May Hicks and Mrs. Alvin Kenniston had confessed that they had killed the eight-year-old girl by beating and choking her. According to their alleged admissions, Miss Hicks, housekeeper and the child's father, John M. Bradshaw, a house painter wished to get rid of the girl because she was tired of caring for her. The girl was made a cripple by infantile paralysis a year ago. Both women are in jail here.

BULLDOG LOST HIS NERVE.

There are some incidents about the mascots in the big naval battle which are worth repeating. The mascot on the Tiger was a bulldog, a fine fellow. When getting into the battle the crew were a bit concerned as to how their favourite would take the crashing of high explosives on the ship, so they plugged his ears with cotton wool, wrapped his head around as if he had a heavy dose of toothache, and a couple of men took the bulldog, much to his annoyance, to a room that was thought to be as quiet as the ship could provide. The dog didn't quite fancy being treated as an invalid and resented the coddling, but when the shots began he took it pretty badly, and was mighty glad he had a pal sitting on either side holding him by the paws.

Another boat had a fine, big, black cat. He was overlooked when they got into action, and the first shell that came aboard this fellow got loose and took a flying dive overboard. As the boat was going about twenty-seven knots, even the most tender-hearted jack tar could hardly risk going after Tommy. On another ship they had a little bantom, which strutted about more proudly than the dinkiest midshipman and with as big a show of courage as the hardiest of the old seadogs. The tars were proud of the old seadogs. The tars were proud of the "swank" their pet could assume before strangers. When the first German shell crashed on board the bantam lost all his fine show and flew down one of the ventilators. When he was rescued and photographed after the fight he presented a bedraggled appearance.

Russians Capture Several Hundred Prisoners Together With Two Villages

Special to The Examiner:

PETROGRAD, July 9.—Russian successes continue at several points on the eastern front. Russian troops have captured and fortified a forest with all enemy positions, Hill 888, and penetrated the village of Codovin, the Galician offensive reports. Russia's "death regiment" of women have left for the front. Supplementary statement says after fighting all day Saturday, 589 prisoners were taken and two villages which are strongly held. A later War Office announcement says Germans are making desperate attempts to recapture lost ground in Galicia. Armored motor cars are assisting the infantry in massed formation. All attacks repulsed.

Four German Airplanes Shot Down After Raid

Thirty-seven Persons Killed and 141 Injured---Naval Airmen Bring Down Three Raiders in North Sea--Another Falls at Mouth of Thames.

THREE THRILLING BATTLES OCCURRED IN AIR

LONDON, July 9.—Thirty-seven men, women and children were killed and 141 wounded when the fleet of twenty German aeroplanes bombarded London early Saturday. Lord French officially announced the casualties late Saturday afternoon.

Of the dead 28 were men, six women and three children. The injured included 74 men, 30 women, and 37 children.

Lord French reported 34 were killed and 139 injured in the metropolis alone. The statement of Lord French mentioned no military damage being done. Fronts of houses were blown in, however, and wreckage soon littered the district over which the bomb dropping was concentrated.

The Admiralty announced three of the German air raiders brought down over the North Sea, and Lord French announced the destruction of another, which was brought down at the mouth of the Thames.

"The enemy raiding squadron was chased by Royal Naval Air Service machines from this country and engaged forty miles out at sea off the east coast" said the Admiralty statement. "Two enemy machines were observed to crash into the sea and the third enemy machine was seen to fall in flames off the mouth of the Scheldt. All our machines returned safely."

SOUGHT SAFETY IN BASEMENTS

The raiders, probably numbering about 20, dropped bombs for a quarter of an hour in various parts of London, some of them in the heart of the city, where damage is reported. Fortunately a majority of the people in the capital had just enough warning of the raid to enable them to seak safety in basements.

Apparently profiting by their poor aim in previous raids, due to the great height at which the bombs were released, Saturday's German air pirates flew very low. They were plainly seen from the street. This was in direct contrast to the great raid of June 13, when the sixteen German raiders flew at such a great height that they were practically invisible.

The curiosity of Londoners, heretofore responsible for many deaths, because of a rush to the streets to gape at the invaders, has now worn off. It was noticeable that as soon as the sound of the anti-aircraft guns engaging the raiders was heard most of the populace hurried into their cellars. The peppering of the guns aring at the Germans gave ample warning of the raid.

A most exciting running fight between British and German aeroplanes was witnessed by people in a London suburb. After dropping a shower of bombs the Germans made off in a southerly direction. By this time British aviators had reached a height at which they could engage the raiders, and the chase began, machine guns coming into action.

THREE AERIAL BATTLES WAGED

Even in basements the effect of the bombs was felt, the ground trembling as though an earthquake was in progress. Windows were shaken from frames, plaster from walls and soot from chimneys.

Evidently there was considerable difference in the calibre of the bombs dropped. Some of them had but slight effect, throwing up clouds of shrapnel—like debris. Others evidently were filled with most powerful explosive.

Three battles in the airwere waged With the British machines relentless by pursuing the Germans were manoeuvred and twisted and turned in an effort to prevent their retreat being cut off. Shrapnel from the anti-aircraft guns burst all about the contending aeroplanes. Thousands outside of the district over which the raiders made their attack watched the sky fight.

No estimate has been made up to a late hour of the number of bombs dropped. The higher explosives were poured down upon defenseless areas. Men, women and children fell maimed in the streets.

NEW GERMAN UNIFORM OF METAL FILAMENT

LONDON, July 7.—Germany's latest device to supply the lack of wool is to manufacture uniforms of metal filament reduced to a single fibre. The material looks like cloth, but is inclined to be brittle and furnishes only the slightest protection against cold. The paper fibre the Germans are using for uniforms gives less wear that the metal composition and cannot withstand heavy rain.

"The Postmaster's Daughter"

By LOUIS TRACY

"She had, and has. Having educated herself out of the rut, however, she left many gamers at the post. One is persistent—a youngish horse-coper named Elkin. Adelaide Melhuish probably saw her with Grant. Neither Doris nor Grant knew that Adelaide Melhuish, as such, was in Steynholme. That is to say, the girl had seen Miss Melhuish in the post-office, and recognised her as a famous actress, but that is all. And now I shan't tell you any more, or you'll know all that I know, which is too much."

The cigar was behaving itself at last, having burnt down to the fracture, so Winter's thoughts could be given exclusively to the less important matter of the Steynholme affair.

"To begin with," he said instantly, "Ingerman can establish a cast-iron alibi."

"So I imagined. But he is a bad lot. I throw in that item gratuitously."

The oddly-assorted pair walked in silence until Vauxhall Bridge was in sight. Winter pulled out a watch.

"What time did you say my train left Victoria?" he inquired.

"Plenty of time yet to make your guess and listen to further details," scoffed Furneaux.

"Frankly, I give it up. But if I must share in the hunt, I tell you now that, metaphorically speaking, I shall cling to the postmaster's daughter till torn away by sheer force of evidence."

Furneaux dug his colleague in the ribs.

"That's the effect of constant association with me, James," he cackled gleefully. "Ten years ago you would have pounced on Elkin. You've hit it! I'm a proud mon the day. The pupil is equalling the master.

"You little rat; I had hanged my first murderer before you knew the meaning of habeas corpus! Let's turn now, and get to business."

Few Treasury barristers pleading for the Crown, could have marshaled the facts with such lucidity and fairness as Furneaux during their saunter to Victoria Station.

"Nothing extenuate, nor set down aught in malice," said Othello to Lodovico, and these Scotland Yard men, charged with so great a responsibility, never forget the great-hearted Moor's advice.

When Winter took his seat in the train at five o'clock, he could have drawn a plan of Steynholme, which he had never seen, and marked thereon the exact position of each house mentioned in this record. Moreover, he was acquainted with the chief characters by sight, as it were. And, finally, he and Furneaux had arranged a plan of campaign.

Furneaux refreshed a jaded intellect by an evening at the opera. Next morning at eleven o'clock, he was inquiring for Mr. Ingerman at an office in a certain alley off Cornhill.

A smart youth interposed a printed formula between the visitor and a door marked "Private." Furneaux wrote his name, and put "Steynholme" in the space reserved for "business." He was admitted at once. Mr. Ingerman, apparently, was immersed in a pile of letters but he swept them all aside, and greeted the caller affably.

"Glad to see you, Mr. Furneaux," he said. "I missed you on the train yesterday. Did you ——"

"Nice quiet place you've got here, Mr. Ingerman," interrupted the detective.

"Yes. But as I was about to ——"

"Artistically furnished, too," went on Furneaux dreamily. "Oak, self-toned carpets and rugs, restful decorations. Those etchings, also, show taste in the selection. 'The Embankment—by Night,' Fitting sequel to The City—by Day. I'm a child in such matters, but 'pon my honour, if tempted to pour out my hard-earned savings in the lap of a City magnate, I would disgorge here more readily than in some saloon-bar of finance, where the new mahogany glistens and the typewriters click like machine-guns."

Ingerman was nettled. He glanced at his correspondence.

"You have a somewhat far-fetched notion of my position," he said, with a staccato quality in his velvet voice. "I am not a magnate, and I toil here to make, not to lose, money for my clients."

"A noble ideal. Forgive me if my rhapsody took the wrong line."

"And I'm sure you will forgive me if I now put the question which leads to the probable cause of your visit. Did you travel by the two o'clock train yesterday?"

"Yes. I avoided you purposely."

"May I ask, why?"

"My mind was weary. I wanted my wits about me when I tackled you."

Ingerman smiled, and leaned back, resting both elbows on the arms of the chair, and bringing the tips of his fingers together.

"Proceed," he said.

"You prefer that I should drag out a statement piecemeal rather than receive it enbloc?"

"Put it that way, if you like."

"I shall even enjoy it. To clear the ground, are you the Isidor G. Ingerman who exploited the Al Mine in Abyssinia?"

Ingerman's finger tips whitened under a sudden pressure, but his voice remained calm.

"An unfortunate episode," he said. "And the Aegean Transport Company, Limited?"

"Into which I was inveigled by the Greeks. But why this history of ruined enterprises?"

"It's a sort of schooling. I have noticed that the smartest counsel invariably begin with a few fireworks in order to induce the proper frame of mind in a witness."

"Does that mean that you want me to blurt out bitter and prejudiced accusations against Mr. Grant?"

"I want to hear what you have to say about the death of your wife. You forced the cross-examining role on me. I'm doing my best."

"Ingerman kept silent during many seconds. When he spoke, his cultured voice was suave as ever."

"Perhaps it was my fault, Mr. Furneaux," he said. "You gave me a strong hint. I should have taken it and we might have started an interesting chat on pleasanter lines. So with apologies for my insistence about the train, I made a fresh start. I believe firmly that Grant was directly concerned in the murder. And I shall justify my belief. Within the past fortnight a rapprochement between my wife and myself became possible. It was spoken of, even reduced to the written word. I have her letters. Mine should be found among her belongings. May I take it that they have been found?"

"Yes," said Furneaux.

"Ah. So far, so good. My poor wife reached the parting of the ways. She saw that her life was becoming an empty husk. I think that the theatre was palling on her. But I see now that she still cherished the dream of winning the man she loved—not me, her husband, but that handsome dilettante, Grant. I take it, therefore, that she went to Steynholme to determine whether or not the glamour of the past was really dead. Unfortunately, she witnessed several idyllic passages between her one time lover and a charming village girl. Imagine the effect of this discovery on one of her artistic temperament. 'Hell hath no fury like a woman scorned,' and my unhappy wife would lash herself into an emotional frenzy. She would tear a passage to rags. Her very training on the stage would come to her aid in seathing words—perhaps threats. If Grant remained cold to her appeal the village beauty should be made to suffer. Then he would flame into storm. And so the upas-tree of tragedy spread its poisonous shade until reason fled, and some demon whispered 'Kill!' I find no flaw in my theory. It explains the inexplicable. Now, how does it strike you, Mr. Furneaux?"

"As piffle!"

"Is that so? I have the advantage of course in knowing my wife's peculiarities. And I have made some study of Grant. He admits already that he is under suspicion. Why, if he is innocent? Mind you, I pay little heed to the crude disposal of the body. Horace, I think has a truism that art lies in concealing art. My wife's presence in Steynholme was no secret. She would have been missed from the inn. Search would be made. The murder must be revealed sooner or later, and the murderer himself was aware that by no twisting or turning could his name escape association with that of his victim. Why not face the music at once, he would argue. The very simplicity of the means adopted to fasten a kind of responsibility on him might prove his best safeguard. Even now I doubt whether any jury will find him guilty on the evidence as it stands, but my duty to my unhappy wife demands that I shall strengthen the arm of justice by every legitimate means in my power."

"Is that your case, Mr. Ingerman?"

"At present, yes."

"It assumes that the police adopt your view."

"Not necessarily. The police must do their work without fear or favor, but Grant can be committed for trial on a coroner's warrant."

"Grant is certainly in an awkward place."

"Only a little while ago you dismissed my theory of the crime as airy persiflage."

"That was before you quoted Horace. I have a great respect for Horace. His ode to the New Year is a gem."

"Would you care to see my wife's recent letters?"

"If you please."

"They are at my flat. I'll send you copies. The originals are always at your disposal for comparison, of course. Now may I, without offense, ask a question?"

"Yes."

"Is it wise that the emissary of Scotland Yard should leave Steynholme?"

"But didn't I tell you that I might obtain light in the neighborhood of Cornhill?"

"True. I could have given you the facts in Steynholme."

"I'm a greater believer in what the theatre people call 'atmosphere.' Some of your facts, Mr. Ingerman, remind me of an expert's report in a mining prospectus. When tested by cyanide of potassium the gold in the ore often changes into iron pyrites. But don't hug the delusion that I shall neglect Steynholme. The murderer is there (not in London), and unless my intellect is failing he will be tried for his life at the next Lewes Assizes. Meanwhile, may I give you a bit of advice?"

"By all means."

"Employ a sound lawyer, one who will avoid needless mud-slinging. Good day! Send those letters to the Yard by to-night's post if practicable."

When the door closed on Furneaux Ingerman smiled.

"I've given that little Frenchman furiously to think," he murmured.

But the "little Frenchman" was smiling, too. He had elaborated the scheme already discussed with Winter. It was much to his liking, although unorthodox, rather crack-brained, more than risky, and altogether opposed to the instructions of the police manual. Each of these drawbacks was a commendation to Furneaux. In fact the Steynholme mystery had taken quite a favorable turn during that talk with Ingerman.

WHEN A FISH JUMPS.

Manner in Which the Fish Uses Structure to Leap.

To understand how the fish makes his wonderful leap in the air one must understand his manner of ordinary locomotion, and at the base of this lies structure. In general the fish body is "irregularly spindle-shaped;" the greatest bulk is toward one end—the head—and the back, or dorsal, side of the creature is broader and heavier than the under, or ventral, side. Thus the centre of gravity in body is toward the head and back. Two sets of fins are part of the swimming equipment, the caudal, dorsal and anal fins being vertical, while the pectoral and ventral pairs of fins are more or less horizontal. When it is added that the body is supplied with an air-sack to render it about the same weight, bulk for bulk, as water, and that the entire body is compact, muscular, and springy, the machinery of locomotion is fairly complete.

The principle used in swimming is that of the oar used to scull a boat, or the paddle used similarly with a canoe, or that of the muskrat's flat tail, or the snake in motion either on land or in water. For the most part, the fish's propeller is his broad tail. The fins, and more especially the horizontal pairs (pectoral and ventral), have merely a balancing and steering function, and chiefly the former. They serve to keep the end-heavy spindle from up-ending and also from turning wrong side up. That is, a fish deprived of his pectoral and ventral fins would tend to stand on his head and also to turn over on his back. In short, the motive power comes from the strong, lithe tail and back part of the body, which is wagged from side to side, smiting with its flat plane, straightening out and shooting the body forward. But the fish has the oar entirely outclassed, for the supple body takes the position of a reverse curve that traveling in a wavering course curving and recurving, allows the tail and also the dorsal and anal fins to strike the water flat and hard without the drag of the oar. Thus in his wriggling he slaps and pries himself onward; and because the water offers slight resistance to his pointed body, he progresses with marvelous ease and agility.

A String of Anecdotes.

An interesting and amusing collection of anecdotes, chiefly relating to prominent churchmen, has been issued in a small volume with the title, "Attic Salt," by the Reverend T. Selby Henrey, Vicar of St. George, Brentford. Here is one told of himself by Bishop Gore, one time Bishop of Birmingham and now Bishop of Oxford—

"In Birmingham I once overheard two street arabs discussing my appearance, and at last one said to the other—

"'I tell you what, Bill; he's a Highlander what's caught cold in the legs!'"

Two good stories are told of Archbishop Temple, whose brusque manner offended so many people—

"A lady sitting next to him at dinner said—

"'My aunt was prevented at the last moment from sailing in that ship which foundered last week. Would you not call that a most providential interposition?'

"'Can't tell! Didn't know your aunt!' was the reply.

Not long after Dogpatch Tempus's appointment to the Bishopric of Exeter he was walking down the principal street of his cathedral city when he saw the evening newspaper placard and heard the newsboys shouting, 'Astounding Statement by the new Bishop of Exeter.' The Bishop's curiosity was aroused, and he bought a paper, and by the light of a street lamp read—

"'The new Bishop of Exeter presided this afternoon at the annual meeting of the Church of England Temperance Society, and made the astounding statement that he had never been drunk in his life!'"

Here is the inevitable story of Father Healy—

"Judge Keogh had a favorite daughter, Jessie. One day, when Father Healy was going to dine with Keogh, he met in the avenue this young lady riding a donkey, which was led by her cousin.

"'Why is he led?' asked Healy.

"'Lest he should run away with me.'

"'He'd be no ass to run away with you, Jessie!'"

Doctor Potter, Bishop of New York, was once asked by a lady why, in the many pictures and statues of angels exhibited, the angels are always depicted either as women or young men without beards or moustaches. The Bishop's answer contained what Mr. Henrey regards as one of the prettiest compliments ever paid to the fair sex. He said—

"'Every one knows that women naturally inherit the Kingdom of Heaven, but the men only get in by a very close shave!'"

"Free and Equal."

The author of the phrase "All men are born free and equal" was John Lowell, a Massachusetts jurist and statesman, who was born in Newburyport, Mass., in 1743.

John Lowell was the first descendant of Percival Lowell, the English founder of the famous New England family, to gain wide fame. He was the son of the first minister of Newburyport and after studying law settled in Boston. He was elected to the convention which framed the constitution of Massachusetts in 1780 and was a member of the committee which formulated that document. He insisted upon the insertion in the bill of rights of the phrase "All men are born free and equal" for the purpose, as he avowed at the time, of abolishing slavery in Massachusetts. It was largely through his efforts that Massachusetts put an end to negro slavery in 1783.

The Roll Call of Friends.

Have you ever sat alone in the evening looking over the pictures and the books associated with the friends of yore? Is the busy whirl of life is there not a joy in calling the roll of old friends and wondering where this one and that one may be? Then comes that moment of retrospective and introspective eulogy to absent friends, and wells of gratitude are opened as we think how greatly various friends have influenced our pathway on life's journey; how this one or that one may have unconsciously determined the crisis of a career.

We become mellowed when we think of those passed beyond. The memory of them comes to us gently and softly as the sparkle of the eye and the outlines of the individuality are recalled from the haze of past years.—National Magazine.

The Library of the Bible.

The Bible is not a book, but a library—perhaps I should rather say a literature. It is composed of sixty-six different books, written by between forty and fifty different authors—written centuries apart, in different languages, to different peoples, for different purposes, in different literary forms. It is the selected literature of fifteen centuries. It includes law, history, poetry, fiction, biography and philosophy. It is to be read as a literature, judged as a literature. One may therefore reject a book from this collection of literature and yet believe in the literature. It is not like a painting which either is or is not the work of one master. It is a gallery of paintings, in which some works may be originals and others copies.—Lyman Abbott.

MUSIC IN THE HOME.

Its Refining and Joyous Influence Should Be Welcomed.

So much is done for the children nowadays. So many different sorts of knowledge are crammed into them at school. They devote themselves to so many things unconnected either with childhood or home life. Meanwhile one opportunity—rich in possibilities for happiness—is too often neglected. Mr. Josef Stransky gives wise counsel in this matter:

"The way to love music, to increase its production, is to know it when you are young—young individually and young as a nation. It is much more difficult to prepare people to enjoy music after they are grown up and their minds have become crowded with various interests in life. The American nation should not let its youth slip by without filling the souls of the children with music.

"As yet the young people here do not have their minds directed intensely enough in musical channels. I do not see groups of children standing about a piano in the twilight and singing to a mother's accompaniment. I do not see the boys of a neighborhood forming a small orchestra and playing really fine music, as they do in France and Germany."

Mr. Stransky overstates his case somewhat. We know of a New England farmer's family of six children, each playing a different instrument, who, with father and mother, make a real little orchestra. And there are a good many such groups of the sort Mr. Stransky says he has not seen—youngsters about their mother at the piano. But there should be still more—many more. There cannot be too many, for, as the wise conductor says, music is something more than mere entertainment. It is "a serious and permanent joy in life . . . to keep the emotions stirred, the imagination young."—Collier's Weekly.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

AN AEROPLANE STORY

By ALAN HINSDALE

Joe Goodall—who had been sent to the hospital in the rear of the British lines in Belgium, told me this story during his convalescence:

When the big world's war came on I was studying in a school of technology in the United States. I didn't care which whipped, but I wanted to see something of it. Thinking I would be more at home among those who spoke the same language as I did, I chose the British.

"My education, which I had nearly finished, especially fitted me for service in the flying corps, and, going to England, I began my preparation for running an aeroplane. It was a year before I was sent out for active service, but when I landed in Flanders I was pretty well prepared.

"At first I was sent up to locate the German batteries. I soon grew tired of this and longed for a more exciting service. One day the commander of the aeroplane corps told me to report at the headquarters of the general commanding the right wing of the British troops, adding that he had been asked for a man to do special work and I had been recommended. The general said to me:

"'Our spies report that the enemy are turning out war implements of a kind that they are keeping secret at a point about forty miles in their rear. I want you to go there and drop enough bombs on it to put it out of commission. They have built it in a wood for purposes of concealment from our aeroplanes, and you'll have to fly low in order to distinguish it when you reach it. It is murky today and you may get over a good deal of ground without being seen. The weather is not usually the same at two different points at a distance from each other and you may find a clearer atmosphere when you get over the works you are to destroy. Can you start at once?'

"'Yes, general,' I replied.

"'Well, take such bombs as you may select for yourself and success to you.'

"Within an hour I was ready. I rose to a thousand feet, and having located the direction I was to take, followed it by compass, for there was too much mist for me to guide from the ground. I hadn't gone ten miles, however, before I entered a region clear of fog, and beneath me a plain, mostly bare of trees.

"I was behind the German lines and directly beneath me was an encampment of a small body of troops. Evidently they saw me and were somewhat disturbed at my presence. They fired some shots at me from their rifles, but I kept out of range, and they probably had no aeroplane guns, for none such were used.

"They had a fleet horse among them, for suddenly I saw a rider shoot out in the direction I was going. Doubtless they surmised the nature of my mission and were sending a messenger to give warning, either to the works I was to destroy or an aeroplane station.

"I did not fear a race with a horse, but the man on him might have a short distance to go and I thought I'd better stop him if I could. I descended to a hundred feet above his head and dropped a hand grenade. It exploded behind him. Realising that I had not calculated for his motion, I dropped another, aiming some ten or fifteen yards before him. It struck the ground ahead of him. A third grenade fell a few feet before his horse and exploded under it. The horse was blown to pieces, the man shot up in the air. He came down and in a moment lay still.

"An auto must have come into the German camp after he started from it, for I had no sooner put the horse out of the race than I heard a rattle below, and there was the machine coming at a rate of fifty miles an hour. It shot past the dead horse and the dead man, and I saw at once that I would have to increase my speed.

"The auto was going so fast that it was a more difficult problem to hit it with my hand grenades. I started with half a dozen grenades and had three left. I dropped one, but it fell a little ahead of the machine. I dropped another, but the chauffeur must have seen it descending, for he slowed up, and it fell a dozen yards ahead of him. Thinking he would dodge in the same fashion again, I calculated for his doing so, and he put on full speed. The man had successfully dodged me, and I had no more grenades left.

"The only thing I could do now was to drop a bomb, but if I should use my bombs I would not have them for destroying the works. I concluded to hold on to the missiles and trust to the speed of my aeroplane. My decision was an unlucky one. The auto had only four miles to go to reach an aeroplane station and made the distance over a straight road in about six minutes.

"Suddenly I saw a dozen aeroplanes rise like a flock of birds not far off my course and make for a point between me and the works I was to destroy. I saw at a glance that for all me the munition plant was perfectly safe. Indeed, it behooved me to make tracks for home. I turned, and the aeroplanes seeing me do so gave chase. It was nip and tuck with me to get into the British lines, for one of the German machines was a great deal faster than mine and, coming within range of me just as I was passing into what seemed safe territory, gave me this wound."

TWINS AND A WEDDING.

Simple Method of Solving a Matrimonial Problem.

The late Colonel Anstruther Thomson in his "Eighty Years' Reminiscences" tells the story of a remarkable marriage.

Of the many quaint "characters" whom Colonel Anstruther Thomson met in the hunting field none captivate the imagination like the brothers Leamon of Ivybridge—"two thin, delicate looking old men, twin brothers, seventy-two years old, with white hair, very gentle and courteous in manner, red cutaway coats, white cords, black boots, caps and gloves; most respectable and nothing slangy about them; they are so alike you can hardly tell them apart."

When past sixty years of age one night after hunting one of them said to the other:

"I have been thinking neither of us can have much longer to live in this world, and it will be a terrible thing for the survivor to have to remain here alone. Don't you think one of us ought to marry?"

"Yes," was the reply. "I have thought so for a long time."

"Well, do you know of any lady?"

"Yes; I do. Is there any one you fancy?"

On comparing notes it appeared they had both selected the same woman, the manageress of the hotel at Okehampton.

"Well," said one, "we have lived together all these years without a wry word, and it's a pity we should fall out at our time of life."

So they tossed up which should marry her. The winner rode down to Okehampton next morning and was accepted. All three lived together, and the wife nursed both brothers in their last illness and was left their money.

Pioneers of Hawaii.

The early history of the Hawaiian Islands is entirely legendary and traditionary. The earliest inhabitants, according to estimate, must have come hither about 500 A. D. They voyaged northward in their canoes from the island of Savaii, in the Samoan group, which seems to have been the chief center of dispersion of the Polynesian race, to which the Hawaiians belong. There is a great similarity in the speech of all Polynesians. To have voyaged this distance of over 2,000 miles to their newly adopted home through the unknown, uncharted and sometimes tempestuous seas in their small, open and exposed craft and subsequently to have gone back and forth, as their traditions indicate them to have done, and, finally, to have traveled from island to island in the Hawaiian group with no compass but the stars overhead, certainly stamps them as having been careful and resourceful navigators of no mean ability.—Exchange.

Settlement Day.

"In our town we are celebrating the one hundredth anniversary of our settlement."

"That must be a great place to live in—where you have to settle only once in a hundred years."—Life.

A Happy Fighter Who Hates War

Who, if he be called upon to face
Some awful moment to which Heaven has joined Great issues, good or bad, for human kind,
Is happy as a lover and attired
With sudden brightness as a man inspired.

THAT inspiration, that happiness of dedication, one does indeed see in England. But leaving such spiritual states aside and speaking of war itself as an external act, the English began with detesting it and detest it now.

For fear that I might be thought to be depending too much on my own immediate personal observations, I summon a witness—the best possible witness—Capt. Bruce Bairnsfather. His cartoons are the supreme evidence of the feelings of the average intelligent—or stupid—Englishman about war. They are riotously popular. And they are now very numerous. I think I have seen all of them. I do not remember one of them that in any way glorifies war. On the contrary, Captain Bairnsfather takes general pleasure in puncturing the glory of war. He loves to show the young man who thought to use his sword on the enemy now using it to toast a piece of bread over a brazier. He loves to show a group of officers heroically jolly during the first half-hour out of the trenches, and then grotesquely miserable during the last half-hour before going in. He does not forget that the fields in the opposition trenches have occasional more or less human moments. One of his best efforts is the English soldier who is making an observation through a pair of field-glasses and who confides his military discoveries to his mate in the words: "'Ave a squint through these 'ere, Bill, you can see a 'Un eatin' a sausage as plain as anything." But his masterpiece is a double cartoon called "The Same Old Moon." It is characteristically English in its intimate combination of humor and tragedy—of tragedy pointed and heightened by humor. In the top scene a girl looks out of a window in England and gazes affectionately at the moon and breathes: "To think that it's the same dear old moon that's looking down on him!" In the lower scene "he" is stringing barbed wire in front of trenches in proximity to Germans. The same dear old moon is shining beautifully. "He" scowls at it over his shoulder and "This blinking moon," he feelingly observes, "will be the death of us."

The editor of the Bystander, which publishes Bairnsfathers' cartoons regularly and which is one of the most popular of English periodicals among English officers, expressed Bairnsfathers' work perfectly well when he said, in his preface to the first collection of the cartoons in pamphlet form: "If this sketch-book is worthy to outlast the days of the war and to be kept for remembrance on the shelves of those who have lived through it, it will have done its bit. For will it not be a standing reminder of the ingloriousness of war and of its preposterous absurdity?"

People who go to war in that spirit cannot do it with the heroic strut. The mediæval English of the days of Henry the Fifth at Agincourt could. The modern English of the days of George the Fifth cannot. It is easier for them to indulge themselves in their harmless little fad of being anti-heroic. I dined with a sergeant one night who entertained me for quite a while with his accounts of his continuous and aggravating escapes from getting a "Blighty." A "Blighty" is a wound that is not severe enough to kill you, but, happily, severe enough to send you home to "Blighty"—which is England. "I simply can't catch one," he said. "I tell you that's what passes through your mind most of all. If you could only get a 'Blighty.' Do your bit and get to England and a pretty nurse! The other day I did think I had it. I felt an awful thump on my shoulder. 'Ah!' said I, 'here it is!' I stood still and waited for it to feel. Then I turned my head slowly and looked at it. Nothing but a damn piece of mud. Fooled again!"—William Hard in Metropolitan.

Something Lacking.

A resident of Nevada who has recently returned from a trip through the east was interviewed by the Post. "How did Niagara strike me?" said the traveler. "Well, to be candid, it was a little disappointing. There seemed to be something lacking—something. I couldn't see what, but something that I didn't see and felt I ought to see to make the picture complete." Perhaps it was a man going over in a barrel.—Kansas City Times.

Free Advice.

"There are a great many people in this world who don't know what's good for them."

"Perhaps so," replied the cynical man, "but they always have plenty of neighbors who would gladly tell them what is good for them if they would only listen."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Can't Go Far.

"Just met with a heavy loss. A ship in which I was interested was wrecked."

"I got my money in canal boats. When one of them is wrecked we know where to find it."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Of Course.

"My friend, the glazier, has a sad life."

"Why shouldn't it be? Isn't it full of panes?"—Baltimore American.

Wonderful, isn't it, how nearly every human being simply adores the ripe fruit! That's why so many, many people are now buying that gum with the delicious fruit flavor Adam's California Fruit Gum.

Loud the trump of God is sounding
The Reveille, through the skies;
And mighty hosts are mustering
On the plains of Paradise;
From this war-worn world, the noblest
And the best are gathering there,
But a robe of white asbestos,
Stead of khaki, now they wear.

How the bright immortal regiments,
In marshalled ranks, advance,
Young heroes from far Flanders,
And the blood-red fields of France,
Who have fought their last great battle,
And their warfare all, is o'er,
They will hear the cannons rattle,
And the shrapnel shriek no more.

No more for them, at close of day,
The rolling drums tattoo,
For they're marching past the General,
In the great and grand, review;
They have won a proud promotion,
And an amaranthine crown;
Life eternal, and high honours,
For the life on earth, laid down.

The steep, perilled path of duty,
Firm and fearlessly they trod,
Gave their lives, like gallant heroes
For their country King, and God.
While for them we're sadly mourning,
With deep sighs and bitter tears,
All the glorious ranks up yonder
Welcome them with joyful cheers.

Could ye, mothers, lonely weeping,
See your dear, loved laddies now,
With everlasting laurels wreathed,
Around each shining brow,
Marching with celestial legions,
Free from sorrow, sin, and pain,
Would you though your hearts were breaking,
Wish them back to earth again,

O'er their graves, the lone cross standing,
Well the sacred spot shall guard,
And bright angel bands descending,
Keep, unwearied, watch and ward,
Far from Canada, they're sleeping
Dreamless 'neath the strangers' sky,
But the glory they have won for her
Will never, never die.

SOLICITED STATES' ENTRY.

Lloyd George Contradicts Suggestion That Britain Is Only Half Pleased.

PARIS, July 4.—The Matin publishes an interview obtained by Hughes Le Roux with Premier Lloyd George, who contradicted emphatically a suggestion that Great Britain was only half pleased with the United States' entrance into the war. M. Le Roux quotes Lloyd George as saying: "We not only desired the entrance of the United States into the war, but we solicited it. At the present moment we ask that America shall send us fighters in the greatest number possible, and as soon as it can be done. We wish her valient soldiers who have just landed in France, inspired with such a fine spirit, to mingle their blood with yours and ours for the triumph of the common cause. Is that clear?"

Wild Beasts in the Crimea.

One of the most remarkable sights in Russia is the Acclimatization Park in the Crimea. This belongs to a wealthy landowner, M. Pfalz-Fein, and has been in existence since 1889. Situated among the sunlit steppes, it arose simply out of the love of M. Pfalz-Fein for the animal creation. It now extends over an area of about one hundred and fifty acres, to which are joined another forty acres forming a luxuriant botanical garden. The park is not a "Zoo." The animals there are not exhibits, but inhabitants, whom the owner is trying, with great success, to acclimatize. It is therefore something like the Yellowstone Park in America on a small scale, acting as a nursery and as a preserve for specimens. It is not a place for animals like lions or tigers, incapable of domestication. Perhaps the wildest specimen in the park among the animals is the bison, and among the birds the monk-vulture; but both have become tame, and the latter is almost domesticated. The flowers in the park are as numerous as they are beautiful.

No German Spoken.

The German language is now absolutely prohibited in Russia; but on account of the prejudices there due to the Crimean War, British exports to Russia increased only by eight per cent. from 1893 to 1909, while exports from Germany increased 170 per cent. In ten years 11,000,000 ounces of fine gold were taken from Russian mines; and the iron mines would not be exhausted if 10,000,000 tons of pig iron were taken out every year for one hundred years.

WONDERFUL TALE OF AN ACTRESS

Struggled with Sickness and Discouragement; How Relieved.

Dayville, Killingly, Conn.—"I shall be glad to have every woman know what I know now, after using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Although I am only 24 years old, I have suffered for the past eight years. I hated the doctors, for a doctor told me to give up the stage where I was playing with my husband. I had bearing down pains, my health failed me, and I could not work on the stage, and wasn't able to tend my baby or even get around myself. I was always downhearted and discontented with the world, and only lived for the sake of my little girl. The doctor said to move to some quiet little town away from the noisy city, and I might be able to live and feel well, so I went to Dayville in November. At that time I was so sick I could not walk around, and my husband kept house and I stayed in bed. One day in January I read your advertisement in a newspaper, and I sent for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and started taking it. Within two weeks time I was a different woman, could get around, and felt so good that it was a pleasure to do my housework. I felt contented and happy, and now am the picture of health, and am tempted to return to the stage. We appreciate my health as the most precious thing on earth."—Mrs. H. L. KLEMENTZ, Box 85, Killingly, Conn.

Origin of the Grocer.

The modern grocery store is very well known. The origin of its name is not so well known. Several centuries ago arose in England and France a class of thrifty and foresighted tradesmen who went about buying up bargain lots of every conceivable kind of merchandise, just as the modern American buys fire damaged goods and bankrupt stocks. The Frenchman bought "en gros" and the Englishman came to be called an "engrosser." He might handle hardware, thread, dried vegetables or anything else that could be obtained in large lots, and he began to call himself a "grocer" at a time when our sort of grocer was termed a "spicer." From that beginning comes the name grocer as we know it today.

Vinegar Kills Germs.

Wash and then soak all uncooked vegetables in vinegar if you would escape having typhoid fever. If lettuce, watercress and other greens to be eaten raw be placed in vinegar water (three teaspoonfuls of vinegar to a quart of water is the proportion) to soak (immersed) for one hour and a quarter all danger of typhoid fever will be removed. The acidulated water does not mar the flavor of the vegetable.

Richest Language.

Of the 3,424 known languages on earth the completest and the richest in the ways and means of expression is the English. The late distinguished German linguist, Grimm, declared that no other language is comparable to the English.

Music.

The main defect in music is the necessity of reproducing compositions by performing them. If it were as easy to read music as it is to read books Beethoven's sonatas would be as popular as Schiller's poems.

Derivation.

"Dyspepsia," remarked the student of etymology, "comes from the Greek."

"Not always," replied the man who had it. "I got mine in a French restaurant."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Already Disciplined.

"I envy Margaret for having married a steel man."

"Why so?"

"Because a steel man must be well tempered."—Baltimore American.

Trouble Lies Ahead For Saxon Royalty

COPENHAGEN, July 7.—A despatch from Dresden says the Saxon Diet, which on Tuesday warned the government of a disappearance of the sentiment of loyalty toward the King, and also of a coming upheaval unless the government mend its ways, has now broken openly with the government.

This action is a consequence of the refusal of Count von Vitzchum d'Eckstadt, Premier of Saxony, to authorize the Diet Committee on Constitutional Reform to continue its labours during recess.

Max Harden's Paper Is Again Suppressed

COPENHAGEN, July 7.—Maximilian Harden's publication, Die Zukunft, of Berlin, has again been suppressed.

Herr Harden's brilliant and decidedly outspoken journal has enjoyed a considerable period of freedom, from suppression, the last reported action of this sort by the government against it being nearly nine months ago, in October, 1916.

After this suspension was lifted, his characteristic articles again freely attacked the Government's policy. In one article he eulogized President Wilson and in another appealed for democracy in Germany.

Positions Open

OTTAWA, July 7.—In eighteen departments of the Federal public service 3,686 returned soldiers have at various times been employed by the Justice Department, and nine postmasterships are being held open for men now overseas. The number of returned men employed in the several departments is given in a return tabled in the Commons today.

The details are as follows: Public Works, 55; Justice, one on the permanent staff and three on the temporary staff; Labour, one; Railways and Canals, 102; Interior, 61; Naval Service, 17; Inland Revenue, 14; State Department, 4; Printing and Stationery, 9; Auditor-General, 5; Finance, 8; Customs, 203; Mines, 7; Marine and Fisheries, 8; Trade and Commerce, 15; Postoffice, 598; Agriculture, 41; Militia and Defence, 2,514.

ITALIANS CONSERVING ART.

All Valuables in Conquered Territory Put in Charge of One Official.

ROME, July 7.— One of the many activities of the Department of Civil Affairs at the front is that of guardianship of monuments and objects of art and history in the zone of war. This post has been intrusted to a Captain who distinguished himself in the conquest of Cucco and Vodice. His task is to remove all valuable objects of art from the line of fire which otherwise be destroyed.

As the enemy still periodically continues to bombard Gorizia all books and pictures in that city which had been put in security in subterranean vaults have now been transported to a safer place, including 30,000 volumes of the State library and civic library, coins, a few good pictures, &c. The basilica of the beautiful museum of Aquileia, which has been damaged in many places by several bombardments, is being restored.

It would be too long to enumerate all the places where there are valuable antiquities, but there are hundreds especially interesting in those towns and villages in the territory conquered by the Italians.

The Three Scutaris.

There are three places named Scutari—one in Albania, one opposite to Constantinople and one in southern Greece. It is curious that each name comes from a different original form. The Greek Scutari is otherwise Scatari, the Albanian one is the Illyrian Scodra, and the Asiatic one is the Turkish Uskudar. This last means a courier carrying royal orders from station to station and commemorates the fact that this place, the ancient Chrysopolis or City of Gold was the starting point of the Asiatic couriers.

How He Got the Moon.

John Henry Maedler, the astronomer, whose favorite study was the moon, having learned that Frau Witte, the wife of the state councilor, owned a wonderful model of his pet luminary, spent years trying to gain possession of it. As her husband was living, he could not marry the owner of the model, so he married her daughter, and at the death of his mother-in-law the coveted moon became his.

Successful?

Little four-year-old Henrietta stood watching the cook draw or clean a chicken.

And as one thing after another was drawn out and laid on the table Henrietta looked up in the cook's face and said, "Did you find what you were looking for, Nora?"—Harper's Magazine.

Psychology of the "Hunch"

WHEN a man expresses a belief, or makes a prediction, without being able to give reasons for it, is he worthy of credence? He may be, if he is an expert, we are assured by a writer quoted in The Engineering and Mining Journal. Every expert accumulates by experience a vast store of knowledge that is not consciously arranged and systematized. This knowledge, remaining subconscious, may assure him that something is true or that something is about to happen, although he does not know why. This is what some people call a "hunch." The moral seems to be that a "hunch" is worth regarding when its owner has wide expert knowledge, even if he is unable to connect it consciously with that knowledge. Says the engineering paper named above:

"There is a market-letter writer in Wall Street who frankly admits that he judges the course of the market not by reason, but by intuition. 'When I write my market advice in the morning,' he says, 'I simply try to get the "feel" of the market. I say that the outlook is that the market will go up, or that the outlook is that it will go down. Sometimes I give my reasons, but very often I don't. I simply cannot give my reasons, because I do not know them. Frankly, I write on what I suppose you would call a hunch.' People may call this superstition, but people do not know. This market-letter writer often does give the reasons for his predictions; he is a keen student of conditions and of the technical status; and while he is sometimes wrong on the market, his record compared with that of other market-letters writers is astonishingly good, says the writer of Wall Street Paragraphs in The Evening Post, who proceeds to remark: "A phenomenon not unlike this is often observed among fishermen, farmers, guides, and others who qualify as local weather-prophets. Though they occasionally talk of winds and moisture and the look of the sky, they have little scientific knowledge of weather; yet they have an uncanny habit of being right. The psychologist, William James, somewhere gives an example of dentists who can tell you that a tooth will break, but cannot tell you why it will break. And what is the explanation in each instance—market prophet, weather prophet, and dentist? The explanation is that in each instance the individual has acquired over years of experience a mass of empirical knowledge which far outruns his scientific knowledge. He has unconsciously or half-consciously absorbed an indefinite number of items of knowledge which he has not analyzed. In his judgment of things, these items of knowledge lying at the back of his mind act as reasons, but they are too vague and incoherent to admit of explanation. "Why don't you speculate?" the market-letter writer was asked. "I used to," he replied, "but never successfully. When I speculate, my fears and hopes make me nervous and confused; I try to justify my moves with reasons pro and con, and I lose my hunch." Mining engineers will understand this. What engineer of long experience is there who cannot relate instances of being in an ore-body penetrated by only one drift, with no means for measurement of ore in sight according to the accepted tenets, and feeling the conviction that he is in the midst of a whale of an ore-body; and in another case that he is merely surrounded by a thin shell of ore? Yet in neither case can he outline any real reasons. If he tried to, they would very likely be weak. Of the same order is the advice: 'Never give reasons. Your judgment may be fine and your reasons feeble.' Who also does not remember cases of the mining engineer who is superb in his advice to clients and unsuccessful when he goes into mining ventures on his own account?"

Electrical Novelties.

Ten screws a minute may be driven in soft or even hard wood with the electric hand screwdriver.

Internal organs of soldiers may be photographed as easily as the skeleton with a new X-ray invention.

Electro magnets are now widely used in holding pieces of metal while they are machined and polished.

Powerful electric sirens installed in Paris, France, will be used to warn citizens of the approach of zeppelins.

"What will they invent next?" Well, a hustling Colorado surveyor has adapted Mazda lamps to his instruments to allow surveying at night.

Horseback riding at night has been made more safe for both horse and rider by the invention of an electric headlight attached to Dobbin's bridle.

Miniature naval battles may be staged in an ordinary bath tub with a new electric towing apparatus for moving model battleships about in the water.

Locomotive engineers have discarded the smelly oil torch used for inspecting and oiling engines at night, and now powerful electric flashlights are used.

Lives of linemen are protected against high tension live wires by an instrument no larger than a watch which indicates whether the wires are carrying current or not.

Iron Ore Deposits.

Iron ore deposits extending far under the ocean have been found in Newfoundland. On Belle Isle one operating company has driven out under the water to a distance of fully four miles, and a thousand feet from the ocean's floor has been rewarded by securing a superior grade of iron.

RELIGIOUS WARS IN EUROPE.

The Thirty Years' Conflict and the Peace of Westphalia.

Osnabruck is one of the most venerable towns of Prussia. In the closing years of the eighth century Charlemagne designated it as the capital of a bishopric, a distinction which it enjoyed without interruption for more than a thousand years. In 1803 the see was suppressed, the last bishop being Frederick, duke of York, son of the English Hanoverian monarch, George III. In 1858 the city was restored to its religious eminence when it was again made the seat of a Roman Catholic bishop.

It is on account of her share in the preliminary negotiations which led to the epochal peace of Westphalia that Osnabruck is famous in history. In 1644, after all central Europe had been devastated by the great struggle which eventually became known as the Thirty Years' war, representatives of Sweden, the German empire and German Protestants met here, while in the neighboring city of Munster, thirty miles to the southwest, delegates from France, Spain, the German Catholics and the German empire gathered.

The negotiations extended over a period of four years. In October, 1648, both groups of conferees having arrived at a common basis of settlement, the Osnabruck diplomats repaired to Munster, where a few days later the peace was signed which guaranteed the sovereignty and independence of the several states of the empire and which forbade religious persecution throughout Germany. It was this peace, in which Osnabruck played such a vital part, that put an end to religious wars in Europe.

As early as 888 Osnabruck was granted the right to establish its own mint, but it was not until the fifteenth century that the city reached the crest of is mediaeval prosperity. Following the decline which was necessarily incidental to the ravages of the Thirty Years' war, it enjoyed a second era of growth.

The two most impressive architectural piles in Osnabruck are the specious cathedral, dating back to the twelfth century and representing a combination of the Romanesque and Transitional styles, and the royal palace, built in 1662-75.—National Geographic Society Bulletin.

QUEENSLAND SAVAGES.

Some Curious Customs of a Race That Will Soon Be Extinct.

The aborigines of Queensland are fast fading away, and in view of the fact that this race will soon be extinct an examination of their social customs is interesting.

The death bone or bone apparatus, with its supposed property of producing death, is one of the most dreaded and universal superstitions among the natives of the Queensland interior. The apparatus consists of a pointer connected by string with an elongated cylindrical receptacle. The pointer, three to five inches long, is made from a human forearm bone, the string is made from human hair, and the receptacle, which incloses the victim's lifeblood, is fashioned from a shin bone. The "medicine man" of the tribe uses the weapon by aiming the pointer at the person selected for punishment.

One of the most curious of the aboriginal weapons is the "whirler," or "bull roarer." It is made of a flattened piece of gidyea timber cut into spindle shape, into one extremity of which a hole is drilled with a sharpened emu bone. By means of the aperture this whirler is attached to a piece of string fixed at the end of a small stick. Revolving rapidly, the whirler gives out a roaring sound.—London Telegraph.

Venison, Venaison, Venzon.

We have noted methods of cooking venison, but how should it be pronounced—as a two or a three syllable word? Most of us pronounce it as if spelled with a "z" and, as it is derived from the French venaison, this is as it should be. Shakespeare, it is true, treated it as a trisyllable and apparently regarded the "s" as hard, for in "As You Like It" the duke asks, "Shall we go kill us venison?" But his contemporary, Chapman, made but two syllables of it and, that there might be no doubt as to the pronunciation he favored, even spelled it phonetically, thus—venson.—London Chronicle.

His Bad Break.

"Why on earth do you come to me to borrow money, Billus?" said Harkaway peevishly. "Why don't you go to Jorrocks? He's the prosperous looking member of our set."

"That's just it, Harkaway," said Billups. "Jorrocks looks so very prosperous that I am quite sure he spends every penny he makes, but you, old man—why, you dress like a man who saves his money."

P. S.—He didn't get it.

PANES OF POSTAGE STAMPS.

And the Plate Numbers, Letters or Symbols They Carry.

All our postage stamps are printed in large sheets of 400 stamps each. These are then cut into four "panes" of 100 stamps each and sent to the various postoffices in that shape.

If you were to go to any United States postoffice and buy a complete "sheet," or, more correctly speaking, a complete "pane," of 100 stamps you would find that it had on two sides an outer margin, and on each of these margins would be a number. This is the number of the plate from which that pane was printed. Under this number the authorities keep a record of the plate, the date of its making, on what days it was in use, the quantities of stamps printed from it and all such data.

These plate numbers are usually expressed in figures or letters or combinations of both, but sometimes other symbols are used, such as the "star" plates of recent date. Many stamp lovers form what are called "plate number collections"—that is, a collection in which every stamp still has attached to it the outer margin bearing the plate number. The object is, of course, to get every plate number that was ever issued.

It is interesting and curious, too, because the stamps are arranged with the plate numbers in sequence, making them look very different from an ordinary collection. For instance, plate No. 253 is a five cent postage stamp, while the next three, 254, 255 and 256, are postage due stamps. Plate 257 is a special delivery, and 258 a newspaper stamp. So a collection of these in sequence is very varied and interesting.

And, again, many of the plates were in use at a time when the color of the stamp was changed, and the same plate number may be found upon both colors, as the one cent blue and the one cent green, or the ten cent green and the ten cent brown, the fifteen cent blue and the fifteen cent olive. Such a collection shows a wide range of shades that is of great interest to a collector.—St. Nicholas.

LEGEND OF THE PHOENIX.

Method of the Fabled Bird's Life and Death and Rebirth.

The ancient tradition concerning the phoenix has introduced into nearly every language the habit of applying that name to whatever is singular or uncommon among its kind. According to ancient writers, the phoenix was a bird of great beauty, about the size of an eagle. A shining and most beautiful crest adorned its head, its plumage contained nearly every tint of the rainbow, and its eyes sparkled like diamonds.

Only one of these birds could live at a time, but its existence covered a period of 500 or 600 years. When its life drew to a close the bird built for itself a funeral pile of wood and aromatic spices, with its wings fanned the pile into a flame and therein consumed itself. From its ashes a worm was produced, out of which another phoenix was formed, having all the vigor of youth.

The first care of the new phoenix was to solemnize its parent's obsequies. For that purpose it made a ball of myrrh, frankincense and other fragrant things. At Heliopolis, a city in lower Egypt, there was a magnificent temple dedicated to the sun. To this temple the phoenix would carry the fragrant ball and burn it on the altar of the sun as a sacrifice. The priests then examined the register and found that exactly 500 years or exactly 600 years had elapsed since that same ceremony had taken place.

The True View.

The late James J. Hill was a man of buoyant optimism.

"Failures," he once said in an address to railway men, "are always pessimists. Successes, on the other hand, are optimists. Which is right?"

He paused, then added:

"It's easier to slip down hill than to climb up, but the view, remember, is at the top."

Makings of a Man.

What is a man? How much is he worth from a scientific viewpoint?

According to one way of looking at it a man is worth about $2.50 a day from his shoulders down and anywhere from $50,000 to $1,000,000 a year from his shoulders up. This may be said to be the estimate of the average successful business man.

The scientist, however, looks at the question from another angle, says the Popular Science Monthly. According to him a man is worth $3.45 for illumination purposes, since a man weighing 150 pounds contains about 3,500 cubic feet of oxygen, hydrogen, and nitrogen in his constitution, which at seventy cents per 1,000 cubic feet equals the price above. Also a man contains enough carbon to make 9,360 lead pencils; enough phosphorus to make 800,00 matches or to kill 500 persons, and enough water to fill a thirty-eight quart reservoir.

Furthermore, it makes no difference how sour a man may look he contains about sixty lumps of sugar, a great deal of starch, chloride of potash, magnesium, sulphur and hydrochloric acid in his system. There are fifty grains of iron in the blood of an ordinary man, enough to make one spike large enough to hold his weight.

What is a man? This is the somewhat cynical answer of one scientific man:

"Break the shells of 1,000 eggs into a huge pan or basin and you have ingredients from which to form him from his toe nails to the most delicate tissues of his brain."

"Who is that?" he asked nervously as he heard a footstep in the hall.

"Only papa," she whispered.

He moved about uneasily.

"Don't be afraid," she murmured. "You can surely trust papa."

"Oh, Arthur," she cried, throwing her arms about his neck appealingly, "you certainly ought to! Nobody else in town will."

SEVEN THOUSAND PRISONERS CAPTURED BY THE RUSSIANS

New Drive West of Stanslau is Completely Successful---Forty-eight Guns and Many Machine Guns Falling Into the Hands of Russians---French Counter Attack Near Laon Taking Enemy Front Line Positions--Big Air Raid Over German Cities

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

PETROGRAD, July 9.—Russia centred her drive on Lemberg, in Galicia to-day, with a powerful offensive directed west of Stanislau which took several villages and seven thousand prisoners and forty-eight guns, according to the official report. General Kermiloff was in charge of the operations in this section and reported complete success of the drive. Stanislau is about seventy-five miles southeast of Lemberg and fifty miles south of Brzezany ground which the Russian offensive first started.

One hundred and thirty-one officers were captured in addition to seven thousand men. The guns captured included thirty-six heavy guns and twelve lighter field guns, as well as many score machine guns. The results of this battle indicates that the Russians sweep down on the enemy lines in sudden and unexpected quarters.

More cities in Galicia were captured by the advancing Russians to-day —Jezupolciezov, Pavelche, Fybno and Staryiysiec.

General Brusiloff's cavalry, the official statement said, had now reached the River Lukva.

In the Caucasus, the War Office said, under pressure of the Turks, the villages of Pandjvin, Khanikin and Kasrishireau had been evacuated.

PARIS, July 9.—Suddenly assuming the offensive French troops swept forward last night between Bovettes Ridge and Chevrogny, recapturing first line trenches over a front of a mile, according to to-day's official report which says: "We counter attacked and in sharp fighting the French, with admirable ardor, retook the first line trenches on a mile front, regaining the major part of the territory lost in the enemy's powerful action Sunday between Panthéon and Froidemont Farm."

The section where the French counter attack this detailed won back ground from the Germans, was that in which the German army staff desperately to break the French grip around Laon. The assults started ten days ago, and were made by a prodigeous expenditure of ammunition and great masses of troops on the part of Germany.

LONDON, July 9.—The carrying out of a successful raid southeast of Hargicourt by the British forces, and the repulse of an attempt at a raid by the Germans southeast of Loos, were reported by Field Marshal Haig to-day.

LONDON, July 9.—Berlin official statement to-day admits that the Russians had pressed the Austrians back at certain points in Galicia, but declared that the German reserves put a stop to the Russian advance. On the western front th Germans withdrew "according to orders," the statement says, in front of a French advance.

PARIS, July 9.—Entente Allies have decided to hold important conference here shortly with reference to the situation in the Balkans.

LONDON, July 9.—The House of Commons will meet in secret session to-night to discuss aerial defences, Chancellor of the Exchequer Bonar Law announced to-day.

BUFFALO, N.Y., July 9.—A man who tried to evade the line of sentries around the Curtis Aeroplane Plant to-day, was shot and killed by a member of the 74th Regiment.

Charge Against Mrs. Sims of Keeping Liquor For Sale Dismissed

The charge against Mrs. Sims of keeping liquor for sale was dismissed by Magistrate Dumble, in a written judgment, delivered this morning. Reviewing the evidence he found that Mrs. Sims, who lives at 360, Charlotte Street, had rented two rooms, one of them to a boarder who supplied her with money to pay for liquor he ordered from Montreal. The money was usually committed to the defendant to enclose in a letter, ordering the liquor, sometimes written by her in her own name, and sometimes written by the lodger. "I do not find any clear evidence of the sale of liquor by the defendant nor any giving of liquor. I simply find that as agent she ordered the liquor, paid the express charges when it came and receipted for it." But it was the boarder's liquor and used by himself. "He admits that he gave some of it away and that he treated some of his friends when they called on him; but I do not find that Mrs. Sims sold any of the liquor, or disposed of any of it, or even drank it. It is truly a very large quantity. Eighteen bottles, holding eighteen imperial quarts, came to her house between May 25th and the first of July. It seems like an immoderate quantity to be used by one consumer, but as there is no direct evidence against Mrs. Sims, I am constrained to dismiss this charge."

Evidence of Auto's Speed Varied From 12 To 40 Miles Per

Magistrate Dumble dismissed a charge of speeding against Wm. Spenceley in the police court this morning. It was alleged that he was driving at a rate faster than fifteen miles an hour on Aylmer street, on Monday, July 2nd. At the corner of Brock street he collided with Mr. R. S. Goheen's car. The defendant said he was driving north, taking a "fare" to Ennismore. He saw Mr. Goheen approaching and the latter cut the corner to turn into Brock street without giving a signal. Had Mr. Goheen made the proper turn the Spencely car would have been passed the corner and the accident would have been avoided, according to the defendant's explanation. He had no idea the other car was going to pass in front of him.

Evidence of the speed at which Mr. Spenceley was driving, varied from twelve to forty miles an hour. Mr. Gordon appeared for the defence.

Chicken Pox Must Be Quarantined

Dr. Amys, Medical Officer of Health, warns parents that children with chicken pox must be quarantined in their homes while the rash remains. It is not necessary that the houses be placarded, but the children should be kept at home, thereby preventing the spreading of the infection.

UNCLE SAM TO CALL OUT 687,000 ON FIRST DRAFT

This Number Will Provide Reinforcements for the Regular Army and Make the First Half Million of the New Army

OFFICIAL ANNOUNCEMENT

WASHINGTON, July 9.—It was announced to-day by the War Department that 687,000 would be the figures of the first selective draft made for the United States army. This would provide for reinforcements for the regular army as well as constitute the first "half million" in the United States' overseas army.

Only Two Dogs Were Found On Streets In a Police Search

A few days ago one of the policemen, on the instructions of Chief Thompson, made a tour of the city in search of dogs that were supposed to be at large contrary to the city's by-law. Three hours were spent in the investigation and only two dogs were found or seen.

In the police court this morning Mr. A. Davidson was fined $4.60 for allowing his dog to run at large on Charlotte street, and Mr. Gordon McFarlane was fined a like sum.

Many Casualties In Big Explosion

SAN FRANCISCO, July 9.—Nine missing and thirty injured were the casualties to-day in a mysterious explosion at Vallejo, near here, in a black powder magazine.

FARMERS SHOULD PLAN TO SOW FALL WHEAT.

KINGSTON, July 8.—Senator H. W. Richardson, in speaking of the prospects for the Western crop, said: "Every farmer in Ontario should plant now between two and forty acres of fall wheat. Wheat is going to be the telling thing in this great conflict. The crop in the West is late by about ten days, and unless the season is exceptionally good there will be no bumper crop. No one can tell what is going to happen next year or the year after, but if we increase our resources some thirty or forty per cent. there will be no trouble in Canada."

ENGLISH ATHLETES AMONG THE KILLED

Dai Roberts and Lieut. J. E. Raphael Make Supreme Sacrifice.

LONDON, July 8. — Dai Roberts, the famous Welsh welterweight boxer, has been killed in action by a shell in France. Under the capable instruction of Jim Driscoll, he earned great popularity in the roped arena and built up a fine reputation. One of his best performances was to beat Willie Farrell at the National Sporting Club in April, 1913, although Farrell turned the tables twelve months ater in a 20-round bout. Among others, Roberts defeated were Billy Williams, Tom Tees, Young Niffer and Sid Stagg. But at Liverpool he was beaten in six rounds by the champion, Johnny Basaam. Roberts assisted Freddie Welsh as sparring partner when the latter was training for his contest with Willie Ritchie at the Olympia three years ago which gave Welsh the light weight championship of the world.

England's famous all-round athlete, Lieut. J. E. Raphael, has also made the supreme sacrifice, having died of wounds. At cricket, Rugby football, swimming and fencing he earned great fame. He played for England nine times in the international Rugby games, and in 1909 captained the Surrey Country Cricket Club.

PUT BY A BIT FOR SATURDAY'S RED CROSS TAG DAY

The necessity of providing funds to keep up a supply of food for Canadian prisoners in Germany comes to our hearts as it should also come to our purses on Saturday, Red Cross Tag Day for Prisoners' Fund and French Red Cross. Let every one take thought of what these prisoners suffer and would suffer more, without our help. They are making a great sacrifice for us, and we certainly can make a small sacrifice for them. If everybody sacrifices some luxury or pleasure that costs money between this and Saturday, he will not feel the little contribution he makes on Saturday, to the $1,200 or $1,500 the Red Cross ladies desire and expect.

THREE MEMBERS OF THE 93rd BATTALION WOUNDED AND MISSING

Corp. H. L. Stewart of Millbrook Officially Reported Killed in Action---Local and District Casualty List is Heavier Over Week-end---To-day's General Military News.

KILLED IN ACTION.

Corp H. L. Stewart, Mounted Rifles, Millbrook, Ont.

WOUNDED AND MISSING

Pte. D. Tear, late 93rd Battalion, Peterborough.

Pte. T. Dowling, late 93rd Battalion, Peterborough.

Pte. S. Althouse, late 93rd Battalion, Havelock.

Pte. J. C. Kierno, Havelock, Ont.

CORP. H. L. STEWART.

Killed in action is the tragic heading over the name of Corp. H. L. Stewart of Millbrook in to-day's casualty list from Ottawa. Corp. Stewart was at the front with a Mounted Rifle battalion. His many friends will be grieved to learn of his death.

PTE. D. TEAR.

Pte. David Tear who enlisted with the 93rd Battalion here in the early Autumn of 1915 is officially reported wounded and missing. Pte. Tear was reported wounded a short time ago, but the second report adds that he is missing. He had lived in and around Peterborough for a number of years, but his next of kin resides in England. Pte. Tear went overseas as a member of A Company of the 93rd and was transferred to another Battalion at the front.

PTE. T. DOWLING.

Pte. T. Dowling, formerly of the 93rd Battalion is also listed as wounded and missing to-day. Pte. Dowling enlisted here in May 1916, with Lieut.-Col Johnston's unit and after going overseas with the 93rd was drafted to another Canadian battalion.

PTE. S. ALTHOUSE.

Pte. S. Althouse, of Havelock is officially reported wounded and missing. Pte. Althouse enlisted in the Spring of 1915 with the Havelock platoon of the 93rd Battalion and went overseas as a member of D. Company of the Peterborough battalion.

PTE. J. C. KIERNO

Pte. J. C. Kierno is another Havelock soldier who is officially reported as wounded and missing. He enlisted outside of this district.

Three suggestions for changes in "The Military Service Act of 1917" from Sir Wilfrid Laurier, F. F. Pardee and Duncan C. Ross found favour with the Premier, on Saturday.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier urged that the maximum age be fixed at thirty-five instead of forty-five, and the Premier said he had already proposed it in the Cabinet.

Mr. F. E. Pardee's suggestion that unmarried men and widowers without dependents be called first in all classes impressed the Premier.

Mr. Duncan C. Ross' conviction that no youth under twenty-one years of age, who was not heir to a citizen's privileges or responsibilities, be conscripted, found the Premier with an "open mind."

The Premier also announced that joint action with the United States would likely affect the young men who had journeyed across the border to escape enlistment.

Montreal, July 8.—The extent of the opposition that is expected from the Province of Quebec to the putting into force of the Government's Military Service Bill has been greatly exaggerated, according to General W. J. Neill, Canadian representative of the British Remount Commission.

General Neill, who has just completed a trip through the Province in connection with the completion of plans to ship 3,000 horses overseas monthly, in an interview declares that nowhere did he find any serious feeling against the bill. The chief opposition in the country districts, he says, is from men who are worried because of the high cost of living, and who have come to believe that the high prices of foods and other necessaries of life are caused by fighting Germany. Even this notion, according to General Neill, is not very widespread.

The General said he has recently received a letter from General Turner, the Canadian Commander in England, saying that Canadians on the firing line are looking to Canada to help finish the task of crushing militarism, and that they are confident the country will keep its promise to send 500,000 men.

Two Keene returned soldiers reached Peterborough on Saturday evening and were met at the train by Ald. Dobbin and Worth and City Clerk Armstrong. The two were Ptes. Bickerson and A. Bishop. Ald. Worth had his car waiting and drove the two boys out to their homes in Keene. Pte. Bishop, who is suffering from a bad case of shell shock, enlisted early in October, 1914, with the local quota to the 21st Battalion. He went to France with the 21st, and after being wounded once was buried by a shell at Courcelette, last September. He has since been undergoing hospital treatment in England, and since March in the military hospital at Whitby, and this is the first opportunity he has had to visit his home. A third returned soldier, Lance-Corp. Nicholls, was expected on Saturday evening, but the Reception Committee failed to locate him.

Lt.-Col. H. J. Dawson Gets D. S. O.

Official confirmation has been received of the report that Lt.-Col. H. J. Dawson, of this city, officer commanding the 39th battalion, which was recruited in Kingston, has won the D.S.O., says the Standard. Col. Dawson is now in France, where he has been for some time, and it was while in action, for his bravery and heroism under fire, that he won the coveted honour. His many frends in the city and his former colleagues in the Royal Military College, join with the Standard in hearty congratulations to this brave officer.

CORP MERCER RETURNED.

The Kingston Standard says: Lance-Corp. W. Mercer of Port Hope, who went overseas with the 39th battalion, has returned from the front and is now enjoying a rest at his home. He was wounded at Courcellete last September, having been struck in the right eye, also in the back and hip. Corporal Mercer will come to the Elmhurst Home on July, 19th. He spoke highly of the treatment received on the way home, and especially of the treatment accorded the men by the Khaki Club at Quebec.

IMPORTANT DEVELOPMENTS ARE EXPECTED IN GERMANY

FRENCH MAKE BIG AIR RAID OVER GERMANY

Eighty-four Airplanes Travel Far Into Hunland, Dropping Sixty-Seven Thousand Pounds of Explosive Bombs

ESSEN IS VISITED

PARIS, July 8.—Eighty-four French airplanes made a series of raids Friday night far into Germany, in reprisal for German attacks on open French towns. Sixty-seven thousand pounds of bombs were dropped at many points of military importance. Only two machines failed to return.

The principal centres visited were Treves, Essen and Coblenz. Eleven airplanes raided Treves, dropping over 5,000 pounds of bombs. Seven fires broke out, one of which was in the Central Station. Six other machines attacked Ludwigshaven, destroying among other things the Badische aniline factory.

One lone pilot went as far as Essen, where he shelled the Krupp factory. Other places bombarded were the environs of Coblenz. Hirson, Thionville, Dun-sur-Meuse, Bantheville, Machault, and Cauroy.

THE OFFICIAL REPORT.

The official report yesterday said: "On the night of July 6, 84 machines took the air. Several of these raids had as their objectives towns situated very far in the interior of the enemy territory, in reprisal for bombardments against our open towns.

"Eleven of our airplanes flew over Treves, on which they showered 2,650 kilos of shells. Seven fires broke out, one of great violence in the Central Station. Six other machines bombarded Ludwigshaven, doing considerable damage. Among other buildings, the important Badische aniline factory was devoured by flames.

"Another of our airplanes, piloted by Marechal des Logis Gallois, pushed as far as Essen, and dropped projectiles on the buildings of the Krupp factory.

"Military installations in the environs of Coblenz, the Hirson Station, the railroad west of Pfalsburg and the Thionville Station were likewise bombarded.

"In all 30,455 kilos of projectiles were used. Two of our airplanes have not arrived."

Amsterdam, July 8.—A frontier correspondent of The Handelsblad reports that five persons were killed and several houses were destroyed during the bombardment of the German city of Essen, home of the great Krupp works, on Friday night.

SAGE ADVICE FOR QUEBEC

"Disloyal Attitude Will For a Long Time Cast a Shadow Over Their National Honour"

MONTREAL, Que., July 9.—Le Messager, of Lewisten, Maine, one of the numerous French papers published in the Eastern States, has some sage advice for its compatriots in Quebec. It says:

"To have a successful revolution like the one predicted in the Province of Quebec, there must be an armed force, and the armed force is on the side of the government. A few hundred disciplined soldiers would soon make short work of the rebels, as was done in 1837, and more recently at the time of the Riel Rebellion. While sympathizing with our compatriots of the Province of Quebec, we think they are on the wrong path and that their disloyal attitude will for a long time cast a shadow over their national honour."

Tense Interest in Political Circles Over Formal Statement Chancellor Von Bethmann Hollweg is Slated to Make To-morrow.

ELECTORAL REFORMS

(By John Grandens, U. P. Staff Correspondent.)

Special to The Examiner:

BERLIN, Via London, July 8. — Signs multiply that the political liberalization of Germany is impending. A week's important conference, preceding the Reichstag session, brought the situation to a head to-day.

To-morrow Chancellor Von Bethmann Hollweg is expected to make a formal statement, and there is tense interest in political circles as to the attitude he may show on electoral reforms. From the central wing to the Socialists all opinion in the Reichstag is united that a re-formed electoral system must be applied in Prussia, if Prussia fails to adopt such a plan of its own accord. The government's promises of vast changes in the electoral districts is considered only a small instalment in payment for the large debt owing the people by the German government. There was a disposition indicated in all parties to-day to demand Prussian reform this fall.

According to Grandens despatch, the main objection now held by the German reformists to present electoral system is the preponderance of Prussian misrepresentation in the government. In the Reichstag the kingdom of Prussia has 236 deputies, six or eight times as many members as any other kingdom or principality. In the Bundesrat Prussia has 17 members, nearly three times as many as any other section of Germany.

Berlin newspapers comment vigorously on the general situation in Germany. "The meeting to-day means a critical period of the first magnitude for Germany," declared the Lokal Anzeiger. "It is not possible for the Chancellor to avoid a frank and open statement in view of these increasing demands."

The Socialist organ, Vorwaerts, comments bitterly on promises of reform in franchise which have not yet materialized.

AMSTERDAM, July 9. —Events of the greatest importance were predicted in Berlin's Monday newspapers as likely to happen to-morrow. The Liberal German press as a whole, agreed that the Reichstag must now decide whether the people "are to be governed by Reaction or Liberalism." The Vorwaerts declared: "We are suffering the same as our antagonists. All civilized peoples are longing for peace. The problem must be settled, not a basis of military policy or power, but on the principles of International law."

Numerous conferences were held in Berlin Sunday, following Chancellor Hollweg's audience with the Kaiser and Field Marshal Hindenburg.

AN AT HOME

The Women's Missionary Society of George Street Church are holding an "AT HOME" at the residence of Mrs. Jas. Kendry, 754 Water street, to-morrow, Tuesday afternoon, from three-thirty to five-thirty p.m. An invitation is extended to all the ladies of the different churches to be present. CONFESSING FAILURE.

If a bully assails a man whom he thinks he can easily trounce, and finds he has caught a Tartar and cries "enough," it is a pretty sure sign that he is very much getting the worse of it. The Kaiser brought on this war by trying to ride rough-shod and without "your're leave," over little Belgium as a way to crushing France. After nearly three years of war, in which he has done his best, he and his pals, Austria and Turkey, are on their marrowbones asking for peace, a pretty sure sign that they consider themselves virtually licked. A country that entered the war with so much swashbucking display of "force" and such arrogant confidence in speedily overrunning France as his first step in achieving world domination, must feel it a bitter pill to swallow to ask for peace and humble himself to intriguing for a separate peace with Russia. No other indication, no other rumour, nor story of the war correspondent can speak so eloquently of Germany's impending collapse, as the repeated hints and overtures to peace. We have got the Hun going, and though the finish may be a hard task, we are encouraged to put forth every effort, to utilise every reserve, to hasten the triumphant end.

There won't be much increase of production of potatoes, if the growers treat the potato bug as gently and courteously as the authorities treat the dogs.

THE WAYS OF MUNICIPALITIES

There are some things in regard to the policy and practice of municipal corporations that dumbfound speculation—their ways, or the wherefore of them are past finding out.

If any degenerate citizen should place a small load of stones on the street surface at a crossing, and scatter them over the ground to the intersecting crossing, he would be clapped into jail.

And with good reason. He would have commmtted a crime against the public by destroying the comfortable use of the street at the site of his offence. He has destroyed the results of considerable expenditure of public money to make the street at that point comfortably smooth and easy for public use.

But in what way would his action differ in result from that of civic employees, who, previous to the oiling of the street, placed a load of gravel at the crossing on Rubidge street, at the head of Simcoe street? The big stones that naturally occurred in the gravel were left on the spot, and have been knocking about, interfering with traffic, and are scattered over the street to the next crossing, and scattered over the crossing—till knocked off by the uncautious corns of pedestrians.

This may seem to be a small matter, and be regarded as a trifling interference with traffic, but it is a capital matter as a type of careless ways, positively injurious and loss-producing to the public.

Some of the aldermen drive motor cars; some time they may have "blow-outs," and they may trace them to the loose stones referred to, and in that event they don't deserve much pity.

An expert, writing on auto-car tires, says: "Stone bruises is another cause of blow-outs," and he explains that a tire violently encountering a road stone, or other blunt object, receives a strain that later results in a "blow-out."

Now, a "blow-out" is a matter of money—from fifty cents to fifty dollars—and, more than that, a matter of annoyance and loss of time or business, or pleasure. And the money and other loss is directly traceable to the carelessness that left the rolling stones at the crossings or on other parts of the street.

Why are such things done, or allowed to be done? Gravel is applied in the repair of a street to improve it; but where the street is made worse the money spent on the process is wasted, not to speak of the money wasted in the repair of vehicles due to the loose stones left in the gravel on both city and country roads.

A township municipality piles a hog's back of gravel along a road, leaving the loose, large stones, and without rolling or levelling—that has to be done by the traffic, and the process is a costly one in the wear and tear of vehicles and indirectly created "blow-outs."

The best authorities say that gravel used in making streets or roads should be screened; the loose stones separated to be crushed to proper street metal form. This is never done in Peterborough or the adjacent townships, and the neglect of it is a positive loss and injury to the public.

It would pay Peterborough to look after doing things right. The use of oil on our macadamized and gravel streets shows that with proper construction and maintenance a gravel roadway can be made a practically perfect stree' the most of the year—almost as good for comfortable use of general traffic, if properly built, compacted, and rolled and oiled as a street with asphalt pavement, and a great saving to the ratepayers' pockets.

It would seem to be a good thing for the city to try the right way of doing things in the right way in regard to street construction and maintenance of streets.

Money is spent to make streets smooth and comfortable for traffic, but leaving loose stones in the gravel is obstructing traffic and defeating the sole object of spending money in doing the work. The same done in street repairs has the same result.

There seems to be lack of supervision of street work and inspection of streets. The former, exercised, would prevent sloppily done work, and inspection of streets would disclose defects like those on Gilmour street: Just at the turning into or from Babb's Lane the stump of a telephone pole, cut off when the lane was widened, sticks up one or two inches above the street surface—a terrible engine of destruction and wear to the wheels of autos or other vehicles. And just over the crossing and opposite a bige hole in the street holds water after every rain.

These things may in themselves be small things put by themselves, but repeated all over, they betray a lack of system and oversight and care of streets that result in conditions that defeats the first and only object of spending money in street building and repair—to make them smooth and easy for traffic.

The food controller is cutting out double work for himself saving exportable food, and at the same time reducing the cost of bread to consumers.

AND HARDEN ISN'T IMPRISONED.

Again it is Maximilian Harden who, in the exercise of his mysterious immunity from the restrictions to which the other German editors submit, proves that there is in Germany at least one man who knows the facts of the existing situation, and dares to print them and to draw from them logical deductions.

His latest utterances are even more remarkable for their accuracy and boldness than any of their predecessors, and those are qualities which their predecessors have often shown. Harden writes: "The goal of our enemies is democracy and independence for every nation ripe for freedom." Again, he says of those same enemies: "They aim at a condition which will give weapons to right against the arrogance of force, a state of affairs which will threaten with peril any enterprise of attack."

These statements might be made by Woodrow Wilson, by Lloyd George, in defining the purposes of the Allies, and they would agree perfectly with Harden in proclaiming that, as Germany can gain peace through victory only by a miracle, she must gain it by such a change in the nature of her government as will put her people on the lave of democracy occupied by all civilised nations.

How different is all this from the protestations of Harden's colleagues—from their obstinate lingering in the assumption that resistance is Germany to the most vicious of crimes, and that whatever Germany does must be right because she does it!—New York Times.

THE APPEAL COMES AGAIN TO THE WOMEN OF CANADA

Once more the appeal is to the women of Canada; theirs chiefly will be the duty to respond to Mr. Hanna's call to economize on food so as to help our Allies. Ever since the war began the noble women of this and other countries of the Entente have realized their duty, and with resolution and high courage have played their part. They gave their sons—in too many cases their husbands under the often inequitable voluntary system—and they are wearing the mourning where they do not wait in anxiety for the dread message of mishap at the front. Their days and nights they have freely given to the service of patriotic societies, their hands scarcely ever without needles that weave comforts for the known and unknown ones who are out there fighting for liberty. These services are freely admitted, and they have placed mankind forever in their debt, a debt which is already recognized by the granting of the franchise in many cases, a concession which at once removes one ancient tradition of inequality.

Now comes the new summons, the Food Controller' call to save and to make the largest possible expert of food for stricken countries whose production, never large enough, has sunk far below normal. Visitors from Europe, including our own people who have been abroad, are aghast at the lavish use of food and materials in this still wealthy country. Our stores are opulent with all the necessaries of life as before, our fields and gardens seem bursting with fatness, so that we scarce realize that anyone in the world can be hungry. We are startled at the news that the export of wheat from the United States to Canada this year will be 160,000,000 bushels below the necessities of our Allies in Europe, allowing for no loss in transit through submarine warfare. Such a statement must arrest the attention of the most thoughtless.

The call is urgent and imperative. Waste must be stopped. Perishable food must be more fully depended upon, releasing staples for export and for winter consumption. Meals must be simplified, and every ounce of food made to go as far as possible in sustenance. City and country must join hands gladly and amicably to reap every bushels of harvest, so that none be lost. Consumers must lighten the delivery burdens of the merchants, middlemen must be curbed in their levy of excessive profits. Mr. Hanna should at once redeem his promise to make fish cheaper and to reduce the spread between what the consumer pays and the producer receives for fruit.

These simple steps are needed for national welfare to prevent misery and under-development in the citizens of the future. Thy will do more; they will bring many thoughtless people back to simpler living, and the days of stress will have bequeathed a real blessing on a troubled world.

The appeal in this instance is to the stay-at-homes. The last line of defence is the food supply. Everyone can help to defend it. If it fails, the war is lost.—The Globe.

J. R. Payne's Explanation.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—My attention has been called to a report published in various papers of the trial in the suit of alleged breach of promise to marry—Elizabeth Lonsdale vs. myself, which trial I understand was held on June 19th, and I take the liberty of publishing an explanation of why I was not present to defend, and of refuting a number of the statements on which great emphasis appears to have been placed by the trial judge.

In the first place Notice of Trial in this action was dated May 20th, 1917, being served on my solicitor on that date and immediately mailed to me to Dummer, Sask., as shown by the date stamped on the said letter, and received at the post office here on June 13th, the day after the trial. It is difficult to account for this great delay, as in the ordinary course of mails it should have arrived here on June 3rd at the latest, which would have allowed me ample time to have reached Peterborough.

Almost everyone knows that a man is innocent until the contrary is proven, and if even a part of the evidence of some witnesses, given in a court of law, when there is no one present to contradict it, is believed, the party asking for judgment usually gets a verdict in his favour. It was well known to both the plaintiff and her solicitor that I was absent in Saskatchewan, and further it was generally known that I was at Dummer, where I had spent about eighteen of the twenty-four months prior to the 17th January, 1917. It would therefore have been only fair to me to have given a longer notice of trial, and I can only infer that judgment in default of my appearing was desired.

I flatly deny the following statements made in the glaring headlines of the report, viz.: "Hesitated on the eve of the wedding," "Gave no reason why," and "Engaged two years." I told the plaintiff on the 12th January, the day after I met with a serious accident, that I could not be present on the 17th inst. This was surely a reasonable notice under the circumstances. I was disabled for one month, and I admit that at the end of that month I refused to marry the plaintiff and my reasons for this action would have come to light at the trial if I had been given a reasonable opportunity to be present. The statement that I had give no explanation for refusing to marry is an absolute falsehood. I explained my reasons to Miss Lonsdale clearly for not wishing to marry, and I am advised that I have a good defense to the action brought by her.

In view of the fact that the people of Warsaw village know that I was here for at least nine months out of twelve in each of the years 1915 and 1916, they will be able to give it the incredibility, which it deserves, and understand better than the newspaper reporter apparently did the extent of the weekly calls, ong drives, etc., and when the case is appealed the public will be in a much better position to judge for themselves what the truth of the whole matter is, and as to whether the plaintiff is entitled to any damages or not.

Orangemen Parade To St. James' Church

Several Hundred Members Attend Divine Worship—Address by Rev. B. Greatrix

Between three and four hundred Orangemen paraded last evening to St. James' Methodist Church, where they were addressed by the Rev. Benjamin Greatrix. The turnout was unusually large considering the inclement nature of the weather. The members of the Order assembled at the Victoria Hall on George street. The parade was headed by the band of the Salvation Army. The Church was crowded to capacity and an interesting address was delivered by the Pastor. After the service the Orangemen returned to their hall, where a vote of thanks was extended to the Pastor, the choir and officials of the Church for the facilities offered to enable the Orangemen to carry out their annual custom of attending divine worship in a body.

Rev. Mr. Greatrix took for his text the fourth chapter of Joshua, sixth and seventh verses: "That this may be a sign among you, that when your children ask their fathers in time to come, saying, what mean ye by these stones? Then we shall answer them, that the waters of the Jordan were cut off, and these stones shall be for a memorial unto the children of Israel forever."

"Not being a member of your Order, which I suppose is my fault," said the speaker, "I shall try and contemplate it from the outside. Anybody who reads and studies your declaration cannot help but be struck by its fairness. To keep this declaration one must of necessity be a good citizen and a follower of Jesus Christ. One way of becoming a Christian citizen is to carry out the principles of your Order. There are yet some people in the world who take exception to the word Protestant and Orangeism and believe such terms to be of a recent origin. They are terms you will find in ancient history. Was not Abel a Protestant? Was not his life a protest against the unrighteous life of his brother Cain? Was not Moses a Protestant when he protested against the iniquitous ways of Pharaoh? These and many other ancient characters who we could mention were Protestants in every sense of the world. Are not our Allies Protestants when they protest against the danger of Prussian domination?"

Conscription Bill.

The speaker referred to the situation arising out of the recent effort of the Canadian Parliament to introduce conscription. "The superheated atmosphere in Eastern Canada only needs a match, and it will burst forth into flame," said Mr. Greatrix. "We must feel surprised at the many subterfuges that were thrown in the path of conscription. They sought to justify the lack of recruits but never once did they tackle the question why?

Mr. Greatrix compared the objects of the institution with that of a dike which is used to protect the land from floods. It serves as a means of defence and not a menace. It is not a challenge, but a pledge of security.

A free press, free speech and adequate system of education were among the principles enumerated by the speaker in referring to the Order. "Thank God we have a free press," said Mr. Greatrix. Free speech is restricted in Germany. The speaker concluded with a reference to the patriotic instinct that inspired sixty thousand Orangemen in the Dominion of Canada to enlist. "Ten thousand have paid the supreme sacrifice," said Mr. Greatrix.

GREECE WANTS EPIRUS BACK.

Her Interests Clash with Italy's at More Than One Point.

WASHINGTON, July 9.—Participation by Greece in the war as an ally of the Entente nations depends upon the Allies' ability to give Greece guarantees which conflict with Italian pretensions. The immediate point of conflict between Greece and Italy is the Italian occupation of parts of Epirus, inhabited by Greeks, but which were included in Albanian when the map of the Balkans was redrawn by the London Conference after the Balkan War. Italian troops have entered Greece, taking possession of the City of Janina, and instituted Italian military courts there for the trial of Greeks.

Greece, it is explained, desires the fruits of her military success in the Balkan wars and claims as a legitimate part of them all Epirus, which would include the portion of Southern Albania, occupied by the Italian Army, and running roughly from the Greek-Albanian border south of Lake Crida to a point below the Bay of Avlona. It is insisted that all uncertainty will have to be cleared up before Venezelos will commit Greece to a participation in the war.

Greek and Italian aspirations come again into conflict in Asia Minor, Greece desiring Smyrna and a strip of territory along the coast in both directions from Smyrna, including the islands along the coast, all of which, Greek statesmen of all parties contend, are Greek in population and interest. Smyrna has been called the Liverpool of the Near East, and for it to pass into Greek hands would be a blow to Italian commercial interests, according to the position of the Rome Government.

Withdrawal of the Russian demand for Constantinople has removed one obstance to Greece's entrance in the war, as Athens contends also that the Turkish capital is Greek and ought to pass into Greek hands from the Turks. At the same time Greece would not expect to get Constantinople without resistance by Russia, but it is suggested that a partial solution might be reached by the Bosphorus and the Dardanelles not being awarded to either nation.

Much optimism was expressed here to-day over the outlook for the re-establishment of a strong, unified Government at Athens, representing all Greeks and with a singleness of purpose for the nation. M. Venizelos, it is understood, will have the support of the throne and of the members of the retiring Ministry, some of whom are expected to accept membership under the Presidency of Venizelos.

"Why not be polite at home? Why not use freely the golden coin of courtesy? How sweet they sound, those little words, "thank you," or "you are very kind." Doubly, yes, trebly sweet, from the lips we love, when heart smile make the eye sparkle with the clear light of affection.

spected that to-night or to-morrow a number will reach Kingston. Queen's Military Hospital, which received a number last Sunday, is ready to receive more, and it is expected that they will arrive soon. Many who arrived last Sunday belonged to the western coast, but owing to the extent of their wounds it was not thought advisable to send them as far as the coast.—Kingston Standard.

CAMORRA INFORMER A HERO.

Abbatemaggio Promoted for Bravery in the Italian Offensive.

ROME, July 9.—"I will return home cleansed of my faults or die," said Gennaro Abbatemaggio, the informer in the famous Cuocolo trial, on the occasion of the distribution of medals and promotions by the Duke d'Aosta to the Mantua Brigade, which distinguished itself in the last advance. "I wanted to volunteer to redeem myself and become an honest man. I have now been promoted corporal for having kept my machine gun going for a long time in an advanced and difficult position at Lucatil. I am happy to-day; even the Duke shook hands with me."

Gennaro Abbatemaggio dealt the Camorra society what was at that time regarded as a death blow in 1911 he turned informer against members of the organization who were accused of the murder of Gennaro Cuocolo and his wife. He was then 23 years old and had belonged to the Camorra since he was 19. He confessed that he himself had taken part in a large number of murders and robberies in company with Cuocolo and other members of the society. Cuocolo and his wife were murdered because they had informed on other members of the organization, with whom there had been quarrels over loot.

In a statement of 20,000 words Abbatemaggio revealed the inner history of a decade of the society's preying. Not only soldiers but civil officials and priests were involved in his statement. He told of the division of Naples and other Italian cities into districts, each of which was allotted to some part of the Camorra. He told how the Camorra was divided into a higher and lower sect, the Alta, or higher, concerning itself with large affairs, such as assassinations, political intrigues, and big robberies; the Bassa, or lower, with smaller blackmail and petty robberies. There were he said, two Camorristi for each of the twelve districts into which Naples was divided; each Camorrista had under him forty-eight pocciotti. Abbatemaggio began his career of crime as a pocciotto, but was promoted to be a Camorrist.

Because he gave evidence for the Crown, he was not punished. About a year and a half ago he enlisted as a private in the Italian Army.

PLEADED WITH KERENSKY.

Soldiers Sought Vainly to Restrain Him When He Led Charge.

The Petrograd correspondent of the Jewish Warheit reports that the Russian capital is witnessing wild demonstrations of joy over the army's new advance, and that Professor Milukoff, who is reconciled with the Government, is taking a prominent part. The cable reads in part:

"War Minister Kerensky risked his life by leading in person the soldiers on the Galician front below Lemberg. The War Minister insisted on marching in the front rank. The soldiers begged him to remain behind, urging him to spare himself for the sake of the future of Russia and of the Russian Army. Kerensky, however, would not listen. He boldly gave the command, 'Forward! Follow me!' and he triumphed.

"Petrograd is not to be recognized for joy. The city has been aglow with demonstrations, which lasted through half the night, and in which the late Minister of Foreign Affairs, Milukoff took a lively part. A huge crowd surrounded the home of the War Minister, crying 'Hurrah!' singing the "Marseillaise," and hearing speeches by officers from the front.

"Among the anarchists who seized and fortified themselves in General Ourmonoff's Summer palace in Viborg were several Jewish anarchists who had lately arrived from New York. All of them have been arrested."

THE EMPEROR OF CHINA MUST MARRY TWICE

And Rear Two Families—Hsuan, Now 11, is Adopted Son of Pair of Rulers

WASHINGTON.—If the new Emperor of China, Hsuan Tung, retains the throne until he becomes of age, he will be required under an old custom to marry two wives and rear two families. The necessity of his double marriage arises from the fact that he was made the adopted son of two emperors of China.

There was a famous feud between the late emperor of China and the late Empress Dowager. In 1898 the empress dowager had the emperor cast into prison, where he was held, until released in 1900. In 1902 the feud was well on the way to healing, and, as the emperor was without an heir, a marriage was arranged between the emperor's brother and a daughter of General Jung-Lu, one of the dowager's principal supporters.

The marriage took place in 1905. The marriage settlement provided that if a son should be born to the union, he should ascend to the throne on his becoming of age. In 1906 Pu-Yi, known as Hsuan Tung, was born, and another provision of the marriage contract was carried out, that the son should become the adopted son of the Emperor Kuang-Hsu and also of the preceding emperor, Tung-Chi, who died in 1876. That fact will require him to take two wives upon becoming of age.

RESULT OF DOWAGER'S ACTS

The troubles brought upon the country as a consequence of the acts of the court under the influence of the empress dowager's presented an opportunity for the progressive elements of the nation, led by persons who had imbibed the spirit of Occidental institutions through being educated in America and Europe, to set their forces to work providing for the time when they might overthrow the monarchy.

The main event awaited was the death of the empress dowager, who during her lifetime was surrounded by a powerful group of supporters and who wielded the military power of the nation.

One day in 1908 the empress dowager was taken very ill. A eunuch came running suddenly into the palace and announced to the emperor the death of the "Old Buddha," as she was called in derision in imperial circles. The emperor immediately sat down and wrote a decree ordering the execution of Yuan-Shih-kai, and whom the emperor had charged with betraying him in 1898, when he was taken prisoner.

Directly afterward, however, the eunuch returned, saying the announcement of the dowager's death was premature and that she was still alive. The emperor thereupon stuck the decree ordering the execution of the future president of China in his desk. In November, 1908, the emperor himself became mysteriously ill and died, and the empress dowager was credited with an edict proclaiming the accession of Pu-Yi, or Hsuan Tung, to the throne in accordance with the marriage contract.

HSUAN PROCLAIMED EMPEROR

The very next day the empress dowager herself was declared to be dead, Hsuan Tung was proclaimed emperor and his father was made regent. A few days after the regency was announced the widow of the deceased emperor discovered the edict requiring the death of Yuan-Shih-Kai, took it to the regent and asked him what he was going to do about it. Friends of Yuan informed him in time for him to make his escape and he went to a distant city with the announced purpose of consulting a physician concerning his health. Prince Ching used his good offices in Yuan's behalf and obtained permission from him to retire from office on account of a sore foot.

In the autumn of 1911 were held the annual autumn manoeuvres of the army. The imperial guard at Pekin was called out by the regent to the parade grounds outside the capital and the commander was presented with a new standard. The man who received the flag from the prince regent, stumbled and fell, the flag trailed in the dust and the people declared it was a bad omen.

TROUBLE IN WEST CHINA

Trouble had already broken out in Szechwan province, in West China. At about the same time an explosion occurred, on October 8, in the British foreign quarters in Hankow, and an investigation revealed that the headquarters of a revolutionary movement existed there. The next night the viceroy at Wuchang, a short distance from Hankow, arrested two of the supposed leaders, and on the night of the 9th the prince regent a Pekin, in the name of the emperor, bestowed the yellow jacket on the viceroy, which reached him on the 10th.

On the night of the 10th the viceroy's yamen was in flames, and Li-Yuan-hung, deposed as president of China by the imperialist group of last Sunday, was leading the revolutionary forces in the open. The viceroy fled to Shanghai, where he died of chagrin on the day that the yellow jacket was taken from him upon orders of the regent.

These occurrences marked the beginning of the republican revolution which overthrew the dynasty and set up a representative republic.

LEADS PIG-TAILED ARMY.

The movement for the restoration of the Manchue line upon the throne was reported by the Pekin correspondents of the Japanese papers as early as the middle of April. A Pekin telegram to the Mainchi, dated April 19, spoke of the four secret conferences among the leaders of the restoration movement, who were gathered at Tien-tsin at that time. Nieh Shih-chun, Tuan Chikuei, the brother of the ex-Premier Tuan, and Lu Chuan-chang were the prime movers to convert the Chinese Republic into a constitutional monarchy under the title of Chung-Hua Empire.

The stand of Chang Haun was somewhat uncertain at the time, and the pro-Manchu leaders were doing everything to win him to their side. Chang Hsun is the only military leader who has been strong enough, obstinate, and old-fashioned enough to defy the mandate of the central government in preserving his queue. He would not allow his 40,000 soldiers to cut of their queues, either. His is the only pig-tailed army in all China. All of which means one thing; that in spite of the new-fangled Republic regime and all the up-to-date political agitations of the hare-brained Chinese students home from American and Japanese schools he was for the old Manchu dynasty and was not ashamed to show it. The queue was the badge of one's loyalty to the Manchu court.

Chang Hsun, like his old colleague, the late Yuan-Shih-Kai, has always been bitter against Japan and the Japanese. It was he who petitioned Yuan, while he was president, to allow him to wage war against Japan and conquer her single-handed. Whatever one might say of his gross ignorance and primitive instinct for blood, the man who was seriously eager to fight Japan with his rabble army of 40,000 can hardly be accused of being a coward.

Back To Serve Forty-four Years

"Foot-and-Half" Butlers' Spell of Freedom From Prison is Cut Short

A last-minute effort to obtain the release of E. T. (Foot-and-a-half) Butler on a writ of habeas corpus met with failure at Kansas City.

While Joseph Aylward, Butler's attorney, was getting the writ the district attorney's office was busy swearing out a grand larceny warrant against the prisoner and officers were hurrying from Jefferson City to take him back to the penitentiary.

At 6 o'clock, when the hearing on the writ of habeas corpus was to have taken place, things were so obviously hopeless that Aylward dismissed the suit. Later the officers arrived and "Foot-and-a-half" was started on his way back to the penitentiary to finish forty-four years of a 55-year murder sentence.

While in the holdover "Foot-and-a-half" showed no signs of despondency. Apparently he was of the opinion that the same potent influences which obtained his parole by Governor Major would intercede in his behalf again.

The girl the convict and all-around bad man married six weeks ago visited him at police headquarters after she heard his parole was revoked. The two were allowed a half hour alone together. At the conclusion the young woman left dry-eyed, seemingly imbued with the same optimism which has characterized the attitude of her husband.

HOOK NO CHANCE WITH PRISONER

No chances were taken by the posse at Butler's escaping during the hours which preceded his start for the penitentiary. At 4 o'clock, when he was taken before Judge Thomas F. Seehorn on a writ of habeas corpus, Chief Thomas P. Fishive made assurance double sure by handcuffing the prisoner and sending five officers along to keep him company.

Butler pleaded guilt in 1906 to the murder of Patrick Collins, a Joplin policeman. He had served eleven years of his 55-year sentence when paroled by Governor Major.

Recently he took part in the robbery of a man at a crap game and in the attempted robbery of a saloon. It was the latter affair which was made the basis of the grand larceny warrant filed against him. The police are also of the opinion that the notorious "Foot-and-a-half" has had a part in numerous other minor robberies which have taken place in Kansas City lately.

"Foot-and-a-half is thirty-nine years old. He was born in Kansas City and started on his criminal career as soon as he became of age.

While hopping trains in the West Bottoms as a boy Butler lost the front part of one foot. On his recovery the boys of his neighborhood coined for him the sobriquet he has borne ever since.

"Foot-and-a-half" saw the holdover at police headquarters many times in the early part of his criminal career, but political influence always saved him from the penitentiary.

Not until he ventured from Kansas City and killed a policeman in a strange town did the law finally fall on the youthful criminal heavily. Even then his friends were powerful enough to get his release.

FARM HELP WANTED.

Only a small Number of Men have Offered For Harvest Work.

Demands for farm help are increasing at Mr. G. A. Gillespie's office on Aylmer street. All the men that offer to help bring in the harvest are quickly signed up, but thus far the number has been a mere fraction of the squad that will be needed to be of any real benefit to the rural community around Peterborough.

WAS ONCE GREAT CITY.

Mighty Babylon Has Become Little Town of Hillah.

Few people would recognize Babylon, under its modern title of Hillah, the small town on the Euphrates some sixty-five miles due south of Bagdad. And yet, so it is shown today on the maps, and so does the Arab know it and speak of it, as he passes through its narrow streets or makes his way towards it from the plain, past those gigantic mounds which are all that is left, to-day, of "Great Babylon." As in the case of all the other ancient cities that are now coming, once again, prominently into notice, cities that figure in the records of the remote past, it would be impossible to give even a short sketch of the history of Babylon in the space available, and yet few cities lend themselves to a quicker view. Babylon has seized hold of the world's imagination; fragments of its history, facts as to its size and greatness, are picked up by the wayside. It is, essentially, "the great city," and there is little that can be said, in the way of greatness, of any city, but can be said of Babylon.

Against the vast background of the history of Babylon, with its tale of great kings and great conquests, from the earliest days of the first Semitic settlements to its final overthrow, after the conquest of Alexander the Great, there stand out many notable incidents. Well-known figures pass across the stage, as it were. Tiglath-Pileser, Shalmaneser, Sargon, Sennacherib, Nebuchadnezzar, Cyrus, and Alexander the Great, each of them the central figure in some great story. It was under Nebuchadnezzar, of course, that Babylon attained the height of its glory. The city had been practically razed to the ground by Sennacherib, in 689 B. C., and Nebuchadnezzar's father began the great work of rebuilding, which Nebuchadnezzar himself carried to completion. Herodotus' description of the city in the Fifth Century shows the place to have been truly "Babylonian" in its immensity. A great square it was, lying on both sides of the river, and inclosed within a double row of lofty walls. Herodotus gives the circumference of these walls as 480 stades, or fifty-six miles; thus they would include an area of about 200 square miles. Then, as he has it on record that the height of the walls was no less than 335 feet, and their width 85 feet, it sounds exaggerated, and, indeed, the latest researches have shown it to be so, but nothing is really impossible in the way of walls after the Great Wall of China.

The whole city was laid out in keeping with its mighty defenses. Huge temples, massive, shapeless structures, but ablaze with color, shouldered their way into the sky line; whilst bronze and gold fresco and enameled tiles, pilaster and column, caught the eye at every turn. Two other walls ran along the banks of the Euphrates and the quays which lined the stream, and each wall contained twenty-five gates, giving access to the streets beyond. Ferry-boats plied between the landing places at the gates, and a great movable drawbridge, thirty feet broad, and supported on stone piers, joined together the two parts of the city. Babylon was, too, a great power. Under Nebuchadnezzar, her victorious armies conquered Syria and Palestine, and penetrated into Egypt. Babylonian commerce spread far from the East to the West, and she became "a land of traffic and a city of merchants." Her greatness, however, was short-lived. Scarcely half a century had elapsed after the fall of Nineveh, when Belchazzar, the king of the Chaldeans, was slain, "And Darius the Median took the kingdom," and it sank to the position of a Persian province. It never recovered its lost greatness. Alexander the Great, after he had overthrown the Persian supremacy, sought to rebuild Babylon, which had largely fallen into ruin, and make it the capital of his vast empire; but without success. Within a few years, the once so great city of the plain returned, as Pliny has it, "to its ancient solitude." Only a few Chaldeans continued to dwell amidst its ruins.

Mines Under the Farms.

Surroundings have little to do with mining, as is proved in northwestern Illinois, where corn, oats and hay are raised on the surface and lead and zinc are extracted from the rocks beneath the fields. Although in this particular locality agriculture is the principal industry, several hundred men are engaged in zinc and lead mining. Most of the mines are 100 to 200 feet deep. The lead sold from this region since mining began has brought about $50,000,000, and the zinc produced since about 1900 has been sold for about $10,000,000. Prospecting for new deposits still continues.—Argonaut.

THE ISLAND OF GUAM

Was Discovered by Magellan, and Is Now a Naval Base.

Guam, one of the smallest of the United States' insular possessions in the Pacific, where Captain Roy C. Smith, U. S. N., captured 345 officers and sailors of the interned German gunboat Cormoran, which they had blown up, has lately had some newspaper notoriety.

The great strategic importance of the island of Guam, the largest and most populous of the Ladrone group in the Pacific, is out of all proportion to its size and population. Its length is less than 30 miles, with an average width of about six miles. Its value is as a base for repairs and supplies for vessels plying between Hawaii, 3,825 miles to the northwest, and Manila, 1,880 miles to the west. The population of the coral-reefed ocean oasis, according to a census taken four years ago, is 12,693, of which 12,448 are natives.

Guam was discovered by Magellan during his historic voyage of 1521 when the ship which he commanded up to the time of his death succeeded in circumnavigating the globe. Missionaries reached the island a century and a half later.

Although the island lies within the tropics its climate is tempered by the north-west trade-winds. Generally speaking, the seasons conform with those of Manila, the least rain falling in the "winter" months.

The natives of Guam are, as a rule, of good physique and pleasing appearance. Most of them have glossy black hair which is either straight or slightly curly. They are essentially an agricultural people, and their farms are often cultivated in a communal fashion. They are characteristically happy and genial, singing and playing at their work.

Practically none of the natives depends for his livelihood on his handiwork or his trade. There are men who can make shoes, tan leather and cut stone for building purposes, but such a thing as a Chamorra shoemaker, tanner, stonemason, or merchant who supports himself and his family by his trade is unknown. In the midst of building a stone wall the man who has consented to help do the work will probably say, "Excuse me, Senor, but I must go to my rancho for three or four days; the weeds are getting ahead of my corn." And when lime is needed the native to whom one is directed may say, 'After I have finished gathering my cocoanuts for copra (the chief export of the island) I will get my boys to cut wood and gather limestone to make a kiln. Never fear, Senor, you shall have your lime within six weeks."

One of the peculiar customs of the natives in former times was their method of catching fish by the use of intoxicants. From the fruit of a native tree they would make a paste which they enclosed in bags. The bags would be placed in holes in a coral reef at low tide and at high time the fish would float to the surface in great quantities—some lifeless and others merely stupefied, but all easily gathered by the expert swimmers.

In the mangrove swamps of the island at low tide hundreds of small fish with protruding eyes hop about in the mud and climb among the roots of trees. The air-bladders of this species have developed to such an extent that is a measure they now perform the function of lungs, enabling these strange fish-animals to breathe the air.

SLIDING TO DEATH.

A Perilous Mountain Incident and a Lucky Escape.

An American who lives in China made the ascent of the sacred mountain, Siaoouta'shan, a year or two since, and made, or at least began to make, the descent in a much more unpremeditated manner.

He had reached an altitude of over 9,000 feet and, having lost the trail, branched off and climbed a lower peak to see whether he could discover the right track. He managed to crawl to the top, and since the view was very fine he opened his paint box to make a sketch.

As he was sorting his brushes the stone on which he was sitting gave way, and he started sliding down the almost perpendicular slope. He tried to clutch the ground with his hands. He seized every projecting stone in the hope of stopping his precipitous descent, but at the speed at which he was going that was no easy matter.

Death stared him in the face, for another 100 yards would bring him to the edge of a precipice several hundred feet high, over which he must inevitably go. His hair stood on end as he approached the spot, and he can well remember the sound of his heavy paint box clanging from rock to rock as it accompanied him in his descent.

A violent shock, which nearly tore his body in two made him think he had gone over; but, no—he had suddenly stopped.

He opened his eyes, but he did not dare move, for his position, although much improved, was far from safe. His coat and strong leather strap that was slung under his arm had caught on a projecting stone, but a single false movement on his part would start him sliding down the slope again.

Slowly, carefully, as he lay on the almost perpendicular slope, he tried to get a footing. When he had succeeded in doing that the great difficulty was to turn round. After several anxious moments, each of which seemed ages long, he succeeded, and there he was, half kneeling, half lying, with his body on the ground, clutching the rock that saved him.

Then, when his agitation passed away, he managed to crawl up, cat fashion, to a position of safety.

Blunders in Quotation.

Errors of quotation are common in speech and writing. Byron quoted Shakespeare. "An eagle towering in his pride of place." But what Shakespeare wrote was, "A falcon towering in his pride of place." Milton wrote not "as thick as leaves in Vallombrosa," but "thick as autumnal leaves that strow the brooks in Vallombrosa;" not "fresh fields and pastures new," but "fresh woods." Nathaniel Lee did not write, "When Greek meets Greek then comes the tug of war," but "When Greek joins Greeks, then was the tug of war," a very different thing. Doubtless, however, the modification of phrases by popular usage is not wholly evil; it certainly is inevitable. The saying, "Let us eat, drink and be merry, for tomorrow we die," is of ...rious origin. The preacher in Ecclesiastes says, "A man hath no better thing under the earth than to eat and to drink and be merry;" Isaiah, "Let us eat and drink, for tomorrow we shall die;" Luke, "Take thine ease, eat, drink and be merry."

DOOR OF GRAIN GROWERS' GRAIN COMPANY WILL BE OPEN TO THE UNITED FARMERS OF ONTARIO

But Not Until They Have Developed the Union in This Province to a Greater Extent--Stirring Address by Mr. John Kennedy at Local Convention on Saturday.

WORKING FOR COMMON PEOPLE

Convincing evidence of the development of the organized farmers' movement in the district of Peterborough was presented at the convention of representatives of Farmers' Clubs held in the Public Library Assembly Hall on Saturday afternoon. More than one hundred and fifty farmers were present, braving the discomfort of sultry, summer weather, and drawn together by common interests and the hope of successful co-operation they have already partially realized. Mr S. S. Staples of Ida, presided.

The United Farmers of Ontario have a membership of ten thousand, as the result of their necessitous activies of the past few years, and in the Peterborough district the individual clubs are numerous and steadily growing in members and influence. The prominence of the farmers, who composed Saturday's convention was an incidental, but a significant feature. Not a few of them were men who have held all the municipal positions in the gift of their townships and counties. Hence, it could be safely assumed that the new movement is attracting farmers of wide experience, broad vision and good judgment, men who see in this growing organization a long desired opportunity of articulate and effective union.

And if a fillip were required to the inspiration that has already sprung from the phenomenal success of the Western Grain Growers' cooperation it was provided by Mr. John Kennedy, vice-president of the Grain Growers' Grain Company, who reviewed its aims and its achievements.

FARM PROFIT.

Mr. Kennedy prefaced his address by stating that for any movement there must be cause, and plain necessity had forced the western farmers to unite. During the past two years he had spoken to farmers all the way from the Rockies to Ottawa and he had never found a man who could make it clear what he was getting from any three years of his labour. No man has shown, and evidently was unable to show, that he was making a reasonable interest on his investment and any reasonable wage for the work of himself and his family. Yet farming was the farmer's business and should be followed on business principles.

HOW ONTARIO FARMERS ARE AFFECTED.

Twelve or fifteen years ago, Mr. Kennedy proceeded, western farmers realized that their trade was suffering and that they were being penalized. They had to accept prices from ten to fifteen cents below the intrinsic value of their grain. Conditions of that nature directly affected the Ontario farmers. "If we take one or ten cents a bushel less than the supply and demand warrant, you will sell a bushel of grain at a corresponding low price. The lower the price in the West, the lower will the price be here in Ontario."

After impressing that salient point upon his audience, Mr. Kennedy stated that western farmers were adopting mixed farming as fast as financial conditions allowed. They had to buy their stock from Ontario, and small profits in the West reduced those purchases, thereby affecting eastern farmers.

WHAT GRAIN COMPANY DOES

"We take possession of the farmer's grain, police and protect it, until it reaches the markets of the world and sell it to the millers ourselves. The first step was to finance the farmer on the farm. Formerly the western farmers were sending forward 75 per cent. of their crop in the first three months of the year, thus pounding down the price. Machine agents and an army of collectors were harassing the farmer for payments, and he was forced to the market in that time. And that condition affects every one of you as it does us. Three years ago we secured legislation by which the farmer could obtain a loan on his grain while it remained on his farm. By that means he was able to meet his payments, while still holding his grain."

BUILT ELEVATORS.

Mr. Kennedy, by the way, is one of the three "green farmers" as he styled them, who founded the Grain Company. The second step was to establish a system of elevators. An elevator was built at every shipping point, where there was sufficient grain to warrant it.

"We have now 500 elevators in operation, and have not been able to give the farmers more than fifty per cent. of the number they had asked for. At each shipping point farmers subscribed all the capital for an elevator, costing from $8,000 to $10,000. This was turned over to the Grain Growers' Grain Company, who in turn, sent out their builders to erect an elevator on a previously determined plan."

Mr. Kennedy detailed the local organization, a feature of which was the parent company's management, thus obviating local jealousies or differences.

TERMINAL ELEVATORS NEXT

"Some day the farmers will wake up and decide to handle their grain themselves, through channels they create, manned by men they appointed." Two years ago, Mr. Kennedy stated, the Grain Growers' Company secured the lease of terminal houses from the C.P.R. because that company realized that the Grain Growers were the men who could best handle those elevators.

That year we handled twenty-eight million bushels. We will handle more than one hundred million bushels through our organization this year and that has been made possible by the loyalty of farmers to their organization." And he added, that without that spirit of loyalty Ontario farmers would fail.

"Don't quit because you think you are losing one cent out of one dollar. If your own company was not there, you don't know what you would get."

STORAGE NEEDED OVERSEAS

The Grain Growers' Grain Company had recently been pronounced the largest exporting grain company in America, and consequently in the world. Having gone into the export business, they had learned that there was no body of men more capable of protecting themselves than the Old Country grain dealers. They had been able to manipulate prices by flashing fictitious reports of adverse crop conditions in the grain countries, and thereby beat down the world price. And all the while the farmer had no friend at court. He had no means of knowing whether the price had been reduced one or ten cents lower than it should have gone. The position was an appalling one, and yet this was the manner in which the farmer permitted his business to be attacked. Hence it has become necessary that terminals must be obtained in England and on the continent.

THE OLD AND THE NEW SPOUTS

To illustrate plainly the benefits of organized selling, Mr. Kennedy presented the contrasting pictures of the old and the new methods of selling grain, the spouts he termed them through which the grain passed. For thirty years the old spout had operated. As soon as threshing was completed, the farmers rushed their grain to the market, crowding the breach of the old spout until it could handle no more, and pile of grain gathered before it, awaiting shipment. As the farmers continued to deliver their grain, the higher that pile mounted. And as that pile became visible to the markets of the world, the price began to drop. Lower and lower it fell, as the pile grew higher from the accumulation of the western farmers' grain.

With the new spout, the farmer gets a loan of fifty per cent. of the value of his grain while it remains on his farm. Thus he is enabled to pay his debts, and the anxiety of shipping is overcome. When he does ship, it is handled in his own elevators and marketed by the company of which he is a member. This was the revolution in the exporting of grain that was being accomplished by the Grain Growers' Company, the results, of which were indirectly advantageous to Ontario farmers.

A PROBLEM OF PRODUCTION

Three months before war broke out Mr. Crerar, president and export manager of the company, concluded that, in the previous few years, Canada's production of grain had so increased that it was overwhelming the markets. But the demand in Britain and on the continent had not increased at a corresponding rate. At the same time, wise men were advocating greater immigration. If we double or treble our production, Mr. Kennedy asked, who will want it, who is going to buy it? It had been stated recently that if Russia is intelligently handled its grain production during the next twenty-five or fifty years will reach the point where it will be sufficient to supply all the wheat the world can consume.

THE VOLUME OF BUSINESS

Mr. Kennedy next traced the steady growth in volume of business handled by the company. Everything they buy is direct from the manufacturer, and at a price less than the wholesaler can obtain. Three months ago an order was given by the Grain Company for 1918 tillage machinery at a cost of $400,000. It included plows, harrows, cultivators and other farm machinery needed for the tilling of the land.

An order was placed with one binder twine company for 15,000,000 pounds of twine for next year's delivery, and contracts with one or two other companies were under consideration. The company has a paid up capital of one and one-quarter millions, with two millions subscribed. Its tangible assets shows an investment of three millions and it has a reserve fund of $700,000. These figures do not include the chain of elevators which alone are worth about $4,000,000.

A FIRST LOSS.

The Grain Growers' Grain Company had first operated as a commission concern, but soon discovered that on that basis it faced failure. It was simply gathering the grain for the big interests who controlled the market. In the first year the exporting company sustained a loss of $250,000; but in the following annual meeting the loss was written off and taken from the reserve fund. The 600 directors unanimously decided to stay in the exporting business, to write off the loss and forget it. "That was the happiest day in my life," Mr. Kennedy remarked.

Last year the company exported 70,000,000 bushels of American grain and seven or eight million bushels of Canadian. The profits for the year amounted to $500,000, the old debt had been wiped off, and the reserve fund considerably increased. And this profit of $500,000 was realised on a paid up capital of $100,000.

Mr. Kennedy referred to the manner in which this information was handled by what he called the subsidized press. But in the years of financial stringency, 1907 and 1908, a royal commission disclosed the fact that a privileged few concerns were able to borrow all the money they wanted while others were closed out, and those few made a "killing." Profits of from five to thirteen cents a bushel were recorded by exporters, whereas the Grain Growers' profits last year represented about three-quarter of a cent a bushel. The company could get foreign credit for seven or eight million dollars, yet banking and other financial interests have said that the exporting of grain is one of the most hazardous businesses. "There is nothing on earth any man can do that farmers can't do," observed Mr. Kennedy.

POSSIBILITIES.

With a return of normal conditions what was there to prevent the farmers of this country coming together and marketing in the same manner, their butter, eggs, cheese, apples and other produce?

"We could carry your goods to the foreign markets and sell them there. We would sell them at a price based on conditions of supply and demand, at least we would have a fighting chance. Under the old way there is no saying what you will get."

MAY RECEIVE ONTARIO FARMERS.

And coming to the point of possible amalgamation of the United Farmers of Ontario with the Grain Growers' Company, Mr. Kennedy said, "When you people are more organized, when the volume of your business is larger, when you have more members and a greater paid up capital I think you will find our doors open to you if you wish to come in. Not this year, however; we have as much as we can handle this year."

NOT A CLASS ORGANIZATION

Having thus covered the general question of farmers' interests, Mr. Kennedy stated that the Grain Growers' Company was not operating solely for the benefit of the farmers, and to substantiate his statement, reviewed the company's activities in the lumber market.

Seven years ago, the Grain Growers saw with alarm that the natural resources of this country were passing into the hands of millionaires in foreign countries, and a few in Canada. The great timber limits were going at the value of a song. And these were the select and choice limits. The interests were picking off the best.

RESOURCES BELONG TO THE PEOPLE

The Grain Growers took up the question with the only object of securing timber for the great common people of Canada.

"I was pushing this matter further than the other directors, Mr. Kennedy explained. "I said, is there a man among you who can truthfully say that he has ever known either political party during the past forty years to have made an honest attempt to preserve our natural resources for the great common people to whom they belong? The party in power was more ready to get the cash with which they could strengthen their position and keep the Opposition out at the next elections."

HAVE LUMBER FOR NEXT 30 YEARS.

Thus the company went into the lumber business and bought limits to provide enough lumber for the next thirty years. And these were not bought for the purpose of profit, but solely to act as a barometer on the lumber market in the interests of the people of this country.

"When we can reduce the price of lumber the wage earner is benefitted, and all the people who have to buy it get the gain. That is the great beauty of our organization. Lumber has gone $7 per thousand feet since the first of January. It costs the farmer $28 per thousand feet and we could deliver it at $21. Our idea is to split the difference. We are building up a big reserve fund with which we hope to step out and get more timber limits for your children."

HEAVY RAIN ON SUNDAY

The Rainfall Was General—Crops Will Benefit

The heavy rain over the week end will carry the crops another two weeks if necessary. Some people are inclined to think that the rain was a little too much for the good of the crops, but it is better to have a little to spare than not enough. It would not make much material difference if it did not rain for another couple of weeks. Yesterday's downpour penetrated several inches into the ground, where it will be conserved for some days to come. Had yesterday's rain been delayed a couple of weeks more harm might have resulted, as the standing grain crops would have been much higher and the danger of breaking them down would have been that much greater.

The rainfall was general throughout the Province.

CEREMONY POSTPONED

Woodmen of the World Had However Very Successful Meeting Yesterday

The annual unveiling of the monuments of Sovereigns of the Woodmen of the World, which was to have ben held at the Little Lake Cemetery, yesterday afternoon, was postponed until next Sunday, on account of the inclemency of the weather. A splendid meeting was held at the hall in the afternoon, however, and interesting addresses were made by Dr. Harrison, Toronto Head Consul of the society; Mr. J. W. Plowman, Deputy Consul, and Mr. Worth.

In his speech to the Lodge Dr. Harrison said that the custom of marking graves has existed since the beginning of time, and the Woodmen have systematized the custom by making part of the obligations of the members to see every grave is marked and annually decorated. The work of the Order in life is kindness, love, friendship, social meeting, for peasure and visiting the sick. If a member is ill the society pays from $3 to $10 a week; in case of death the funeral expenses are undertaken by the society, a monument erected, and an insurance from $250 to $3,000 paid.

Mr. Worth spoke on the credit due the local camp and the head counsel for organizing work. He finished with a vote of thanks to Mr. Plowman for his splendid work in securing new members.

Mr. Plowman spoke of the willing and efficient workers he had found in Peterborough. He also spoke of the credit due the ladies and members who have stood by and through the co-operation of whom the splendid results have been achieved.

MEETING TO-NIGHT.

To-night's meeting will be the wind-up of the Society's activities in the recent campaign, which two months ago was organised to secure fifty new members and accomplished the result aimed at. A good turnout is expected and an excellent social programme prepared.

Old broomhandles, sawed into six-inch lengths, then padded and covered with odd bits of silk, etc., are excellent to wind ribbons on.

FOUL PLAY HINTED IN SAILOR'S DEATH; BODY IN BLACK RIVER

SARNIA, July 9—The body of Gus Banke, a sailor, whose home is believed to be in Detroit, and who has been missing since Monday, was found in Black River Saturday. The police of Port Huron have been searching for him for three days, and are now questioning the possibility of foul play or suicide. It is stated that he left his boat last Monday, and, fearing he would be robbed, left his money with the captain. He was last seen in a saloon on Monday night, and Black River had been previously dragged, but the body was not located. Friends fear he has met with foul play.

Secret Service Men On Guard

It is now evident in the examination of witnesses at the trial in New York of the "Reds" that Emma Goldman and Alexander Berkman will seek to show they did not act in concert in their anti-military propaganda. It will be necessary for the Government to prove its charges of conspiracy by showing the two acted in unison.

A lengthy speech delivered by Emma Goldman at the Harlem River Casino, in which she denounced conscription, was read into the evidence by Prosecutor Content. Miss Goldman in this speech, said she intended to aid with "all her money" and influence those who would refuse to register.

"I'd rather die like a dog than live like a slave," Emma declared on that occasion. "Let's go back home to free Russia."

The court was probably the most carefully guarded room in New York in many long years. Deputy marshals and secret service men were stationed at the elevators, at the door of the court room and were scattered among the spectators. Two deputy marshals were ranged on either side of the Judge's bench, and Harold A. Content, Assistant United States Attorney, who is handling the case for the Government, was guarded by Detective-Sergeant Barnin. The extra precautions were taken because of threatening letters which have been received by Judge Mayer and Mr. Content.

One of the precautions taken, and a most unusual one, was the fact that all the witnesses were barred from the court room and will not be permitted in the trial room until wanted for testimony. The witnesses were allowed to remain in the corridor. Friends of the two anarchists were hustled out into Park Row and deputy marshals were soundly denounced by rasping-voiced females who love "Emma" and hate law and order.

Inasmuch as the couple are charged with a conspiracy to dissuade men from registering under the Selective Draft Law through the publication of articles in Mother Earth, the anarchist publication, Berkman laid stress on the military symposium of the document.

Hive of Industry Is Uncle Sam's New Shipyard

Somewhere in New Jersey.—Rising from the barren sand lots of New Jersey here to-day is Uncle Sam's first wooden ship-building plant. From this place, where an army of labour hammers, digs and builds carefully, efficiently and speedily, will emerge the first of America's fleet of a thousand 3,000 ton wooden boats. Their job will be to carry food to Allied Europe, despite the Kaiser's submarines.

From lumber mills somewhere in the South a mountain of dressed and measured timber is rolling northward on flat cars to this spot. A great yard for its reception is being rushed to completion and will be ready when the supply arrives a few days hence.

The work will be done as fast as Government engineers, construction experts of various kinds and a battalion of labourers can do it. Two thousand men will be employed. The plant will run twenty-four hours a day.

The keels of the first two wooden ships will be laid early in July if all goes well. These twin submarine breakers should slide off the ways, ready for war service, by mid-November. Keels for two more vessels will be laid every two weeks after the first two, until the unit of ten for this plant is in full course of construction.

Think U. S. Army Nurses Too Stout, Training Needed

WASHINGTON, July 9.—Contending that nurses are being sent to the front carrying, in many instances, fifty pounds of surplus flesh because of a lack of conditioning, Chicago women have suggested to the Women's Committee of the Council of National Defence that the organization endeavour to have camps established in which the nurses may be given from two to six months intensive training similar to that given soldiers to fit them for field service.

The letter points out that the nurses who are going to France are taken from hospitals where they have been called on to perform from 8 to 10 hours work a day in conditions of comparative comfort. They need, the suggestion adds, exercise to build up their vitality and powers of resistance, and to reduce their weight.

Detroit Murderer Binds Girls, Shoots Them, And Escapes

DETROIT, July 9.—Seizing two little girls as they were picking flowers in Sylvan Garden, near Woodward avenue and the Nine and One-half Mile road, Wednesday afternoon, a man who is said to have been terrorising women in Highland Park for the last two months, bound them together and then shot them, killing Hope Irene Alexander, 13 years old, and seriously wounding Elizabeth Stilvers, 10. Both girls were attacked after they had been shot.

The slaying occurred in a thicket close to a picnic ground occupied for the day by deaf mutes. It is the theory that the slayer was lying in wait for one of the women in the picnic party.

According to the description of the slayer given by the Stilvers girl, he is white, about 28 years old, 5 feet 10 inches tall, and wore a grey checked suit.

BOUND TOGETHER, THEN SHOT

The man carried a sock when he approached the children and took a rope with which he bound them, the older girl uppermost. Then producing a revolver, he fired three shots, one piercing the brain of the Alexander child, killing her instantly. The other shots went through her chest, one of them lodging in the chin of the Stilvers girl.

Then the assailant dragged both children into a thicket and loosened their bonds.

According to the Stilvers girl, she and her companion left their homes at 2 o'clock and entered the thick wood one-half mile from the farms where they lived.

GATHERING FLOWERS WHEN ATTACKED.

Intent upon gathering flowers, they were startled by the command "Hands up."

Their screams brought a shot, but it did not take effect. Then they were seized and bound.

The dead child was the daughter of Bertram C. Alexander, who lives at Woodward avenue and the Nine Mile road. The Stilvers girl lives at 82 Hendrie avenue.

MUST ACT IN OLD CLOTHES.

Germany Restricts Stage Costumes — Students Go Barefoot.

THE HAGUE, July 9.—German actors in modern plays are forbidden to wear new clothes in future. Hitherto actors have been largely exempted from the restrictions compelling other persons to produce exhustive explanations if they wanted authority to buy a new dress, a new suit, or new shoes, but now the authorities of the Imperial Clothing Commission have issued orders that it is not permissible for an actor or actress to have a new suit or new shoes for each new play. He or she must act in old clothes.

Owing to the shortage of leather, students of Wurburg University have decided to set an example by going to lectures barefoot and walking the streets either barefoot or in wooden clogs.

Keep talcum powder in the sewing room to use on the hands if they become sticky.

A PEN SKETCH OF BEERBOLM TREE

By T. P. O'CONNOR

(From Central News.)

By T. P. O'Connor.

NEW YORK, July 7, 1917.—The first time I remember meeting Beerbohm Tree, was nearly forty years ago; he was just beginning to be known as an eccentric comedian with special mannerisms and some promise; belonged to the class, then rarer than now, who were supposed to have wandered rather wantonly and provocatively from the life of the leisurely gentlemen or busy men of business on to the stage crowded with figures, earning tardy recognition and uncertain pay, after years spent in going through the mill. He might prove a success; it was thought more likely that he would end in the disaster common to most amateurs.

Even then the peculiarities that are now known to the world, partly natural, partly affected, revealed themselves. At the time he was very slim which added an appearance of greater height, even to his great height. His hair, red blond, which was very long and brushed back from his forehead and descending far to his neck, together with the light, blue, dreamy eyes, gave him an especially German look—he might have been taken for a male edition of the Rhine maidens of Wagner. He had also a slight guttural accent which clung to him all his days; the suspicion of a lisp; above all he had that air of abstraction which was then associated with the German race. His manner in conversation was just like his appearance. He would speak with some eagerness, then relapse into silence; his eyes took a far away look; and the expression of the face, so remote and unreachable, seemed at times almost stupid.

First Impression.

My first impression of him then was of an eccentric character, he suggested doubt as to whether he was merely a visionary poseur, or an exceptional character designed to an exceptional career. No one realized in late years better than I did how far he realised the second and not the first of my forecasts. But though he arrived fairly quickly, he did not arrive without a hard struggle. For some years he was known simply as an eccentric comedian. When I saw him he was playing under Charles Wyndham in a play known, I believe, as "Where's the City?" a farcical adaptation of the usual type of Palais Royal play. The next I remember of him is as a paudo Prince in the "Class of Fashion," a clever satire on contemporary morals by Sydney Groundy, produced by Mr. Shine—veteran and evergreen, whom I saw after many years in New York the other day. The performance of Tree stood out; with his tall, lean, person in black, his pretentious air of reverie, his broken English, his soothing manner. One of Trees last successes in this line of acting was as the original Mr. Spalding, the curate in the famous "Private Secretary"; the part which led on more than one actor to fame. More or less obscure—at least in comparison with the other bigger things, he afterwards achieved, as those parts were— Beerbohm Tree never from the first moment, when he jumped from an office in the city to the stage, failed to strike the imagination of Londoner as a personality. Indeed take his whole career from the opening to the close, it was a triumph of personality.

His Chance.

His chance came when he was able to become the lessee of the Haymarket Theatre. It is a theatre with a long and glorious history. Sir Squire and Lady Bancroft left it after several years with a large fortune doubled. For some time Tree carried it on with the varying fortunes of most theatrical enterprizes, now choosing a piece of conspicuous want of merit—after the fashion of even the most experienced actor managers; now falling upon some prize that advanced both his fame and his fortune. One of his great successes was the "Red Lamp," a story of Russian life with the perennial conflict of the epoch between the Nihilist and the police. Tree took for this part the head of the police. And he came upon the stage, made up as an old man with eyes that seemed to be everywhere, with cunning in every line of the old the old wrinkled evil face, with a senile and yet furtive step, there was a buzz of admiration through the house; never had an actor more successfully disguised his own personality, though he never thoroughly lost himself in a part. The play has several fine scenes; I remember well one when the old police agent finds himself in a room with one of the chief conspirators; there is a little machine against the wall; it has but to be turned and the infernal, explosive machine, which is underneath, will be set loose; and over body, Nihilist and police agent, and the genarmes that accompany him, will be blown into fragments. That performance established the position of Tree as the "character" actor, which was what he was when at his best; which indeed, as an actor, he was truly great.

A Moving Spirit.

A man less restless, less ambitious, would have been satisfied with a theatre as the Haymarket; but the ambition of Tee was never sated; his restlessness never know tranquility, his vivid and inventful imagination never was still. So he built himself, opposite the old theatre, a gorgeous new theatre, very spacious; very ornate; with tremendous stage, gradiose, in short, as his own vivid thought. He began badly; but in time he conquered until in the end his magnificent theatre had a regular following; so that he was always secure of a great audience, even if the play did not take of a moderate run. In this theatre he had at free rein, for his ambitious projects; he carried them out with the lavishness of a man possessed by his own gorgeous dreams. It was then that he began that monopoly in the production of Shakespeare's plays— the haunting and usually ruinous dream of all great actor managers. Tree was the first London manager, since the days of Garrick, that made Shakespeare pay; and yet he took every step to prevent Shakespeare playing. That reckless imagination of his made him grandiose, not merely in the magnificence of his conceptions, but in his almost wanton extravagance of expenditure. A muff, for instance, was worn by a lady in his adaptation of Tolstoy's Resurrection; she did not appear for more than a few moments in three scenes; really had little or nothing to do; but Tree insisted that she should have a muff of real sable; it cost four hundred dollars; a more practical and less imaginative manager would have bestowed an imitation muff which, from the stage, would have looked quite as well for ten dollars.

Severe Critics.

Severe critics often maintained that the productions were overladen by the gorgeous scenery; there was some truth in the charge, but on the other hand, nobody who ever saw Tree's production of "Midsummer's Night Dream," will ever forget so intoxicating a production of Shakespears; wherever the bewildering poetry of the greatest of dramatists found some addition to its imaginative appeal in the gorgeous and daring devices of the manager at once of genius and of reckless and daring expenditure and in exhaustible fertility of new devices and new settings. There were things in such a production that revealed in Tree all the inspiration of a truly poetic mind.

Let me utilise the space left to me by attempting a portrait in his intimate life of this very reasonable man. He has died before his time; but he has died after he had lived as much as the six lives of the ordinary man. His vitality was as boundless as his imagination. He worked tremendously; but he enjoyed himself as tremendously. He brought to life the same insatiable and eager curiosity in his middle age as in his youth. He went everywhere for he was welcome everywhere; you were sure to find him at every big function. He was a man of the club; often after a hard night's work he would sit up till the early morning, talking incessantly when he was in the mood, witty, paradoxical, half with conscious pose, half with the eternal simplicity of the child of imagination that never grasped realities. The large blue, Teutonic eyes had always the open look of the child still looking out on the world with the wondering simplicity of its first gaze on a new, strange, world. Thus he never grew old; he was enthusiastic, spendthrift of his health and his money, reckless indeed, unconscious of expenditures of risks and falls of fortune. The inner world of his artistic soul was so thickly peopled with visions of projects, so swarming with multitudes of thoughts, that he sometimes seemed an incorrigible dreamer whom nothing had ever brought to the real and rude awakening of life's realities. He summed up this side of himself well once when he said to me that though many respectable and otherwise vernacious people had told him that two and two made four, he had never believed them; he always felt they made five.

Many Qualities.

These were among the many qualities that made him so loved. I never knew an actor with so many friends. He deserved the friendship for his nature was generous, sweet, inexhaustible in its good will to human beings. Over and over again, I asked him for the free use of his theatre for some charity or for some individual of his profession, who had fallen on evil days; he never once refused me. The same he did to others. He could not be unkind. I heard Sir Edward Carson, who had once been his counsel in a case of big money, tell that Tree refused to allow a question to be put to an actress who was suing him—a question on which perhaps the whole fate of the case hung—because it would cause the lady pain; he preferred to lose his money to hurting a woman's feelings. I was at the little dinner which he gave before he started out for his long recent visit to America; I said my strong and sincere conviction was that the British stage had never produced a man so disinterested. He loved his art; he thought of it, he dreamed of it; it was never absent from his inner mind. Pecuniary results he had to count; for he had a wife and several children: but they were thought of only because they had to be thought of; at bottom his whole being was possessed by the feverish inexhaustible desire to bring theatrical productions to the highest point that money and invention and a souring imagination could reach. He will make a big void in the life of London, for he seemed to pervade it all; he will make a bigger void in the large circle of friends who loved him as he deserved to be loved.

SHEER WASTE OF FOOD.

Early Vegetables Ploughed Under by Market Gardeners of Sarnia.

SARNIA, July 7. — The increased production campaign has had considerable effect on the market gardeners in this neighbourhood and in some cases it has been found necessary to plough under large plots of radishes, and in some cases lettuce, owing to the supply being so much greater than the demand. Many citizens have planted their lots with vegetables, and as a result have sufficient, and in many cases, more than they can use of early garden stuff. In conversation, one of the largest growers in the city said: "I have ploughed under enough stuff to buy a good automobile. We put every inch of space under cultivation and were prepared to meet the demands of our customers, but they also embarked into the business, with the result that we have the stuff on our hands and had to resort to the plough and turn it under."

PUT UP PLENTY OF PRESERVES

Increased Cost of Sugar Is Surprisingly Low

Women Now Realize What a Foolish Extravagance It Was to Do Without Homemade Preserves

There is nothing quite so effective as facts and figures to demolish a fallacy.

Last year, when sugar went up a few cents in price, some people decided that they would not put up their regular supply of homemade preserves. They could only see the 2 cent or 3 cent increase in the price of sugar. They could not see how much more it would cost them to replace preserves with anything else. They did not stop to figure how this increase in the cost of sugar, was going to affect the cost of preserving.

Others did, however, and proved that the cost of preserving due to the increased cost of sugar, had been greatly exaggerated.

Here is the way these clever women proved it. Before the war, we know that sugar was 5 1-2 cents a pound. Because of war conditions, the price of sugar fluctuates, but the retail price for the best granulated sugar averages 8 1-2 cents a pound. This is an average increase of only 3 cents a pound.

Every good housekeeper knows that a quart jar of preserved berries or fruit requires only half a pound of sugar, so that the increased cost of preserving, due to the increased cost of sugar, is only 1 1-2 cents a pound.

This is why a jar of home-made strawberries, raspberries, cherries, plums, peaches or pears, is about the most inexpensive sweet or dessert that can be put on the table.

Besides the economy of putting up a goodly supply of homemade preserves, there is another reason. We must conserve our food supply. We must save our crops. Last year, because of the mistaken idea of economy, hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of berries and fruit were wasted. Now that the women realize that the cost of preserving was greatly exaggerated last year, they are determined to do more preserving, and also to enjoy an abundance of delicious homemade jams, jellies and preserves this winter.

It is both wasteful and unsatisfactory to use butter for greasing pans.

DIAMOND HALL

WEDDING BELLS

WATSON—HUNTER.

The marriage was solemnized at noon to-day of Florence Mary, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robt. H. Hunter, to James Wilbert Watson, of Toronto. The ceremony was conducted by Rev. W. L. H. Rowans of St. Andrew's Church.

GRIGGS—KIDD.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized on Wednesday, June 20th at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Kidd, Merid, Saskatchewan, when Bessie Jean, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Middleton, Warsaw, was united in matrimony to Mr. Carl Llewellyn Griggs, Rev Mr. Sanguine officiating.

The bride wore a beautiful cream crepe de chine gown over silk with pearl trimmings, a tulle veil with orange blossoms and carried a shower bouquet of white roses. The only ornament she wore was the groom's gift a pearl necklace.

After the ceremony a dainty wedding breakfast was served, the table decorations being pink and white carnations and maiden hair fern, after which the young couple left for a short honeymoon in Winnipeg and points east.

The bride's travelling gown was a tailored suit of Belgian blue with crepe de chene blouse to match and a black hat. On their return from their honeymoon Mr. and Mrs. Griggs will reside in Alsack, Sask.

Mr. and Mrs. Griggs were the recipients of numerous and costly gifts, testifying the high esteem and affection in which they are held.

O'CONNOR—O'REILLY.

At St. Peter's Cathedral, Peterborough, by the Rev. J. J. O'Brien, the marriage took place on June 28th of Pearl, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas O'Reilly of Ennismore to Fergus, youngest son of Mr. Owen O'Connor of the same place.

The young bride, who was given away by her uncle, Mr. John Dwyer, looked dainty in a gown of white silk crepe de chene with chiffon veil and orange blossoms. The bridesmaid, Miss Margaret Mann, wore pale green silk, with hat to match. Mr. Arthur O'Reilly, brother of the bride, was best man. The wedding march was played by Miss Doherty.

After the ceremony the wedding party drove to the home of the bride's parents, where a dainty breakfast was served.

The groom's gift to the bride was a pearl pendant, to the bridesmaid, a cameo ring, and a tie pin, set with pearl and chip diamonds, to the best man.

The bride's travelling suit was navy blue taffeta, with French hat of cream.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Thomas of Toronto, the latter a sister of the bride.

He leaves to mourn his death, besides his wife, two sons, John, residing in Douro, and Jeremiah, in Cobalt; also three daughters, Mrs. John McCaulley, Mrs. M. McCaulley and Mrs. Oliver Gaoust, all residing in Haileyboro.

The funeral to the Douro Cemetery will take place on Wednesday morning from the family residence, Douro.

MANY TAKE IN THE LINDSAY TRIP

In spite of the threatening weather this morning the steamer Stoney Lake had a big crowd on board when she left the George Street Wharf on her long trip through the beautiful Kawartha Lakes to Lindsay. A similar trip will be run by the Stoney Lake on Monday, July 23.

The condition of Mr. Wm. Lang, who was injured on Friday, when the horse started unexpectedly whilst he was engaged in putting the binding pole on a load of hay, though still serious, shows to-day some signs of improvement. Mr. Lang is at Nicholls Hospital.

Social and Personal

Mrs. Ed. Wicker and son, Percival, wife of Pte. Ed. Wicker, (who is now on active service in France), are visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Wicker, 317 Mark street, city.

Miss Buck, Miss Bennett, Miss M. Elliott and Miss Maud Runnings, are holidaying in Belleville.

Mrs. Roy Laing and daughter Hazel, John street, left this afternoon for Kingston, where they will visit the former's brother, Mr. Roy Menzies.

Mrs. (Dr.) MacLleland and daughters, who spent the winter in California, arrived in the city on Saturday to spend the summer in Canada. Dr. and Mrs. MacLleland have taken a cottage at Chemong.

Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Dawson, Downie street, have taken a cottage at Viamede and leave to-day to spend the summer there.

Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Ackerman, 380 Park street, left last week to spend the summer at Chemong, where they have taken Mr. Vincent Eastwood's cottage.

Mr. P. B. Westbye is leaving to-morrow for New York.

Miss Vera M. Hogg, of the Canadian Academy of Music, Toronto, is the guest of her aunt, Mrs. Wm. Barrelough, for the next few weeks.

Mr. James A. Stuart, editorial writer on the Duluth Evening Herald, with his mother, Mrs. C. M. Stuart, who is a sister of Mrs. J. W. Carey, are in the city visiting Mr. and Mrs. Carey, 187 Antrim street.

Mrs. John Allen, vice-president of the Red Cross Association, is, her fellow workers and the public will regret to learn, prevented by indisposition from taking an active part in the Red Cross tag day campaign. This throws upon other workers the duty of supplementing by increased zeal the activities Mrs. Allen so untiringly exercises. So much greater responsibility is thrown on them and the public to make next Saturday's tag day a success.

Miss Pauline and Master Billy Adams, Toronto, are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Dawson, Viamede.

Mr. Harry Grubbe, Toronto, is visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Grubbe, McDonnell street.

Mrs. Cottingham and Mrs. Richardson returned on Saturday from a week's visit in Toronto.

Miss Mabel Patterson returned on Saturday from a visit in Toronto, St. Catharines and Buffalo.

Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Dyer and Baby Frances, of Toronto, are visiting Dr. and Mrs. Middleton.

Miss Agnes Esson, of 670 Reid street, left Saturday morning on the early train to spend the remaining part of her vacation in Keene.

Mrs. M. Fitzgerald, Rubidge street, left Saturday on the 11.45 G. T. R. train for Rochester, where she will attend the funeral of her brother-in-law, Mr. George McDonald.

THE VIGIL.

Like some young squire who watched his armour bright,
Kneeling upon the chapel floor all night—
Where glimmering candles on the altar glowed,
And moonlight through the Gothic windows flowed—
And prayed, with folded hands, that God would bless
His sword, and keep him pure, and give success—
So, kneeling, Lord, beneath Thine altar light,
The nation asks for help before the fight.
Grant us the prayer of that boy Knight of old—
Faith to be steadfast, courage to be bold,
Such passionate love toward the dear flag we fly
That each who serves it holds its honour high—
Simple, large gifts that soldiers need O Lord,
Grant the young nation for its unsheathed sword,
And for our captains in the perilous way,
A vision widened to an unknown day.
We keep our vigil; send to-morrow glorious,
Let not God's will go down; bring right victorious.
Kneeling in prayer before Thine altar light,
The nation asks Thy help to fight Thy fight.

LIFE IN ROUMANIA

A Nation of Peasants, With Curious Customs and Beliefs.

RULED BY SIGNS AND OMENS.

Many Superstitions Enter Into the Everyday Life of This People, Who Are Little Given to Money Thrift. The Way a Lad Goes A-courting.

"The great bulk of Roumania's population belongs to the peasant class, for there are comparatively few cities, and most of them are small," says a bulletin of the National Geographic society on Roumanian folklore and customs, which gives an intimate insight into the home life of that nation. The bulletin, which is based on a communication to the society from John Oliver LaGorce, says:

"Many of these peasants live on the great estates, where their forbears for generations have farmed for the absentee landlords. And an interesting class these peasants form, with their peculiar customs, their primitive ways of looking at things in general.

"The evil of race suicide has never invaded rural Roumania. It is regarded as worthy of honor to be the head of a large family. As in all lands where many of the people are more or less illiterate, there is a high death rate, though the fact that the bottle fed baby is almost unknown in peasant Roumania tends to overcome the high infant mortality that would otherwise result.

"The average Roumanian peasant is not given to the kind of thrift that leads him often to a savings bank. The patrimony of his sons and daughters is more often good will, good health and an honest mind than it is land or money or houses. So narrow is the margin upon which a young couple starts out in life that it has come to be a proverb among them, 'Married today and out at the elbows tomorrow,' for children come apace, and the prices of the things the peasant has to sell are even lower than the prices of those he has to buy, and not until his own labors are supplemented by those of his sons and daughters has he much chance to prepare for even the shortest of rainy days.

"When a young Roumanian peasant lad's thoughts turn to love and his mind begins to incline toward marriage he goes to his mother rather than to his sweetheart with his tale. The mother acts as an ambassador to the father, and if he can be induced to look with favor upon the lover's choice he calls in two of his best friends in the village, tells them of his son's dreams and asks them to accompany the said son to the house of the object of love's young dreams.

"Mayhap the girl herself has not received from the youth a single hint of his love; but, even so, as he and his spokesmen approach the house she suspects the object of his visit and peeps through any crack or cranny that is convenient.

"If it happens to be winter the father of the girl invites the company in and, surmising their mission, gives some hint as to his attitude by the way he looks after the fire. If he keeps it burning brightly they know that he is favorable; if he lets it die down a little they understand that he is only of an open mind on the subject. But if he lets it go out entirely there is no use arguing the question.

"The Roumanian peasant is much given to superstition, and he has a sign for everything. If shingles are not nailed on a roof in the proper sign they will turn up at the ends; if potatoes are not planted in the proper sign they will grow on top of the soil and be a failure; if you have money in your pocket when you see the new moon you will not "go broke," at least not until another new moon has come. On the other hand, it is held to be dangerous to announce to those in the house that the new moon has appeared, for in that case all the pots and pans in the kitchen will be broken before the waning moon passes.

"When a peasant child is christened all of those present assume the relation of godparents, and it is a superstition that there must be no intermarriages between godfathers and godmothers. The result is that christenings are not widely attended, and those with matrimonial ambitions eschew them entirely.

"The utmost care is taken by some to prevent a child from seeing its image in a mirror before it is three years old, for if it does it will become a victim of the 'falling sickness,' which will send it stumbling through life.

"There are many customs which still proclaim the olden time rule and influence of ancient Rome that have persisted through the centuries since the departure of her glory. For instance, there is the old Pyrrhic dance, the robes with bells on sleeves and girdles. The Roumanians still shout in unison to prevent Saturn from hearing the voice of the infant Jupiter, and even their coins proclaim the 'glory that was Roma' in their names, for here you may see Caesar and Brutus as yokefellows and there Cassius and Augustus."

You Never Can Tell.

Crop Reports Indicate Fair Prospects All Over The Dominion

Grain Crops in Ontario Are Standing Up Well---Reports From the Western Provinces Are Encouraging---Crops Are a Little Backward in Some Places Owing to the Cool Weather---Fruit Prospects Are Good.

SUMMARIZED REPORTS

OTTAWA, July 10.—A special press bulletin issued to-day by the Census and Statistics Office gives the following report on the condition of field crops throughout Canada at the end of June, as summarized from telegrams from selected correspondents, includir the Superintendents of the Dominion Experimental Farms by arrangement with the Department of Agriculture. The reports for Saskatchewan and Alberta are furnished by the respective Departments of Agriculture for those provinces.

Atlantic Provinces.—In Prince Edward Island the weather conditions have been favourable for maximum growth and a heavy hay crop is assured in most districts. Cereal crops are sturdy and healthy in appearance, while early wheat is two feet high. Roots, corn and potatoes germinated well and growing rapidly. Fruit of all kinds is most promising as no frost occurred since the bloom opened. In Nova Scotia seeding was retarded by the wet weather; but crops since June 12 have been making rapid progress. Fruit prospects are good. In New Brunswick a wet cold May was followed by a wet June. The grain acreage is short and the stand poor. The potato acreage is probably above average, though below expectation, owing to wet and shortness of fertilizers. Large hay crop assured; pastures are luxuriant and the milk flow large.

Quebec.— Vegetation is very backward, and the crops have suffered from excessive rains during June, especially those on lowlands and strong soils. Hay promises to be a big crop. Potatoes look well. In some parts seven inches of rain fell during June and the acreage under field roots will be considerably increased owing to the failure of grain.

Ontario.—Ottawa.—The grain crops promise well, having a good stand and being even and well stooled. Hay is an average crop. Corn is good and roots are first class. All crops are from ten days to two weeks late. Peterborough: Fall wheat will average only half a crop. Early sown spring grains are promising, but from 10 to 15 days late. The hay crop is light; corn, potatoes and roots are doing well. Waterloo, N.R.: Wheat crop small, just heading out. Spring crops promise well. Corn shows poor growth. Potatoes look fairly well. Hyde Park: All crops making great headway though six weeks late. Potatoes variable, bugs voracious. No apples. A great crop of strawberries. Petrolia: Season late. Fall wheat and spring grains promise a heavy crop. Hay, clover and alfalfa average. Winter apples not over 5 p.c. Fall apples 15 p.c., peaches only fair. June wet. New Liskeard: In Temiskaming district crops are slightly below average, and later than last year. Fall wheat, peas and hay are good, oats fair, spring wheat average, clover and pasture excellent. With good growing weather future prospects are good.

Manitoba.— Dauphin.— Wheat two weeks later than last year, cut one-third by dry seed bed, May frosts and prolonged dry weather. Plenty of moisture now. Wheat very ragged. Much in shot blade and some just coming through. Oats good and barley very good. Millwood: Since rains commenced on 19th all crops made good growth. Wheat uneven germination; 50 p.c. in shot blade. Dominion City: Average wheat crop almost assured. With favourable weather for a late harvest there should be an abundance of coarse grains and fodders and a big yield of potatoes and vegetables. Elm Creek: Grain crops in good shape. Light showers ideal for the formation of wheat heads. Hoed crops uneven and pastures very light. Manitou: Not sufficient rain. Severe frost night of 21st, froze wheat and some oats in low land. Early sown wheat and oats are very short and heading out. Franklin: Crops two weeks late. Good showers lately, but lack of heat. A fair promise on present appearances. Brandon: Only two-thirds of an inch rainfall before last week of June. Severe late frosts and high winds make the crop conditions the worst in many years.

Grain at least three weeks late and very uneven. Almost no growth of hay and fodder crops. Prospects improved by showers last week.

Beresford: Crops two weeks later than average through repeated frosts and dry weather. Favourable rains have fallen recently, and prospects are for a good half crop. Hay light and pastures poor.

Pierson: Late frosts have done great damage, 75 per cent. of wheat frozen, coarse grains late. With best of condition may get 12 bushels per acre of wheat. Prospects better for barley, oats and flax. Root crops damaged by frost.

Saskatchewan: The Provincial Department of Agriculture reports that the crops are from seven to ten days later than last year. Some wheat is in shot blade. The straw will be short except on summer fallows where abundant rains and warm days have caused rapid growth. About half the summer fallowing is completed, and the acreage of new breaking and summer fallows show slight increase over last year. The Dominion Experimental Station reports that at Rosthern rains all the month have worked favourably for all crops. Hay crops not fully recovered from drought in May, but grain and hoed crops are excellent. At the Scott Station crops were injured by both frost and drought. The total rainfall for June was less than one inch. Hay crops promise to be very light and grain crops short in straw. Many vegetable gardens proving failures. At Indian Head the weather during June was warm and showery. Grain crops have made good progress.

Alberta: The Provincial Department of Agriculture reports that the crop conditions during June were very encouraging. The first two weeks were cool and the late sown crops appeared very backward. During the last two weeks the weather has been ideal over the whole province. Growing showers visited a large percentage of crop area, and heavy rains with warmer weather were most needed. Slight frost and hail first part of month, none since. The Dominion Experimental Farms report that at Lacombe the weather during June will average below normal temperature. Wheat 35, oats 24, barley 22 inches high. Hay prospects good. At Lethbridge the rainfall during June has been light, only about one-third of the average for the last fifteen years. All but late sown grain is in excellent condition, but in imperative need of immediate moisture. The total area in crop is greater than last year, the largest increase being in flax.

British Columbia, Agassiz: Most crops good, later than average, but earlier than last year. Invermere: Crops backward, but promise well. Root crops damaged by cutworms. Summerland: Apple crop 20 per cent. higher than last year. Grain making good growth. Hay good. Sidney: Hay crop about average, autumn cereals developing well, spring cereals, potatoes, roots and beans doing well. Orchard fruits, except cherries abundant. Small fruits average, with strawberries excellent.

Cattle Markets.

Union Stock Yards —Receipts 142 cars, with 2,622 cattle, 256 calves, 1,281 hogs, and 312 sheep and lambs.

There was a little more life in the cattle trade yesterday, trading on the whole being fairly active. Prices were steady and unchanged from last week's level for the best butcher, but weak on the common. Cows were steady with last week, but bulls not so good, demand for the latter being almost nil.

Stocker trade very quiet and practically no demand.

Sheep and lambs steady.

Hogs are quoted 25 to 50 cents lower for this week.

THOUGH WAR MAY DEMAND IT, STUBBORN MALES WON'T HURL THEMSELVES INTO BREECHES

Are women and the war, admittedly the most powerful combination known, going to drive men to the wearing of breeches instead of the time-honoured and, unfortunately, frequently time-worn trousers of the present fancy?

This is the question which yesterday agitated sartorial circles of this city and shook to the foundations houses of haberdashery. Responsibility was laid at the doors of women and the war principally, because about everything else these days disliked by man is accredited to them.

But detailed reasons for holding these two influences upon civilization responsible were given by recognised authorities—authoritative in that they took affidavit that they have worn trousers ever since the choice lay with them. Women, they said, are responsible in that, having assumed men's task, they also have assumed the prerogative of wearing trousers. This naturally will drive men onward another sartorial notch in order to permit them to retain their distinctive appearance. And the war—well the war has pushed up everything else; so why not give it credit for shoving trousers up to the knee and making breeches of them?

The furor was started in a way yesterday by the publication in an advertisement of one of the largest department stores in this city of the demand for breeches in England. There, it was stated, trousers are on their last legs, and the prophecy was made that the crusade for calf exposure would soon spread to this country.

VOX POPULI RISES IN CLAMOR

In order to get the attitude of the classes upon the question interviews were obtained yesterday with prominent tailors, tradesmen, truck drivers and other male bipeds. All admitted the question important, many admitting that their most horrible nightmare always found them at Fifth avenue and Forty-second street on a Sunday morning, top-hatted and spatted, spic-and-span in attire, with the one exception that they had forgotten their trousers.

From these interviews there was found to exist a wide diversity of grounds for opposition but a great unanimity proposed resistance. Men whose knees are not on speaking terms sorrowfully explained that they would obviously lose physical pulchritude by the change, and those with limbs of reverse English stated that knee buckles on their breeches would make of them nothing more than walking cymbals.

Men of corpulent contour denied any desire to resemble belted earls and refused to possess greater latitudinal dimensions from a a tailor's standpoint than longitudinal. The plea that every man should have such a suit of clothes in the event of being presented to the English court, where such dress is prescribed, fell on deaf ears, because of the scarcity of such invitations.

Some threatened to burn their breeches behind them rather than retreat further from comfort at the behest of tailors. Others threatened to go back to wearing pants, which, as everyone doubtless knows, are trousers which cost less than five dollars.

"If breeches were worn instead of trousers millions of yards of cloth would be saved," is one of the arguments advanced in England for the resumption of the form of apparel which Beau Brummel and his cronies caused to be discarded.

"Be that as it may," replies democratic America, "I'll economize on something else than my legs. Queer as they may seem to others, such as they are I have grown to love them and I shall not expose them to the vulgar gaze for the mere saving of a bit of cloth."

Ankles, it apepared from these interviews, will not become stylish in men's wear this season but will still continue their homely task of keeping the calves from the corn. Englishmen may have their comfortable kilties and knickerbockers, but Americans will retain their long trousers and their safety from the ridicule of observant friends.

SHAKESPEARE SAID SOMETHING.

The trousers of to-day, yesterday and to-morrow, let it be recorded, are no new institution. They are, historians say, the evolutionary development of the pantaloon, which originated in an old Italian stock comedy, in which the principal character took his name from the then favourite saint of the Italians, Saint Pantaleone. This comedy character always was represented as an aged man with spectacles and slippers. Shakespeare put the popular description of him in to the mouth of Jacques in "As You Like It":—

"The sixth age shifts
Into the lean and slipper'd pantaloon
With spectacles on nose, and pouch on side;
His youthful hose, well sav'd, a world too wide
For his shrunk shank, and his big manly voice,
Turning again toward childish treble pipes,
And whistles in his sound."

German Wedding Off When Feast Ends In Battle

LONDON, July 10.—A thrilling story of a battle between two German women for the prospective bridegroom of one of them is narrated as follows in a copy of the Berlin Post just received in London:

"On the evening prior to a wedding which was to have been celebrated at Dortmund the bride and bridegroom and numerous guests were entertained by the parents of both parties at a banquet in a cafe on the Steinplatz.

"These festivities were rudely disturbed by the young daughter of one of the guests manifesting here liking for the bridegroom in such a manner as to arouse the jealousy of the bride, who remonstrated vehemently with the girl.

"The latter laughed scornfully in face and then, to the scandal of some and the consternation of others, gave the bridegroom a kiss. The next moment the bride, literally leaping across the well spread board clutched her rival by the hair. The other girl, with equal fury, set her teeth in the cheek of the bride, biting and tearing the flesh with the ferocity of a bulldog.

"The bride, her face bleeding and swollen, and her rival, with hers bruised and scratched, and her finery torn to shreds, were then placed in separate locked rooms, while the guests, taking sides, fought it out among themselves with the aid of wine bottles, plates and other tableware as missiles.

"Finally four armed policemen walked in and put an end to the scene by marching seven of the combatants to the lockup. It was then found that the bridegroom had disappeared and he has not since been seen."

It makes sponge cake very light and spongy if a tablespoonful of water, with the chill off, is put into the cake mixture directly after putting in the eggs.

CHAPTER XI.

P. C. ROBINSON TAKES ANOTHER LINE.

About the time Furneaux was whisked past the Hollies in Superintendent Fowler's dog-cart, Grant and Hart were finishing luncheon, and planning a long walk to the sea. Grant would dearly have liked to secure Doris's company, but good taste forbade that he should even invite her to share the ramble. Thus, the death of a woman with whom he had not exchanged a word during three years, had already set up a barrier between Doris and himself. Though impalpable, it was effective. Quiet little Steynholme had suddenly become a rigid censor of morals and etiquette. Until this evil thing was annihilated by slow process of law, Doris and he might meet only by chance and never remain long together.

When the two were ready to start, Hart elected to dispense with his South American sombrero.

"I am sensitive to ridicule," he professed. "The village urchins will christen me 'Owd Ben,' and the old gentleman's character was such that I would feel hurt. So, for to-day, I'll join the no hat brigade."

"I wonder if we'll meet Furneaux this morning," said Grant, selecting a walking stick. "It's odd that we should have seen nothing of him this morning."

"It would be still more odd if we had, remembering the precautions he took not to be observed coming here last night."

"Well, that's so. I forgot to ask the reason. There was one, I suppose."

"Of the best. That little man is a live wire of intelligence. He's wasted on Scotland Yard. He ought to be a dramatist or an ambassador."

"Quaint alternatives, those."

"Not at all. Each profession demands brains, and is at its best in coining cute phrases. I've met scores of both tribes and they're like as peas in a pod."

A bell rang.

"That's the front door," said Grant. "It's Furneaux himself, I hope."

But the visitor was P. C. Robinson, who actually smiled and saluted.

"Glad I've caught you before you went out, sir," he said. "Mr. Furneaux asked me to tell you he had to hurry back to London. I was also to mention that he had got the whiskers."

"What whiskers? Whose whiskers?"

"That's all he said, sir—he'd got the whiskers."

"Why, Owd Ben's whiskers, of course. How dense you are, Jack!" put in Hart.

Now, this was the first Robinson had heard of whiskers in connection with the crime. He remembered Elkin's make-up as Svengali, of course, and could have kicked himself for not associating earlier a set of sable whiskers with the black wig and the bullet-torn hat.

But, Owd Ben! What figure did that redoubtable ghost cut in the mystery?

"There are certain lacuna in your otherwise vigorous and thrilling story, constable," went on Hart.

"Very likely, sir," agreed Robinson, much to the surprise of his hearers. He had not the slightest notion what a lacuna, or its plural signified. He was only adopting Furneaux's advice, and trying to be civil.

"Ah, you see that, do you?" said Hart. "Well, fill 'em in. When, where and how did the midget sleuth obtain the specter's hairy adornments?"

The policeman, whose wits were thoroughly on the alert, realised that he had scored a point, though he knew not how.

"He did not tell me, sir," he answered. "It's a rum business, that's what it is, no matter what way you look at it."

Grant agreeably aware of the village constable's change of front, accepted the olive branch readily.

"We are just going for a walk," he said. "If you have ten minutes to spare, Mrs. Bates will find you some luncheon, I have no doubt."

"Well, sir, meals are a trifle irregular during busy time like this," admitted Robinson, feeling that his luck was in, because tongues would surely be loosened in the kitchen to an official guest introduced by the master of the establishment. He was right. No member of the Bates family dreamed of reticence, now that the household was restored to favor with "the force." Before Robinson departed, he was full of information and good food.

What more natural then an hour later, that he should contrive to meet Elkin, as the horse dealer was taking home a lively two-year-old pony he had been "lungeing" on a strip of common opposite his house?

Each was eager to question the other, but Elkin opened fire.

"Anything fresh?" he cried. "You have a fair course now, Robinson. That little London 'tec has bunked home."

"Has he?" In the language of the ring, Robinson thought fit to spar for an opening.

"Oh, none of your kiddin'," said Elkin, stroking the nervous colt's neck. "You know he has. You don't miss much that's going on. Bet you half a thick 'un you'd have put someone in clink before this if the murder at The Hollies had been left in your hands."

"That's as may be, Mr. Elkin. But this affair seems to have gripped you for fair. You look to be thoroughly run down. Sleepin' badly?"

"Rotten! Hardly got a wink last night."

"You shouldn't be out so late. Why only a week ago you were in bed regular at 10.15."

"That inquest broke up the day yesterday, so I was delayed at Knoleworth."

"What time did you reach home?"

"Dashed if I know. After twelve before I was in bed. By the way, what's this about things missing from a box owned by the Amateur Dramatic Society? That silly josser of a detective—What's his name?"

"Furneaux," said Robinson, who was clever enough not to appear too secretive, and was thanking his stars that Elkin had introduced the very topic he wanted to discuss.

"Ay, Furneaux. I remember now. He worried old Tomlin last night about that box, which is kept in the loft over the club-room. So Tomlin and I, and Hobbs, just to satisfy ourselves, went up there just as soon as Furneaux left to-day. And, what do you think? The box was unlocked, although I locked it myself, and have the key; and a hat and wig and whiskers I wore when we played a skit on 'Trilby' were missing. If that is not a clew, what is?"

"A clew!" repeated the bewildered Robinson.

"Yes. I'm telling you, though I kept dark before the other fellows. Did'nt you say that Grant's cheek was bleeding on Tuesday morning?"

"I did."

"Well, the whiskers were held on by wires that slip over the ears. One wire was sharp as a needle. I know, because it stuck into a finger more than once. Why shouldn't it scratch a man's cheek, and the cut open again the next morning?"

"By jing, you've got your knife into Mr. Grant, and no mistake," commented Robinson.

"You yourself gave him a nasty jab at the inquest," sneered Elkin.

"I was just tellin' the facts."

"So am I. I think you ought to know about that hat and the other things. I would recognise them anywhere. Furneaux had something up his sleeve, too, or he wouldn't have pumped Tomlin——Whoa, boy! So long, Robinson! I must put this youngster into his stall."

"I'll wait, Mr. Elkin," said Robinson solemnly. "I want to have a word with you."

The policeman was glad of the respite. He needed time to collect his thoughts. The story of the dinner-party and its excitement disposed completely of Elkin's malicious theory with regard to Grant, but since the horse dealer was minded to be communicative, it would be well to encourage him.

"Come in, and have a drink," said Elkin, when the colt had been stabled.

"No thanks—not when I'm on duty."

Elkin raised his eyebrows sarcastically. He could not possibly guess that Robinson was adopting Furneaux's pose of never accepting hospitality from a man whom he might have to arrest.

"Well, blaze away. I'm ready."

The younger man leaned against a gate. He looked ill and physically worn.

"Your business has kept you out late of a night recently, you say, Mr. Elkin," began the other speaking as casually as he could contrive. "Now, it might help a lot if you can call to mind anyone you met on the roads at ten or eleven o'clock. For instance, last night——"

Elkin laughed in a queer, croaking way.

"Last night my mare brought me home. I was decidedly spring, Robinson. Glad you didn't spot me, or there might have been trouble. What between the inquest, an' no food, an' more than a few drinks at Knoleworth, I'd have passed Owd Ben himself without seeing him, though I believe that I did squint at The Hollies as I went by."

"What time would that be?"

"Oh, soon after eleven."

"Sure."

"I can't be certain to ten minutes or so. The pubs hadn't closed when I left Knoleworth. What the devil does it matter, anyhow?"

It mattered a great deal. Robinson could testify that Elkin did not cross Steynholme bridge "soon after eleven."

"Nothing much," was the answer. "You see, I'm anxious to find out who might be stirring at that hour, and you know everybody for miles around. I'd like to fix your journey by the clock, if I could."

"Dash it all, man, I was full to the eyes! There! You have it straight."

"Were you out on Monday night?"

"The night of the murder?"

"Yes."

"I left the Hare and Hounds at ten, and came straight home."

"Who was there with you?"

"The usual crowd—Hobbs, and Siddle, and Bob Smith, and a commercial traveller. Siddle went at half past nine, but he generally does."

"You met no one on the road?"

"No."

The monosyllable seemed to lack Elkin's usual confidence. It sounded as if he had been making up his mind what to say, yet faltered at the last moment.

Robinson ruminated darkly. As a matter of fact, long after eleven o'clock on that fateful night, he himself had seen Elkin walking homeward. He was well aware that the licensing hours were not strictly observed by the Hare and Hounds when "commercial gentlemen" were in residence. Closing time was ten o'clock but the "commercials" being cheery souls, became nominal guests on such occasions, and their guests were in no hurry to depart. Robinson saw that he had probably jumped to a conclusion, an acrobatic feat of reasoning which Furneaux had specifically warned him against. At any rate he resolved now to leave well enough alone.

"Well, we don't seem to get any forrarder," he said. "You ought to take more care of your health, Mr. Elkin. You're a changed man these days."

"I'll be all right when this murder is off our chests, Robinson. You won't have a tiddley? Right-o! So long!"

Robinson walked slowly toward Steynholme. At a turn in the road he halted near the footpath which led down the wooded cliff and across the river to Bush Walk. He surveyed the locality with a reflective frown. Then there being no one about, he made some notes of the chat with Elkin. The man's candor and his misstatements were equally puzzling. None knew better than the policeman that the vital discrepancy of fully an hour and a half on the Monday night would be difficult to clear up. Tomlin, of course, would have no recollection of events after ten o'clock, but the commercial traveller, who could be traced, might be induced to tell the truth if assured that the police needed the information solely for purposes in connection with their inquiry into the murder. That man must be found. His testimony should have an immense significance.

That evening, shortly before seven o'clock, a stalwart, prosperous looking gentleman in tweeds "descended" from the London express at Knoleworth. The local train for Steynholme stood in a bay on the opposite platform, and this passenger in particular was making for it when he nearly collided with another man, younger, thinner, bespectacled, who hailed him with delight.

"You, too? Good egg!" was the cry.

The gentleman thus addressed did not seem to relish this geniality.

"Where the deuce are you off to?" he demanded.

"To Steynholme—same as you, of course."

"Look here, Peters, a word in your ear. If you know me during the next few days, you'll never know me again. I suppose you'll be staying at the local inn—there's only one of any repute in the place?"

"That's so. I've got you. May I take it that you will reciprocate when the time comes?"

"Have I ever failed you?"

"No. We meet as strangers."

Peters bustled off. He had the reputation of being the smartest "writer-up" in London of mystery cases. The Steynholme affair had interested both him and a shrewd news-editor.

FARMS FOR SOLDIERS.

A Work of Empire to Be Undertaken by Canada.

The Canadian Press is informed that a memorandum has been submitted by Hon. Robert Rogers and Bruce Walker to the Empire Land Settlement Committee at London, embodying the Dominion proposals for settlement of former soldiers in Manitoba, Saskatchewan, and Alberta. The proposals are as follows:

The Canadian Minister of the Interior would reserve large areas of suitable lands in the Prairie Provinces for settlement by ex-service men, administration to be in the hands of a settlement board. It is proposed to grant approved ex-service men one hundred and sixty acres each of crown lands, the following persons being entitled to participate in the gift land: Honorably discharged soldiers; sailors who enlisted for active service in the naval forces of Canada in the present war; soldiers and sailors domiciled in Canada at the outbreak of war who afterwards were engaged in active service; soldiers and sailors not domiciled in Canada, but engaged in active service; widows whose husbands died on active service. In addition to the 160 acres, the settlement board would be empowered to grant a loan of $1,500 to each approved person to cover the cost of house, barn, implements, and stock. The land cultivation loan would constitute a first charge on the homestead, and would be advanced at a low rate of interest, repayment not to exceed fifteen years. All applicants shall have sufficient farming experience or training before they become eligible; inexperienced agricultural workers to be trained.

Female Business Voices.

It might be interesting to compute the effect of success in the business world upon the voice of the woman who succeeds. Unless one gets to be a shrew, marriage and the shielded life of the home are supposed to soften the voice, despite the continual exhortations to the children to come down from the roof of the barn and to keep away from the neighbor's chickens. But one is forced to the conclusion that business success tends to inject into the most feminine dulcet tones some of the masculine pitch that is supposed to conquer the world. Curiously enough, the younger and the prettier the woman, the more she uses those curiously low, throaty Ethel Barrymore tones. One cannot escape the belief that even the most cooing of soprano sirens does inevitably forget to coo, once she ventures out into the business world and finds success. As soon as her salary passes the $1,000 mark she becomes brisk and incisive; $2,000 a year lowers her chest register to a mezzo soprano, while $2,500 produces a distinct alto. Your $5,000 woman, usually one of those indispensable private secretaries of one of the powers that be in high finance and inside leak information, absorbs so much of the importance to her job that even her modest request to pass the salt or cream takes on a tone of immense significance, and she usually speaks in a rich baritone.

It has been noted, however that some of the deepest voiced ladies engaged in the most serious and vital occupations still keep on tap certain of their old tones for special occasions, even as some business men keep on hand various grades of cigars for business, political, and social uses. One young woman of our acquaintance—and it must be admitted that she is a very clever young person—greets you when you walk into the office with a casual, offhand "Hello," gives orders to a stenographer in a gatling gun staccato, chatters over the telephone with an intimate male or female and then sinks to her lowest maestoso profundissimo when she confers with one of her board of directors over the telephone. Great events hang on all these momentous decisions and the importance of life creeps into the tones of her voice; all things are serious, ponderous, vital, significant, those rich tones seem to imply. She hangs up the receiver with an efficient flourish, turns once more to you and quickly reverts to type: "Well, darling, how is every little thing?"

But only her most intimate friends ever know that she still can speak soprano.

Artificial Milk in England.

The science of substitution is becoming a great factor in modern industry. In England an artificial milk is being manufactured which is claimed to be both wholesome and inexpensive, so that now the market is not wholly dependent upon the product of the cows. The artificial milk, says The Popular Science Monthly, is made from peanuts, soya beans, sugar, water, and mineral salts. About four hundred grains of potassium phosphate or an equivalent of sodium phosphate is dissolved in two hundred pints of water at 176 degrees Fahrenheit. Enough sugar is added to give four and five-tenths per cent. to the finish product. Forty pounds of meal prepared from the nuts and beans is stirred in. The solution is boiled in a steam-jacketed pan; then it is subjected to the operation of a vacuum pan, and lastly it is treated with a culture of lactic bacteria until the required acidity is obtained. After it is pasteurized and cooled a small percentage of citric acid is added.

The milk thus produced may be condensed and sold in cans, or dried and powdered, or sold as a liquid in bottles. The addition of nut fats will give a certain proportion of cream. By using sufficient lactic bacteria the product may be cultured to give a table cream or a soured mass for making cheese.

Even Break.

"This world would be a pleasanter place if there were not so many fools in it."

"Yes, but it would be more difficult to make a living."

A Judge and an Egg.

Judges on the bench have been assaulted. A litigant once threw an egg at the late Vice Chancellor Malins in an English court. The judge had the presence of mind to duck his head, and at the same time he established a reputation as a humorist by remarking that the present must have been intended for his brother, Bacon, the vice chancellor, who was sitting in an adjoining court.—London Spectator.

No Fifty-fifty.

"I fear my brother's wife is a trifle selfish."

"Doesn't she share the family joys and sorrows?"

"Yes, but she figures on taking about 90 per cent of the joys and 10 per cent of the sorrows."

An Interesting Russian City.

Kieff, more familiarly known as Kiev, is the earliest seat of Christianity in Russia. As the most ancient capital of the Empire it has earned the title of mother of cities. Its monastery of Petcherskaya Lavra, with its far-stretching grounds, is one of the wonders of the world. With many a church and chapel and innumerable monks' cells within its high wall, the "City of Caves" forms a town by itself. To the catacombs cut out of the solid rock every year go pilgrims from all over Russia to worship at the shrines of the saints who went years ago from Byzantium. But Kieff is not a typically Russian city. It has lost its early Byzantine character without gaining the modern Russian spirit—a result attributed to the rule of the Poles, who kept the city under their influence for centuries. It has been said one may call the Kieff people Little Russians, who differ from the Great Russians as much as the English do from the Scots. Imperialists did their best seventy years ago by establishing a local university to Russify the town, but most writers agree that ancient elements are still alive.

Putting A Salmon River On The Map

THE map referred to is a map of some importance, for salmon is the big game of the fisherman and brings in search of it sportsmen from all over the world with big two-handed rods and large noisy reels and (what Canada much desires) a deep purse for camps, guides and outfit. Harry Allen, President of the New Brunswick Guides Association has known the Caina River as one of the best trout streams in the Province of New Brunswick, and salmon were frequently caught twenty miles up from the junction with the better known Miramichi, but he believed that if the right kind of fishermen got there, they would find salmon all the length of at least eighty miles.

The investigation was made a short time ago by a party of sporting writers and editors from the United States. Maxmillian Foster, a salmon fisherman of twenty years standing who knows New Brunswick and Newfoundland like a book, and writes for the "Saturday Evening Post"; Hughie Fullerton, of the Chicago "Examiner," Jack Lait, of the Chicago "Herald," Grantland Rice and W. O. M'Geehan, of the New York "Tribune," and L. O. Armstrong, of the Bureau of Commercial Economics Washington, D.C., an old campaigner who has hunted and fished in the Canadian woods for over fifty years and A. C. Seymour, General Tourist Agent of the Canadian Pacific Railway, an ardent fisherman.

When they arrived at Fredericton, all the local fishermen were pessimistic. "If there are salmon in the Caina," they said, "you have come at the wrong time. They went out with the ice and are now at sea. Better go home and come back in a month." It was cold and raining, the worst kind of weather for fishing, but nothing daunted, they set out.

With eight fishermen, one movie picture operator from the Essanay Company of Chicago, and nine guides, the fleet started out near the head of the Caina River, fishing the pools as they went down. The first day they struck only trout, but from the second day onwards the movie man was busy. Twice he had to choose between two fishermen who had hooked their salmon at the same time. Maxmillian Foster had a basket of thirteen, ranging from seven to eighteen pounds. The largest measured forty-two-and-a-half-inches, which means that if it had been taken in the fall it would have weighed forty-two-and-a-half pounds. Every member of the party had what he came for, thanks to Silver Doctor and Parmachene Belle, the two flies that the Caina River salmon seem to like. In one pool seven beauties, weighing between them sixty-eight pounds, were taken out in two hours, and it was only dark and lack of time that closed the sport. Result, eight happy fishermen, one happy movie man, and one supremely proud Harry Allan, who saw that his claims were justified and that Caina River could take its place for salmon beside the hitherto more famous waters of the Miramichi and the Restigouche.

GENERAL WHO SMILES

Silent but Pleasant Goutor, the Young Russian

Discussing the General who succeeded Brusiloff in the command of the Southwest in Russia in 1917, Hamilton Fyfe said: General Goutor I met first at Tarnopol, when he commanded the 6th Army Corps. I was paying a visit to the chief of staff of another corps. He sat in the room drinking tea and eating sweets out of a tin box, smiling and saying nothing. When I was introduced to him, he smiled, and still said very little. Only when I came to know him better did he find his tongue. He is certainly one who sets golden silence far above silvern speech. He took two of us one day to the forward trenches, where he went himself every week to cheer the men up. Some of these positions were only forty yards distant from the enemy's trenches. Bombs were frequently thrown among the Russians. Not a whit cared Goutor. He smiled as usual—the smile of a man who finds life an amusing experience, not to be taken too seriously.

He travelled to the trenches on a railway trolley-car, which is by no means comfortable travelling. No saloon carriage for him. He pounded along in a stuffy communication trench at a rate which made everyone else pant and perspire. Lean and wiry, he never turned a hair. He smiled at the soldiers in the forward position, and they seemed to understand him. Now and then he asked a question, always to the point. His calm, smiling presence made everyone feel safer, more confident. That is the kind of man a leader should be. I once called Brusiloff "Russia's youngest general." He is that by reason of his youthful spirit and mind. Goutor is literally Russia's youngest general—only 44—a man who made his way without influence or "pull."

Germany Has Two Voices

An Englishman writes: Germany has ever since the beginning of the war spoken persistently with two voices. She seems to think, in her stupidity, that she may express totally incomptatible opinions, and that she may disperse her conflicting statements as she will. Of course she can do nothing of the kind. All that she says is wafted abroad with the impartiality of fate. We can detect the accent of truth when she speaks aloud with the tongue of barbarism. We know the lie for what it is worth when it trips to the tongue of the bewildered Chancellor himself.

Kerensky: Invalid-Hero

From authentic sources in Petrograd came a thrilling picture of M. Kerensky's struggles, in the face of heavy physical disabilities, with the immense governmental problems. Often the Minister of War was carried on a litter to transact public business. At times he pulled himself upright and addressed great assemblages with blazing fervor, until suddenly he swooned. "This," said an observer, "produces a terrific emotional effect on the sensitive Russian heart."

BLACK BASS NEVER SULK.

When Hooked These Gamy Fish Always Fight to a Finish.

The black bass is the type of the lesser sized game fishes of America. Why? Because he is not only great in muscular energy and fights like a bulldog, yet in his strenuous efforts to escape shows almost human intelligence. He will run in and then on a slack line leap into the air and shake his body in his efforts to dislodge the steel. Failing, down in the pool he surges and darts around a sunken rock, as if to sever the gut leader on the sharp or scraggy edges, or, failing, seek the bottom and there, unseen, brace his pectoral fins between two small rocks and in this fortress of defense jig, jig, jig on the line much as a dog jerks at a rope held in the hand.

Some anglers have compared this action of the bass to the sulk of the salmon, which is reflective on the bass that never sulks, but is ever in action and fights to a finish.

But these traits of the black bass are like stories many times told to the old angler for "bronzebackers," but the young 'un perhaps is yet to pass through the thrilling experience of fighting an impaled bass with a light rod, a gossamer leader and a feathered fly, and it is well to warn him of the acrobatic gyrations of the Micropterus dolomier, for such is the scientific nom de plume of our lordly fighter.—All Outdoors.

CURIOUS THEFTS.

Treasures That Were Purloined by Dishonest London Servants.

In an article on the dishonesty of servants who have long served in old houses the London News cites the case of an aged woman who died in a suburb of London twenty years ago. She had been continuously in service in a great family for half a century and had appropriated all kinds of property, among which was a picture which was recovered by the heir of the house and sold to America for $150,000.

The News asks: "How is it to be accounted for that a fine Rubens should be found decorating the trim 'parlor' of a farmhouse in Lincolnshire, curtains embroidered by Mary, queen of Scots, a tiny cottage in Norfolk and a marqueterie bureau from the collection at Windsor castle an obscure village in Shropshire?

"That a bundle of linen, each piece of which is marked with the monogram of Charles I., was disposed of some few years ago at a local sale in the west of England is less difficult to explain—Cromwell, together with members of his family, frequently visited the house from which the sheets came, and possibly brought them from one of the royal palaces. But that dishonest servants should be able to purloin such treasures without detection is truly marvelous."

LOST FREIGHT CARS

Tracing Them Is Often a Hard Job For the Railroads.

HIDE AWAY LIKE CRIMINALS.

One of These Runaways, That Holds the Truancy Record, Was Visiting Around For Two Years and Had Been In Nearly All of Our Big Cities.

At times when the scarcity of freight cars causes the railroads to place an embargo upon certain classes of goods the problem of keeping track of its cars to see that they do not run away and become wanderers upon the face of the earth is a stupendous one for each company.

Before the National Association of Car Accountants was formed and there was no close traffic arrangement between the various railroad systems respecting the control of freight cars it was a common thing for some erratic unit to travel ten or fifteen thousand miles before it returned to its starting point. There is the record of one rungway car that was away from home for nearly two years, and in that time it traveled a trifle over 20,000 miles, visiting nearly all the principal cities of the United States.

In all that time a car tracer from the company which owned it was on its track, but it eluded him constantly until it was finally run down and sent back home from a remote region in Texas. When it left the home sheds it was a bright new car; when it returned it was battered and old—so travel stained that its own maker could hardly recognize it. It holds the prize record for truancy among freight cars.

Traffic conditions have been greatly improved since those days, and railway companies detaining a car belonging to another company are penalized by a fine. The agreement is that when a car is received from another railroad it shall be immediately unloaded and returned to its owner. But in time of a general car famine not all of the railroads obey this rule. Because there is more profit in using the car, even though a daily fine is exacted for its unlawful detention, some railways keep it for weeks or even months for its own traffic, returning it only after the congestion has lessened. The small connecting railroads are often the greatest offenders in this respect in times such as the present, when traffic congestion is more than usually abnormal.

When a freight car is built it is given a number before it leaves the shop, and thereafter it is always known by that number until it is worn out and scrapped. When a new car receives its number and starts out upon its business career it is entered in the record book, and a careful account of its wanderings and earning powers is kept there. This record book is a history of the car, and by consulting it one can learn how many trips it has made, what cities it has visited, how many times it has been to the repair shop and also where it is supposed to be at any given time.

But in spite of all this care in keeping a record of each car, now and then, for some unexplained reason, one disappears from sight, literally running away. Some of the big companies employ car tracers, but as a rule a printed tracer is first sent after the car to bring it back home. This printed tracer, in a blue envelope, is sent to the person in whose jurisdiction the car was last supposed to be, and if it has passed out of his district the tracer is sent on to the next one to whom the car was consigned. This little printed tracer failing to bring the car home in a reasonable length of time a man known as a tracer is sent after it. The tracer is really a railroad car detective.

And sometimes it is more difficult to track a runaway freight car than a criminal. There are tens of thousands of miles of railways and hundreds of thousands of freight cars, and to find one carrying a certain number is often like hunting for the needle in the haystack. The tracer may arrive in a city where the runaway is supposed to be at the very moment when the car is leaving it in the opposite direction. It may cross his track on a parallel line or dodge around him on a short line. It may be headed south while he is traveling north or rolling merrily toward the Pacific while he is going toward the Atlantic.

A runaway car apparently is as depraved as any criminal. It hides on a lonely siding or gets lost in a short swamp line. One such runaway rested nearly a year on a siding in southern Texas simply because it got lost, and no one seemed to know just what to do with it. In the course of time it was occupied by a family of squatters, who lived quite comfortably in it for six months and were routed out only when, quite by accident, the car tracer discovered it.—Popular Mechanics.

COUNTRY OF PLAINS.

French Province of Champagne Has Interesting History.

One of the outstanding features in the history of the old French Province of Champagne is the extraordinary originality, in the matter of destiny displayed by its rulers. It gave a king to France, a king to Jerusalem, a king to Navarre, and an earl to England, and at no time in its long history can any of its rulers be accused of monotony in the matter of conduct. About the year A. D. 960, the Province was first placed under a single count. Not many years thereafter the Counts of Champagne were very much in the wars, and, in the history of these wars, waged with their neighbors, or with the kings of France, names of places occur and recur which the last two and a half years have made all too well known throughout the world. Thus, to mention only one instance, it was in a battle near Bar-le-Duc, the scene of so much strenuous fighting in the present war, that Odo I., Count of Champagne, fell in his great struggle with the Emperor Conrad, in the year 1037. Odo I. was succeeded by his younger son, Stephen, and it was Stephen's son, Odo II. who became Earl of Holderness in England.

It was the old story of the "fugitive from justice" becoming a soldier of fortune. Odo had committed murder, and, fleeing the country, took refuge in Normandy, where he gained the favor of William, Duke of Normandy, the future conquerer of England. William gave to him the castle and estate of Aumale, and when the Conqueror, with his Norman host and banner, all blessed by the Pope, took ship for England, Odo went with him. In due time, the conquest complete, Odo was made the Earl of Holderness, the large tract of rolling country which lies between the estuary of the Humber and Bridlington Bay.

But to return to France: Perhaps the next most notable figure amongst the Counts of Champagne was Theobald II. surnamed the Great. He was already Count of Blois and Meaux when he became Count of Champagne, in 1125, in succession to Hugh, who had decided, after a fashion characteristic of the Counts of Champagne, to become a Templar, and he grew to be one of the most powerful barons in France. Related to the royal house of England, it was not long before he came into violent collision with the King of France, who invaded his territory, and burnt the town of Vitry, to-day another notable landmark on the western front south of Rheims.

The most notable, not to say romantic figure, amongst the Counts of Champagne, however, was undoubtedly Theobald IV. the Chansonnier, who, as an infant, succeeded his father, Theobold III., in 1201. His mother, Blanche of Navarre, governed his dominions during his minority with great sagacity; but, for almost the whole of his reign, either he or his mother was engaged in defending the country against two sisters of a former Count, both of whom claimed the title and estates of the Champagne. The Singer, however, was uniformly successful, and he found time, moreover, to follow Louis VII. to the siege of Avignon; to take part in an expedition to the Holy Land, in 1240, and in the campaign of Saintonge, against the English, in 1242. And all the time he was composing "witty and courtly songs" which placed him in the front rank of poets of that class. As to the remainder of the Counts of Champagne, they were, perhaps, more settled than their predecessors, and when Louis Hutin, Count of Champagne, succeeded to the throne of France, in 1314, as Louis X., the existence of the Champagne as an independent fief came to an end. The one thing that has remained much the same in the Champagne, through the centuries, is the face of the land. The Romans called it Campania, "Country of Plains," because of the immense level tracts which in those days, as to-day, spread themselves out in all directions around Rheims, Chalons, and Troyes. — Christian Science Monitor.

HISTORIC MOUNT ARARAT.

Description of the Spot Where Noah's Ark Rested.

Great Ararat, which shoulders its way some 17,000 feet up into the Armenian sky, and looks down on the lands of the "Tsar, the Sultan, and the Shah," although so truly the rallying point, as it were, for the Armenian people, is quite unknown to the native Armenian by this name. The people who actually dwell within sight of its great snow-capped dome, who look out towards it over the plain from Erivan, some thirty miles away to the north, or from the frontier mountain slopes away to the south, call it by a variety of names. If they are Armenians they call it "Massis"; if Turks, "Aghri Dagh," and if Persians, "Koh-i-Nuh," or the "Mountain of Noah." There are really, of course, two mountains, or rather, there is one vast mass out of which rises two peaks, "their bases confluent at a height of 8,800 feet, their summits about seven miles apart." Little Ararat, upon whose slopes it is that the territories of the three kingdoms actually meet, is some 4,000 feet lower than its big brother; but none the less, with its 12,840 feet, it is "none so little."

The great bulk of the two mountains is curiously isolated. It rises on the north and east out of the plain of Aras, here some 2,500 to 3,000 feet above the sea, and on the south-west sinks to the plateau of Bayezid. It is only on the north-west that it is connected with any other mountains, and on this side a huge ridge, some 7,000 feet high, links it up with a range of mountains running westward, and finally merging into the great range of the Bingol Dagh on Northeastern Taurus.

Ararat, therefore, from its very position, would be likely to seize hold of the imagination of men, and there has grown up around its vast bulk a store of legend and tradition which is truly remarkable in extent and detail. The great mass of this lore concerns, as might be expected, the tradition of the Ark. There are many tales of the valiant efforts made, from time to time, to climb the mountain in order to find the ark which men declared was, at times, clearly visible from the plain below. Sir John Mandeville, "of pious and veracious memory," as Lord Bryce puts it, in describing his travels eastward from Trebizond, speaks of a "Hille that men clepen Ararathe; but the Jews," he adds, "Clepen it Taneez, where Noes Shipp rested; and sit is upon that Montayne; and men may see it a ferr in cleer wedre." And then he goes on to say how men had been found who declared that they had climbed the mountain, and had "seen and touched the Shipp, and put here fyngers in the parties where the Feend went out when Noe seyd 'Benedicite.'" Sir John, however, insists that the assertions of such men are not to be credited, for no one had really ever climbed the mountain, nor even could climb it, by reason of the "gret plentee of Snow that is alle weyes on that Montayne nouther somer ne winter; so that no man may gon up there; ne nevere man did, sithe the tyme of Noe; saf a monk that be the grace of God broughte one of the Plankes down, that sit is in the Mynstre at the foot of the Montayne."

So, for many centuries, the top of Arara did, indeed, remain inaccessible. Even Sir John Mandeville's monk never really reached the top. The precious plank from the ark which is still perserved in the treasury of Etchmiadzin, was vouchsafed to him as a reward for his persistent, devoted, but altogether vain efforts to accomplish his purpose. On the 27th of September, 1829, however, one Dr. Johann Jakob Parrot climbed Ararat, reached the "secret top" and set his feet at last on the "dome of eternal ice." Since then many people have climbed it. Many, too, have sought to describe the mountain; to convey some impression of the solitary grandeur of the great peak, wreathed about by day, as it always is, with ever-changing clouds, or as it is seen at night, when the clouds have vanished in the cooling air, and the mountain stands out ruggedly against the steel-blue darkness of the Eastern sky.

Once a Heaven, Now a Hell.

Van, which the Russians now occupy, has a romantic legend. Its foundation is attributed by Armenian historians to Semiramis, the queen of Ninevah, whose name is a byword for profligacy—not very surprising if she really was a daughter of a mermaid who ruled the lake of Van. Semiramis became enamoured of Ara, king of Armenia, from hearing about his beauty and made war on him to obtain possession of his person. Ara was killed in the battle which followed, so Semiramis, we are told, transferred her affections to his country and built the first city of Van. But since the decipherment by Professor Sayce of the local cuneiform inscriptions we know Van was really built by a splendid Chaldean monarchy which, for at least two centuries, rivalled the claims of Assyria. About the beauty of the site of Van even prosy Germans grow dithyrambic. Armenians have a proverb "Van in this world and Paradise in the next," but human perversity assisted by Turkish dirt, neglect and misrule has converted this little heaven into a little hell. Lake Van, on which the Russians launched a flotilla to attack the city, is the largest inland sea in Asia Minor. It is still imperfectly explored and possesses two curious characteristics. It contains only one kind of fish, a big bleak which when salted and dried furnishes the kippers of Armenia. Its waters are much like those of the Great Salt Lake of Utah, being so strongly alkaline that Van dwellers can enjoy the rare luxury of a wash without having to buy soap.

ANSWERING "YES" OR "NO."

Lincoln's Question Was a Poser For His Lawyer Opponent.

The late Colonel Waters at the time of his death had practiced law longer than any other lawyer in Kansas City. He was admitted to the bar in Macomb, Ill., before he was twenty-one years old. Abraham Lincoln was a lawyer practicing in the same district then, and Waters rode in the same circuit with him. Once Colonel Waters retained his friend to help him in a case.

The opposing lawyer, says the Kansas City Star, demanded one of their witnesses should answer a certain question with a direct "Yes" or "No." Lincoln contended the question could not be answered in that way.

"There's no question on earth that can't be answered with a direct 'Yes' or 'No,'" declared the lawyer.

"You take the stand for a moment and I'll show you," said Lincoln.

The lawyer took the stand, and Lincoln asked him, "Have you quit beating your wife?"

The lawyer became indignant, and Lincoln repeated his question. The judge, laughing heartily, insisted the lawyer must answer.

With the aid of Lincoln, Waters won the case. Lincoln charged him $25, a large fee in those days.

Liszt Fooled Them.

Wrapped in his dressing gown and with feet incased in slippers, Franz Liszt was sitting comfortably one evening in his armchair ready for work and inviting inspiration. On the floor above in the apartments of a banker a noisy musical soiree was in progress. Polonaises had succeeded waltzes and nocturnes had followed polonaises when suddenly the door of the salon opened and Liszt entered still wrapped in his dressing gown. The astonishment of the company may be imagined. With slow steps Liszt walked toward the piano, and the young key pounder who was sitting at it quickly left his place. Liszt sat down at the instrument, carelessly swept his fingers over the keys as if to prelude, and then suddenly he shut down the cover and put the key in his pocket. And immediately, with the same tranquil air with which he had entered, he went out and returned to his room, where he could work at his ease.

Hair Often Ruined By Careless Washing

If you want to keep your hair looking its best, be careful what you wash it with. Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else, that contains too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is just ordinary mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at any pharmacy, it's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.

Big Flanking Movement By The Russians Continuing Successfully

Halicz, Key to Lemberg Threatened Seriously By New Second Russian Thrust---Over 1,000 More Prisoners, Several Villages, Three Large Guns and a Number of Smaller Field Pieces Are Officially Reported Captured---Germans Again Unsuccessfully Attack French Positions.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

PETROGRAD, July 10. — General Brusiloff is again outflanking the Teutonic army and closing in on Lemberg. Front despatches to-day detailed the steady advance of this move under General Korniloff with Halicz, the key city to the Galician stronghold, now all but cut off. Austrian prisoners are pouring back of the Russian lines in an unending stream, and the blows struck by the Russian infantry and artillery have been so shattering that the Russian cavalry has been called into action.

More than a thousand additional prisoners, several more villages, three large guns and a number of smaller field pieces, were officially reported captured to-day as the results of General Korniloff's continued drive toward Lemberg from the south.

The villages captured after sanguinary battles were Pavelce, Bukovick, Viktorov, Majdan, Ruciaka and Pszykov, the statement said. "The enemy is retreating to the River Lomnicka. He have penetrated their lines ten versts," (approximately six and a half miles).

PARIS, July 10.—Germany still continued her assaults on the Chemin Des Dames last night, and fruitlessly as before, to-day's official statement asserted. "At various points on the Aisne front yesterday evening there were violent bombardments," the War Office said. "To the east, toward Monument and Hurtebise and the Dragon's Cave, heavy assaulting waves of the enemy did not reach our trenches, being dispersed by our fire with heavy losses to them.

WANTS "SUB." CAMPAIGN ENDED.

COPENHAGEN, July 10.—A German arriving last night from Berlin makes the statement that Herr Erzberger has demanded the abandonment of the submarine campaign as well as the proclamation of a peace programme without annexation or indemnities.

WASHINGTON, July 10.—Allied troops will be withdrawn from all Greek territory except Salonika, as soon as the Greek army has been reorganized, according to cablegrams received here to-day by the Italian Embassy.

CANNOT MENTION TERMS

BERNE, Switzerland, July 10.—That doctrine of peace without annexations was not acceptable to Germany, was the declaration of Chancellor Von Bethmann-Hollweg in a speech before the main committee of the Reichstag according to copies of the Berlin Lokal Anzeiger, received here to-day. Hollweg declared he could not mention Germany's peace terms at present.

Mrs. (Rev.) Wickett Honoured By Several Societies

At the monthly meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Fraserville Methodist church, which was held at the home of Mrs. L. Hughes, a very tangible gift was presented to Mrs. (Rev.) W. L. Wickett, accompanied by the following address:

Dear Mrs. Wickett,—Time in its relentless flight has brought the members of Bailieboro W.M.S. to realize that the happy associations of the past four years must, by the decree of conference, be severed, though intensely be regret the parting.

During this time we have been conscious of your prayers and sympathy for the success of all departments of church work. Your happy smile has brought cheer to each and all of us, wherever we have been privileged to have the pleasure of your presence with us.

As you are not removing far from us we trust that you will meet with us in the coming years, as opportunity offers, and we assure you that our best best wishes are going with you, and our prayers also, that God in His goodness will abundantly bless you in your new field of labour.

Dear Mrs. Wickett,—The members of our Ladies' Aid Society, knowing that you are soon to be removed from our midst to another field of labour, desire to express to you our regrets at having to part with you.

For the four years you have been with us, you ever have been our sympathetic and efficient President, and we all realize how much we will miss you, not only in our Aid, but in every department of our church work, you have endeared yourself to us in so many ways.

Your untiring, self-sacrificing efforts for the best interests of our Aid, your wise counsel, your kindly Christian charity and sincere sympathy, in all we tried to do, has bound you to us with cords of love that cannot easily be severed, and we feel that we cannot express in words alone, as we would wish, our esteem for you, and our appreciation of all you have done for us. Therefore we ask you to accept this purse and the gold therein contained as a small tangible token of our appreciation and affection, with our kindest wishes for yourself and Mr. Wickett in your new field of labour, and it is our sincere prayer that God's choicest blessing may be yours, and that you both may be spared for many years to labour in the Master's vineyard.

And although our ways and works in the future may be apart, we shall still be joined in heart, and hope and pray that we will all meet in "that land that is fairer than day," where partings come no more

LOCAL ORANGEMEN WILL VISIT THE LAKESHORE TOWN

Port Hope Will Be the Mecca For Peterboro' and District Orangemen on Thursday—Will Go By Automobiles

AN EARLY START

The local Orangemen are preparing for their excursion to Port Hope. A flock of sixty automobiles have been secured to transport the fife and drum boys to the Lakeshore town. The idea of making the trip in automobiles originated some time ago when the Executive Officers were advised that the railways would not be in a position to handle a regular Twelfth of July crowd, owing to conditions arising out of the war. Since that announcement it is claimed that the Grand Trunk has agreed to supply all the train service that is necessary to transport the Orangemen to Port Hope. As matters stand to-night as though the greater number of the Orangemen will make the trip in automobiles, while the remainder will patronize the G.T.R. If the boys get away according to the schedule the first contingent will be under way by five o'clock Thursday morning.

ACCIDENT TO LINDSAY MAN

Mr. George Beall Was Struck By An Automobile

LINDSAY, July 10.—Mr. Geo. W. Beall, Sr., was the victim of a bad automobile accident Sunday afternoon while he was out walking with his grandson. It appears that Mr. Beall was walking on Francis street, approaching William street, when he noticed a car coming down the latter street, probably three-quarters of a block away. He thought it was travelling fairly fast, but believed he had ample time to cross the street. When he reached the middle of the road he looked around to see how far away the car was, and noticed that it was almost on top of him. There was no chance to escape being hit, and Mr. Beall was knocked forcibly to the pavement and run over by the car. That Mr. Woolacott, the driver of the car, was not going very fast, is evident from the fact that he brought his machine to a dead halt inside of ten feet after hitting Mr. Beall.

Mr. Woolacott immediately drove Mr. Beall home and a doctor was summoned. It was discovered that the left leg was broken in two places, immediately below the knee and again just above the ankle. Several ribs were also smashed and the unfortunate man also sustained painful cuts and bruises.

Little Boy Bitten By Dog Yesterday

Harold Peace, a west end boy, was bitten on one ear yesterday afternoon by a dog belonging to Mrs. Lilly, who resides at the corner of Park and McDonnel streets. The dog has been ordered locked to determine its condition.

P. C. Blade shot a dog in East City yesterday. He had never known a restraining leash, and evidently the owner decided to get rid of the animal voluntarily, and without a preliminary $4.60.

Many telephone messages are received at the police station from citizens who have seen stray dogs in their neighbourhoods. This information is welcomed by the officials who, however, prefer the informants to give their own names as a matter of good faith. They need have no fear that their names will be divulged in any way.

Three summonses for careless or defiant dog owners were made out by the police this morning.

PRISONERS' OF WAR FUND.

THIS DAY SATURDAY

All ladies interested in Peterborough's Canadian prisoners of war in Germany, and in the success of Saturday's Tag day in the interests of the fund for food supplies, are requested to attend a meeting to-morrow (Wednesday) afternoon at 2 o'clock at the Public Library.

While we at home are revelling in strawberries and cream, etc., the Peterborough boys, unfortunately prisoners in Germany, will have to content themselves with inferior food, poor in quality and scant in supply, unless funds are forthcoming to keep up the sending of food parcels. Everybody giving a little and some much, on Saturday, will be a big help.

STAR HOCKEYIST OF 93rd BATTALION TEAM ON WOUNDED LIST

Pte. Percy D. Windsor, Whose Playing Featured Games of the Soldiers' Team of the Winter Before Last Has Been Hit--Pte. McKinnon of the 93rd is Also Wounded To-day's General Military News.

WOUNDED.

Pte. Percy D. Windsor, late of the 93rd Battalion, Peterborough.

Pte. D. McKinnon, late of the 93rd Battalion, Peterborough.

PTE. PERCY D. WINDSOR.

Hockey fans will hear with regret that Pte. Percy D. Windsor, formerly of the 93rd Battalion and star centre player of the 93rd's intermediate O. H.A. team in the winter before last, has been wounded, the announcement having been made from Ottawa yesterday. Pte. Windsor enlisted in the Peterborough battalion in January, 1916, and was a tower of strength to the battalion hockey team, his playing featuring most of the games played by the soldiers. Pte. Windsor was famous through the mining country as a star hockey player before coming to Peterborough. He went overseas as a member of the 93rd battalion machine gun section and was transferred to another Canadian battalion at the front. Pte. Windsor's relatives are in Lethbridge, Alta.

PTE. D. McKINNON.

Pte. D. McKinnon, who joined the 93rd Battalion here in October, 1915, and went overseas as a member of the Peterborough county unit, is officially reported wounded. His next of kin resides in Camberay, Ont.

BRANTFORD, July 9.—At a meeting of returned soldiers Saturday night announcement was made by W. F. Cockshutt and J. H. Fisher, members of Parliament for Brantford and Brant, respectively, that they would move in the House at the present session an increase in soldiers' pay and more adequate soldiers' pensions.

TORONTO, July 9.—Hon. G. Howard Ferguson announced to-day upon his return from Northern Ontario that the Government had selected the township of O'Brien, 67 miles west of Cochrane, on the Transcontinental Railway, as the location of the first soldiers' colony. The land selected is on the east bank of the Kapuskasing River, directly across the river from the Experimental Farm of the Dominion Government at Macpherson, where 1,000 acres are already cleared and 200 under crop.

The Transcontinental Railway runs through the centre of the soldiers' colony, and Hon. Mr. Ferguson has arranged with the railway authorities to begin to-morrow with the building of a half-mile spur into the settlement to bring in the lumber and supplies.

The Government has purchased 200,000 feet of lumber with which to begin the building of 30 individual houses which will be the start of the colony. The lumber was shipped to-day. Within a week the 27 soldiers who for a month have been undergoing a course of instruction at the Government farm at Monteith will be transferred to the new colony. It is expected to have 150 acres prepared this fall for seeding next year, which area will supply the needs of the settlement for next year. During the coming winter the men will begin the clearing of their respective lots, and within a year, Hon. Mr Ferguson expects, each man will be on his own farm.

OTTAWA, July, 10.—It is reported in Militia Department circles here that Lieut.-General Sir Arthur Currie's successor as Commander of the 1st Canadian Division will be Brigadier-General Archibald C. Macdonell, who is now in command of a brigade. General Macdonell is a graduate of the Royal Military College, and is a veteran of the South African war. He is a cousin of Claude Macdonell, M.P., of Toronto.

Mrs. J. Jenkinson, 685 Union street has received the following letter from her son, Pte. J. Jenkinson, formerly of the 93rd Battalion:—

June 20, 1917

My Dear Mother:—

I received your parcel safely this morning. Am glad to tell you I am getting on very well. I am in another hospital now. It is very nice here. I am pleased to hear that you are well, also Hela and Annie, Olive and Ada. Give my love to them and tell them that I hope to see them all before long. Pte. Jenkinson's address is:

A cable from England announces that Major (Rev.) J. C. Davidson has been granted one month's sick furlough, on the recommendation of a medical board.

The Executive of the Peterborough branch of the Great War Veterans' Association will meet to-night in the Barrie Building. A full attendance of the members of the old and new executives is requested.

The War Veterans gratefully acknowledge the receipt of several fine pictures of King George. It has been suggested that a similar picture of Her Majesty, Queen Mary would be an appropriate gift. If any citizen wishes to donate a picture of the Queen it will be appreciated by the War Veterans.

The Examiner has received the following message from Major McKinnon of Cobourg.

Cobourg, Ont., July 9, 1917

I am in receipt of a cable from officer in charge of draft stating that all arrived safely.

EMOS EMMA GOLDMAN TO JAIL FOR TWO YEARS

NEW YORK, July 10.—Emma G Wiman and Alexander Berkman, anarchists, were found guilty of conspiracy to obstruct operations of the selective draft law, by a jury in the Federal Court here last night. Judge Mayer imposed the maximum penalty of two years in the Federal penitentiary and a fine of $10,000 upon each of the prisoners.

APPEARANCES AND EYEGLASSES

By many people eyeglasses are looked upon as a disfigurement. This is altogether erroneous. Ask anyone who wears glasses made by Dr. Lasby how they satisfy, and what his service is like. Then try for yourself, 289 George Street. Open Wednesday evening.

ONE QUARTER OF KRUPP PLANT AT ESSEN DESTROYED

Holland Paper Reports Stories of Dutch Workmen Who Were Laid Off Because of Building Loss

100 EMPLOYEES KILLED

Special to The Examiner:

AMSTERDAM, July 10.— Les Nouvelles, of Maestricht, Holland, reports that Dutch workmen, who were laid off at the Krupp works on account of the destruction of buildings in the recent French air raid assert that one-quarter of the Essen plant was destroyed. The material damage is placed at millions of francs, and it is said that one hundred employees were killed and hundreds of others, including 45 French prisoners wounded.

Funeral of Late James Sackville

Deceased Left His Entire Estate to Missions—Well Known in Peterborough

The funeral took place this afternoon, at Bewdley, of the late James Sackville, whose death occurred on Sunday evening last. The late Mr. Sackville was well known in Peterborough. He was connected with the bee industry, and for many years disposed of the product on the Peterborough market. While in Peterborough the late Mr. Sackville frequently preached on the Market Square. His entire estate has been left to missions, including his house which his executors are authorized to sell. Only a short time ago the deceased made a contribution of two hundred dollars to missions, and his whole life was one of consecrated service to a higher cause. His wife predeceased him some years ago.

The funeral took place this afternoon to Pengelly's cemetery.

AN ENJOYABLE MEETING OF THE WOODMEN

The meeting of the Woodmen of the World, last night, which marked the wind-up of the recent campaign for new members for this society, was attended by about one hundred ladies and gentlemen, and an exceedingly enjoyable evening spent by all. After the business for the evening, which comprised the initiation of fifty-six new members, was transacted, interesting speeches were made by Dr. Harrison, H. C. of the Society, Mr. R. M. Glover and Mr. Plowman, after which some clever imitations of Harry Lauder were given by the accomplished entertainer, Mr. Liddell, whose reputation has spread to such a degree he is considering an engagement at Loew's, Toronto. Mrs. E. E. Graham very kindly played for the evening. Dainty refreshments were served by the ladies, after which the evening broke up with the National Anthem.

All the New Artists who are now singing at their best are recorded by Mr. Edison. Numerous artists, such as Matzenauer, Christine Miller, Farrar, Fontani, and others who were formerly tied up by contract with inferior Talking Machines are coming into the Edison Catalogue as rapidly as their "Talking Machines" contracts expire. Just a few artists unfortunately for themselves are tied up to old Talking Machine Companies by such long-time contracts that when they are at liberty to sing for the Edison they won't be fit to sing. Message This Afternoon States Front Was Smashed—Russians Will Soon Have Two Clear Lines of Railway to Lemberg.

NO "STRATEGIC" RETREAT

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, July 10.—The admission that the Russians have smashed through the German front near Stanislau (Galicia) was made in a Berlin message received at Amsterdam by the Central News to-day.

LONDON, July 10.—Additional particulars of the advance of the Russians in Galicia indicates that Hindenburg's famous Eastern front line has been badly smashed, or at any rate seriously dented, and when the Russians take Halicz, which seems imminent, they will have two clear lines of railway to Lemberg, the much fought over capital of Galicia.

In the present advance the Russians have taken immense stores of every description, and the German War Office statement to-day admitting the retirement, makes it clear that the Austro-German retreat was not one of Hindenburg's "strategies," but was definitely forced by the Russian sweep. Many guns of various calibre were mentioned among this morning's captures.

STRIKE IS IMMINENT

Toronto Railway Company Will Make No Further Offer to Men

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, July 10.—When General Manager Fleming of the Toronto Railway Co., declared at noon to-day that the company would positively make no further offer of wage settlement to the men, any prospects of avoiding a complete tie-up of Toronto's street railway system at midnight seemed to vanish. The men, who demand an increase of ten cents an hour, still spurn the company's offer of an increase of two cents an hour, and the employees' leaders say they positively will not revoke the ultimatum of a strike at midnight.

Are Considering A General Strike

Labour Unions in West May Oppose Conscription

Special to The Examiner:

WINNIPEG, Man., July 10.—All labour unions in Winnipeg and other cities in Western Canada are voting on the question of calling a general strike if conscription is adopted by the Canadian parliament, according to a report here to-day.

REPRISAL.

The frantic demand of women in London, for reprisals in the brutality of air bombing defenceless cities, and killing women and children, is natural; but it won't do. It would be difficult to find a British or a French aviator who would descend to the degradation of killing women and children, even of the Huns, while they sleep. Besides, reprisals would be bad policy. The Huns would take revenge on prisoners in their power, and the good Lord knows the Canadian and British prisoners are treated badly enough now without further provocation provided for their bestial custodians, such as air raid reprisals would be regarded. It seems an awful thing to think of the murder of a score or two civilians; but every hour of the fierce fighting at the front a greater number of gallant soldiers meet their fate. It is heartbreaking to contemplate the gruesome harvest of the Huns already, but vengeance does not belong to us. British civilization and British chivalry will not tolerate lynch law, of which air raid reprisals would be another form.

Kerensky, Russia's Minister of War, is the Lloyd George of the Muscovite Dominions; and they are well mated. Men who can master the pronunciation of the Welsh and Russian languages, are made for conquest of comparatively trifling difficulties.

MRS. McKINNEY.

Who is Mrs. McKinney? She is the first Canadian woman M.P.P. She was elected at the recent general elections in Alberta, for the riding of Claresholm, a riding that was represented by a Liberal in the last Legislature. She was an "independent" candidate, and will not likely be held down to slavish support of any party. She has been a prominent and aggressive member of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, and no doubt had her share in making Alberta "dry," as it is to-day. Her picture in the papers shows her wearing the white ribbon of the W.C.T.U. She may be a "strong-minded" woman, but the only sign of that, if that is a sign, in her photograph showing her wearing glasses—the only concession she tolerates. She dresses in the same style as the average woman, and doubtless has as much harmless vanity of dress as the average woman.

Mrs. McKinney's independence is a good sign, if she can maintain it. Women in politics and parliament can only be an element in the improvement of political conditions and methods if they are independent of slavish adherance to party. Under our party system we have parliament and legislatures elected by voters who vote without thinking of the issues involved; vote the ticket of the party to which they have been born or reared. If women in politics will help to make public interests and issues, instead of mere party success, the standard of election to parliament, their advent to political privileges and activities will be a benefit to the country. But if they fall in with the party procession and lose their political identity in the party rank, things political will remain as they are.

In addition to the 300 million bushels of wheat from Canada and the United States needed by the Allies, from 250 to 300 millions of other cereals will be required.

SAVE THE WHEAT SUPPLY.

The demand for food conservation to provide more of it for our allies, is as urgent as the demand for men to fight. The bravest and best fighting forces will become as infants in arms without adequate food supply. The burden of supply will fall upon Canada and the United States. Between us we shall to furnish for overseas shipment about 400 million bushels of wheat. To do that, with a normal harvest this year, will tax the full resources of both countries, and perhaps over-tax them. We can't control harvest yields, but we can make the wheat crop go further for shipmen by economizing in the use of wheat products and other exportable products, and substituting other forms of food.

The average citizen may think this is trifling with a big matter, and that the saving proposed won't amount to anything but the individual sacrifice. Think over it a moment. There are in the United States and Canada a total of 110 million persons, equivalent to 22 millions families. If every family, by substituting other forms of food, saved only one loaf per week, the total saving would be of course 22 million loaves, the approximate equivalent of a million bushels of wheat; the flour from a bushel of wheat makes about 25 large loaves of bread. This gives an idea of the tremendous results that would follow a little saving by each of the individuals or families of the two countries. This argues that everybody must join in the saving; none can be excused. An individual may think that his saving won't amount to much. It doesn't; but 110 million individuals doing the same makes the grand total of saving of exportable food, which the country must supply. If we can add 50 millions a year to the wheat supply of our allies by simply saving in the use of wheat food articles of diet, it is our duty to do it.

And the saving can be made greater by greater abstinence from wheat foods, and by making the most in the way of food value out of our wheat. Hon. Senator Casgrain, in the course of moving in the Senate for the adoption of whole wheat flour in Canada, points out the superiority in nutritive value of whole wheat flour—by the millstone process—over the Hungarian process, or roller process, of making flour. He said the superiority in nutritive value of millstone flour over roller flour, is 25 per cent. He declares that the life of the wheat is ground out by the roller process, until the most of the best part of the wheat is lost to the flour, and the refuse contains the best part of it. He says farmers and stock breeders will pay twice as much for roller mill offal; in his own words—

"The reason is the millstone mills produce good flour, but very poor bran, and the human being gets what is good; whereas, in the roller mills the human being gets the poorest and the hogs get the best of it."

The Senator points out that Great Britain and France have adopted whole wheat flour and that the latter country saves 88 million dollars a year by its use—"simply by changing from one system of grinding to another." Mr. Casgrain also says that "too much money is invested in the milling business to make the change easy," but supposes that "the government will not hesitate to do what is in the public interest" — to enact "federal legislation to prevent tremendous waste."

The necessity, that is felt by all thoughtful public men and great governments, of saving to the uttermost, and in every way, should impress upon the great body of our people the duty of doing their share; and doing their share—each his little bit—will do more to economize and eke out the supply of wheat or its equivalent for export to our allies, than all food controllers, no matter how able, and all governments, however willing. Every individual and every family should be brought to feel the importance of this saving, which they will do by thinking the matter over, and each appreciating the importance of individual cooperation in a great national movement, which cannot be national in the real sense without the cooperation of every man, woman and child.

One woman in Red Cross work, will do more for Canadian prisoners of war, than a thousand—afternoon tea and bridge whist triflers.

SAVING IS IMPERATIVE.

If the country is to carry its Financial Burden—Referendum or Conscription?

The question is attracting the eager attention of the whole country. A general election may be held. But whatever the outcome of the Ottawa situation the public mind must not be distracted from the war. There never was greater need for concentration on the essentials that are required if victory is to be assured. One of the most pressing needs is for financial mobilization. It must be accompanied by the exercise of thrift by every man and woman in the country. It is estimated that Canada will need $600,000,000 to meet the current war expenditures. That money can only be secured through the patriotic efforts of the whole Dominion. Millions are being spent every day on luxuries; more millions are being wasted because of the failure to practice domestic economy. Other millions are being lost because sufficient attention is not being paid to prevention and utilization of waste. All these faults must be corrected if the Dominion is to carry its tremendous financial burden. National Savings and investment in War Savings certificates are imperative if victory is to be secured B-12

Is The Prussian Military Spirit Shared By The People of Germany?

There is no more dangerous 'piffle' talked to-day than the chatter we hear, often in high quarters, about a wide difference between the German Government and the German people. The theory is that German Imperialism is the work of a small ruling class which drives the great mass of the simple-minded German people into battle for it against their will. If the German people had democratic self-government, these theorists argue, they would abandon all these schemes for expansion and remain content with the narrow and crowded limits of their Fatherland. They would revert to music and poetry and leave commerce and money-making, markets and spheres of influence, to the rest of us. This is the most arrant nonsense. Every intelligent German—with certain Socialistic exceptions is behind the Kaiser. He supported the Kaiser because he believes that the Kaiser, and his army and his navy, can get him—the commercial German—exclusive markets to exploit, colonies to bleed and the power to cram pro-German treaties down the throats of less powerful peoples. The basic cause of this war is an effort by German Austria to make Serbia a commercial vassal of the Teuton nations. But listen to Dr. Dillon on this point:

"The German Empire, it should be borne in mind, consists of a homogeneous population, all classes of which are one in sentiment, ideals, and strivings, and readily responsive to the will of the Most High, who is their spokesman and their war-lord. The notion harboured by so many of the Allies that a change of regime there would swamp the "military class," and thus end imperialism or else lead to such a split among the States as would destroy political unity, is tenable only by those who have not yet had the time or the desire to acquaint themselves with the facts. The German people, being politically and militarily one and indivisible, the hope that State will rise against State or class against class is a delusion which may prove mischevious to the Allies if it survive till the peace negotiations. The prussians—originally a non-German, semi-Slav race, in which the collective tendency was highly developed, as it is in all Slav races—at a certain stage of their evolution—succeeded in grafting on the Teuton elements of the Empire their own characteristics, and inspiring them with deep respect for Prussian institutions. And to-day no other people on the Continent of Europe possesses a State so firmly compacted, so highly organized, so efficiently led towards ideals for which we and our Allies profess abhorrence, but which are revered and striven after by every Teuton subject of the Kaiser. But Prussianism, as a set of traits and institutions characterising any single German State, no longer exists. As Prince Bulow truly said, what the Allies are wont to term Prussian militarism is in truth a German institution sedulously cultivated by the entire nation as a powerful cement which keeps the various States and the different classes of each State united in sentiment, and striving."

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A Bit of Conclusive Evidence

By WILLIAM CHANDLER

When my mother died, leaving my father and myself alone in the house, we tried running it ourselves, but it soon became evident that we two men must have a housekeeper.

Mrs. Jennings—she was a widow—was engaged.

Father had retired from business and devoted himself to the care of his estate, having a sort of office at home in which was a desk he had used when he was a manufacturer. He was very particular about his stationery, using a certain kind of paper on which he had his name and address printed in blue ink. He was very crotchety about the use of this paper and if called upon to write anything when not at his desk would send for some of it. I remember I once asked him to give me an order for some securities he desired me to sell for him and when I handed him a pen and a sheet of my paper he required me to go to his desk and get some of his own. I mention this, for it is an important feature in my story.

When I married I proposed to father that I bring my wife to our home and turn over the housekeeping to her. But he said there would be friction. He had always been head of his house, and a woman usually wishes to be head of her house. My wife would not be content to be his housekeeper. She would wish to be her own housekeeper. I was very sorry for this, for I saw no reason why the three of us should not live together pleasantly and comfortably.

However, Mrs. Jennings seemed to me to be an excellent woman and took such good care of father that I felt consoled at leaving him in her care. Besides keeping house for him, she helped him with his correspondence and other matters pertaining to the care of his estate. All this was of especial importance because my wife and I were to go around the globe for a wedding trip and were to sojourn a year on our way back in Munich. My wife was devoted to music and designed to take a course of instruction there.

We sailed from San Francisco and received no word from home till we reached Japan, where I was handed a cablegram stating that my father had been taken ill while we were on the ocean and had died. It seemed necessary for me to return at once, but it would be a great disappointment to my wife to go with me, and she would not let me go without her. The upshot of the matter was that I cabled Jim Wilson, a cousin of mine, to pay off Mrs. Jennings and close the house.

I heard nothing from Wilson in reply to my cablegram for months. Then he wrote me that he had been absent when my message came and as soon as he returned had hastened to comply with my request. Whereupon Mrs. Jennings had handed him a bill of sale of all my father's property executed a month before his death. She refused to leave the house and claimed possession of everything which by my father's death was mine.

It was plain that I was not a good judge of human nature. I had certainly been deceived in the housekeeper, who had evidently prepared to beat me out of the whole or at least a part of my property. I did not know whether the bill of sale would stand, but I surely expected an expensive lawsuit or a compromise in which I might have to pay largely.

Of course there was nothing to be done but go home at once. My wife went with me, and by the time we landed in America I refrained from seeing Mrs. Jennings until I had consulted my attorney, and after an interview he asked her by telephone where we might see the bill of sale by which she claimed my father's property. She referred us to her lawyer. To him we went, and he showed us the document. It was written in writing like my father's, though his hand seemed to have trembled when he wrote it. It simply stated that for and in consideration of $1 he sold to Mrs. Sarah Jennings all his property. On asking why he had done this we were informed that she had taken care of him during his last illness, his own son having deserted him to go on a trip abroad. He had therefore given her his property instead of leaving it to her by will.

And now I must return to my father's punctiliousness with regard to his stationery. I noticed at once that this bill of sale was not written on the paper he always used. This excited a suspicion that it was not genuine. As to the handwriting and the signature, I could find no fault with them.

We demanded the right to have the document examined by experts in chirography. This was acceded to with the usual result. The experts disagreed. Then I called in a man who was familiar with the manufacture of paper. He examined the paper on which the bill was written and by its texture, water lines, etc., pronounc

STOP HEADACHES BEFOREHAND

You never had a headache when you were well.

To keep well is to keep clean, inside.

To relieve headache, and to prevent it, keep the liver active and industrious and the bowels as regular as a clock.

Two generations of healthy, vigorous people have done this by taking one pill at bedtime, regularly—a larger dose when nature gives the warning.

d it be of a certain make and of a certain paper company. When a sample of this lot of paper was submitted to its manufacturers they said that it had been put out to the trade on a date two months after my father's death.

Here was a clear case of forgery. My father could not have drawn or signed the bill of sale, for he was not living when it was executed.

This evidence having been imparted to Mrs. Jennings' lawyer, he transmitted it to her, and she left for parts unknown.

Later my wife and I returned to Europe.

Nature's Moth Ball.

If some botanical wizard could effect a "cross" between this wild flower of the fields and some of the agricultural crops the farmer wouldn't need to worry about summer droughts. If the corn crop, for example, had some of this flower's power of resisting dry weather the farmer could fill his silos and corneribs with little trouble. The flower is the moth mullein.

Like its big sister, the great mullein, it prefers dry, open fields and meadows. Call it a weed if you will, call it an agricultural pest, and it will answer your epithets with stalks of pretty white blossoms. If they grew in a garden you would call them beautiful.

The thick leaves of the plant have long been used by housewives in the country to pack away with winter clothes to keep out moths. So by nature this drought loving flower is a camel; by adaptation it's a moth ball.

Blossoms That Bees Love.

A person who has had no experience with bees commonly makes the mistake of supposing that the roses, peonies, sweet peas, dahlias or other gaudy blossoms of his garden will furnish a quantity of honey. Their value is almost negligible, except that some of them yield a little pollen. It is to the modest white clover in the orchard or on the roadside or the weeds of pasture or wood lot or the blossoms of trees like the basswood that the bees go for the bulk of their honey. It does not pay to cultivate any plant for its value as a honey producer. The orchard is a splendid place for the apiary, where the bees can build up on the first nectar in the spring, and the blossoms have the benefit of the bees' visits. — John W. Love in Countryside Magazine.

BLUE FLAG AN ARISTOCRAT.

This Wild Flower Is the Ancestor of the Garden Iris.

As the ancestor of the stately iris of the garden, this wild flower belongs among the "first families" of the country. It occupies the same position among the flowers that the Mayflower descendants occupy in Boston society. It leads the grand march at the Colonial Dames' ball and waves at the head of the parade of the Ancient and Honorables. It's called the blue flag.

To return to floral lore, this aristocrat displays something besides ancestry. Witness its ingenuity in perpetuating itself.

In the laws of the flower kingdom it is absolutely necessary that the blue flag be cross fertilized—that is, for the pollen of one flower to be carried to another. To guard against self fertilization the flower hides its stigmas in pockets, where its own pollen cannot reach them.

But the blue flag's cleverness does not stop here. Since it depends solely on the pollen from other blossoms, it calls on its friends, the bees, to bring the pollen. To make the work of the bees as easy as possible the flower provides a little "porch" at the door to its honey chamber as a landing place for the insects in their flight.

A VICTORIAN ROMANCE.

Strange Story Recalled by Death of British Baron.

The death of Sir George Chetwynd at Monte Carlo recalls the most famous love story of the Victorian era. Chetwynd was one of the famous figures of the turf and polo set and appeared in a famous turf cause celebre when he brought a libel action against Lord Durham for a speech at the Gimcrack Club in which the peer criticized the running of Sir George's horse Fullerton in the racing season of 1887.

The Jockey Club refused to investigate the matter and Sir George brought an action against Lord Durham for $100,000 damages.

The case was brought before three arbitrators, James Lowther, M.P.; the Earl of March, and Prince Soltykoff. Though the graver charges of pulling were found by the arbitrators to be unfounded, there were such unsatisfactory conditions about the running of the Baronet's horses that they awarded him only a farthing damages and ordered each side to pay its own costs.

Sir George took this as a slur upon him and resigned from the Jockey Club. His jockey was subsequently warned off the turf.

Sir George's turf career had a romance. He was married in 1870 to the Marchioness of Hastings, who died in 1907. This lady, whose beauty and form led to her being called "the pocket Venus," was the only daughter of the second Marquis of Anglesey. They called her lady bird in the days when Queen Alexandra was a young bride.

Lady Florence Paget, as she then was, was engaged to marry Henry Chaplin. She drove with him one morning to a well known West End shop to buy part of her trousseau. She was passionately attached to the wild Marquis of Hastings, and she left the West End shop by a different door, leaving Chaplin behind. She met the Marquis outside and married him.

Three years later a dramatic revenge came. Chaplin won the Derby with Hermit, a rank outsider, at 66 to 1, and the Marquis of Hastings went a cropper and lost so heavily on the race that he was ruined. Shortly afterward he committed suicide at the age of 26. "Judge not that ye be not judged," says the text on his tombstone at Kensal Green Cemetery.

Three years afterward his widow married Sir George Chetwynd. They had a son and two daughters.

The story of the Marquis of Hastings' ruin on Derby Day and his subsequent suicide after marrying Chaplin's fiance has been the basis of more than one melodrama in Drury Lane that has later been seen in America. Chaplin is now a Viscount and is still alive at the age of 76. Chetwynd was 68.

The Model for "Peer Gynt."

There are many models back of "Peer Gynt," and among them a young Dane. Ibsen met the young man frequently in Italy. He was a peculiarly conceited and affected young bluffer. He used to tell the Italian girls at Ischia and Capri that his father, a school teacher in reality, was the best friend of the king of Denmark, and that he himself was one of the greatest men in Denmark. To prove this, he often appeared in entire suits of white satin. He called himself a poet, but could find poetical inspiration only in the wilderness or in desolate, dreary spots. He once went to Crete to write, he said, a great drama of tragedy. He returned, however, without having accomplished his purpose. He averred that he could feel tragic emotion only in the mountains, and lived in self-delusion and illusion.

Some of his characteristics have passed in "Peer Gynt." Otherwise "Peer Gynt" is supposed to be an incarnation of Norwegian foibles. Peer's lies are not really falsehoods if this implies the intention to deceive others. They are rather self-deceptions. "Peer Gynt" has something in common with Cervantes' "Don Quixote," and is more closely related to Daudet's "Tartarin."

Where the Blame Lay.

The Duke de Montausier, preceptor to the dauphin, son of Louis XIV., being told by the king that he had pardoned a man who had killed nineteen persons after having been pardoned for the first murder he committed, replied: "Sire, he killed but one. Your majesty killed the nineteen."

RAPID FIRING GUNS.

Hurling a Tornade of Death Into the Ranks of the Enemy.

Since the introduction of the modern quick firing gun and the perfection of "time" shrapnel and high explosive shells new and scientific methods of rapid firing have been developed. When a rapid and overwhelming fire is wanted, the range is found, and the ground within the limits of the prescribed area is swept from end to end with a tornado of fire.

In the French army this is called a rafale (a squall or gust). It is a series of eight rounds per gun, each two rounds being laid to burst 100 yards farther than the last, thus sweeping an area of say 400 yards with a rain of shrapnel or a devastating series of high explosive shells. "Sweeping" fire is a series of three rounds per gun, one in the original line, one to the right and one to the left. This is also, and significantly, called "mowing." A further combination is called "search and sweep."

Time was when the commander of a battery stood near his guns and shouted commands to his gunners. Today the artillery officer may be two or three miles away directing operations by telephone from an observation post in view of the enemy's works. The observatory may be a ruined house, a tree trunk, a shell crater or a haystack, and from this point he observes the accuracy of the fire of his battery and telephones instructions to the gunners in the rear, altering the range when necessary and communicating any enemy movements, so that the shells soon find a new mark.

Instruments of precision and careful calculations are of course necessary to fight a battery in this manner, many allowances having to be made for the difference in height, distance and angle between the battery commander and the guns under his charge.—Exchange.

A Never Failing Way To Banish Ugly Hairs

(Aids to Beauty.)

No woman is immune to superfluous growths, and because these are likely to appear at any time, it is advisable to always have some delatone powder handy to use when the occasion arises. A paste is made with some of the powder and water and spread upon the hairy surface; in about 2 minutes this is carefully removed and the skin washed. You will then find that your skin is entirely free from hair or fuzz. Be sure, however, to get real delatone.

FLUTES OF GOLD.

They Have Sweeter Tones Than Those Made of Any Other Material.

By some pretty experiments with organ pipes of different materials Dr. Dayton Clarence Miller, professor of physics in the Case School of Applied Science, Cleveland, O., has proved that the quality of tone in a wind instrument depends upon its material far more than is generally believed. Writing of flutes in his book, "The Science of Musical Sounds," he says:

"The traditional influence of different metals on the flute tone is consistent with the experimental results obtained from the organ pipe. Brass and German silver are usually hard, stiff and thick and have but little influence upon the air column, and the tone is said to be hard and trumpet-like. Silver is dense and softer and adds to the mellowness of the tone.

"The much greater softness and density of gold add still more to the soft massiveness of the walls, giving an effect like the organ pipe surrounded by water. Elaborate analyses of the tones from flutes of wood, glass, silver and gold prove that the tone from the gold flute is mellower and richer, having a longer and louder series of partials than flutes of other materials."

Where Eve Is Buried.

Jeddah is a most important town for the entire human race, apart from being the principal landing place for pilgrims to the holy cities. Close beside the city is buried no less a personage than Eve. The reputed mother of mankind, like a good Moslemah, lies with her feet toward Mecca. Her grave has gradually grown and is now of huge dimensions.—Westminster Gazette.

Candy Flashes.

Lumps of rock candy placed between the jaws of a nutcracker and suddenly crushed in a dark room will produce a flash bright enough to be seen at a distance. This is caused by a peculiar light produced when certain types of crystals are fractured.

Labor rids us of three great evils—irksomeness, vice and poverty.—Voltaire.

Paul Caron Dies Fighting In France

OTTAWA, July 9.—Word has been received at Ottawa of the death in action of a well-known French-Canadian journalist. Mr. Paul Caron, who, at the outbreak of war, was a member of the staff of Le Devoir, the organ of Henri Bourassa. Mr. Caron, although a native-born Canadian, when hostilities were declared sailed directly to France and enlisted in Paris with the Foreign Legion. For his gallantry in that famous battalion he was promoted and sent to a French Military College. After receiving his commission he joined the French army, and was one of the few, if not the only, native Canadian in the ranks of the army of the republic. He was killed April 16, on the opening day of the French offensive. His closest relative is a sister, who is a well-known French-Canadian writer.

It is a unique fact that Le Devoir has sent more men to the front than any other French newspaper, and has a record equal to that of many of the large English-speaking newspapers. A nephew of Bourassa, Jean Chauvin, an orphan, who has been a ward of the Nationalist leader, and who has been on the editorial staff of Le Devoir for the past two years, left for France this week, with the object of joining his fellow-newspaperman, Paul Caron. He did not knew then of his death.

Boys Broke Into Car, Stole Goods Will Be Punished

Three boys whom the holidays provided with idle hours, appeared before Magistrate Dumble this morning, charged with breaking a sealed car. Not only had they broken into the car, but they stole from it packages of jelly powder, paint brushes and some other articles of merchandise. The Magistrate impressed upon the boys the seriousness of their offense, and as a reminder ordered that they be given a taste of the "cat."

Harry Lauder In Ringing Appeal, Says: "Save Bread"

Starvation Stares British in Face Unless They Economize, He Says

VICTORY HANGS ON THE BREAD SUPPLY.

URGES FATHERS AND MOTHERS TO CUT SLICES MORE THINLY OR SUBSTITUTE.

Harry Lauder is in dead earnest this time!

He talks to Great Britain through a pamphlet that is being scattered far and wide and the subject of his sermon is: "You must cut your slice of bread a bit thinner."

In grim seriousness, he tells the people, "I have often played the fool and joked for you; I am not joking to-day. I am as earnest as death. This morning before you eat your breakfast, before you, father or mother, take up the big knife to cut the bread, I ask you, I implore you, to hear what I have to say. The lives of many women and little children may depend on the thickness of the slice and the number of slices you cut."

And he goes on, in plain, unvarnished language to tell the people of Great Britain that they may yet know what it is to starve. The submarine campaign is responsible.

"The thing I have to say is very simple and very terrible," says Lauder. "At the present rate of consumption, the bread supply will give out six weeks before the next harvest. And after that we may want."

He is no alarmist. He has the facts from the authorities, and he states the only remedy plainly.

"Our bread will give out six weeks before the new wheat comes to market—unless—unless we economise!"

"So he asks each Briton to eat one pound less of bread each week to avert the coming famine. Fifty million people means the saving of fifty million pounds of bread each week, an amount sufficient to bridge the time till the harvest.

"Look well at your loaf before you cut, and think what it means! It means life or death. There is a shortage of potatoes. No matter! We can live without potatoes. We cannot live without bread. Think of one of our brave lads going "over the top" hungry! In very truth, if you eat that extra pound of bread you are eating the flesh from the bones of our soldiers."

Lauder points out that the munition workers cannot continue working if the bread supply gives out. "The stream of munitions from Britain to the front may cease to flow. There may come a moment, perhaps in the hour of absolute victory, when the thunder of our artillery will die down. And why; and why? Because you ate that pound of bread."

He pleads for the use of oatmeal, cornmeal, lentils, or any possible substitute for bread.

And so he ends: "This is your chance to show your quality. At this crucial moment you are asked to share a communion of sacrifice and victory.

"Now cut your loaf!"

Any woman has a perfect right to look in a milliner's window and wish she had a wealthy husband.

Before marriage a man's display of affection is apt to be overdone; after marriage it is more likely to be rare.

Gunner Clancy First American To Carry Flag

Clancy had a fancy
For doin' peculiar things.

A clean, strong and impishly good natured face has been staring out at the public from newspaper pages of late. On the head of its owner is a British field artillery cap, tilted at a rakish angle and on the sleeves of the coat are honorable service stripes. The figure is posed with a careless nonchalance amounting almost to impudence. But under the picture there appears the words: "Gunner Clancy first to carry Old Glory into action in France." We do not even know Clancy's first name, but we hope it is Pat or Mike or Dennis. Such names would fit admirably into the general scheme of things in which Clancy is implicated.

It appears that Clancy is a native of Texas and that he joined a Canadian regiment early in the war, was wounded at Neuve Chapelle, Combles and Gommecourt, and is now recovering from being almost buried alive at Arras. From which it is seen that Clancy is a doer of brave deeds and carries forward the best traditions of his fine old Irish stock. He is now in a hospital somewhere in France, but it is a good gamble that he will be out again and whooping it up for the Allies as soon as the bandages are removed, and the hospital doors are left open. Clancy simply couldn't be anywhere else than in the thickest of the fight. Being a native of Texas and of Irish descent, he possesses a combination of hereditary instincts that demand scope and opportunity.

Clancy was at the battle of Vimy Ridge when the Canadians distinguished themselves for valor and endurance. On April 9th he somehow got hold of a small American flag. He did not ask anybody's consent to carry it into action, but when the command came to "go over," Clancy tumbled out of his trench with that flag tied to his bayonet, and the sight brought thunderous cheers from all sides except the immediate front. He fought desperately and it is hinted that the flag was dyed a deep crimson when the owner at last came to a rest. But Clancy had started things. He had led the millions of his fellow countrymen who have now joined the colours. He honoured the Stars and Stripes even though he disobeyed orders. In his impudent way he declared that it was his flag and he didn't see why he couldn't carry it where he deemed pleased.

So the name of Clancy goes echoing down the corridors of history as that of the man who first carried the American flag into action upon European soil. He has applied for a commission in the American expeditionary army and every man in his regiment says he ought to have it. And it is a safe wager that somewhere a clerk is at this moment writing Clancy upon a combination, if it has not been done already. With an army of Clancy's, the war would be over sooner, says the Kansas City Journal.

Coloured and white voiles are frequently combined and so are printed and white muslins.

Cheese Men Threaten To Come To Peterboro'

Only One Buyer Present at Cheese Board Meeting

LINDSAY, July 10.— The Victoria Cheese Board met yesterday morning in the council chamber. The following were the number of cheese reported.

Mr. Flavelle was the only buyer present. Owing to the abnormal conditions considerable difficulty was experienced in arriving at a price.

Some of the factories were considering following the example of Maple Leaf and Reaboro and sending their cheese to Peterborough, where at the last board a price of 21 5-16 cents was paid.

Mr. Flavelle explained that this was an exceptional price, and that its repetition was unlikely.

The price finally settled on was 21 1-8 cents. The board then adjourned to meet in two weeks.

WOMAN WAS PLACED IN CUSTODY

LINDSAY, July 10.— On Saturday afternoon High County Constable Conquergood placed in custody a young woman, who had participated in wrestling contests with a female member of the Patrick Shows in Victoria Park. The woman is a resident of Lindsay, and her appearance nightly at the shows attracted an army of young men. Protests were entered by certain citizens and also the woman's relatives against such exhibitions, and the woman was taken into custody. She was placed in the County jail on remand when she will be examined regarding her sanity. It is understood the woman intended accompanying the show.

It is understood that action was taken in this matter by Mrs. E. E. Sharpe, Secretary of the Children's Aid Society, as soon as she became acquainted with the facts. Why the authorities did not interfere earlier in the week is what a great many citizens would like to know.

A Record For A Canadian Army Flyer

Capt. W. A. Bishop of Owen Sound Has Won the Victoria Cross, Distinguished Service Order and Military Cross

Although only nineteen years old, a young Canadian aviator, Captain W. A. Bishop, Owen Sound, has created a record in the way of decorations for bravery and gallantry at the front. Word has been received at Ottawa that he has won the Victoria Cross. Previous to the awarding of this great honour he had been decorated with the Distinguished Service Order and the Military Cross. He is said to be the only man alive to have won three decorations.

Up to June 10th the young aviator had brought down twenty-one German airplanes, two balloons, and had been in fifty-seven combats. He has been congratulated by Sir Douglas Haig, and Premier Sir Robert Borden has recently written a congratulatory letter to his father, W. A. Bishop, registrar of Grey County.

A letter from France gives the official account of the deed which resulted in Captain Bishop being recommended for the Victoria Cross. It appears there was a Hun aeroplane of the latest scouting machines which had been giving the British some trouble, so the matter was placed in the hands of Captain Bishop. He left the ground one morning alone, before it was light, and flew straight to the aerodrome. He found seven machines on the grounds, some of which had their engines running. One of them "took off," and he fired fifteen rounds at it from close range, sixty feet up. The machine crashed to the ground.

A second one taking off, he opened fire with thirty rounds. This one crashed into a tree. Two more machines were starting off, and Captain Bishop climbed. He engaged one at a thousand feet. Firing his last bullet of the drum, the machine crashed three hundred yards from the aerodrome. Captain Bishop changed the drum, and again started to climb. A fourth German airship came after him, and he fired the whole drum into the new enemy. The Hun airplane soon beat a retreat. Captain Bishop then returned to his own lines in safety, but with his machine considerably shot up by machine gun fire from the ground. The aerodrome was armed with machine guns.

The Edison is anxious to prove its superiority by a side-by-side competitive test in your own home. Talking Machine Dealers are afraid of such comparisons and avoid making them if they can possibly get out of it. The J. M. Greene Music Co., Charlotte street.

SIR SAM HUGHES PREFERS MILITIA ACT TO THE NEW BILL

OTTAWA, Ont., July 9.—Sir Sam Hughes this afternoon gave the House another chapter in his series of attacks on Sir Robert Borden and Sir Thomas White. He now adds the name of Lord Shaughnessy to those who hindered recruiting.

Asked by Sir Wilfrid Laurier if he had any reply, Sir Robert said that his denial was already complete and there was nothing to add, Sir Sam's remarks were as follows:

"The situation from February 1916, to the autumn of that year was unique. Men were enlisting up till February and March as they never did before in any land. The home locality plan worked well. Then the Prime Minister, as well as the Minister of Militia, was daily, sometimes hourly, worried by a factitious agitation. Suggestions, complaints, advice, appeals, demands re recruiting were made.

"Possibly more than any other, except the Finance Minister, the influence of Lord Shaughnessy was potent in this embarrassment. Both Lord Shaughnessy and Sir Thomas White complained of the number of battalions being raised in Montreal and Toronto at the same time respectively. In the Montreal area, with a total population of nearly a million, including the adjoining countries, there were being recruited three battalions. On our basis of forty thousand for a battalion of one thousand, there should have been at least twenty to twenty-one instead of three. In Toronto there were five, or, including two formerly authorized but fully completed, only seven were under way where, as compared with the country districts, there should have been twelve. From one or other of these two gentlemen the following fallacious arguments were also advanced.

"Industries would be ruined if so many men were enlisted.

"Farmers could not put in their crops.

"Munitions could not be made.

"The war would be over by July or August, 1916.

"Transports could not be had.

"It would take a long time to get the troops to England as only a certain number could be taken monthly.

"From first to last the tendency of the cry was not the upholding and strengthening of the boys at the front so much as the commercial idea at home.

Prefers Militia Act

Sir Sam made the following remarks about the Conscription bill:

"I prefer the Militia Act as better, more elastic, more workable, less inclined to cause friction, and more inclined to produce good results, but the Government does not so consider it.

"I, therefore, will not take one minute in discussing that aspect of the question, merely placing myself on record. I shall loyally support any and every proposition enacted in the bill when finally completed, and shall with the least delay freely give my suggestions.

"My preferences are more or less well known.

1. The tribunals are non-military, and are under the administration of the Justice Department. My suggestion would be to place them under military control, but let their composition be non-military.

2. A mere suggestion is the area unit instead of being Provincial should be military district.

3. There should be no special exemptions for "financiers" more than for farmers.

4. It would have been advisable to have had registration.

5. Clergy should not be exempt.

6. In section 11, sub-sec. E is the only one to my mind that should be retained. Is there a man in Canada who may be exempted under section 11 as it now stands?

7. Desertions—It might be well to provide for punishment under this and other sections of the bill, at the front.

STRAWBERRY SEASON

Large Crop This Year, But the Season Likely to Be Short

There should be a large crop of strawberries this year. The weather conditions have been very favourable for their growth and ripening. The quantity already on sale has been unusually large and the quality very fine. The Douros and Gettas Fruit Co. advises their customers not to delay in placing orders for preserving. This week will be a good week for supplies, as the berries are ripening very fast.

Milk Is Safest If Pasteurized

This is the Consensus of Opinion After Years of Controversy, Says The Medical Record

IT KILLS DISEASE GERMS

Sanitary and Scientific Production Together with Pasteurization, Solves the Problem.

In an editorial discussion of the increasing difficulties of supplying milk to the public on a large scale and in safety, The Medical Record of New York comes out unreservedly in favour of the pasteurization of the whole milk supply. The writer says:

"With the growing increase in the popularity of milk as a food for both adults and children, especially in urban communities, the milk problem—the problem of supplying this product on a large scale and in safety—becomes a more and more difficult one to solve. This matter has so many phases and ramifies into so many different considerations, that no single solution can possibly be expected to meet all the requirements. Every procedure that is of the slightest help must receive attention and must be incorporated into the technique in order to accomplish the best results.

"It is no longer an open question that many diseases and disorders, many of the former in epidemic proportions, are spread through this excellent culture medium, milk—particularly such diseases as typhoid fever, the para-ty-phoids, cholera, other diarrheal affections, diphtheria, scarlet fever, septic sore throat, etc., and most communities have now recognized the dangers lurking in an impure milk. There have been organized in nearly all large communities expensive, highly organized, and scientific machineries to cope with this problem. In spite of these efforts, the transmission of disease through the agency of milk is still very considerable.

"The development of the milk industry from the period when crude dairies, clumsy and uncleanly methods of handling, diseased stock, etc., were the rule, to the modern dairy which produces milk of the highest grade, where stock and equipment are frequently inspected by central authorities, where there are adequate quarantine provisions, tuberculin tests, etc., is a very large accomplishment. Indeed, it was hoped that these modern accomplishments would, when successfully carried out, reduce to a negligible degree every possibility of contamination.

"Unfortunately, this hope has proven to be a delusion, and possibly even a snare, giving an unwarranted sense of safety. The question of safe milk is much complicated by the injection into it of such nearly unavoidable factors as post-infection, bottle-infection, cau-infection, missed cases, the personal equation of the examiner, carrier and the many sundry faults of technique. The introduction of any one of these factors may act to nullify the whole fabric of protection so carefully woven over the milk supply.

"At present, therefore, the consensus of opinion holds that the greatest degree of safety lies in pasteurization of the whole milk supplied, either in bulk, by such methods as are exemplified by the holder methods or the individual supply, according to election. Many communities already require that all milk supplied to them be pasteurised. Pasteurization kills the pathogenic bacteria at a temperature of 140 degrees Fahrenheit, maintained for about half an hour. It does not, however, coagulate the soluble albumins, nor does it destroy the milk enzymes, as would be done by frank sterilisation.

"Pasteurization is not intended to fill the place of the modern scientific milk production methods. It must rather supplement it, so that the greatest amount of safety shall be attained by neutralising the many unavoidable faults or failures of technique. Even apart from the sanitary and safety factors, modern milk production has already justified its existence and more than paid for itself by the demand it has created for milk and milk products, by the rise in the food fat quality of the milk, and by the conservation of much of the supply which would otherwise not be fit for transmission for long distances. Moreover, there has been actually created a new industry of the highest economic importance to the country.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY ANSWERS

BY MRS. MAE MARTYN

June: The "French complexion fad" you inquire about is probably the craze for liquid powders. They are thought to be more wholesome for the skin, as well as more beautifying and less likely to show, than ordinary powder. The following preparation can be made at home from ingredients to be purchased from any druggist. Get 4 ounces spermax from your druggist, dissolve in one-half pint hot water and add two teaspoons glycerine. It is splendid in effect, looks very natural and clings as if it belonged to your skin.

Lilly: You will find shampooing with a teaspoonful) canthrox dissolved in a cup hot water is a quick and pleasing way to free the scalp of dust, dandruff and excess oil. This is a cleanser and invigorator most appreciated by one whose scalp is either dry, scaly and flaky or profusely oily. Its use restored healthful vigor to my scalp and induced the hair to come in plentifully, with a gloss, and greatly enriched color.

Bess: The best blood cleanser I know is Kardene, because it acts on the liver and kidneys, and if, as you say, you are troubled with severe and constant headaches, it is an indication that your kidneys and blood need attention. To prepare, put one ounce Kardene (from the drug store) into one-half pint alcohol (whisky should not be used), then add one-half ounful sugar and hot water to make a full quart. A tab.spoonful before meals is the dose. This Kardene tonic gently expels poisonous waste from the body and tones up the internal organs so they can do their work. You will find this tonic good for lost appetite, failing strength, and to clear up the complexion.

Lorelei: Even the woman of middle age nowadays is determined to keep her flesh down, and who can blame her, now that present styles demand slimness? I always recommend parnotis (which I mix up at home) as the safest, cheapest and best flesh-reducer." Get four ounces parnotis at druggist's and dissolve in one and one-half pints hot water. Cool, strain and take a tablespoonful before each meal. Dieting or exercise is not necessary with this.

Mrs. S.: My own experience with wrinkles was three years ago, when I removed them with a very simple, inexpensive preparation which I made by mixing an ounce of almonoin (from any druggist's) in one-half pint cold water and adding two teaspoonfuls glycerine. This, by contracting the skin slowly, restores healthy firmness and keeps the surface circulation of the blood so good that a perfectly natural glow develops in the cheeks. I have used it ever since.

Madge: No, you need not have lots of money in order to give your hair and scalp perfect care. I often recommend many made-at-home items which are even better than highly priced patents. As a hair tonic I get an ounce of Quinsoin at the druggist's, dissolve it in one-half pint of alcohol and add one-half pint of water. Rub, a little at a time, well into the scalp and your dandruff will disappear and you will keep your scalp healthy.

Ruth: I brighten my eyes and rest them when tired by putting a few drops of crystos solution into each and bathing the lids with th[illegible] by getting an ounce of crystos from the drug store and dissolve it in a pint of clear water. It will not smart and is soothing and healing. It is the safest way of making the eyes sparkling and expressive.

2,000 SALOONS TO CLOSE

Effect of Anti-Whiskey Legislation in the City of Chicago Alone—Liquor Supply Running Out.

CHICAGO, July 9. — Chapin and Gore, for 60 years one of the largest whiskey manufacturing firms of the country, is to go out of business, Chas. H. Hermann, president of the firm, announced to-day. Mr. Hermann, who is also head of the National Distillers and Wholesale Liquor Dealers' Association, predicted that within 60 days at least 2,000 saloons in Chicago and a similar proportion throughout the country would be forced out of business as the result of national anti-whiskey legislation.

Mr. Hermann estimated that the whiskey now in existence would be exhausted within a year at the present rate of consumption. He said he has positive knowledge that there was not more than 200,000,000 gallons of whiskey now in the Government warehouse.

Business Transacted By The North Monaghan Council

Townships of North Monaghan and Cavan Will Expend Three Hundred Dollars on Repairs to Gravel Road--A Job For County Constable Moore.

The North Monaghan Council met at the Court House, Peterborough, on Monday, July 9th. Reeve Rye, Deputy Reeve Bell, and Councillors Henry and Williams were present. The minutes of the last two meetings were read and confirmed. The County Clerk's report re equalised assessment of the County of Peterborough for 1916 was read and discussed.

WANT ROAD REPAIRED.

A deputation from the Township of Cavan, consisting of Reeve J. J. Henderson, Deputy Reeve H. Baptie, Councillor Hall, Mr. F. E. Wilson and the Rev. G. J. Craw was present in the interest of having the Cavan boundary put in proper repair. Reeve Henderson said the boundary between North Monaghan and Cavan Township was in a deplorable condition. Mr. Baptie and Mr. Ball suggested a committee with power to act from both townships.

It was the consensus of opinion that the cost of putting the road into shape is prohibitive without government aid. All that can be done is to make temporary repairs. The road in question is partly made up of what is commonly known as the long swamp, and constitutes the boundary between North Monaghan and Cavan Townships. This part, to say the very least, is in an unsafe condition for traffic. The balance of the road is well known as the Gravel Road, and is the main traffic road from Port Hope to Peterborough. This road is badly out of repair in a number of places.

It was moved by Mr. Williams, and seconded by Mr. Bell, that the Township of North Monaghan grant one hundred and fifty dollars toward the Cavan boundary, providing the Township of Cavan grant an equal amount. The Cavan deputation agreed to this arrangement. It was also agreed that the Cavan Township furnish the men and teams and do the work, and that Mr. E. F. Wilson supervise the work, and that teams be paid four dollars per day and men two dollars a day of ten hours. The Reeves of each Township are to be a committee with power to add to their number and map out he work.

BY-LAW PASSED.

By-law number 746 was introduced, read and finally passed, authorizing the Reeve and Treasurer to borrow the sum of four thousand dollars from the Bank of Ottawa to meet current expenditure.

The following communications were then read. The Brinton Carpet Company acknowledging the receipt of assessment notices re the Company's assessment. Gordon, Widdifield and O'Brien, re John Armstreng. Moved by Mr. Williams, seconded by Mr. Henry, that Gordon, Widdifield and O'Brien's communication be referred to Mr. Peck, Township Solicitor.

The following motion was moved and passed, that Mr. Alexander Gordon, the Brinton Carpet Company, and Mr. J. T. O'Connell be notified to remove their fences from the public highway.

The following bills were presented for payment:

Sawyer Massey Company, crusher repairs, $34.05.

H. B. Rye, express on crusher repairs 90c; also telegram, 54c; a total of $1.44.

Peter Hamilton Co., repairs, 75c.

R. A. Dobbin, 48 yards of gravel, $7.20.

John McIntosh, 83 yards, $12.45.

Moved by Mr. Bell, seconded by Mr. Henry that the above accounts be passed and paid.—

Moved by Mr. Henry and seconded by Mr. Williams that the Foster Moncrief's paysheet, July 3rd to 7th, both inclusive, for $282.50, be passed and paid.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Henry and seconded by Bell, that Robert Colins' paysheet as presented to-day (July 9th, 1917), for $106.49, be passed and paid.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Henry and seconded by Mr. Williams, that County Constable A. Moore look after dogs in North Monaghan as per by-law.

Moved by Mr. Williams, seconded by Mr. Henry that the next regular meeting be held in the Court House, Peterborough, on the second Monday in August, at 2 p.m.

THE HAMMER OF THOR

By "Canadian Overseas"

Many may know of the name of Felix Dahn, but few know much of him.

He was the most prolific and popular writer in Germany during the last part of the 19th century. He was an historian of solid attainments He was an author of innumerable romances; he wrote several plays and opera texts, and finally he was a fluent and highly esteemed lyric poet.

In a volume of "Lyrics and Ballads," published in 1878, appears the poem "Thor's Hammer-Cast":

"Thor stood at midnight end of the world,
His battle mace flew from his hand;
So far as my clangorous hammer I've hurled,
Mine are the sea and the land!
And onward hurtled the mighty sledge,
O'er the wide, wide earth to fall.
At last on the Southland's fartherest edge,
In token that his was all.
Since then, 'tis the joyous German right,
With the hammer, lands to win;
We mean to inherit world-wide might,
As the Hammer—God's Kith and Kin."

This lyric antedates by many years the birth of pan-Germanism as a self-conscious, organized movement. The poet does not write in any spirit of sectarian aggressiveness. He is merely expressing what he regards as the natural, inborn instinct of his race. It seemed to him quite a matter of course that his people should claim and exercise the "joyous German right" (freudig Germanen Recht) of conquering the world with the Hammer of Thor.

Until 1914 we rather smiled at the Hammer of Thor. It pleased us to read about it, for such exploits satisfied our romantic turn of mind. But to-da, Belgium, Serbia, Rheims, Ypres and myriads of other places do not smile at it. No longer is it clothed in romance, but is a very stern reality.

It is still pounding on, but its way to world-empire is blocked and the civilized world is eagerly waiting the day when once more the Hammer of Thor will become silent and forgotten.

SCHOOL CLOSING CONCERT HELD

ORANGE CORNERS, July 10.— A pleasant time was spent on Thursday, June 28th, when the children of S. S. No. 10 and their teacher, Miss Johnston, held a school closing concert. Harry Jackson was in the chair, and after a very enjoyable programme lunch was served.

The Ladies' Guild of St. John's church desire to thank Miss Johnston and the children for the sum of $10.50, which was collected during the evening and given to the Guild for Red Cross work.

The children of the school deserve great credit as this is the third concert given during the past year in aid of the Red Cross.

ENGLAND HAS POTATOES.

3,000,000 Acres Under Cultivation Makes Country Self-Supporting.

NEW YORK, July 9.—The following special cable from London appears in the Sun:

England is better supplied with food than any of the countries of Europe, and the Government is taking notable steps to see that this advantageous position is maintained during the coming year. The immense home production of potatoes is now coming into the market. The Food Controller has suspended the regulations requiring that potatoes shall not be served more than one day each week. They are now freely used.

Notwithstanding this fact, the Board of Agriculture has issued an impressive statement to the farmers declaring that the absolute necessity exists for adding a great area to the cultivated acreage for 1918. Arrangements will be made to survey lands now used as pasturage, which will be plourhed up for crops designated by the Government.

The farmers are required to accept the conditions laid down for them by the Government or compulsion will be used to see that they do so. The spectacle is thus brought in sight of the Government telling the farmers exactly what they must raise and compelling them to heed the direction. An increase of 3,000,000 acres must be made to make England self-supporting during the next year.

When a clock is wound up it goes; but when a firm's business is wound up it stops.

UNITED STATES FOOD CONTROLLER'S ADVICE TO THE HOUSE WIVES

Mr. Herbert C. Hoover, Food Controller for the United States, issued the following card of instruction to housewives. It reads:

WIN THE WAR BY GIVING YOUR OWN DAILY SERVICE.

Save the Wheat.—One wheatless meal a day. Use corn, oatmeal, rye or barley bread and non-wheat breakfast foods. Order bread twenty-four hours in advance, so your baker will not bake beyond his needs. Cut the loaf on the table and only as required. Use stale bread for cooking, toasts, etc. Eat less cake and pastry.

Our wheat harvest is far below normal. If each person weekly fives one pound of wheat flour, that means 150,000,000 more bushels of wheat for the Allies to mix in their bread. This will help them to save democracy.

Save the Meat.—Beef, mutton or pork not more than once daily. Use freely vegetables and fish. At the meat meal serve smaller portions and stew instead of steaks. Make made dishes of all left-overs. Do this, and there will be meat enough for every one at a reasonable price.

We are to-day killing the dairy cows and female calves as the result of high prices. Therefore, eat less, and eat no young meat. If we save an ounce of meat each day per person we will have additional supply equal to 2,200,000 cattle.

Save the Milk.—The children must have milk. Use every drop. Use buttermilk and sour milk for cooking and making cottage cheese. Use less cream.

Save the Fats.—We are the world's greatest fat wasters. Fat is food. Butter is essential for the growth and health of children. Use butter on the table as usual, but not in cooking. Other fats are as good. Reduce use of fried foods. Soap contains fats. Do not waste it. Make your own washing soap at home out of the saved fats.

Use one-third ounce less per day of animal fat and 375,000 tons will be saved yearly.

Save the Sugar.—Sugar is scarcer. We use to-day three times as much per person as our Allies. So there may be enough for all at reasonable prices, use less candy and sweet drinks. Do not stint sugar in putting up fruit and jams. They will save butter.

If everyone in America saves one ounce of sugar daily it means 1,100,000 tons for the year.

Save the Fuel.—Coal comes from a distance and our railways are over burdened hauling war material. Help relieve them by burning fewer fires. Use wood when you can get it.

Use the Perishable Foods.—Fruits and vegetables we have in abundance. As a nation we eat too little green stuffs. Double their use and improve your health. Store potatoes and other roots properly and they will keep. Begin now to can or dry all surplus garden products.

Use Local Supplies.—Patronize your local producers. Distance means money. Buy perishable food from the neighborhood nearest you and thus save transportation.

GENERAL RULES.

Buy less; serve smaller portions.
Preach the "Gospel of the Clean Plate."
Don't eat a fourth meal.
Don't limit the plain food to growing children.
Watch out for the wastes in the community.
Full garbage pails in America mean empty dinner pails in America and Europe.
If the more fortunate of our people will avoid waste and eat no more than they need the high cost of living problem of the less fortunate will be solved.

PROVINCIAL BICYCLE CHAMPIONSHIP AUG. 11

Special to The Examiner:-

TORONTO, July 10.—Announcement has been made from the headquarters of the Canadian Wheelmen's Association, Toronto, that the Provincial championships of the association will be held on Exhibition track, Toronto, on Saturday, August 11. This will be the only titular meet to be conducted this season under the direct auspices of the old bicycle governing body and the event will be staged for patriotic purposes. Included in the programme are events for all classes of bicycle and motorcycle races and entries are being received from Hamilton, Brantford, London, Peterborough, Montreal and other places.

One novelty will be a half mile high-wheel sprint in which the starters will include Frank Radway of London, the former 100 mile Canadian champion, Fred St. Onge, of Montreal, a professional star of the olden days, F. Carr of Brantford, and several Toronto veterans.

An invitation has been extended to Arthur Spencer, of Toronto, the new American professional champion, and Frank Kramer, of Newark, who held this title for the past sixteen years, to start in three match races.

Entry banks may be obtained from Chairman F. O. O. Johnston, 106 Adelaide street west, Toronto.

CHARLIE MITCHELL LOSES SON IN WAR; BORN IN AMERICA

Followers of boxing in this country will no doubt regret to hear of the death of Charlie Mitchell's son, Charlie Jr., who was killed in action in France during the last month. About twenty years ago Charlie Mitchell, who at that time was considered the boxing champion of England, put in a great deal of his time in this country and made a legion of friends by his clever work in the ring. Mitchell scaled only about 154 pounds, but he gave John L. Sullivan one of the hardest battles of his career when he fought him thirty-nine rounds to a draw in France.

Mitchell also had the reputation of being the first and only man to knock Sullivan flat, which occurred in Madison Square gardens, New York City, during a four round contest. When Mitchell fought James J. Corbett for the title at Jacksonville, Fla., he was a mere shadow of his former self and was beaten by the American in short order.

Young Charlie Mitchell was American born, having first seen the light of day at Buffalo, N.Y., during the time of his father's first visit to the States. The young man was 30 years of age. He had been engaged in business in the States for a number of years, but returned to London and settled there under the watchful eye of his famous grandfather, "Pony" Moore.

Charlie Jr. was of athletic build, and was always interested in athletics, but his father would not consent to his entering the boxing game until the summer of 1916. It seems that Charlie Jr., who inherited a great deal of his father's cleverness in boxing, got into an argument with a well-known amateur fighter named George "Binks" Cohen. In order to settle this dispute the two boys agreed to fight at one of the amateur tournaments, and it was "Pony" Moore who arranged it for him and seconded Mitchell.

It was a great fight, but Mitchell was beaten in the ninth round, and after the match Charlie Sr., was jubilant, for he said it would cure the boy of his desire to enter the boxing ring, and it did.—Chicago Tribune.

Baseball Oddity Is Mr. "Pie" Way, Once Yale Star

And now we have a real baseball oddity—a player who had rather recite one of Browning's poems than to smash out a double with the bases full and only one run needed to tie and two to win. This queer character is Pie Way, now employed by the Bethlehem Steel company. Pie, a former Yale twirler, quit the Giants because the mental environment wasn't all that it should be. But let Pie deliver his own monologue:

"I don't want to be in the position of attacking baseball, that is, professional baseball. It is none of my business and I haven't amounted to enough in the game to stand in as a critic. But I can say that I found it a loss, so far as I was concerned. I say this in spite of the fact that I could sign at least two very satisfactory contracts with good minor league clubs, with the prospect, of course, of working my way to the big league. But I don't want it.

JACK COOMBS HAS DOPE

"Jack Coombs put it correctly when he said that a college man goes into the big league with an education and comes out without one. Coombs is a college man who has spent a number of years in organized baseball, and he ought to know. In fact, I could see it for myself. You have no great incentive to read or keep up with the times; there is no bookish association.

"Few of the big leaguers do any worth while reading, and association with them does not tend to any amount of mental development. Of course, this does not apply to all, but I am speaking of the general run. They are all good fellows, so far as that goes, but I merely say that the life they lead does not incline to mental cultivation. Then you spend about all the money you earn. It appears on the surface, of course, that you can save a lot of money; I couldn't.

LIVE UP TO INCOME.

"There are tips at the hotels and money to be dropped here and there every day, until you find that you are living pretty much up to your income. And so, playing along, you run through the prime of your youth and blow up. Then what have you got ahead of you? That is the way I figured it out. Of course, if a fellow can jump into fast company and get $5,000 or $6,000 a year, it will be all right, provided you know when to quit. But you never do. Baseball gets a hold on you."

Eat Your Eggs, Don't Hatch 'Em, In Germany Now

ONE HUNGRY GERMAN TRIED TO MAKE HIS EGGS INTO CHICKS. BUT SOLDIERS CAME AROUND.

NEW YORK, July 9.—Newspapers from Holland which have just reached this country contain articles contributed by a resident of Amsterdam who passed the winter and spring in Germany. The writer says the food situation in the empire has resulted in an alarming increase in crime. Thefts and burglaries are common, but instead of stealing money or jewelry the thieves take food, and often leave valuables untouched.

In addition, says this writer, the government's food regulations are so drastic and the need of the people is so great that ingenious subterfuges are used to obtain food, with the result that nearly everybody is spying on his neighbor, and Prussia is one big nest of graft, trickery and mistrust.

In Berlin thefts of ham, beef and vegetables are a nightly occurrence, and the courts are overworked. Another disadvantage is the monotonous repitition of the same foodstuffs meted out to the German people. There is no variety. The selected food is kept for the army, which has not suffered as a result of the food shortage.

To vary the diet of the people the government has provided a change of menu at stated intervals for different localities. As a result the people exchange vegetables and meats, but this must be done clandestinely, as it is forbidden by the authorities. Hence there is considerable rivalry and jealously. Thefts occur frequently in the warehouses, and officials in charge of food distribution are often on trial charged with bribery.

Recently the food in Northern Germany became very scarce owing to the fact that shipments were delayed in transportation and sidetracked so that the army could be supplied first. A suburb of Berlin was neglected for a month. Consequently, each person was allotted a half a pound of meat weekly, a daily ration of bread and a small quantity of vegetables. Once in two weeks each resident was permitted to have an egg. Potatoes were not to be had at all. Children under eight years of age received a half a litre of milk daily.

In this connection the writer relates an amusing incident. An ingenious German who was a lover of eggs and intended to satisfy his appetite succeeded in getting two eggs instead of one, and he improvised a small incubator, upon which he based hopes of at least one good dinner. In due time two chicks emerged from the two eggs that he had put in his incubator, but some neighbor who had heard about it was mean enough to advise the authorities. Two soldiers came to his house armed with rifles and removed the incubator and the two chicks.

The City's Water Supply For June

Mr. C. A. G. Spence makes the following report concerning the city's water supply for the month of June.

"The water has been free from B acilli throughout the month of June even 5 C.C., quantities of sewage showing absence of same."

WEDDING BELLS

HALL—FRY.

A very pretty wedding took place at the residence of Mr. John Fry, in the township of South Monaghan, Bailieboro, on Wednesday, June 27th, 1917, when his youngest daughter, Dollie May, was united in the bonds of matrimony to Mr. James Hall, of South Monaghan, treasurer of the township. At high noon, the bride, leaning on the arm of her father, entered the artistically decorated drawing room, to the strains of a popular wedding march, and as the bridal couple, unattended, stood under a beautiful arch of evergreens, decked with snow balls, the ceremony was performed by Rev. W. T. Wickett, of Fraserville, in the presence of about thirty-five immediate relatives and friends.

The bride looked charming, garbed in a very pretty dress of pussy willow silk, and carried on her arm a large bouquet of white carnations, and wore a wreath of orange blossoms.

While congratulations were being extended, the register was signed by Mr. Stanley Fry, a brother of the bride, and Miss Francis Hall, a sister of the groom.

After all had done justice to a nicely prepared and daintily served wedding breakfast, the happy couple left amid showers of good wishes on a motor trip, the bride wearing a beautiful suit of navy blue taffeta, with hat to match.

The presents were costly and useful, attesting to the popularity of the bride, the groom's gift being a pearl necklace.

On their return, Mr. and Mrs. Hall will reside on the homestead in South Monaghan.

ONE FIGURE DID IT.

Mr. W. E. Austin states that he lives at 260 Charlotte street, and not Mrs. Simms, who was discharged in Police Court yesterday. Mrs. Simms lives at 250 Charlotte street, hence the inadvertent error was due to a typographical slip to which a number of his friends drew his attention.

On the authority of an architect the largest room in the world is the room for improvement.

TWO DANGEROUS HABITS.

Don't Scratch, Even With Clean Nails, and Don't Pinch.

Scratching oneself and picking at pimples or sore spots are dangerous habits, likely to result in infections more or less serious. This is proved by examination of the scrapings of nails under the microscope. Even hands and nails that are kept scrupulously clean by washing and brushing are not free from the germs of skin diseases.

Dr. Albert Schneider of San Francisco reports to the Journal of the American Medical Association the results of the microscopic examination of the scrapings of the nails of 143 students in a surgical college. There were found bacilli, cocci and spirilae of many sorts, especially those that produce pus.

These facts, he points out, may be of great importance in criminal trials.

Dr. Schneider cites one case in which a man was accused of killing a baby. In the scrapings of his nails were found the "frustules of fresh water diatoms and a few filaments of oscillaria." This led to the suspicion that he had buried his victim's body in a marsh. Careful search of the banks of a marshy stream near by disclosed the little corpse.

Dr. Schneider says such diseases as lupus, acne, boils and carbuncles are traceable to scratching. Nail biters frequently infect themselves.

"There is the case of the husband," he writes, "whose neck on the left side was never long free from one or more small pimples or boils, traceable to his wife's habit of playfully pinching his neck. He ascribed the trouble to starched collars, but several changes in the laundry brought no relief. During the prolonged absence of the wife on a visit with relatives the trouble disappeared entirely to reappear again on her return with a renewal of the playful habits."

PICKED AN ODD NAME.

An Author Had a Long Search and Then Faced a Surprise.

When Albion W. Tourgee wrote "A Fool's Errand" he named one of his leading characters Theron Pardee. An early copy of the book fell into the hands of the Rev. Luther Pardee, an Episcopal clergyman of Chicago, whose father was named Theron Pardee.

The name is such an unusual combination that in amazement the rector showed the book to his father, and they were both puzzled by the coincidence. They decided to write Judge Tourgee and ask him what had led him to use the name.

He replied, in equal amazement, that he had not supposed there was such a man living as Theron Pardee. Then he stated that he had a prolonged search for a suitable name for the character of his story—one that would express just what he imagined this character to be.

In the course of the hunt an old copy of the curriculum of Union college had fallen into his hands. It was dated 1825, or something as far back, and among the names of the students was one Theron Pardee.

The judge said it had impressed him as being one of the richest, most solid and most satisfying names he ever had heard, so he decided to adopt it for his character. The curriculum was so old that he had no hesitation in using the name, and he was astonished to learn that the rightful owner of it was living.

His explanation was accepted, and the resulting acquaintance was pleasing all around.

One Letter You Never Wrote.

My Dear Wife—Since you've been away visiting your mother I have been having the time of my life—in fact, I haven't known what it was to live before since we were married. I fired all the servants the morning after you left so I could be free. I get my meals anywhere. The house looks as if a tornado had struck it. But, oh, what a lovely time I'm having! Don't come home until I send for you. Cordially.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Emptying a Bottle.

To empty a bottle, especially a large one, quickly it should be held inverted over the receptacle into which the contents are to be turned. Then while the neck is held in a steady position the bottom of the bottle should be given a rotary motion. This will form a small whirlpool that will admit air to the space vacated by the liquid and cause it to run freely from the bottle.—Exchange.

Mandy's Compliment.

The morning after the coming out party Mandy, the cook, thus greeted the young girl for whom it was given:

"Miss Annie, yo' sho' did look sweet las' night! My, I hardly knowed yo'! Dey wasn't a thing erbout yo' dat looked ratchel!"—Youth's Companion.

Famous Sentences.

Thirty days!

Very Reprehensible.

"Well, ma, I gave young Mr. Smithers his congo last night."

"Law sakes, Amelia, no girl ought to be giving young men presents like that."—Baltimore American.

Poor Consolation.

"Your dog always howls when he sees me coming."

"Yes. He is rude enough to express what most people feel."—Baltimore American.

Incidents In An Air Raid On Big London

Strange Things Which Happen During An Aerial Attack

But all Illustrate the Courage of Attacked Women and Children.

Dealing with the German air raid on London in mid-June, the London Daily Mail collected a number of incidents which took place and are interesting as showing just what happens during a bombardment from the skies. Here are a few of them:

Three bombs fell 100 yards from a police station.

Five firemen were injured by a bomb outside a fire station.

People fell down in streets from the shock of the explosions.

When the bombing began all the city pigeons flew westward.

A royal investiture just concluded as the aeroplanes hove in sight.

Waitress in a teashop carrying plates had them thrown from their hands.

People from warehouses ran into a school and helped the teachers to get the children out.

A bomb which fell in some model dwellings caused a small fire, which was soon quelled.

Missles were dropped at regular intervals almost in a straight line for about three miles.

Outside a bank a dray was destroyed, the driver being seriously injured and the horse mangled.

Hearing a bomb a man leaned out out of a window and another bomb so startled him that he fell out and was badly injured.

In one street a bomb went through all the five floors of an office building. Pieces of typewriters and furniture could be seen in all directions.

A van collecting refuse was reduced to matchwood, but the horse was untouched. A boy standing near by was killed and several persons injured.

One busy corner that suffered in an early raid was again unlucky but the part that was damaged before escaped, and the part that escaped before was wrecked.

"A bomb which did not explode was removed by a policeman," said an ex-soldier. "As it turned my head I saw something drop in front of me. I dropped like a log."

"On the opposite side of the street a bomb exploded," said an employer. "I did not feel a breath of air, yet five people three yards from me were flung on their faces."

Teachers in a school on hearing gun-fire and bombs gave the children a singing lesson, and while bombs fell within a few yards, the youngsters sang Elgar's "Land of Hope and Glory."

Wax dummies dressed in the latest garb lie in a heap in an outfitter's shop, their arms broken and the trunks lying in grotesque positions, at first glance providing a somewhat terrifying sight.

A police-sergeant appeared at a school next to a building hit by a bomb and said to the children: "Now, then, kiddies, fire drill quickly; form up and all march out." The children calmly obeyed orders, and all got away without injury.

In a secluded courtyard a bomb fell in the midst of a number of workmen and killed seven and injured many others. Hours afterwards a grief-stricken widow still lingered near the scene of her bereavement, leaning hopelessly against a post close to the spot where the husband's mutilated remains were picked up.

An aerial torpedo crashed on some offices and tea-blending stores, where several women were killed. Another aerial torpedo was dropped on a jam factory where a girl was killed and three injured. An aerial torpedo also fell in the middle of a street in a village on the outskirts of London.

In a city bank the whole staff made for the basement. Cashiers left their tills and people rushed in from the street and followed the staff below into the strong-room.

Upper floors of a block of flats were completely demolished. A man said that at least six bodies had been recovered from the debris. Many more must have been injured.

There were many angry demonstrations after the raid outside the premises and houses of enemy-aliens in the East End, the police having to disperse some women. An Englishshopkeeper in this neighbourhood has to join up in a fortnight, and next door is an alien his trade, which might go to him. Two policemen had to guard this alien's premises.

A constable named Smith was killed. Three hundred girls rushed from a warehouse and he got them back. No sooner had he barricaded the door from the outside than he was killed. He had been called back from the reserve. Apparently his only injury was in the leg, death being due to shock. A constable who rushed to him when he fell remarked: "The poor chap never said a word."

An incendiary bomb dropped on a printers' establishment instantly raised a sea of flame, and the building was soon burned out. An elderly man sustained severe cuts. At an adjoining house it was stated that a bomb shook the premises as if it were a toy and swept several people off their feet. Close to the fire next door a church was opened for service, at the close of which the hymn "Passing Souls" was sung by the kneeling congregation, followed by the National Anthem.

In a publisher's building, when a bomb fell outside a cashier was making up the cash in an upper room. A bundle of cheques and postal orders was blown far and wide, and came down in a shower on a roof two streets away. A postal order bearing the firm's name was picked up nearly a quarter of a mile off. The only articles in the shop window which were not damaged were two texts in glass frames. One ran: "Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfil the law of Christ!"

Canada To Get All The Coal It Requires

TORONTO, July 10.—Washington despatch to the Toronto News to-day says: "No allotment of coal for Canada has been made yet, but the entire matter may be summed up by saying the United States Government proposes that Canada shall have from American mines all the coal it actually requires, but that there must be the greatest economy in its use, as there must be in the United States also."

The intention is to permit all reasonable shipments, but to require economy on the part of Canadian users.

INSPECTOR TO BE SENT

Will Investigate Sanitary Conditions About Lakes Frequented By Cottagers.

TORONTO, July 9.— While some complaints have reached the Provincial Board of Health regarding cottagers dumping refuse into inland lake waters, imperilling the health of others, who depend upon lakes and rivers for their water supply, the law is as a rule being well observed, says Dr. McCullough, Provincial Health Officer. "We have found that summer hotels are the greatest offenders," said Dr. McCullough. An inspector of the department will make an inspection of the Muskoka and Kawartha Lakes and other waters, being assisted in his work by the Cottagers' Associations of these localities.

Otonabee Chapter I.O.D.E. Gives $25 To 57th Regt. Band

The following letter has been received by the 57th Regimental Band from the Otonabee Chapter of the I.O.D.E.:

Lieut. R. Gliddon, Peterborough.

Dear Sir,—I have very much pleasure in enclosing a cheque for $25, being the amount which was voted by the Otonabee Chapter, I.O.D.E., at their last meeting to the 57th Regimental Band Fund.

We, as a Chapter, feel most grateful to the Band for their generous assistance to us in our work at different times, and hope this small gift may be of some small service.

With warmest thanks to the members of the Band, as well as yourself, personally.

Yours very sincerely,
HELEN DAVIDSON,
Secretary.

Not Prepared To To Announce The Terms of Peace

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, July 10. — Autocratic Germany does not propose to announce to her people nor to the other nations of the world the terms on which she is willing to make peace.

That was the main point which British officials saw to-day in reports of the Imperial Chancellor's speech before the main committee of the German Reichstag as received from Switzerland.

The Chancellor firmly refused to subscribe to the Socialists' principle of "no annexations and no indemnities." His stand, apparently was that Germany would be able to continue the war indefinitely and this being so, Germany could win in the end.

President Wilson Issues Proclamation To Militia For Federal Service

National Guard Draft Set for August Fifth With Mobilization on July Fifteenth and Twenty-fifth in Most States—No Provision For General Officers.

DISCHARGED FROM MILITIA

WASHINGTON, D.C., July 11.—The President yesterday issued his proclamation providing for the drafting of the National Guard and the National Guard Reserve enlisted into the federal service on August 5.

The National Guard will be summoned to the colours in three increments, the first on July 15 the second on July 25 and the third on August 5. The draft will not take place until the last date, in order that all units will be on an equal basis.

The New York and Pennsylvania troops are in the first contingent called on July 15.

The proclamation provides that in large part the identity of the National Guard organization shall not be lost when they are merged into the federal army. Each organization, until further orders, is to bear the name and designation. Commissioned officers not above the rank of colonel are to have the same rank and grade they now have in the National Guard.

No Provision For General Officers.

No provision is made in the proclamation for the general officers, among which is Major General John F. O'Ryan, of the National Guard. Officers in the regular army above the grade of colonel are appointed by selection and it is possible that the same rule will be followed after the National Guard has been drafted. It is not improbable, however, that those National Guard officers who have the training and experience to fit them for the service that will be demanded of them will be given high rank. The general officers cannot be designated until the militia has been merged into the federal organization.

The proclamation draws a clear distinction between the call to the federal service and the draft. The President has had the authority to call the National Guard into the federal service, but these troops have not been available for service outside the United States. Under authority of the Act of May 18, the President is enabled to draft the militia for service abroad.

Discharged From Militia.

To make certain that the purpose of the National Defence act is carried out the proclamation also specifically declares the men drafted to be discharged from the old militia status on that date. In that way the constitutional restraint upon use of militia outside the country is avoided and the way paved for sending the regiments to the European front.

Prior to the application of the draft, regiments in the northern and eastern section of the country are called into the federal service in two increments, to be mobilized on July 15 and 25. Many units already are federalized and presumably they will be mobilized with the other troops from their States. The National Guard from the other States will be mobilized on the day of the draft. The arrangement was necessary to provide for movement of the regiments South to their concentration camps without congestion and to the same end the division of States into three increments was revised from the original schedule.

Two Divisions Arraigned.

Fourteen camp sites for the sixteen tactical divisions into which the National Guard will be organized for war purposes have already been selected, and the Militia Bureau is preparing the railway routing of the troops to the camps. Seven of the camps selected are in the Southeastern Department, five in the Southern and two in the Western. The two others will be in the Southeastern Department, and until they are approved assignment of regiments to camp and divisions cannot by fully worked out.

The only two divisions positively assigned, are the Nineteenth, including the California National Guard, which will go to Linda Vista, Cal., and the Twentieth, including Oregon, Washington and other States in the Northwest, which will go to Palo Alto, Cal.

Road-Making in Macedonia

If you have never lived in a "roadless" country, it is difficult to picture Macedonia as it was before the days of the Salonika army.

It is true there were two roads—to Seras and Monastir, but beyond that, nothing," except tracks from village to village. These tracks may be compared to people who take the line of least resistance—they just meandered out of village, across plain, through a mountain pass, or round a hill, across streams or marsh and eventually into the next village. If a stream in flood gradually undercut its bed, where the track crossed, the track changed its course accordingly. If a boulder fell from the mountain side and rested on the track—was it moved? No, the track wound afresh round the boulder. If the track led over a slippery rock surface, did the local inhabitants take upon themselves to prevent their beasts of burden falling there? No, the track was altered.

No attempt was made at a causeway over a marsh, nor was any use made of the material often close to hand, that with breaking, would have made an excellent macadam surface. At a few places could be seen the remains of roads with a surface of large stones. These were of little value, as more often than not they were found at irregular intervals "to and from" nowhere! Their ancient "to's and from's" have long since been razed to the ground.

At the end of 1916 you could drive almost anywhere in Macedonia in a motor car.

Can you recall how we used to run to see a motor car pass?

Twenty years ago betting among the boys at Harrow School was often brisk, on a Sunday afternoon, on or against, the varied cars, who sought to conquer the hill. The children of Macedonia will long remember the arrival of the first motor in the beautiful Costo Dosi valley. Roads, yes, Macedonia is now really opened up by roads.

French and English and later, Italians, built them. Greek gangs now keep them in repair; some were good, some fair, and a few indifferent. The latter, however, were those which were hurriedly constructed. The majority were dug in the summer: (there is little spring and autumn in the Balkans), and it was hot work.

It was amusing to watch the three Allies at work. The British soldier worked quietly, honestly, and, at times, sadly; officers and men, all in scanty attire. The most popular "job" was boring holes for blasting; the least popular, carrying large stones for culverts. The unmarked tombstones of neighbouring cemeteries were in much demand. On the whole, the soldiers took road making like we take our pleasures—sadly.

The French, splendid workmen, seemed to do so little and accomplish so much. They seemed to be always talking and discussing the world and his wife, but the road, somehow seemed to broaden, lengthen, ascend or descend, or work its way gradually up some steep hill, at an almost uncanny rate.

Last, but not least, the Italians; ah, but it was beautiful to hear Alfredo's song from Traviata or "La Donna e Nobile," come drifting down the breese from some cliff, the orchestra being pick and shovel and the inevitable hammer or the boring iron. All joined in the chorus, while the soloists changed with every song. Comparisons are odious, but the Italians' road surfaces were easy winners.

GRAVE FOOD PROBLEM.

Ten Nations of the World on Rations

Drastic food regulations have been passed by the United States House. Canada has appointed a Food Control Commission. Great Britain has long been subject to food regulations. Altogether ten nations are on rations, and six are in distressing lack of food. The allied nations are cooperating to solve the food problem. Such cooperation is necessary in the interests of their fighting forces. Canada has a great duty to perform in helping to feed the other nations of the entente as well as feed herself. She has further an imperative financial duty. The savings of the nation are necessary to the support of the men at the front. By the practice of economy, national wealth can be saved for investment in war savings certificates. The National Service Board is appealing for such investment. It is asking every man and woman in the country to save their dollars and buy war bonds. The opportunity for war service is given to everybody. Have you taken advantage of that opportunity. B-14

Matter Discussed in the House—"Farmers Would Be Insulted If Such an Exemption Were Made" is Sir Sam Hughes' Comment.

OTTAWA, July 10.—The House this afternoon again went into committee on the conscription bill.

Edmond Proulx, of Prescott, suggested that exemption of men engaged in agricultural pursuits should be made specific in the bill. The need of production was as great as the need of fighting men, he believed that this exemption should be made plain.

Hon. Arthur Meighen stated that while farmers would undoubtedly constitute the greatest proportion of exemptions, it would rob the bill of any principle whatever to specify definitely any class which would be wholly exempt without regard to accompanying conditions or circumstances. He instanced the case of a man with a hundred-acre farm who had two sons who had gone to the front and left him to handle the farm alone, while another farmer with a fifty-acre farm and two sons, sent none. Conditions must be taken into account in an industry might not always argue against his being taken. His place might be capable of being filled by some one else or by a woman. These things the tribunal must take into account.

Joseph Rainville, deputy Speaker, presented an amendment designed to interpret the bill as exempting men engaged in agriculture or other essential industries providing these were their customary and habitual forms of occupation. Gerard, of Chicoutimi, and Boulay, of Rimouski, from the Government side both backed the amendment.

Bradbury, of Selkirk, opposed it. The farmers, he said, had already done well and were willing still to do their share in the trenches. Many had gone voluntarily. It was unfair that those who had not gone should be specifically exempted under compulsion.

"As a matter of fact," remarked General Hughes, "the farmers would be insulted if such an exemption were made."

"I believe so," said Mr. Bradbury.

Production Essential.

Fred Pardee ventured the opinion that the uncertainty as to the classes of exemption had raised a doubt as to how far, for instance, men engaged in production would be exempted. Production was as essential as fighting men. The Government had taken exception to the words "conscription of wealth" being used to an extent which created uneasiness. The Government to-day had allayed that fear. Could not the Solicitor-General give assurance that when the regulations were promulgated agriculture should be looked upon from the basis of production pure and simple and shall be treated accordingly to the present importance.

The Solicitor General thought that it would be improper for him at present to suggest what the regulations should be before they were promulgated from the tribunals.

"I will say this however," he said, "that the requirements of the bill will be filled in my opinion without taking such men from agriculture as will reduce agricultural productions."

"What about mining and fishing," asked A. K. MacLean.

"I see no reason," replied the Solicitor General, "why all kinds of production can be maintained and the requirements of the bill carried out."

J. G. Turiff, Assiniboia, thought the bill was all right as it stood. He did not believe that these tribunals could fail to realize that a man raising foodstuffs would be of more value in the present circumstances doing so than he would be in the trenches.

Mr. Turiff raised another question. He declared that there were men going about the country holding up the farmers for $5 a day to work for them. This was a sum which a farmer could not afford. Had the Government any intention of conscripting such men and forcing them, if they could not go to the front, to help raise foodstuffs at $2.50 a day. He thought this should be done.

Mr. Murphy of Perth thought the Government should guard against men who, since the announcement of conscription had been made, had gone onto farms with the purpose of securing exemption. He thought that it should be made plain that men exempted must have been engaged in the exempted industry.

Mr. Murphy also referred to the exemption of "conscientious objectors." Among certain religious bodies, such bodies, he declared, should be confined to organizations erected and instance prior to the outbreak of the war. Others which had sprung up since, with anti-war tendencies, should not be given considerations.

No Need To Worry About Savings Sir Thomas White States

OTTAWA, July 11.—At the opening of the House this afternoon Sir Thomas White made the following statement on the subject of "Conscription of wealth."

"It has been officially drawn to the attention of the Government that the use of the expression, 'conscription of wealth' in the debates in Parliament, and by public and other bodies outside of Parliament, and by the press in its news reports has caused a certain uneasiness among those whose savings constitute a vital factor in the business and industrial life of the Dominion, and are so essential to the credit and prosperity upon which our efforts in the continued prosecution of the war must largely depend.

NO ONE NEED WORRY.

"I desire to say on behalf of the Government that there need exist no apprehension on the part of the public that any action of a detrimental character will at any time be taken with respect to the savings of the Canadian public. On the contrary, it will be the policy of the Government in the future, as in the past, to encourage in every way possible the exercise of the thrift and economy resulting in national savings which have enabled Canada to maintain her credit and improve her economic position during the war.

"Any taxation to which it may be necessary for the Government to resort from time to time will be in accordance with legitimate and established forms of taxation sanctioned by the tradition and experience of British self-governing communities.

BIG INCOMES MAY SUFFER.

"This statement, therefore, must not be understood as precluding legislation providing for income taxation upon those whose incomes are such as to make it just and equitable that they should contribute a share of the war expenditure of the Dominion."

Hon. George Graham immediately rose to comment that while the resolution he had introduced provided that accumulated wealth should contribute a share, there was nothing meant by it that did not fully agree with the remarks made by the Finance Minister.

SEES NO GERMAN REVOLT.

Max Nordau Declares People Have Neither Desire Nor Capacity For It.

The official Bureau of French Information makes public the following:

Marius Le Bloud, having brought out a brochure on the question: "Is a revolution possible in Germany?" Max Nordau, the Viennese writer, has written a reply which is published by the Journal du Peuple. M. Nordau says:

"It is necessary to destroy the illusions of the optimists who stubbornly cling to I do not know what hopes of a popular movement in Germany. Bread riots are possible but a revolution is out of the question. The German people have neither the capacity nor the desire to form an independent judgment on their situation and so come to a spontaneous decision. After three years of war they return continually to that exasperating phrase, 'This war was forced upon us.'

"They believe as firmly as a rock in the monstrous lies invented by their Government despite all official publications, establishing the truth as clear as daylight, and accessible to all men who know how to read no matter what European language. No, there is nothing to be expected on that point. The German soul has been methodically perverted, demoralized, dehumanized by the instruction of the administration, by literature, and propaganda, by intellectual fraud deceitfully organized, and by terrorism in academic, official, and social circles.

"The German people glory in their slavery; they are proud of it because their masters have known how to give it flattering names—livery is called uniform, servitude organization, abject degradation of the personality discipline, repunciation of all rights, of all dignity, and of all character is called heroic abnegation."

A poor girl has to be handsome in order to be pretty, but a rich girl can be badly out of drawing before she is ugly.

IN THE TRAIL OF THE HUN

By "Canadian Overseas"

Devastation unparalleled! Beaumont, Hamel, Combles, Fleus, Guillemont, Norval, Longueval, Mestauhan and the smashed Cathedral of Albert, with the madonna miraculously hung from the stricken tower for so long.

These scenes of savage destruction will always be a reminder in the days when passions are cooled, memories of horror grown dull, of the undying character of the Hun.

All the ravage, obliteration and jove obscenity of war as Germany willed it, is shown in this trial and the science of photography is making these facts, realities for the future.

These places are Galeottas, rubble heaps, compared to which Messina after its earthquake was prim and tidy.

If Fleus is havoc what of Guillemont, Longueval and Morval? In Fleus you can still see ribs and vertebrae of a hamlet. A jogged segment of a brick wall, a skeleton of what was once a roof still totter in the high street.

But Longueval and Morval are swathes of mere rubble, lying flat to the earth. The high street of Guillemont is a long crater, floored with debris unspeakable. No earthquake or fire even made calamity like this.

These towns are undistinguishable maraines, jumbles of twisted, blackened foulness that once were homes where women worked and sang and children laughed and played. Sometimes it is hard to believe that men will have the heart to build again.

In the wilderness of devastation, which was once Morval, several lopped, lacerated, disjointed, barked, but stubborn trees remain. They seem unconquerable. These places, once their homes, are ikons for men to vow by; lessons for women to show their children in the days to come when the Hun octupus endeavors to penetrate once more into society, commerce and finance—endeavoring once more to enter the civilised world.

"The Postmaster's Daughter"

By LOUIS TRACY

The pair arrived at the Hare and Hounds within a few minutes of each other. The big man registered as "Mr. W. Franklin, Argentina." Peters ordered a chop, and went off at once to interview the local policeman. Mr. Franklin took more pains over the prospective meal.

"Have you a nice chicken?" he inquired.

Yes, Mr. Tomlin had a veritable spring chicken in the larder at that moment.

"And do you think your cook could provide a tourne-dos?"

"A what-s, sir?" wheezed Tomlin.

The visitor explained. He liked variety, he said. Half the chicken might be devilled for breakfast. The two dishes, with plain boiled potatoes and French beans, would suit him admirably. He was sorry that he dared not try Tomlin's excellent claret, but a dominating doctor had put him on the water cart. In effect Mr. Franklin impressed the landlord as a man of taste and simple means.

Peters had gobbled his chop before Franklin entered the dining room, but they met later in the snug, where Elkin was being chaffed by Hobbs anent his carryin's on in Knoleworth the previous night.

Siddle came in but the latter was not so free as when the habitues had the place to themselves.

Now, Peters had marked the gathering as one that suited his purpose exactly, so he gave the conversation the right twist.

"I suppose you local gentlemen have been greatly disturbed by this sensational murder?" he said.

Hobbs took refuge in a glass of beer. Siddle gazed contemplatively at his neat boots. Tomlin meant to say something; Elkin, eying the stranger, and summing him us as a detective, answered brusquely:

"The murder is bad enough, but the fat-headed police are worse. Three days gone, and nothing done!"

"What murder are you discussing may I ask?" put in Franklin.

Peters turned on him with astonishment in every line of a peculiarly mobile face.

"Do you mean to say, sir, that you have not heard of the Steynholme murder?" he gasped.

"I seldom, if ever, read such things in the newspapers, and as I landed in England only a week ago from France my ignorance, though abyssmal, is pardonable. Moreover, I can say truly that I am far more interested in pedigree horses than in vulgar criminals."

Peters explained fluently. This was no ordinary crime. A beautiful and popular actress had been done to death in a brutal way, and the country was already deeply stirred by the story.

Elkin waited impatiently till the journalist drew breath. Then he broke in.

"Pedigree horses you mentioned, sir," he said, his rancor against Grant being momentarily conquered by the pertinent allusion to his own business. "What sort? Racing, coaching, roadsters or hacks?"

"All sorts. The Argentine, where I have connections, offers an ever-open door to good horseflesh."

"Are you having a look round?"

"Yes. There are several decent studs within driving distance of Steynholme. Isn't that so, landlord?"

"Lots, sir," said Tomlin. "An' the very man you are talkin' to has some stuff not to be sneezed at."

"Is that so?" Mr. Franklin gazed at Elkin in a very friendly manner. "May I ask your name, sir?"

Elkin produced a card. Every hoof in his stables appreciated in value forthwith, but he was far too knowing that he should appear to rush matters.

"Call any day you like, sir," he said. "Glad to see you. But give me notice. I generally have an appetiser here of a morning about eleven."

"An' you want it, too, Fred," said Hobbs. "Dash me, you're as thin as a herrin'. Stop whiskey an' drink beer, like me."

"And you might also follow that gentleman's example," interposed Siddle quietly, nodding towards Mr. Franklin.

"What's that?" snapped Elkin.

"Don't worry about murders."

"That's a nice thing to say. Why should I worry about the d——d mix-up?"

The chemist made no reply, but Hobbs stepped into the breach valiantly.

"Keep yer 'air on, Fred," he vociferated. "Siddle means no 'arm. But wot else are yer a-doin' of mornin', noon, an' night?"

Elkin laughed with his queer croak.

"If you stay here a day or two, you'll soon get to know what they're driving at, sir," he said to Franklin. "The fact is that this chap, Grant, who found the body, and in whose garden the murder was committed, has been making eyes at the girl I'm as good as engaged to. That would make anybody wild—now, wouldn't it?"

"Possibly," smiled Franklin. "Of course there is always the lady's point of view. The sex is proverbially fickle, you know. 'Woman, thy vows are traced in sand,' Lord Byron has it."

"Ay, an' some men's, too," guffawed Hobbs. "Wot about Peggy Smith, Fred?"

Elkin blew a mouthful of cigarette smoke at the butcher.

What about that tough old bull you bought at Knoleworth on Monday?" he retorted.

Hobbs's face grew purple. Mr. Franklin beckoned to Tomlin.

"Ask these gentlemen what they'll have," he said gently. The landlord made a clatter of glasses and the threatened storm passed.

"You've aroused my curiosity," remarked Franklin to Peters, but taking the company at large into the conversation. "This does certainly strike one as a remarkable case. Is there is no suspicion yet as to the actual murderer?"

"None whatever," said Peters.

"That's what you may call the police opinion," broke in Elkin. "We Steynholme folk have a pretty clear notion, I can assure you."

"The matter is still sub judice, and may remain so a long time," said Siddle. "It is simply stupid to attack a kind of responsibility to the man who happens to occupy the house associated with the crime. I have no patience with that kind of reasoning."

Hobbs, who did not want to quarrel with Elkin, suddenly championed him.

"That's all very well," he rumbled. "But the evidence you an' me 'eard Siddle, an' the evidence we know we're goin' to 'ear, is a lot stronger than that."

"I'm sure you will pardon me, friends," said Siddle, rising with an apologetic smile, "but I happen to be foreman of the coroner's jury and I feel that this matter is not for me, at any rate, to discuss publicly."

Out he went, not even heeding Tomlin's appeal to drink the ginger-ale he had just ordered.

"Just like him," sighed Hobbs. "A good-hearted fellow! Would find hexcuses for a black rat."

Elkin talked more freely now that the chemist's disapproving eye was off him. Ultimately, Mr. Franklin elected to smoke a cigar in the open air and strolled forth. He sauntered down the hill, stood on the bridge, and admired the soft blue tones of the landscape in the half light of a summer evening. Shortly before closing time, Robinson appeared, it being part of his routine duty to see that no noisy revelers disturbed the peace of the village. He noticed the stranger at once and elected to walk past him.

Thus, he received yet another shock when Mr. Franklin addressed him by name.

"Good evening, Robinson," said the pleasant, clear-toned voice. "I've been expecting you to turn up. Kindly go back home, and leave the door open. I want to slip in quietly. I am Chief Inspector Winter of Scotland Yard."

"You don't say so, sir!" stammered Robinson.

"But I do say it, and will prove it to you, of course. I'll be with you in a minute or two. There's someone coming. You and I must not be seen together."

Robinson made off, and Winter lounged along the Knoleworth Road. He met Bates, going to the post with letters.

Naturally, Bates looked him over. Returning from the Post Office he kept a sharp eye for the unknown loiterer, but saw him no more. He even walked quietly to the bend of the road, but the other man had vanished.

Grant and Hart were talking of anything but the murder when Bates thrust his head in. He was grasping his goatee beard, sure sign of some weight on his mind.

"Beg pardon," he said, "but I thought you'd like to know. The place is just swarmin' with 'em."

"Beer?" inquired Hart.

Bates stared fixedly at the speaker for a second or two.

"No, sir, 'tecs," he said. "There's a big 'un now—just the oppo-site to the little 'un, Hawkshaw. I 'ope I 'aven't to tackle this customer, though. He'd gimme a doin', by the looks of 'im."

Bates had disappeared before Grant remembered that the press photographer had mentioned the Big 'Un and the Little 'Un of the Yard.

"Now, I wonder," he said.

His wonder could hardly have equalled Winter's had he heard the gardener's words. The guess was a distinct score for blunt Sussex, although it was founded solely on the assumption that all comers now, unless Bates was personally acquainted with them, were limbs of the law.

Waking the Sleepers.

In a diary kept in 1646 it is asserted that "Allen Brydges has been chose to wake the sleepers in meeting and, being much proud of his place, must needs have a fox tails fixed to the end of a long staffe, wherewith he may brush the faces of them that will have naps in time of discourse." This energetic individual was likewise armed with "a sharpe theme" for the benefit of those who "be most soundie." There is a record of the use of this implement upon Mr. Tompkins, who was sleeping comfortably in the corner of his pew when Allen "thrust his staff behind Dame Ballard to give him a grievous prick upon the hand, whereupon Mr. Tomkins did spring much above the floor and with terrible force did strike his head against the wall and also to the great wonder of all beholders' amazed in a loud voice, 'Then the woodchuck!' he dreaming, as it seemed, that a woodchuck had gnawed him, and bit his hand."

What "Amen" Means.

Amen is a Hebrew word signifying yea, truly. In British synagogues the amen is pronounced by the congregation at the conclusion of the benediction. Among the early Christians the prayer offered by the presbyter was concluded by the word "amen," uttered by the congregation. Justin Martyr is the earliest of the fathers who alludes to the use of the word. At the conclusion of a prayer in addition, according to the English church catechism, "so be it;" after the repetition of the creed, "so it is."

An advertisement by The Bell Telephone Co. to improve two-party line service.

Do not lift the receiver before the ring is finished

Sometimes a subscriber on a two-party line, when called to the telephone, lifts his receiver off the hook before the bell has stopped ringing.

This causes the telephone of the other party on the line to ring also, disturbing him unnecessarily.

For example: when Mr. Brown asks for the number of Mr. Jones on a two-party line, the operator rings only Mr. Jones' telephone. But if Mr. Jones lifts his receiver before the ring is completed, it permits the current to pass to the other side of the line and ring the telephone of Mr. Grey.

You can make two-party line service more satisfactory by lifting the receiver only when the bell has stopped ringing.

CADDIES OF THE LINKS.

Their Originals Were Messenger Boys in Old Edinburgh.

Originally the caddy of the present day golf links appears to have been quite another individual, engaged in another line of activity. Caddies in the remote past were messenger boys in old Edinburgh. Gathered around the famous Edinburgh cross, where all important messages were read and many public ceremonies were held—the cross which was the very center of the old city—the caddies in their ragged clothes waited to be employed.

The chief merchants of the city, the leading official persons, the men of learning and of talent, the nobles, the lairds, the clergymen—all clustered about the cross during certain hours of the day, and very often some one wished to send a parcel or message to another part of the town, or a stranger to Edinburgh wanted to be directed.

Here was where the caddies were appealed to. These boys might be trusted with any duty with which they were charged. They were veritable street directories. A visitor to the town would often engage a caddie to be wholly at his bidding, as the boy's knowledge of the place was invaluable.

But, unless this visitor were most cautious, he would suddenly discover that his caddie, in addition to his vast knowledge of Edinburgh, knew also all about his employer—where he came from, what was his business in Edinburgh, his family connections, his tastes and preferences.—Exchange.

LIVING AEROPLANES.

Wherein Birds Differ From Flying Machines Made by Man.

It would be a mistake to suppose that the bird's wings enable it to fly. If wings applied flying any of us could attach a pair and soar into the air.

The hollow bones of the birds make light bodies, but they are attached to a rigid backbone, which forms the main feature of the bird's body. This gives the central framework, and the muscles do the rest. The wings balance their owners, and the tail acts as a rudder for steering. Often enough the bird seems to use its tail as a sort of brake.

It is interesting to compare the bird with the product of man's skill—the aeroplane. To begin with, there is no aeroplane made which copies the up and down motion of the bird's wings, all our machines having fixed wings, or planes.

But naturally man tried to copy the living fliers around him. He made wings of feathers, etc., connected them with his shoulders and legs and found that his muscles could not raise him an inch.

The muscles, or motors, which now drive him through the air are as strong as 200 horses, so no wonder he failed at first. Even the bird, with a body so perfectly formed for flight, has flying muscles equal in weight to all its other muscles put together.—Pearson's Weekly.

Dean Swift and the Cook.

There is a good story about Dean Swift apropos of the value of never overlooking anything. The dean's cook one day overroasted the leg of mutton for dinner, and in consequence she was summoned to the dining room. "Cook," said the dean in a pleasant voice, "this leg of mutton is overdone. Take it back and do it less."

"Impossible, your reverence!" exclaimed the cook.

"Well," replied her master, "supposing it had been underdone, you could easily have done it more."

"Certainly, your reverence."

"Then," said the dean, "let this be a lesson to you. If you commit a fault always take care that it is a fault which will admit of a remedy."

WHEN COTTON BALES BURN.

Firemen Always Dread That Type of Warehouse Conflagration.

A type of fire that the firemen dread a great deal is a blaze in a cotton ware house. These fires generate an immense amount of dense, suffocating smoke and because of this fact have to be fought almost exclusively from the outside of the building. The smoke is of too dangerous a character to allow the men to remain any length of time inside. Therefore the fire fighting has to be done entirely from the outside, by pouring great streams of water through the windows and doorways until it is finally "drowned out."

There is an added danger at fires of this type that is not generally known. The cotton bales are packed so closely in these buildings, with practically no space between them, and such an enormous amount of water must be used to extinguish the fire, that the cotton absorbs the water and begins to swell. And the "swelling" or expansion of the cotton has been sufficient in a number of cases to force out the walls of the building, causing the structure to tumble into the street and within a short time after the outbreak of the fire.

This was the case at a fire in a cotton warehouse in South Brooklyn several years ago. Within three-quarters of an hour after this fire started, although it was in a substantial looking stone building, the walls suddenly bulged out and crashed into the street, and a number of firemen working near by narrowly escaped being killed.—Charles T. Hill in St. Nicholas.

Seniors Ships Mark His Grave.

There are many monuments to the "father of the British navy," Sir Francis Drake, throughout the world, but his "tomb" is in the great deep upon which he made his everlasting fame. He died Jan. 28, 1595, in his ship the Defiance, near the town of Nombre de Dios, West Indies, and in a leaden coffin his body was lowered into the waves some six miles from shore. As a last honor to him two of his ships, with all the prizes that were in the fleet at the time, were sunk beside his casket. At the time of his death the great admiral was in his fiftieth year and in the prime of his physical and intellectual powers. Since his death the British navy has never been without a ship bearing his name.—Exchange.

Classifying Him.

A gentleman who dined regularly at a certain restaurant often ordered a dozen clams. One day he counted them and found but eleven. Still another day the dozen was one short. He called the waiter and asked him, "Why do you give only eleven clams when I order twelve?"

"Oh, sir," replied the waiter, "I didn't think you'd want to be sitting thirteen at table, sir."—Christian Herald.

For Testing Gold.

The acid used by jewelers for testing gold is extremely powerful and has to be very carefully handled. To prevent any considerable quantity of the acid being spilled a specially constructed bottle is employed. The stopper of this is made of glass and contains a long pointed glass rod which passes down the center of the bottle. When an article of jewelry is to be tested the stopper is simply removed, and the article is touched with the point of the glass rod, to which a very slight quantity of acid has adhered. Gold is not affected by the acid, but imitation metal turns green.

Young Men "Horse Shy."

The discovery is being made that many young men who have reached manhood in the last ten years do not know how to harness and attach the horse to the buggy, crank the buggy, step on the horse starter, engage the clutch and get across the country under one horsepower.—Minneapolis Journal.

Known by Their Fruits.

"No," replied his mother gravely, "by the bite."—Philadelphia Ledger.

What Won't They Say?

"Did he tell you that you are the only girl he has ever loved?"

"Yes, and he went further than that."

"He did? What else did he say?"

"He said that I was also the only girl he ever intended to love."—Detroit Free Press.

THE HOUSE AND GROUNDS

The Art of Drying and Canning

"I HAVE no luck with putting up things," objected a young married woman who was being urged to take care of the fruits of her garden. "I do not know why it is, but so many things spoil for me."

This is a complaint that few women will be justified in making this year, for there are agencies everywhere enunciating the principles upon which all canning and preserving depend and willing to give practical instruction and direction. In general, canned foods spoil because bacteria or micro-organisms are put up alive with the food and gradually extend their colonies of descendants. Therefore, if you can seal food in jars and then by some process kill the germs inside of the jars the food will keep. The process by which this killing is done is called sterilization.

These germs can be killed by heat. Careful laboratory studies have developed the amount of heat necessary for sterilization and the length of time for which the jars of food should be kept at the given temperature. The heat of live steam or of boiling water is sufficient to kill these organisms, and this heat does not have to be maintained for very long intervals. Instead of the hours of cooking in the old fashioned way of canning jars may be sterilized in most cases in a few minutes.

There are several methods of sterilization, many of them requiring more or less expensive equipments. The best of all, because it is the simplest and the cheapest and because it can be done with implements in every kitchen, is known as the cold pack canning method. It is the method taught in most domestic science schools and by various departments of agriculture and State universities.

The cold pack method of canning is so simple and the instructions so easily followed that the women of the country are taking up the work by the thousands, says the National Emergency Food Garden Commission.

In the cold pack method these are the steps:—

1. Select sound vegetables and fruits. If possible can them the same day they are picked. Wash, clean and prepare them.

2. Have ready, on the stove, a can or pail of boiling water.

3. Place the vegetables or fruits in cheesecloth or in some other porous receptacle—a wire basket is excellent—for dipping and blanching them in boiling water.

4. Put them whole into the boiling water. After the water begins to boil begin to count the blanching time.

5. The blanching time varies from one to twenty minutes, according to the vegetable or fruit. When the blanching is complete remove the vegetables or fruits from the boiling water and plunge them a number of times into cold water, to harden the pulp and check the flow of coloring matter. Do not allow to stand in cold water.

6. The containers should be thoroughly clean. It is not necessary to sterilize them in steam or boiling water before filling them, for the reason that in the cold pack process both the insides of containers and the contents are sterilized. The jars should be heated before the cold product is put in them.

7. Pack the product into the containers, leaving about a quarter of an inch of space at the top.

8. With vegetables add one level teaspoonful of salt to each quart container and fill with boiling water. With fruits use syrups.

9. With glass jars always use a new rubber. Test the rubber by stretching or turning inside out. Fit on the rubber and put the lid in place. If the container has a screw twist it up as hard as possible, but use only the thumb and little finger in tightening it. This makes it possible for steam generated within to escape and prevents breakage. If a glass top jar is used snap the top bail only, leaving the lower bail loose during sterilization. Tin cans should be completely sealed.

10. Place the filled and capped containers on the rack in the steriliser. If the home made or commercial hot water bath outfit is used some authorities insist that enough water should be in the boiler to come at least one inch above the tops of the containers, and that the water, in boiling out, should never be allowed to drop to the level of these tops. Begin to count processing time when the water begins to boil.

11. At the end of the sterilising period remove the containers from the steriliser. Fasten covers on tightly at once, tip each container over to test for leakage, and store. Be sure that no draught is allowed to blow on glass jars, as it may cause breaking.

12. If jars are to be stored where there is strong light wrap them in paper, preferably brown, as light will fade the color of products canned in glass jars, and sometimes deteriorate the food value.

Vegetables are blanched before being put up for three purposes—to eliminate objectionable acids, to set coloring matter and to make texture firm for sterilization.

The object of the cold dip is to separate the skin and harden the pulp, to set color bodies and to render packing easier.

Drying is one of the easiest and most economical methods of preserving food.

These recipes are recommended by the United States government:—

TOMATOES.

Grade according to ripeness, size and quality. Scald to loosen the skins. Dip in cold water and remove the skins. Pack whole. Fill with tomatoes only and add one level teaspoonful of salt to each quart. Place the rubber and partly seal. Sterilize twenty-two minutes in the hot water bath. Remove the jars, tighten the covers, test the joints and invert to cool.

CARROTS, PARSNIPS, SWEET POTATOES, &C.

Scald from one to five minutes in boiling water. Plunge in cold water. Remove skins; pack whole or sliced; add boiling water and one level teaspoonful salt to each quart. Place rubber and top, then partly tighten. Leave one and one-half hours in hot water bath.

EGG PLANT.

Scald five minutes in boiling salty water; plunge in cold water; remove skin. Slice crosswise and pack; add boiling water and one level teaspoonful of salt to each pint. Place rubber and top, then partly tighten. Leave one hour in hot water bath. Remove jars, tighten covers and invert to cool.

SWEET CORN—ON THE COB.

Blanch in boiling water ten to fifteen minutes, according to ripeness, size and freshness; plunge in cold water. Pack, alternating butts and tips; add just a little boiling water and one level teaspoonful of salt to each quart. Place rubber and top and partly tighten. Sterilize one and a half hours water-seal outfit. Remove jars, tighten covers, invert and cool. (Heat up for table use in steamer, not in water.)

SWEET CORN OFF THE COB.

Same as the foregoing recipe, except cut from ear after blanching. Pack and fill jars with boiling water, adding one level teaspoonful salt to each pint. Proceed as before.

PEAS, BEANS, OKRA, &C.

Blanch five to ten minutes in boiling water; plunge in cold water. Pack and add boiling water and one level teaspoonful salt to each pint. Place rubber and top, then partly tighten top. Process 1½ hours in hot water bath.

BEETS, TURNIPS, &C.

Blanch one to ten minutes in boiling water; plunge in cold water, remove skins. Slice and pack; add boiling water and one level teaspoonful salt for each pint. Place rubber and top and partly tighten. Process one and one-half hours in hot water bath. Remove jars, tighten covers and invert to cool.

GREENS.

(Spinach, Dandelions, Mustard, Beet Tops, Swiss Chard).

Blanch in boiling water ten to twenty minutes, plunge in cold water. Cut ready for table use. Season with slice of bacon for each pint. Pack, add hot water and a little salt to each quart. Place rubber and top and partly tighten. Process ninety minutes in hot water bath. Remove, tighten covers and invert to cool. It is always advisable to process the greens a short time before packing in order to reduce the bulk or make possible a full pack.

Great results are expected from the dehydrating processes, which have been much improved and are being made use of more extensively this year than ever before. One of the kind which may be used in private houses is in daily operation at the depot in Hicksville, L. I. Here, on three days of the week, garden and farm products are preserved, under competent instructors and will be stored and sold under the direction of the Long Island Food Battalion. On the other three week days the kitchen is open to women of the district who wish to preserve their own fruit and vegetables.

All kinds of vegetables may be dried. They must be washed and, those that require it, peeled and sliced. Modern drying is not the tedious process that it was in other times. Small quantities can be sufficiently dried in from two to four hours, according to the degree of succulence. They not only retain their flavor but much of their color, and have all the value of fresh vegetables. Not only is there a great saving of money in preserving fruits and vegetables in this way, but they require less room for storage and will keep almost indefinitely.

Women bring their garden surplus to be canned.

Difficulties of Catering for the Small Family

IT is proportionately harder to manage a small menage economically than a large one. The woman who has to cater for two or three or four will deserve great credit if she can keep down expenses and yet serve good meals.

There are difficulties in buying and in making over. Every new housewife finds it out. It is not possible to buy in large quantities for a small family—at least there is unlikely to be economy in it. When one buys in small quantities the grocer or the butcher has to add a little to the price. Perishable foods have to be cared for most carefully to make them keep. It is not easy to find a way of utilizing what is left of many fresh vegetables.

There is the simple matter of a head of lettuce. Often the outer leaves are torn and a bit coarse, yet it is a pity to consign them to the garbage can. Handle them carefully and place them in the salad bowl under the white leaves. If they are fresh they will taste better than they look. What is left of the lettuce should be wrapped in a cloth and put in the refrigerator. If any part of the lettuce is too wilted or too untidy looking for a salad use it for cream of lettuce soup.

If you are raising lettuce this year and do not have nice, compact heads, cook such lettuce as you have as you do spinach. It is used this way in France a great deal and is well worth trying. A touch of onion improves it, in the opinion of some persons.

No portion of meat should be wasted in these days of high prices and great need. One of the most difficult things for the small family to enjoy economically is a beefsteak. It is fast becoming a luxury, but it is wonderful how well one can get on without expensive cuts of meat. However, a small steak is very appetizing now and then. What is known in some markets as a Delmonico steak is perhaps the best cut for a small family. It is like a small porterhouse without the tenderloin. Like the porterhouse, it has considerable waste. If you have an old fashioned stock pot the bone and trimmings can go into that, but the average small family, especially one that lives in an apartment, has nothing of the kind. In that case save every particle that is left from the meat, put it on in cold water and simmer gently until all the strength is extracted. Salt and put away to cool, then skim and use for soup, flavoring as desired.

Roasts are another thing that the woman who has only a small family to cook for considers an extravagance and likely to entail waste. One roast a week, however, can be used to advantage in a small family. Usually one will want it for the Sunday dinner. The next day it can be served cold, and if any one takes a luncheon it comes in well for sandwiches for several days. The third day it can be warmed up, a good gravy made and vegetables added. If there is any left for a fourth day, and if there is good management there will be, and maybe enough for a fifth, it may be converted into a pie or home made, well seasoned hash, than which there are few more satisfactory dishes. If the roast is chicken or lamb, bits of it may be used for salad. Croquettes, with any one of half a dozen sauces, will utilize parts of the left over roast either for luncheon or dinner. Ingenuity will keep the roast from being expensive or tiresome.

The housekeeper of limited family and income should learn the value of the cheaper cuts of meat. They are used as the basis for some of the most attractive dishes in the high priced hotels and restaurants. The secret is in their preparation. Cheap cuts are usually tough, but of good flavor. The object in cooking them is to conserve their flavor and to reduce the toughness. This is best accomplished by slow cooking for a long time. Never salt the meat when it is put on to cook. Meat should be covered tightly. Use only as much water as will be needed to bring out the juices and keep it from burning. Meat of this kind may be simmered gently on top of the stove or cooked in a casserole or covered roasting pan in the oven. Vegetables of many kinds may be cooked with inexpensive meat and served with it, making an economy of preparation and serving. Onions, carrots, turnips, peppers and tomatoes may be used in any combination desired.

The writer has made a cheap but satisfying dish with a pound of beef cut from the round into small pieces, pouring boiling water over it and letting it to simmer with a few onions and carrots cut in slices. Just before serving salt and pepper are added and the liquid thickened to make a thin gravy. With potatoes or rice this makes an excellent meal. If there is rice left over add a beaten egg and a little milk and fry in delicate brown cakes the next day for luncheon.

"What shall I do with left over fish?" inquires a young housewife. "We never eat it all at the first serving and it is so smelly to cook the next day, and then it is never very nice."

Cream the fish, put in a baking dish, spread over the top some well beaten mashed potatoes and put in the oven to brown. This will not have the effect of a warmed over dish. Many kinds of fish may be used with a few lettuce leaves and a mayonnaise dressing for salad.

Dishes that are substantial enough to take the place of meat are much in demand in these times. Rice, tomatoes and cheese may be combined for this purpose. Fresh or canned tomatoes may be used. Use half a cup of rice to a can of tomatoes or the equivalent in fresh ones. Put in a deep baking dish a layer of tomatoes, a layer of rice and one of grated cheese and continue until the dish is half full, adding salt and pepper. This should cook from one and a half to two hours, adding a little water from time to time if it seems necessary.

Stuffed onions, peppers, egg plant or cabbage may be substituted for a meat dish. The stuffing may be made of various materials, with bread crumbs predominating. A little meat of any kind that one may happen to have on hand may be utilized for this purpose.

The Italians have many excellent methods of using rice and cheese, making substantial and appetising dishes. One of these is called timballo of rice. Boil a cup of rice in five cups of salted water for twenty minutes. Drain and stir in a scant tablespoonful of butter and two of grated cheese. Then butter the inside of a baking dish. Put in a layer of bread crumbs and then the greater part of the rice, making a hole in the centre for a meat sauce and cover the whole with rice. Bake for about twenty minutes, or until well browned on the top, and serve hot.

A green corn pudding is a delicious luncheon dish. For a small family cut the corn from three ears, add a beaten egg, a quarter of a cup of milk, a bit of butter and salt and pepper. Some persons like a small amount of sugar. Stir all the ingredients together and bake in an earthen pudding dish for an hour and a quarter. Green corn may also be used for an omelet.

Onions stuffed with cheese find favor with many persons who have tried the recipe. Boil large Spanish onions for a few minutes. Then remove and take out the centre, filling in a mixture of bread crumbs, minced ham and grated cheese. Put a small piece of butter on each onion and bake in a pan in which there is about an inch of stock or gravy for about an hour, basting frequently.

Women are finding that the wheel hoe and cultivator is as much of a labor saving device in the garden as the vacuum cleaner is in the home. They not only do the work more thoroughly than the hand hoe, but they save much weariness of spirit and lameness of back. The women at the Farmingdale Agricultural College use them and they are becoming necessarily a part of the equipment of every amateur gardener.

Why Don't You Try It, Mr. City Man?

A CITY man with a taste for a bit of a place in the country searched until he found something with possibilities and adapted to his purse. It was a neglected house with about three-quarters of an acre of rough land in a pleasant hamlet. There were a few good trees, a tall lilac bush and in the rear a limpid brook. The price was $300.

It did not seem like much, but neither did the house. Indeed, the cynical opinion of the neighborhood was that he had been "stung." But this man knew what he wanted, and chiefly he wanted to have a good time fixing up his little place. He began with the cellar. The foundations were good; he made them better. He put in a good floor in the cellar and he put in windows, each with a recess of masonry and with glass which could be lifted or lowered according to the need for air. He could use these spaces for flowers if he desired.

The main lines of the house were left as they were. The front door toward the street was closed and an entrance arranged at the side. The porch on this side was enclosed in glass, chiefly to afford better protection from the north winds. Inside, the cramped hall was enlarged and the awkward stairway rightly placed. Two small rooms in front became one generous living room. The dining room has a great fireplace and oven as a distinguishing feature, and on one side of this was built a long low seat against broad windows. One steps from the dining room on to a glass screened porch, which is really a summer living room.

Upstairs the awkward arrangement of rooms in the old farmhouse style made way to bedrooms, each with a dressing room in which was built a commodious wardrobe. There are not so many bedrooms, but they are not needed, and it is better to have a few of good size. Casement windows were put in for the sake of better air, as well as for their pleasing appearance.

Outside the disorder has given way to a well kept lawn, a neat drive, shrubbery, which is constantly being added to, along the brook and boundaries, and a simple fence over which honeysuckles and roses climb, making a delightful screen from the road.

The transformation has cost about $2,000 and there is still much to be done, but the owner has a home into which he has put his individuality. Here he has gathered his ancestral furniture and collected treasures, and they all fit as if the house had been made for them, as, indeed, it was, or, at least, remade.

100,000 REPUBLICS IN RUSSIA, HE SAYS

LONDON, June 7.—"The Russian Revolution and the War," by Dr. Charles Sarolea (London, George Allen and Unwin, 1917), contains the lectures and articles on the Russian revolution, written by one who foretold it, as also the present war in a previous volume, "The Anglo-German Problem," which has received wide recognition, both in England and America.

According to Dr. Sarolea, the causes as well as the nature of the Russian revolution, which he considers to be the most important ethical upheaval in the world since the French revolution, are as yet little understood. For instance, how few of us are cognizant of the fact that the Russian Empire was in reality a federation of 100,000 peasant republics, which, as such, have had a long, practical experience of local self-government? Thus the present volume is well calculated to enlighten the public, for there can be few authorities living who possess a greater familiarity with the subject than the scholarly professor of romance literature of the University of Edinburgh, who has done so much to vetnilate the wrongs of his native country both in England and America.

Dr. Sarolea embodies the view that although many difficulties remain to be overcome, for the revolution is only in the first stage of its development, it is destined to be victorious, and its outcome the rise of the Slav as a counter-balancing force to Teuton pretensions and the downfall of autocracy in Europe.

M. Harris, publisher of a paper at Mounds, Ill., is not very optimistic if we may judge by a want ad he had inserted in a trade paper. His ad follows: "Wanted—A printer to take entire charge of my weekly paper while I go to war. Job may be permanent."

HOME DEFENCE

The safeguarding of your home and all it means to you is not a matter of armies and ships alone. The comfort and happiness of your family are exposed to the attacks of enemies much nearer to them than the marauding Huns of Central Europe.

What will become of your home and your wife and your children, if you be suddenly stricken down as thousands of others have been?

Will there be any bulwark of defence to keep the home and the family from destruction?

You can most easily provide such a line of defence by means of a life assurance policy. Home Defence is its purpose and it fulfills that purpose as nothing else can.

CANADIAN WALKEMS BECAME HERO FAMILY

How the Descendants of One Irish Officer of Engineers Made Good in the Great War

A family whose far-flung representatives are to be found scattered among the Seven Seas of the Empire, from England to Montreal, from Vancouver to Tasmania and whose origins, military in the first place, have run true to form by being military again in the Great War, is the family of the Walkems of Canada. Originally from Ireland the great grandfather, Major Walkem of the Engineers, came to the Dominion in connection with the boundary delimitations under the Ashburnham Treaty, and his son settled in the West and was later called to the Premiership of British Columbia. Various other of the Major's sons made their homes in other provinces of the Dominion while others again went as far south as Tasmania. Wherever they went they conserved a warm and patriotic feeling for the Motherland and imparted it to their descendants. So when her call sounded they gave up civilian life and answered her cry, some of them even to death, several to their grievous hurt.

Left Their Professions

Among these were Captain George A. Walkem of the Royal Engineers, Imperial Army, fighting in Egypt. A civil engineer who had graduated at McGill, he was offered a commission as second lieutenant with the Imperial forces and within three months after the appointment was made a captain. In private life he was head of the Vancouver Engineering works. Major Hugh C. Walkem went out with the 42nd Highlanders in 1915. He was through the second Battle of Ypres where he had some hair-breadth escapes, being buried three times by exploding shells and was at last wounded in the chin by shrapnel. In civilian life he was well known in the insurance world.

Sapper W. R. W. Walkem went out with the First Contingent, being with the Princess Patricias. Later he exchanged into the Engineers and was killed at Vimy Ridge. He was not much more than twenty years old. He had only just returned to the front, having been invalided home with muscular rheumatism, rejoining his regiment a few days before his death. Lieutenant Harry C. C. Walkem of the 9th Field Company, Royal Engineers, distinguished himself in the daylight raid at Monchy and was awarded the Military Cross. Later he was severely wounded and his life for a time was despaired of, but he recovered.

Niven of Patricias

Major Hugh Niven of the Princess Patricias, cousin, had perhaps the most remarkable career of any Canadian soldier. He joined the Pats as a private and at one time when that famous regiment had practically lost all its officers was temporarily in command of it. He has been repeatedly mentioned in despatches and has thoroughly earned his majority by hard fighting and every sort of risk a soldier can run. There were also two first cousins who, living in Tasmania, were also out fighting for the Empire. As a record of a fighting family, this statement of facts needs no comment. It speaks for itself.

HOW REDMOND DIED

Irish soldiers from the north and south of Ireland who went over the top with Major Willie Redmond, arriving in London, spoke with deep feeling of the loss of their leader, who was loved by his men. One young officer says that Major Redmond exhibited the dash and exuberance of a schoolboy on the morning of his death. "He was as high spirited and irrepressible as ever," he said. "He had a joke and a smile for every man. As we flew over the parapets with a shout of 'Uu, County Clare!' Major Willie showed a clean pair of heels toward the German trenches. There was a hurricane of shells, and one exploded almost beside him. He fell, but we went on and carried our objective."

"COMPREE" FROM FRANCE

Useful New Words brought Home by British Soldiers

After the war many French phrases will be brought across the Channel by home-coming soldiers, says an Englishman, and their constant use in every-day life will no doubt add words to the British dictionary. Unquestionably, the expression most likely to be adopted is "Compree," spelt in French Compris, and meaning "Do you understand?" The soldier in France, especially anyone engaged in the auxiliary services, and meeting French civilians, utters it every day. The infantryman, too, when back in rest-billets, finds its employment necessary. His limited knowledge of the French language does not permit him to make his meaning always clear to monsieur or madame when inquiring the way, or purchasing articles in a shop, and therefore he generally concludes his halting speech with "Compree?" So readily does the word come to his lips that when he makes a statement in his native tongue to a comrade born and bred in his own native town, he often winds up with the eternal "Compree?"

Hairdresser Exempted

At the Folkestone Tribunal when a hairdresser applied for exemption, the military representative said he could not ask for the man when a German was allowed to carry on business in the town.

Veteran Railroad Men

On Didcot platform were three porters who worked for the Great Western Railway for 40, 41, and 48 years, and having retired before the war, filled the places of men joined up.

Many Fallen Scholars

A memorial service to 300 old City of London School boys, fallen in the war, held at the Temple Church, was attended by 700 scholars, 336 of whom were in uniform.

Bathing suits are made of soft rubber.

The small, snug hat always holds its own.

HOW TO MARK LINEN

The monogram is the most elegant form for marking linen, but the simple initial is perfectly correct. The same initial or monogram should be used on all household linen, only varied in size according to the sizes of the articles to be marked. The letters on sheets, pillow cases and table cloths are usually three inches in height; for towels and dinner napkins two or two and one-half inches high and one or one and one-half inches high for small luncheon and breakfast napkins.

Perforated patterns for marking can usually be found at fancy-work shops, which enable the worker to stamp her own linen accurately, which is essential to good embroidery work. The size of the thread must be governed by the quality of the material to which it is to be applied but one rule obtains, namely that it is better to use thread a little fine than too coarse, for the latter is sure to look humpish on a fine ground even though skillfully handled. Always stretch the stamped linen in an embroidery hoop before beginning work.

Sheets are stamped exactly in the middle of the top end, about two or three inches from the hem, with the top of the letter toward the middle of the sheet, so that the letter reads correctly when the sheet is turned back. Pillow cases are also marked in the same manner, with letters two inches above the hem, the lower end of letters nearest the hem. The letters on towels should be in the same relative position, except when the end is ornamented with drawn work; then, of course, the embroidery should be above it regardless of measurements. Pillow shams are marked directly in the centre. On tablecloths place the letters, top upwards, either bias or straight with the corner and eight inches from the edge; on the napkins in the same way, with letters two and one-half inches from the edge.

Finger Tug-of-War Game

Considerable pleasure and pastime is afforded by this tug-of-war game. Two contestants, one at each end, take hold of the rollers with their forefingers and thumbs and endeavor to move the pointer to their respective ends.

The Contestants Grasp the Rollers, One at Each End, and Attempt to Draw the Pointer Over in Their Favor

The device should be made strongly to stand the wear on it. The top and bottom are boards, ½ by 8 by 24 in., and four blocks, 3 in. high and 2½ in. square, are fastened between them at the corners with screws. The rollers are set in the blocks, and held by small nails passing through them and set against the inner faces of the blocks. The pointer is made of a strip of brass, bent to the shape shown. Cords extend from the pointer inside of the box and are tied to the rollers. —From Popular Mechanics.

Using Food Scraps

Never throw away any articles of food left over, as that is where most waste occurs. If you have a spoonful of yesterday's baked rice left, add to it three well-beaten eggs, a teaspoon of flour, a cup of milk, salt and half a cup more of boiled rice. If the rice yesterday tasted so good that there is none left, use a tablespoon of plain boiled rice. Turn all into a well greased frying pan and, when brown, fold and serve very hot.

For Itching Skin

Sponge the body once daily after bathing, with the following lotion: Hot water, one pint; borax, one ounce; alum, one ounce.

You must be very careful of your diet, refusing greasy, rich foods; take plenty of exercise, a tepid bath with a good rubbing afterwards. Use prepared almond meal in place of soap and this astringent complexion wash.

Butter Scotch

One cupful of molasses, one cupful of white sugar, a half cupful of butter and a half cupful of water. Cook over a slow fire until it hardens, when a little is dropped in water; then stir in a scant half teaspoonful of bicarbonate of soda, turn into shallow buttered pans; cut into small squares before it is too cold.

Raisin Creams

Mix a cupful of English walnut meat, chopped, a teaspoonful of vanilla, a pinch of salt, a cupful of chopped and seeded raisins and two pounds of confectioner's sugar. Mix to a stiff paste with cream and roll on a sugared board in a layer half an inch thick. Cut in squares.

Creamed Cucumbers

Pare two cucumbers and cut lengthwise. Boil twenty minutes, add two cups of milk and a tablespoon of dissolved flour. Boil one minute and add a piece of butter and some pepper and salt.

Core apples before paring; they are less likely to break. Apples should be pared narrow and thin. A broad paring causes much waste because of the resulting surface of the apple.

A basin of water placed close to the bed is a great relief for insomnia. It is also a great germ catcher and purifier.

Salt, thrown a coal fire which is low will revive it.

JOHN MUIR AND HIS BREAD.

The Famous Naturalist Lived the Real Simple Life.

The naturalist and explorer, John Muir, was a curiously simple man—as simple in his tastes and appetites as in his views of life and conduct. On his trips through the Sierras he never carried a gun and never killed game, nor did he catch fish.

He lived almost exclusively on plain dry bread. "There is no waste in it," he used to say. "Every particle is of value. I also take along a small package of tea and a little tin cup in a stout canvas bag. I can sustain my strength on this diet for months at a time. I occasionally run across some wild berries or an edible root to chew on, but they are not important."

At dinners to which he was invited Mr. Muir would usually barely taste of soup or fruit, never touch meat or any fancy dessert, talk while others ate and nibble away between times at a slice of bread without butter.

Once while visiting Pasadena he was one of a party starting out to get supper, after which it was purposed to spend the evening in the rooms of one of the company. As they walked along the street they passed a bakery, and Mr. Muir stopped. "Why, friends, look here!" he said. "That is good looking bread. Why go any farther? Let's buy a couple of loaves and take them to the room with us." And he was quite in earnest.

Once a friend took him to luncheon at a famous restaurant in San Francisco. As they took seats at a table Mr. Muir was engaged in some discussion in which he was so absorbed that he was oblivious to everything else. His friend could not interrupt him, and so the talk flowed on until the time approached for closing the restaurant. The head waiter told the host that he must give his order without further delay. Taking advantage of the interruption, the friend suggested to Mr. Muir that he should give his order. He seemed startled. "I have all I wish," he exclaimed. "Order for yourself." For an hour as he talked he had been chewing bits of bread.—Youth's Companion.

Putting Out Gasoline Fires.

Experiments by the British fire prevention committee show that the best way to put out a small gasoline fire is to spread over the burning liquid a mixture of ten pounds of bicarbonate of soda and twelve pounds of common sawdust, free from chips and shavings.

WIFE TOO ILL TO WORK

IN BED MOST OF TIME

Her Health Restored by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Indianapolis, Indiana. — "My health was so poor and my constitution so run down that I could not work. I was thin, pale and weak, weighed but 100 pounds and was in bed most of the time. I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and five months later I weighed 128 pounds. I do all the housework and washing for eleven and I can truthfully say Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been a godsend to me for I would have been in my grave today but for it. I would tell all women suffering as I was to try your valuable remedy."—Mrs. WM. GREEN, 332 S. Addison Street, Indianapolis, Indiana.

There is hardly a neighborhood in this country, wherein some woman has not found health by using this good old-fashioned root and herb remedy.

WILY CECIL RHODES.

The Way He Discovered the Diamond Fields of South Africa.

Have you ever heard how diamonds were discovered in South Africa? And did you know that Cecil Rhodes was the man who made the discovery? But here is the story:

A German trader in skins and ostrich feathers from the interior, with Pietermaritzburg as his frontier station, drove into Cape Town one afternoon. He had been two months bringing in his wagons, each drawn by ten yoke of long horned oxen, from the frontier trading post named.

This trader, among other curious things, had a dozen or so very brilliant pebbles, which he was showing to his friends.

"Fine specimens of globular quartz," said a doctor newly arrived, who had just enough of a smattering of geology to know nothing at all about it.

"Would you mind giving me one or two of those pebbles?" said a tall, dark skinned, slender youthful man. "Or I will buy them from you at whatever you may consider them worth. I have no such stones in my collection at home."

"My dear sir," the other replied, with the heartiness of a dweller on the veldt, "you are very welcome to a couple. Pick out any two you may fancy."

The dark young man selected two about as large as a medium sized hickory nut, thanked the trader and immediately sent the "globular quarts" off to Amsterdam. As he thought, the report came back saying that the stones were diamonds of incomparable flawlessness. Then started the rush to the diamond fields.

A Marvel of Insect Mechanism.

The sting of a certain Indian fly offers as marked an example of design in nature as can well be imagined. When seen through a magnifying glass it is found to be composed of three sharp blades folded into one, with their cutting edges outward and running down to one fine point. When the fly inserts this up to the hilt in its victim the three blades fly apart, and then it is seen that each inner edge is a beautiful saw, worked by six separate muscles, so that when withdrawn the instrument rips its way out with a gush of blood. But now comes the most curious provision of all. It would not do to fold up these blades with the blood adhering to them, so each blade is provided at its base with a fine brush of hairs growing out of an oil gland, which provides an antiseptic secretion to keep the blades clean.

Forgetmenots.

The forgetmenot is a delightful immigrant belonging to that numerous flower family which includes the Virginia cowslip, hound's tongue and comfrey. As far back as we are able to trace flower history, says the National Geographic Magazine, it held an honored place in the flower garden, and when America was settled it was brought along to cheer the colonist's austere life and to remind him of the old roof tree across the billowy sea.

Have you ever noticed the little golden circle around the center of the flower? That circle is put there by the flower as a honey guide to tell the bee just where to insert its tongue to get the richest draft of nectar and at the same time to touch both anther and stigma and thus fertilize the plant.

The Fall Of Halicz Is Officially Reported

British Aircraft Bomb Turkish Warships

Halicz Captured With Over Thirty Guns Russians Officially Announce

Galician Stronghold, Known as the Key to Lemberg is Taken by General Brusiloff's Forces ---"The Pursuit of the Enemy Continues" Announces Official Statement--British Aircraft Make Direct Hits on Battle Cruiser Goeben and Other Turkish War Vessels in a Successful Surprise Attack.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

PETROGRAD, July 11.—The War Office statement to-day said Halicz has been captured after a bitter contest, the Russians taking a number of prisoners and more than thirty guns. "Pursuit of the enemy continues," the statement asserted.

In three days' battle around Dolina we captured more than 150 officers and ten thousand men with eighty guns and a quantity of other material, the War Office announced.

The War Office statement confirms the taking of Halicz, key to the Galician metropolis, and declared that General Korniloff's forces were advancing westward from the left bank of the Lomnica River.

On the Bogorodcham-Zolotistin front, the statement declared, another advance had been achieved, with the capture of 2,000 prisoners and thirty guns.

PARIS, July 11.—The repulse of German raids around Sapignsul, in the Champagne, was reported in to-day's official statement. A number of prisoners were taken. On the left bank of the Meuse artillery fighting was active. In the Woevre, north of Flirey, the Germans were thrown back in sharp fighting.

MADE DIRECT HITS ON FAMOUS GOEBEN

LONDON, July 11.—Direct hits on the Turkish-German cruiser Goeben were made in an aerial attack against the Turco-German fleet in the Golden Horn, according to an Admiralty announcement to-day. The attacking squadron of aeroplanes suffered no losses.

"Direct hits were observed against other ships and big explosions resulted," the Admiralty continued. "The enemy was completely surprised," the statement said. "Our attack was from a height of 800 feet."

Several explosions were observed aboard the battleship Goeben.

Turkish War Office and other government works in the Turkish capital were also effectually bombed.

There were no casualties among the British airmen.

ZURICH, July 11.—The full meeting of the Reichstag scheduled for to-day has been postponed "on account of party differences," according to word received here from Berlin. Imperial Chancellor Von Bethmann-Hollweg was reported conferring with leaders of all factions.

One despatch carried the report that all the Prussian State Ministers had resigned their posts.

AMSTERDAM, July 11.—The German Government was reported to-day to have agreed to retire five of the Prussian State Ministers in addition to Foreign Secretary Zimmermann, Vice-Chancellor Helfferich and Colonial Secretary Wolff, in a compromise with the Centralist-Socialist reformers.

STOCKHOLM, July 11. — Sweden to-day instructed her Minister at Berlin to lodge a formal protest with Germany against the torpedoing of Swedish fishing vessels.

BERLIN CLAIMS 1,250 BRITISH TAKEN.

Special to The Examiner:

BERLIN, via London, July 11.—The capture of 1,250 British prisoners in the taking of an enemy defensive establishment between the coast and Lombartzyde was claimed by the War Office to-day.

This is in connection with the temporary reverse admitted in Belgium in to-day's British statement, which adds that the positions were regained by the British.

Need of Help On Ontario Farms Emphasized By "Weekly Sun"

It is safe to say that practically every part of Ontario is facing serious difficulty as a result of the lack of help. From many different counties comes to The Examiner news of the scarcity of farm labour of any sort—even "help" that can scarcely be called such.

John Marshall, of Varney, is a case in point. He is not able to do heavy work himself, but his two young sons have put in 100 acres of grain crop themselves. They have been going all spring from daylight to dark, with scarcely any let-up. For two young lads to have this much grain to handle, husky and all as they may be, is more than the production agitators would care to do themselves.

"Farmers are not in shape to handle any more crops," said Mr. Marshall. "You can't change your plans in a day, when you have been planning to get along without help, and then have it offered."

While this may be one reason why farmers in that district have not been applying to the Government Bureau for help, The Examiner is of the opinion that there are others, too. One of these is that experience has taught that even the indifferent, untrained help from cities is not available when once the first fever of "patriotism" has worn off, and blisters and callouses begin to loom up in the foreground.

The situation is plain. Farmers have been urged to greater production, and have responded. Haying has begun, and in a few weeks harvest will be under way. Where is help to come from? It has been guaranteed by organizations in authority. What good is the guarantee? The situation is serious, and yet nothing is heard from the Resources Committee or any other body to reassure us that it will be in any degree met. It sums up the general situation in a concise way.

STREET RAILWAY COMPANY WILL NOT TRY TO OPERATE

Employees Decide on a Strike at 4 O'clock This Morning and as a Result Many Toronto Industries Are Practically Paralyzed

MOTOR CARS IN USE

TORONTO, July 11.— Many industries are partially paralyzed this morning as the result of the strike of the Toronto railway employees. The decision by the men to strike and tie up the service was made at 4 a.m., after a mass meeting since midnight. Balloting showed a vote of 1,554 for a strike and 73 against. The company offered to submit the matter to arbitration. This was refused by the men at a midnight meeting. The company has announced to-day that it will not attempt to run cars, as there is no labour available to do it. All kinds of autos and other vehicles were pressed into service to-day and many leading concerns had made sufficient preparations for the strike that they were able to pick up their employees and carry on business as usual.

Ontario Board Serves Warning On Toronto Co'y

Must Operate Cars By 3 O'clock To-day or Board Will Take Hold

TORONTO, July 11.—(Bulletin.) — The Ontario Railway Board has served notice on the Toronto Railway Company that unless the street cars are operated here by three o'clock the Board will take over the line and operate it in the public interest. In the meantime representatives of the company and the men are conferring with the Ontario government.

Positions Wanted For Returned Men

Places are needed for several men returned from service. Two for men not really capable of doing hard work, but rightly willing to be useful. Married men, too. What is there open? 'Phone, or advise the Secretary of the Soldiers' Aid Commission, at the Patriotic Fund Office. Better speak now.

A good place is open for a woman young or middle aged, who can do plain cooking. A good, comfortable home is offered and good wages. The office knows the small family, and, if the office were feminine, would take the place itself. Pretty good place for some soldier's connection that would like to be useful. Speak to the office if the opportunity strikes you as a likely one for you.

Keep Your Mind Upon Red Cross Tag Day Next Saturday

And also on Saturday, July 14, have your coin ready to contribute to the splendidly deserving fund to provide regular food parcels to Canadian prisoners in Germany. Let us make a little study of the contrast between our own comfortable well-fed independent position from day to day, and the Canadian boys we know hovelled in German prisons, fed with scanty scraps and knocked about by their brutal custodians. Think how you would welcome a parcel of home food if you were a prisoner in Germany, and help supply a parcel or two for those who are there.

Returned Soldier's Interesting Description Of Voyage Home

Pte. G. H. Mann, Formerly of the 93rd Battalion Writes the Examiner Giving Incidents of the Journey---Capt. M. H. Park, Royal Flying Corps, is Home---To-day's General Military News.

The Examiner has received the following interesting letter from a Peterborough boy who is on his way home from overseas. Pte. G. H. Mann, formerly of the 93rd Battalion.

Dear Sir,—If you can find space in your valuable paper, I shall try and give you an outline of my homeward voyage from England.

After waiting two weeks at Buxton which is the Canadian Discharge Depot, we received sailing orders. We then boarded a troop train for Liverpool, arriving on board of the Metagama at 11.30 a.m. on the 29nd of June. We then lay in mid stream until 3.20 p.m. June 25, when the battle Cruiser "Cumberland" drew past us with the band on deck, playing "O Canada," then we knew we were off. The convoy consisted of first a mine sweeper which kept crossing and recrossing about a quarter of a mile in front. Next was the battle cruiser which I have mentioned only a couple of hundred yards in front of us, which kept continuously zigzagging and we followed in its course on either side. We had a torpedo boat destroyer and about a mile in the rear, an auxiliary cruiser, which would come to our assistance in case Frits happened to get in with one of his tin fish. The first two days we were fine and we made good time, but the third day was very stormy and nearly every one on board was sick. I happened to be one of the lucky ones and rather enjoyed it, as it was the first storm that I had ever witnessed at sea. The fourth day was fair and we had a little excitement. The torpedo boats suddenly left us, going back east at a tremendous rate and the battle ship drew to one side with their guns trained on something we could not see. Then our boat spun around, she seemed to turn in her own length and after about half an hour's suspense the torpedo boats returned and we proceeded on our way, but we were unable to find out definitely what the trouble was. "The silent navy as usual." There is a report going around that it was submarine and that the destroyers got it, by dropping bombs in the water, but, of course, I cannot vouch for the truthfulness of this report. The fifth day was stormy again and all our convoy left us excepting the battle cruiser to return to England as we had passed through what is known as the danger zone. The cruiser then had two duties to perform, she had to act as mine sweeper as well as guide. The next four days were calm, but very foggy and we made very poor time. We dropped anchor in Halifax harbour at 8 p.m. on the night of the fourth of July and docked early on the following morning and all men taking their furlough in the Maritime Provinces got off; also about one hundred sailors that had come over with us for duty. They were a jolly bunch and certainly kept things humming all the way over. I almost forgot to mention that we have a large number of women and children on board. This is the only ship that has carried women for some time while in dock we saw a number of returned men who were waiting to be sent home, they had come over a few days ahead of us on a hospital ship and all seem to be in good spirits; but there was only one man among them that I knew and he was Pte. Hagerty an old 93rd boy from Havelock. Well we are on our way again, left Halifax at 6.35 p.m. of the same day on our way to Quebec. The weather is fine and we are making about 18 knots an hour. July 6th—we have again run into a heavy fog, but are still running at full speed. Well I do not want to take up too much of your valuable space. We arrived at Quebec Sunday, July 8th at 6.45 and disembarked at 7.45 same date. We are all in good spirits and expect to start for home in a few days. I would like you to thank the Citizens Committee of Halifax through your paper on behalf of the boys for the treatment we received while in dock there. Thanking you Mr. Editor, I am.

Yours truly,
PTE. G. H. MANN, No. 300465.
192 Dublin Street, Peterboro.

Captain Park Home.

Captain Maurice H. Park, son of Dr. Park, of the Normal School staff, arrived home in Peterborough yesterday to spend a few days' furlough before entering upon his duties in Toronto as instructor with the Royal Flying Corps. Captain Park, who was principal of the King George School and an officer of the 57th Regiment, Peterborough Rangers, before the war, went overseas with the 59th Eastern Battalion early in 1916, and in England was transferred to the Royal Flying Corps. He was injured in a flying accident and has been on instructional duty in England for some time, and now has been sent back to Canada to continue his duties as instructor in connection with the important work of the Flying Corps here.

The executive of the Peterborough Branch of the Great War Veterans' Association met last night in the Barrie Building. The new officers were in attendance. Only routine business was transacted.

Mrs. Kent, 278 Thomas street, has received the following letter from France:

Dear Mrs. Kent.— Excuse me for writing to you as I do not know you, but we received a parcel of socks last night addressed to Sergt. Campbell. I am sorry to say he was wounded last month and in Blighty. He was only slightly wounded. We make it a rule out here in the trenches to open all parcels that come for men who are dead or wounded and share them up with all the boys. I have to thank you on behalf of the boys. They came in very handy as we were badly in need of them. You can thank all the ladies that sent the socks, for me. I remain,

Yours,
Sergt. Tom Paterson,
15th Platoon, No. 4 Co'y,
2nd Battalion, Canadians,
B.E.F., France.

The Lindsay Post says: Sergt. Biggs and Pte. Matthews of Peterborough, have arrived in town to make the Armouries their headquarters. They are recruiting for the Railroad Construction and Forestry Battalions and have Lindsay, Port Hope and a large district to work on. The work was formerly in charge of Capt. Manning who is now overseas. Sergt. Biggs urges young men not to be conscripts but to come and join the Railroad Construction or Forestry by applying to him at the Armouries.

STRONG GERMAN ATTACKS ALONG THE BELGIAN COAST

NEW OFFENSIVE ON BOTH FRENCH AND ITALIAN FRONTS?

Philosophical Discussion By War Lords Indicates Germany Far From the Breaking Point

INTERNAL PROBLEM SERIOUS

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, July 11.—While Germany struggles with domestic difficulties, the Allies are preparing to give here a new dose of shell-fire and brimstone. Advices to official quarters here indicate that a big offensive is now shaping on the French or Italian fronts, or both. Meantime the Russians are making astonishing progress in their resurrected campaign, and military men say it is an even gamble as to whether she sustains it or lapses back to her former apathy.

Bethmann - Hollweg's statements before the Reichstag squared with American expectations inasmuch as he threw down "no annexations, no indemnities," and engaged in the old game of bluffing the Teutonic folk with statements that Germany can win, come what may. Serious as the internal problem may appear on the surface, Germany is far from the cracking point, officials believe.

"The present discussion is still philosophical," said one prominent official. "And when men can talk philosophy the strain isn't so very great. A crash is preceded by something more violent than philosophical argument."

PUNISHMENT FOR THE MEN WHO WERE RESPONSIBLE

All Officials Concerned in Mesopotamian Failure Have Ceased Their Government Functions During New Inquiry

CABINET MEMBERS, TOO

LONDON, July 11. — The British government took active steps to-day to punish those of its officials responsible for failure of the first Mesopotamia expedition. In the House of Commons, Chancellor of the Exchequer Bonar Law announced the institution of a new court of inquiry, composed of judges and military officials, to hear all charges against those involved in the scandal, including members of the British cabinet at that time.

All officials concerned have ceased their governmental functions, pending a report from the new inquiry.

Among the officials mentioned by name in the report as responsible for the scandal were: Gen. Sir John Eccles Nixon, former commander of the British forces in Mesopotamia; Baron Hardinge, former Viceroy of India; Gen. Sir Beauchamp Duff, former commander of India; Major Gen. Sir Edmund Barrow, former military secretary to the India office; J. Austin Chamberlain, Secretary of State for India, and the War committee of the Cabinet.

Montrealer Accused Of Burning Bungalow

The street railway extension from the end of Charlotte street on Monaghan road, south to Patterson street, will be begun on Monday next. Preliminary work of grading is already under way and the city and street railway officials will join hands next week in the building up of the roadway and laying the rails. There is a possibility that the line may loop at Byersville, and there is no doubt of the highway being graded and put in good condition all the way south to the Henry Hope factory.

British Positions in the Sand Dunes Were Penetrated on a Front of 1400 Yards But Enemy Were Driven Back By Counter Attacks.

POSITIONS ISOLATED

LONDON, July 11.—A strong German attack around Nieuport (Belgium) succeeded in penetrating British positions on a front of 1,400 yards, Field Marshall Haig reported to-day. "Around Nieuport the enemy attacked determinedly," the British commander in chief reported. "Our Dunes defences were levelled and he succeeded in penetrating our positions on a front of 1,400 yards, reaching to the right of the Yser near the sea." Gen. Haig said that the bridges across the Yser and other waterways had been destroyed, isolating the Dunes sector near the coast and opposite Lombartzyde.

"The enemy gained these positions temporarily" he added. "Counter attacks drove them back."

J. M. Greene Left For Convention in N.Y.

Mr. J. M. Greene, of the Greene Music Co., Ltd., Charlotte street, left for New York city to-day, to take part in the Edison dealers' national convention, to be held in the grand ball-room of the Waldorf-Astoria. He will be gone about a week. The convention takes place July 12th and 13th.

Mr. Greene will make a visit to the home of the New Edison at Orange, New Jersey, as the guest of Thomas A. Edison. He will read a paper on "How I Use 'Along Broadway,'" and will take an active part in the proceedings of the convention.

Tone tests, in which the big artists will participate, will be given on the afternoon of July 13th.

Mr. Greene's Company is the only licensed representative for the famous Edison product for the counties of Victoria, Peterborough, Hastings and Frontenac, with stores at Peterborough, Lindsay, Belleville Kingston and Madoc.

WHY RECRUITING FAILURE, BROUGHT CONSCRIPTION.

It is possible we shall ever have full knowledge of the reasons why voluntary enlistment became such a failure as to justify to the government the substitution of compulsory service legislation. Sir Sam Hughes puts the blame for one of the alleged reasons upon Sir Robert Borden and Sir Thomas White, who urged less zeal in recruiting in the interests of the "big interests," munitions contractors. Sir Sam said he had specific instruction from one and specific obstruction from the other to delay recruiting. They both deny the impeachment, but Sir Sam, like a good soldier, sticks to his guns, and reiterates his charges. Both Sir Robert and Sir Thomas deny the accuracy of the statements of the ex-minister of war, but whether their denials are to be taken literally or in the Pickwickian sense, it is difficult to decide the merits of the mess. Sir Sam has never achieved a reputation for untruthfulness. We all know, whether his specific charges are literally true or not, that Sir Robert Borden and his colleagues, if they did not directly discourage recruiting, "damned it with faint praise," took no or little interest in it.

Another influence against recruiting was want of confidence in the government's war and general administration. The people saw partizan favouritism rampant; graft going at all points, and apathetic attention to administrative duties. Statements like these are not to be attributed to partisan spleen, but some of the government's severest critics (leaving Sir Sam out altogether) have been their prominent parliamentary supporters and party followers. Mr. Cockshutt, R. B. Bennet, Col. Currie, and others, have "spoken out in meeting," and condemned the actions of the government. A day or two ago in referring to the threatened street railway strike in Toronto, Mayor Church, a stalwart Tory, and a supporter of both governments, said: "The Ontario Railway Board is asleep at the switch as usual; likewise, the Labour Department, Ottawa." He declared this attitude was injurious to public interests; a street railway strike would seriously hamper business, especially munitions manufacture. Even the threatened injury to the interests of the "interests" do not seem to awaken the sleepers.

Such indications of inefficient and perfunctory administration are not unnoticed by the people, and the resultant loss of confidence in the government following upon cumulative evidence, superadded to the government's own disregard of recruiting interests, did tend to discourage the voluntary spirit. So recruiting by voluntary method was killed throughout Canada, as it was long before killed in Quebec by government-fostered, encouraged and subsidized Nationalism.

If the Minister of Labour's assertion that we are sure of a coal supply next year, doesn't "pan out" better than his potato prophecy, there are cold days ahead for us.

CONSCRIPTION.

The principle of conscription has been rather emphatically adopted by parliament. We all know what the principle is—compulsory military service by selective draft. But we don't know yet what selective draft means, only this we know that it applies to the manhood of the country, but exempts as far as special provision is concerned, compulsory service of wealth, and the other resources of the country, as essential to winning the war as men.

We don't yet know the age classes to be first drawn upon. It is proposed that the maximum age be fixed at thirty-five; it is also proposed that the compulsion be applied solely to unmarried men and widowers; and it is also proposed that no person under twenty-one years of age be selected. There are arguments ready for all these proposals, but there is specially weighty argument in favour of exempting the young men of the country. They might not make the best soldiers, and they are to be regarded as the hope of the country, if the country is to remain a progressive element in nationhood at the close of the war. Naturally, they have a longer life and a longer period of usefulness as citizens before them than their seniors. If we send abroad to the perils of war all of our younger manhood, it is fairly probable that many of them will never return. If we leave the men of greater age and less promise of years of life, at home, they will in the course of nature pass away, and there will be sadly depleted ranks of coming citizens to take their place, if they are made fewer by the perils of war. We must not only meet the demands of the present, but we must provide for the future, and a robust citizenship, physically as well as morally, is one of the conditions of the progress of the country which we all fondly hope the future holds.

It seems heartless and rather cold-blooded business to discuss human life and manhood as a mere economic element, but it is impossible to avoid such considerations; for, under the conscription bill, it is only manhood that is directly affected, that is included in the provisions of the bill. There is no mention made of the conscription of money as well as men. The nearest approach to dealing strictly and justly with wealth and its owners—or possessors—is the assurance of Sir Robert Borden. In answer to the contention of Sir Wilfrid Laurier that there should be embodied in the conscription bill a clause nullifying the provision of the Militia Act, which permits a man to buy his discharge from military service, for $15—increased since the war to $50—he promised that a clause to that effect would be incorporated in the conscription bill. It is probable, too, that the age limit will be fixed at thirty-five years, leaving men between thirty-five and forty-five exempt.

If so much difficulty is found in framing the detail provisions of the conscription act, with a view to their equitable incidence of responsibility, there will be found greater difficulty in this regard in its application. Sir Sam Hughes declares that he was urged to "go slow in recruiting" in the interest of conserving labour for munitions making. The latter is very important, and the difficulty will be found when it comes to applying the act to munition workers, thousands of whom are in the conscriptible classes, between the ages of 21 and 35. It promises to be a very difficult thing to decide whether a man's services are the more needed in a munitions factory or in the fighting ranks; and, added to this difficulty, is the difficulty of fairly discriminating. A conscripted man in any occupation is forced to fight at the remuneration of $1.10 a day; while a man, physically as fit and under as great moral, as well as legal, compulsion to fight for his country, is allowed to remain at his machine, earning his six or ten dollars a day. That is, one man for a comparatively paltry pittance, is compelled to risk his life, his limbs and his health, while another is allowed to continue to work in peace and safety in making munitions at from $5 to $10 per day for the conscripted soldier to shoot away, with his life in continual jeopardy, at $30 a month.

Here is where a great deal of discretionary wisdom must be exercised in order not to perpetrate gross injustice.

Any injustice done under this head could be classed with the failure of the conscription bill to demand that the wealth of the country should be subjected to a special impost to correspond to the impost placed upon the manhood of the country. To win this war, not only men but money, is needed, and what could be more obviously fair and just than that the men who fight should be financially supported by the man of wealth, in the interests of whose protection the conscripted soldier is risking his life. If, with the bill to conscript manhood provision were made for making wealth—much of it made out of the war—bear a proportionate burden—a great fund could be created that would permit of the fighting man being paid more liberally.

Full garbage pails in the United States and Canada mean empty dinner pails on this continent and among our allies.

TOADS FOR THE GARDEN.

Toads eat enormous numbers of destructive insects, so if you see one in your garden this spring let it alone—it is helping reduce the cost of living. If you do not see any there you had better hunt up a few in the country and try to get them to make their home in the yard. Toads stay in one location and it is best to bring them from some distance. They wish a cool, sheltered place to pass the heat of the day, and a hole covered with a flat stone makes an ideal place for them. They usually come out in the evening to hunt but can also be seen on cloudy days or just after a shower.

There are many superstitions about toads, the most common one, that if they are handled warts will grow on the hands. All those old superstitions have been proven false, but the old prejudice remains. Boys should be taught not to destroy the toads, and especially this year, when so many gardens are planted, every insect possible should be destroyed.

The school teachers can accomplish great good by calling the attention of the pupils to the fact that toads are greater insect destroyers than birds, and should receive as much or more consideration.

When making fruit salad, the fruit dark, boil discarded tomatoes or the skins in the pan and it will become white.

Both weddings and funerals admit men to the silent majority.

A Pen Picture Of Our Patriotic Womanhood

Something, Mutatis Mutandis, Pertinent to Our Peterborough Women

When the history of Brantford's part in the Great War comes to be written its chapters will be illumined by the story of the magnificent work of a very noble band of women and girls who have toiled so assiduously and in such a loyal spirit in connection with Red Cross, Patriotic and every other undertaking occasioned by this war. Regardless of the inconvenience entailed or the sacrifice involved these women have responded enthusiastically to the calls, ever increasing in number, that have been made upon them, and though sometimes they have not been given the encouragement from this community they so richly deserve, they have never faltered until their tasks have been successfully completed. The soldiers in the trenches and just as much the civilians at home—if not even more so—owe a debt of gratitude to these patriotic women which can never be repaid.

On Saturday last, in the sultry weather of the morning, and the storm of the afternoon, dozens of patriotic women and girls worked faithfully selling maple leaves for a mere pittance to people, many of whom did not receive them very sympathetically, that funds might be raised to provide the soldiers, back from the battle lines, with a comfortable rendezvous of their own. The cause was a worthy one, and the cost might fairly have been a direct charge against the municipality, but that contributions might be voluntary, in harmony with other efforts of a similar nature, the Women's Patriotic League, with their excellent organization, offered their assistance and though the weather for their Tag Day was most unpropitious, quite a handsome sum was realized. And the end is not yet.

Separated by thousands of miles from the actual battle lines, these women war workers have not the opportunity of performing heroic acts of a dramatic nature, but many of them are heroines just the same. Their service is voluntary, it is one of love, and no matter how exacting on their time and effort the undertaking may be, if it is for the good of the cause there is no holding back, no faltering. Many of the members of the Women's Patriotic League, the Red Cross and kindred organizations have had no leisure moments since the war began. When not engaged in some special campaign they are knitting, knitting, knitting and though the demand for socks, bandages and other things is a never-ending one, these women fail not, but continue steadfast in their undertaking. Many of them have husbands, sons or dear ones at the front, some of whom have already made the supreme sacrifice, but in spite of their cares, their anguish or their sorrow, the women remain true to the responsibility which they so voluntarily and loyally assumed. Too much praise cannot be given these noble Canadian women. Let the community give them the recognition and encouragement they so justly merit.—Brantford Expositor.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

BEES AND MATRIMONY

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1916, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

Certain persons were always wondering why Baker did not smile or laugh, but he was born that way and couldn't help it.

When Mrs. Baker died, after many years of quiet life, she left a daughter, Minnie, seventeen years old. Minnie was totally unlike her father. She saw the humor of things. She was inclined to be cheerful and gay. She had always laughed more or less, and her father had become used to it, as she had to his solemnness.

When the mother died the daughter took up the housekeeping, and two years had passed when she and Frank Williams fell in love. Frank was a pushing, industrious young man, and he could at least have given her as good a home as she had. He was rather afraid of the solemn faced father, but had now and then called at the house and been well received.

Young Williams had opened a commission house. The farmers brought him in stuff to sell, and he shipped it to the city. When he was receiving or shipping, his goods covered a good part of the sidewalk, but no one complained. One day as Mr. Baker was strolling about he approached the commission house just as a farmer had unloaded four big baskets of eggs. There was room for Mr. Baker to avoid those eggs, and he would have avoided them but for a big rat. The rodent ran from under the sidewalk to a lumber pile, and Mr. Baker's attention was thus distracted for the moment. He walked along with his head turned over his shoulder when his foot struck one of the baskets, and he fell forward with a crash. As was afterward ascertained, he broke all his previous records by breaking twenty-one dozen of the eggs. When he managed to extricate himself from the mess he was covered from head to heel with the white and yellow yolks of the eggs.

The farmer was one that could see the humor of things, and, though the loss of the eggs would be his, he fairly roared with laughter at the upset. No one could remember ever seeing Lemuel Baker in a temper, but he was mad now as he rose up amid those eggs. Hearing the laugher at the door, young Williams came out of his office, and, instantly recognizing his prospective father-in-law, he began to laugh too.

"You scoundrels, you villains!" roared Mr. Baker as he stood dripping with the yolks.

It was when he heard the victim's voice that young Williams came forward and expressed his sympathies.

"Go away, sir; go away!" was shouted at him. "You had those eggs placed there on purpose to trip me up. Look at me! My clothes are ruined. Don't ever enter my house again or I will give you a lawsuit!"

At the back end of Mr. Baker's half acre lot he had placed three hives of bees. There had been no trouble with them, and they had paid in honey for their keep. One day as the owner sat on his front veranda in his shirt sleeves looking down the village street and Minnie was upstairs in her room grieving over the events which had caused a separation between the lovers a wandering cow appeared upon the scene. She looked over the back fence of Mr. Baker's lot, and she saw cabbages, cornstalks and other good things to eat. She also took notice that the fence was old and shaky. She was tempted and yielded. She crashed over the fence between two of the beehives and brought them both tumbling down, and the crash was heard for a block around. The bees went for her.

Mr. Baker was the next victim, and he hurried through the front gate and went downhill toward the peacefully flowing river. His yells brought out the rest of the population, and as fast as they appeared at their doors or gates the bees gave them all proper attention. It was figured later on that at least 200 people, besides the cow, received scars to show that they had fought gallantly and well. Mr. Baker kept on to the river. Amid his pain and excitement he recollected that bees and water are enemies. To get rid of the bees he must have the aid of the river. He could not swim a stroke, and the water was deep, but when he reached the bridge over the rail he dived.

The cow had no river to plunge into, and she had to keep on, bellowing at every jump until she fell exhausted. As fate would have it, young Williams was at hand to plunge into the river to the rescue of the man who had disappeared beneath the surface, and it was mostly by his efforts that a rescue was made. He it was who commandeered a wagon and got Mr. Baker home, and he it was who got the doctor and helped him to extract almost numberless stings.

And who was it that rubbed and bandaged and sat through the night of many a long night when the doctor became worn out? Who was it who spoke sympathetic but cheering words to the man in bed and speaking at only long intervals? It was young Williams, of course. He took charge of the case after the doctor had made two visits, and he let his business go hang to render good for evil. Three weeks had passed, and the bees' victim could at last swing his legs out of bed. It was then that he called young Williams to him and told him that he was forgiven.

Then there was a wedding.

Tells How To Get Quick Relief from Head-Colds. It's Splendid!

In one minute your clogged nostrils will open, the air passages of your head will clear and you can breathe freely. No more hawking, snuffling, blowing, headache, dryness. No struggling for breath at night; your cold or catarrh will be gone.

Get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm from your druggist now. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic, healing cream in your nostrils. It penetrates through every air passage of the head, soothes the inflamed or swollen mucous membrane and relief comes instantly.

It's just fine. Don't stay stuffed-up with a cold or nasty catarrh—Relief comes so quickly.

GOOD SPICED VINEGAR

Useful in Various Vegetable Salads —How to Make

Spiced vinegar is especially good to flavor cauliflower, cabbage, cucumber and other vegetable salads. For each gallon of good vinegar slice six cloves of garlic, six onions, two horseradish roots, four ounces of bruised ginger roots, four ounces of mustard seeds, two ounces each of black pepper and unground allspice. Put in a stone crock and simmer on back of stove for ten hours, then strain and bottle for use.

To make sweet spiced vinegar, boil two and one-half cups of brown sugar with three pints of cider vinegar, adding four cloves, two inches of cinnamon stick, one blade of mace, one bay leaf, one sliced lemon and one ounce of bruised ginger root, allow to cook for fifteen minutes and when cold strain, bottle and seal. This is good with fruit salad, or for spicing prunes.

Sugar Nut Candy

Put three pounds of sugar, one quarter pound of butter, one half pint of water, and one-half pint of vinegar into a saucepan. Cook until it begins to thicken then add a pound of nut meats. To test this, take up a very small quantity as possible directly from the centre, taking care not to disturb it any more than is necessary. Drop it into cold water, and remove the saucepan from the fire the moment the little particles are brittle. Pour into buttered plates. This makes quite a large quantity, but a smaller amount can be made in the same proportions.

BAKE STUFFED CUCUMBER

Wipd and peel large cucumbers, cut in 2-inch pieces crosswise and remove seeds. Mix 4 tablespoons bread crumbs, 2 tablespoons finely chopped cooked ham, and 2 tablespoons grated cheese. Moisten with tomato sauce and season with salt and cayenne. Put the cucumber cups in a shallow pan, fill with the mixture, pour 1 cup chicken stock or broth of any kind around, and bake half an hour. Remove cover, sprinkle with buttered crumbs and bake until crumbs are brown. The tomato sauce is made by cooking tomato and onion together, and thickening the mixture with butter and flour cooked together. Season nicely. The butter and flour may be browned before the tomato is added.

HINTS ABOUT GLOVES

Glove Stretchers Very Useful—How to Mend Kid Gloves

As gloves are a rather expensive accessory some hints on the choice and care of them will not prove amiss. It is a wise policy to buy gloves of a good quality. An exact fit is also essential, and a point to remember is never to draw the gloves too tightly over the nails, as this will cause the tips to wear out. To clean light-colored kid and suede gloves put them on glove trees and rub them over with cream of tartar applied with a clean piece of flannel. Allow this to remain a while, then follow with an application of equal parts of powdered alum and Fuller earth. Leave this on all night, then rub with dry oatmeal mixed with a little whiting. If the gloves are not very soiled, they can be cleaned on the hands by means of oatmeal mixed with benzoin.

Every woman should own a pair of glove stretchers, especially if she uses the washable chamois gloves. These gloves are bound to shrink, even with the best of care. They should be washed on the hands with lukewarm water and castile soap and then rinsed in warm, soapy water. After this they should be rolled in a clean towel and allowed to remain for a short time. They should then be pulled into shape and hung up to dry. And right here is where the glove stretcher should make its appearance on the scene. Kid gloves that are ripped can be mended and made to do the service of new ones. A small, fine needle and cotton or silk the color of the gloves should be used. A buttonhole stitch should be worked all around the hole and the stitches then drawn together.

Bread Croquettes

Bread croquettes are delicious served as a luncheon dessert or as an accompaniment to the meat course at either lunch or dinner. There is nearly always bread in the larder, so they can be easily made at a moment's notice. To make them for dessert, add four tablespoonsful of sugar to a quart of bread crumbs, a little grated nutmeg, half a pound of well cleaned and dried currants, a teaspoonful of vanilla and three beaten eggs. Shape them, roll them in egg and fine bread crumbs, fry and serve hot with lemon or some fruit sauce. To eat with meat the sugar and currants are omitted and a cupful of canned peas and a teaspoonful of salt are substituted.

Pay Your Debt To Your Defenders

Turn Your Luxuries Into Comforts For Those Who Have Sacrificed Most!

"Self-sacrifice, self-denial and service lie at the basis of the highest personal and national development."
Sir Thomas White, Minister of Finance.

IS it nothing to you that men from all round you have sacrificed home and salary, safety and life, to defend your home as well as their own?

Is it nothing to you that their wives and families trustingly scan each casualty list, and pale at the step of the postman or telegraph messenger?

Can you see others giving their dearest, without feeling that you must do something yourself? Do you realize what to do?

You can at least save—and lend your savings to the nation. Canada needs every dollar her loyal sons and daughters can spare, to meet the growing expenses of the struggle.

Every dollar you invest in Canadian War Savings Certificates helps the nation to deal generously with those who are defending you.

Certificates in denominations of $25, $50 and $100, repayable in three years, may be purchased at any Bank or Money Order Post Office at $21.50, $43 and $86 respectively. This means over 5% interest—making them a profitable as well as a patriotic investment.

OLD ENGLAND IS SEEN

Even Woman's Work Is Needed, Says Canadian Soldier

Mr. and Mrs. Wilson MacIntyre, Humberstone township, Ontario, received a letter from their son, Private Percy MacIntyre, London, in which he says: "Old England is very different from Canada. You certainly know there is a war on when you get there. I think it would do some Canadians good to see how things are being carried on here. Women and girls do work here which astonishes all of us. Submarines and aeroplanes are very common. If we were allowed to write about them, I could write a bookfull."

The fact that women are becoming very necessary in England is shown in the above letter. This was also evidenced by the difficulty which Mrs. Ernest Osborne of Bridgeburg had when she endeavored to return to Canada after a year's sojourn in the old country. She found that she could not return, but after she proved that her husband was a citizen of Canada and lived in Canada, she was later allowed to proceed, only, however, after much red-tape had been unwound.

ARMY CORPS OF BABIES

50,000 Deaths in Britain Annually Were Preventable

An English appeal for more child-welfare says: We should be aghast, horrified, if one morning we learnt that 50,000 soldiers had been sent to their death through gross carelessness. And yet most of us are seriously unaware of the fact that an army corps of babies is wiped out every year through their mothers' ignorance and our lack of care. We are apt to attribute these deaths to fate and destiny; but it is rather a significant fact that among the professional and educated classes only fifty babies out of every thousand die, while among the poorer classes one hundred and fifty out of every thousand die.

And the reason? Not fate or destiny, but the grim fact that the poorer classes are badly housed, more ignorant, badly fed, less clean, and lack pure air. When we realise that 50,000 babies who die every year could be saved, we at once want to know what we are to do. It is the solemn duty of those at home to safeguard the children the fighting-men have entrusted to our care.

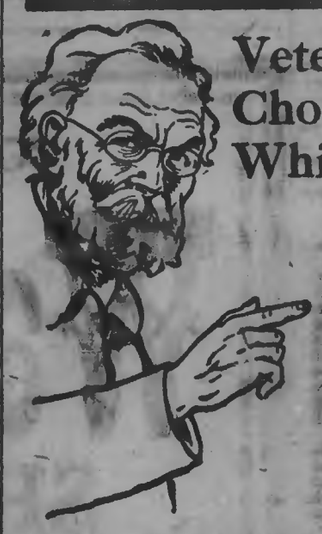
Picking Up Broken Glass

To pick up bits of broken glass wet a woolen cloth, lay it on the floor where the fragments are and pat the cloth to the carpet. The fine glass will stick to the cloth. Keep a long crochet needle in the bathroom, and you will find it useful in drawing any threads or hairs from the waste pipes that tend to stop the outflow of the water.

A painting hint: Take a dustpan without sides, or a cardboard, and when painting the mopboards lay tin or cardboard on the floor, and you will not get spots from the brush on the floor; or when varnishing your floors put cardboard or tin close to the mopboard, moving it as you go along.

Scratch your nails over a piece of soap before working in the garden or doing any other kind of rough work, so that when you wash your hands the soap will come out easily, leaving your hands nice and clean.

The acid of lemons applied locally will remove tartar from the teeth.



Veteran Painters Choose This White Lead

They do so because their own practical experience has confirmed tradition, which stamps it as the purest, whitest, longest-living white lead produced.

If these experienced painters, who are the best judges of white lead, pronounce

Brandram's Genuine B. B. White Lead to be their invariable selection, you are using common sense in profiting by their judgment.

Ensure a paint that will not disappoint by using this ideal white lead as its base.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

Mr. G. W. Powell Makes His First Report To Children's Aid Society

Likes the Work and Hopes to Make a Success of It—Has Been Busy Already Having Visited All the Wards in This District—Found Them Happy in Good Homes

Mr. George W. Powell, Children's Aid Society Agent, made a report of his first work at yesterday's meeting. Four children were at the Shelter on June 19th, when he commenced his duties, and there are now twelve. Two of those left yesterday afternoon, two more are going to Belleville, and in a few days the number will be reduced to the former four. Four applications for children were received, five were brought to the Shelter who were not wards, fourteen children were concerned during the month, four complaints received, three investigated, and the other today in Havelock. Practically all the children at the Shelter are paying wards and represent but little expense to the society.

Mr. Powell stated that he had found the Shelter in good condition, and added a word of praise for Mrs Reid. The wards are in good homes and treated as if the homes were their own.

The report of the Purchasing Committee presented by Chief Howard was adopted recommending the payment of the following accounts:

Bell Telephone Co.	$12.20
Utilities Commission	2.42
Peterborough Hardware Co.	16.65
Roland Denne	.20
Horace Walkie	5.00
Jopling and Sons	7.04

Sympathy to Secretary.

Acting on the advice of members, Chief Howard had sent a letter to the secretary, Mr. Joseph Wearing, and his wife, expressing the society's sympathy to them in their very sad bereavement.

Chief Howard stated that he had submitted his resignation to the secretary because of whose absence yesterday it was not introduced. The next meeting will be held in September.

Rev. C. J. Phelan presided in the absence of Mr. E. A. Peck.

Peterborough's Rose Growers Are Increasing In Number

The annual exhibition of the Ontario Rose Society, which opened in Toronto, yesterday, finds an echoing interest among Peterborough's rosarians. Mr. Wm. H. Young, Chamberlen street, has received from the Secretary seven numbered membership tickets which, he believes, will be readily sold here, and thus establish a connection with the Provincial society. It was his intention to forward an exhibit, but owing to present conditions he deferred action for a year or two. Mr. Young has introduced into Peterborough more new varieties of roses than any other citizen, and he has demonstrated that with but few exceptions, they can be grown with a success that warrants every lover of the queen of flowers establishing them in their gardens. During the past two years he has specialized in teas and hybrid teas of glorious bloom, and colouring. The only doubt of their wintering has been removed. They came through last winter in good condition and have bloomed profusely this season. Rose growers know that the tea varieties bloom throughout the summer in contrast with the favourite perpetuals that shed their beauty in the spring with a second flowering in the fall. Mr. Young's experience may be duplicated by any citizen who is interested in roses, and it must be a strange nature that does not respond to their appeal. It is believed that within the next year or two, especially if the war is won in that time, a rose society will be formed in this city that will occupy a prominent place in the provincial society. His Honour Judge Hoycke finds time to grow roses successfully; Andrew McKenzie, W. A. Greenslade, F. A. Shannon, Fire Chief Howard, J. H. Callander and many others are also woocrs of the rose, and City Engineer Parsons has an exceptionally fine display. There is the nucleus of a society in the city even now, and when the first steps towards organization are taken a successful society is assured. In the meantime those who desire to join the Ontario Rose Society may obtain a ticket from Mr. Young, at 508 Chamberlen street. The fee is one dollar a year.

SACRED HEART GARDEN PARTY A GREAT SUCCESS

Good weather, beautiful grounds, splendid management and unlimited attractions combined last night to make the annual garden party at the Sacred Heart Church an unbounded success.

The beautiful grounds presented a gala and attractive appearance with their gorgeously decorated booths, gay strings of Chinese lanterns and hundreds of gaily dressed ladies.

The Supper.

From the moment of opening, Mrs. N. T. Laplante and Mrs. Carson, who were at the door of the supper booth, had a busy time, with the able assistance of Rev. Father McCauley, to handle the hundreds who came to supper, and the ladies in charge of the tables, Mesdames Christopher, Milloy, Rishea, Bishop, Paquette, Ed. Fealy, Joseph Ranger and D. Gleason, with their forty-eight dainty assistants, never knew an idle moment until after closing at 10.30.

Ice Cream Booths.

The ice cream booth, always a busy spot at a garden party, was in charge of Misses Annie Fagan, Agnes Murray, Mona Sullivan, Mabel Desautel, Kathleen and Lottie Crough, and Mr. Will Boyle. A little variation to the regular run of the garden party, was the fact that one booth was entirely in charge of eight gentlemen, Messrs. Isadore Goselin, R. Rishea, Tony Ranger, Thomas, Frank, Lewis and Wilfred Goselin and Harry Rishea. Here soft drinks, water melon and ice cream was served.

Lotteries Popular.

Mr. George Lynch and Mr. Gene Hurtubise made lively auctioneers and proprietors of the lottery booth, where almost every household necessity could be secured on reasonable terms.

Miss Briuox, who had charge of the "fish pond," relieved the parents of the onus of looking after the younger genesation, and this ever popular department of the entertainment proved an attraction to all ages.

Band in the Evening.

The 57th Band enhanced the general success of the evening, and with its delightful and every popular music drew large crowds from far and near. The enthusiasm grew with the presentation of such popular selections as "Reminiscences of the Plantation" by Chambers, "By the Rose" overture, and selections from the "Princess Pat." During the evening several gaily coloured and illuminated baloons added zest to the young people's entertainment.

At the conclusion of the band concert the gathering broke up reluctantly, all loud in their praise of the management and ability of Father O'Brien and all who contributed to the general and unbounded success of the evening.

TELEGRAPHERS MAY STRIKE

G. N. W. Employees Are Getting Restless—Want Substantial Increase

The telegraphers employed by the G. N. W. Company are very restless these days, and, like the street railwaymen, are likely to take a few holidays if the company does not come across with an increase in wages.

Negotiations have been going on for some time, but there have been no results, and the representatives of the telegraphers are tired waiting. Before a strike is declared, however, the men representatives will ask the Labour Department to appoint a board of conciliation, and if this fails it is alleged that the telegraphers will resign their positions with the G. N. W. and offer their services to the Government.

WANT SUBSTANTIAL INCREASE

The wages now are from $55 to $85 per month, and an increase of 20 per cent. would satisfy the men.

International President S. J. Konenkamp and Messrs. Young and Mullett are the committee in charge of negotiations.

The C. P. R. telegraphers have already appealed for a board of conciliation to take up their request for an increase.

Promotion Examinations At Ennismore

The following is the result of promotion examinations held at S. S. No. 2, Ennismore:

Sr. II. to Jr. III.—John Young 73, Fergus Garvey 73, Katie Murphy 69, John Cavanagh 65, Mary Flood 60, Willie Cavanagh 59, (recommended)

I. to Jr. II.—Gertrude Garvey 74, Gertrude Davis 69, Loretto Morrissey 62.

ENTERTAINED AT A PIC-NIC

Members of Mark Street Mission Band Have Enjoyable Outing

The members of the Mission Band of Mark street church were entertained by the Women's Missionary Society at a delightful picnic at Nicholls' Oval yesterday afternoon. There was a large attendance and the afternoon was thoroughly enjoyed by the young folks.

The monthly meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society of Mark street church will be held at the home of Mrs. Rightmyer on Thursday, July 19th.

SOMETHING NEW

THE "BELL" CAR

To those who require a heavier and more expensive car than the Ford, I take pleasure in announcing that I have taken the agency for the new "BELL" car, in addition to the popular Ford line.

Come and look over the "BELL" at $1185 f.o.b. Barrie, Ont. It will give you a full-sized, full-powered five-passenger car, with every new improvement and refinement in design, upholstering and finish. It is sturdily built, runs with the smoothness of the most expensive cars, and is the most up-to-date car of its size on the market.

I am now in a position to supply the "BELL" and to give customers the regular Duffus Garage service, so well-known throughout the country.

112 SLACKERS IN STRIPES.

Chicagoans try to Mob I.W.W. Draft Dodgers on Way to Prison.

Chicago, July 10.—One hundred and twelve "slackers," wearing the striped garments of imprisonment and with hair sheared, will begin to-morrow to serve their sentences of a year and a day at hard labor.

The I.W.W. agitators sentenced by Judge Landis in Freeport on Thursday for violent opposition to the conscription law, arrived at the Bridewell this afternoon.

Several hundred persons gathered outside the Bridewell as the coaches bearing the prisoners drew up. Hoots, hisses and catcalls, mingled with curses and threats, greeted them. Several men in the throng, carrying tin cans, rushed forward and attempted to tie these "emblems of rubbish" to some of the prisoners.

Cries of "Let me get a wallop at one of 'em!" "They're a bunch of cattle!" and "Back to Germany with 'em!" arose from the crowd.

As the prisoners were being led up to the Bridewell gate gate, over which waved the Stars and Stripes, one of them shouted, "I'd rather be here than fighting for that rag!"

A wail went up from the crowd of onlookers. "Let me at that traitor!" yelled one.

Tin cans were pounded against the walls and curses yelled at the "slackers" while Deputy Marshals drove their prisoners into the Bridewell.

America Looking After Re-Housing In French Cities

NOYON, France.—Noyon, which has been adopted by the citizens of Washington, who will undertake its reconstruction, is not in the least bit selfish about its good luck, and has constituted itself into a centre for all of the various activities looking towards the restoration of the 243 villages destroyed in its immediate vicinity.

This does not mean that the inhabitants of Noyon itself are helping the outside villages, as that is quite impossible. While Noyon as a city suffered less from the German destruction than any of the surrounding towns and villages the inhabitants suffered all the extortion, cruelty and privations that the Germans were able to inflict.

Now that their immediate and future wants have been guaranteed, they are quite happy to allow all of the various charities from all over the world, (who originally flocked to the help of Noyon) to extend their help to the more devastated towns and districts for a score of miles around.

WELL STOCKED WAREHOUSES

On one side of the principal street of Noyon, Baron de Rothschild has opened a warehouse and stocked it at his own expense with all the articles the war-stricken inhabitants are likely to need.

On the opposite side of the same street, two American ladies have opened a warehouse and stocked it with pretty much the same lines of necessities. The competition between the two establishments is the keenest of any kind that exists at Noyon, even keener than the proverbial competition between the military and the civil authorities.

The American ladies have their own motor truck and personally carry their supplies into the little homes for which they are destined. Baron de Rothschild does not possess a motor truck and his distribution has to be made by the military automobiles.

OTHER TOWNS ADOPTED.

Just as Washington adopted Noyon, and will undertake its reconstruction, other towns and villages are having the good luck to find God-mothers and God-fathers.

The town of Maucourt, near Ham, which suffered to an extreme degree has been adopted by Countess de Chabannes la Pallice. She has erected temporary barracks in which the inhabitants will live until their homes can be rebuilt. Then she will refurnish the homes with all the furniture and utensils that the Germans either carried away or destroyed.

Just at present one of the most interesting questions is "Who's going to adopt Chauny?"

Chauny was an unusually large and prosperous city, the centre of the famous Saint Gobain glass industry. The degree of destruction inflicted here by the Germans exceeds that of any other town or city. In fact, it is so great that American cities less than the size of New York, Chicago, St. Louis or Cleveland, are advised to keep off it as a Godson. Any one of these cities, however, could find in the restoration of Chauny a task worthy of itself.

The English Quakers, who ever since the first invasion of France, have made a specialty of the reconstruction of destroyed homes are also now working out of Noyon.

One of the interesting problems involved in the recultivation of the soil is that of the unexploded grenades and shells which now lie everywhere beneath the surface. A single hand grenade struck by a plow or harrow is sufficient to kill the horses and farmer as well as to destroy the machinery. One which exploded recently underneath a steam plow in the vicinity of Noyon completely destroyed the machine.

To Ward Off Summer Complexion Ills

To keep the face smooth, white, and beautiful all summer, there's nothing quite so good as ordinary mercolized wax. Discolored or freckled skin, so common at this season, is gently absorbed by the wax and replaced by the newer, fresher skin beneath. The face exhibits no trace of the wax, which is applied at bedtime and washed off mornings. Greasy creams, powders and rouges, on the other hand, are apt to appear more conspicuous than usual these days of excessive perspiration. Just get an ounce of mercolised wax at any drug store and use like cold cream. This will help any skin at once and in a week or so the complexion will look remarkably young and healthy.

Sun, winds and flying dust often cause squinting and other contortions which make wrinkles. You can quickly get rid of every line, however caused, by using a harmless wash lotion made by dissolving 1 oz. powdered saxolite in 1-2 pt. witch hazel.

ADVISES CITIZENS TO BUY COAL EARLY

Mayor Church Gives a Warning —City Can't Buy Any

TORONTO, July 10.—The Mayor has issued the following statement regarding the coal situation:

"For some months past the city of Toronto has been endeavoring to purchase a supply of coal for domestic use, in order to overcome any stringency which might occur similar to that experienced last winter. It is very apparent that our efforts have not been successful, as recently a wish was made to representatives of the anthracite mines in different American cities, and in every case we were confronted with a statement that the mines were oversold, transportation being difficult to arrange and dearth of labour, in consequence of which no further orders could be received, thereby placing the city in the position that they are unable to secure a supply of coal for the citizens as was their intention had conditions been favourable.

"However, quite recently the Dominion Government has placed the matter in the hands of a coal commissioner, who has been authorized, in so far as possible, to obviate the probability of a coal famine within any part of the Dominion. His efforts are being directed along the lines of arranging a conference with the authorities at Washington, with a view to better transportation and equalization of prices. The coal commissioner assures the citizens that in no way will his endeavours be relaxed in making every effort to obtain an adequate supply of fuel during the coming winter. However, the best advice that we can offer to the citizens is to endeavor to secure their supply of coal, so far as possible, at an early date."

Railways Make Drastic Reductions

In order to facilitate train movements and release passenger train crews for other work, the railways of the United States are making drastic reductions compared to which those in Canada early this year appear mild. Thus for instance, the Pennsylvania Railroad merely on its lines east of Pittsburg has eliminated no less than 102 trains, or more than double the number taken off the whole of the Canadian railways. This will cut down the passenger movement by an amount equivalent to 2,268,000 train miles per annum or over 6,500 train miles every week day. A number of parlour cars, restaurant cars and observation cars are being discontinued. The Boston and Maine has taken off no less than 255 trains, or more than five times the number taken off in Canada, saving approximately 41,000 train miles per week. Strenuous efforts are also being made to increase the carload and to impress on merchants the importance of rapid unloading so that the freight equipment shall be kept busy to its utmost capacity, and terminals should be kept clear. The American railroads realise that speed in freight movement is one of the greatest aids they can give to help win the war and according to all reports are achieving remarkable results. It is up to Canadians to see that Canada is not left behind in this patriotic race.

DE WILLOUGHBY'S WIFE SEEKING ANNULMENT.

Hueber Girl is Adopted Daughter of Millionaire, and Papers are Served.

Niagara Falls, July 10.—Syracuse lawyers yesterday served papers in an action for annulment of her marriage with Percy G. de Willoughy, brought by Alice Hueber de Willoughy. De Willoughy is still confined in the jail here. The Boston police have not appeared to take him back to Boston. The papers show that the Hueber girl is an adopted daughter of the wealthy Syracuse contractor.

Found Dead in Lindsay Hotel

William H. Andrews Met a Tragic Death in the Simpson House

LINDSAY, July 11.—Lindsay citizens were startled when they learned of the rather tragic and unexpected death of Mr. William H. Andrews, of Haliburton, which occurred at the Simpson House some time between Friday morning last and Monday night. When the clerk took a guest to the room (which he thought was empty) he found the door bolted on the inside. When later on Chief Short forced his way through the door they found the deceased lying prone on the bed, quite dead.

A sad sequel is interwoven in the tragedy. It appears that William Andrews has been living alone (a somewhat secluded life) on the shores of Drag Lake, Haliburton, where he kept two or three boats for hire amongst the tourists and villagers. Recently he loaned two canoes to Messrs. Laking and Lindsay, whom it will be remembered met a watery grave a few weeks ago. A few days following this tragedy Mr. Andrews visited Clark's store in the village, where he made a few purchases, but it was noticed that he talked at random and that his mind seemed to be occupied with thoughts of the drowning tragedy. His condition was made known to a brother residing at Cochrane, Ont., who immediately had the old man removed to Cochrane, or some other place, where he might secure rest and forget the tragedy.

Returned to Lindsay.

This place he left and it was assumed that he had returned to Haliburton. Then he was missed and Monday morning a couple of gentlemen from Haliburton visited Lindsay, making enquiries for Mr. Andrews. They were informed by Mr. Mulvaney, clerk at the Simpson House, that he had registered on Thursday night and departed Friday morning, and it was thought for Haliburton. The discovery of his death was made last night, as stated above.

In conversation with the proprietor of the hotel it was stated they fully believed that Mr. Andrews had left for his home. Friday morning last the upstairs girl made her rounds as usual, but finding the room of Mr. Andrews locked, she left and returned later, only to find it still locked. She did not report to the hotel management, and being a new girl assumed that everything was all right. Then she left.

One theory advanced is that the deceased left the hotel, wandered about the country for a day or so and returned again to his bed, as his condition was not such as would be expected from a corpse of four days.

An inquest will be held.

"LOG CABIN CAMP LIFE"

The log cabin camps that the Grand Trunk operate in Algonquin Park have become one of the popular features in this Government reserve. To put camps of this kind deep in the heart of the wilderness, and touch the wild life of the forest and lake with a most acceptable bit of civilizaton in the form of grate fires, hot and cold running water, bath tubs and inside toilet arrangements, is decidedly a feat worthy to be spoken of when summer resorts are mentioned. PROCLAMATION OF THE PRESIDENT DRAFTING THE NATIONAL GUARD

WASHINGTON, D.C.—The President's proclamation drafting the National Guard, follows:—

"Whereas, the United States of America and the Imperial German Government are now at war, and having in view the consequent danger of aggression by a foreign enemy upon the territory of the United States and the necessity for proper protection against possible interference with the execution of the laws of the Union by agents of the enemy, I, Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States, by virtue of the authority vested in me by the constitution and the laws of the United States and through the Governors of the respective States, call into the service as of and from the dates hereinafter respectively indicated all members of the National Guard and all enlisted members of the National Guard Reserve of the following States, who are not now in the service of the United States, except members of staff corps and departments not included in the personnel of tactical organizations, and except such officers of the National Guard as have been or may be specifically notified by my authority that they will not be affected by this call, to wit:—

"On July 15, 1917, New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, West Virginia, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, North Dakota, South Dakota and Nebraska.

"On July 25, 1917, Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, District of Columbia, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Illinois, Montana, Wyoming, Idaho, Washington and Oregon.

"The members of the National Guard of the various States affected by this call will be concentrated at such places as may be designated by the War Department.

"And, under the authority conferred upon me by Clause II of Section 1 of the Act of Congress 'To authorize the President to increase temporarily the military establishment of the United States' approved May 18, 1917, I do hereby draft into the military service of the United States, as of and from the 5th of August, 1917, all members of the National Guard and all enlisted members of the National Reserve of the following States, except members of staff corps and departments not included in the personnel of tactical organizations and except such other officers of the National Guard as have been or may be especially notified by my authority that they will not be drafted, to wit:—

"New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio West Virginia, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, District of Columbia, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Illinois, Montana, Wyoming, Idaho, Washington, Oregon, Indiana, Kentucky, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Arkansas, Louisiana, Oklahoma, Texas, Missouri, Kansas, Colorado, New Mexico, Arizona, Utah and California.

"III. All persons hereby drafted shall on and from the fifth day of August, 1917, stand discharged from the militia, and, under the terms of section 2 of the Act of May 18, 1917, be subject to the laws and regulations governing the regular army, except as to promotions, so far as such laws and regulations are applicable to persons whose permanent retention in the military service on the active or retired list is not contemplated by law.

"IV. The members of each company, battalion, regiment, brigade, division or other organizations of the National Guard hereby drafted into the military service of the United States shall be embodied in organizations corresponding to those of the regular army. The officers not above the rank of colonel of said organizations of the National Guard who are drafted and whose officers are provided for in like organizations of the regular army, are hereby appointed officers of the army of the United States in the arm, staff corps or department, and in the grades in which they now hold commissions as officers of the National Guard, such appointments to be effective subject to acceptance, on and from the fifth day of August, nineteen hundred and seventeen, and each of them, subject to such acceptance, is hereby assigned as of said date to the organization in the army of the United States, composed of those who were members of the organization of the National yuard in which at the time of dra' he held a commission. The non-commissioned officers of the organizations of the National Guard, the members of which are hereby drafted, are hereby appointed non-commissioned officers in their present grade in the organizations of the army composed of said members, and shall in each case have the same relative rank as heretofore; and all other enlisted men are hereby confirmed in the army of the United States in the grades and ratings corresponding to grades and ratings provided for in like organizations of the regular army, all such appointments of non-commissioned officers and confirmation of other enlisted men in their grades to be without prejudice to the authority of subordinate commanders in respect of promotions, reductions and changes in enlisted personnel.

"V. Each organization of the military force hereby created will, until further orders, bear the same name and designation as the former organization of the National Guard of whose members it is composed.

"VI. All necessary orders for combining the organizations created by embodying therein members of the National Guard and National Guard Reserve hereby drafted into the military service of the United States, into complete tactical units, will be issued by the War Department."

Kansas City Boy, Of A War Family, Is Doing His Bit

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — His great-grandfather was a lieutenant under Wellington at Waterloo, his grandfather fought for Great Britain in Egypt, and his father was a sergeant during the campaigns in India, so when war was declared in Europe is it a wonder that William James Carroll, 21 year old son of Percy Carroll, 621 Bennington avenue, paid his own passage to England in March, 1916, to enlist with the Canadian volunteers?

And after three months he became sergeant of a machine gun company. Irish blood and Yankee tenacity has now won him a recommendation for a commission.

Letter from the Front.

A letter received by his father, dated May 22, says:

"I applied for a commission in the 'feet' (infantry) to-day and my colonel has recommended me, so I hope to be off to 'Blighty' (England) before long for the officers' training camp. The war is nearly over, but there is still a chance for me to 'go over the top' just once, at least.

"I scarcely know what to write, so I shall picture my every day life in the trenches. Of course, there are no bugles sounded, so when I think it is time for breakfast, I pull on my boots, climb out of my dugout up into daylight, and wade through various depths of mud down a twisting trench to the cook house.

What He Gets to Eat.

"After waiting in line I get fried ham or bacon, bread and butter (oleo) or perhaps jam. This with a mess tin full of tea or cocoa is my breakfast.

"The other meals are much the same, only we have 'bully' (beef) and mulligan for lunch. At tea we usually have hardtack. Although not full rations, the quality is good, but, like Oliver Twist, 'we want more.'

"At evening the fellow who is lucky enough to have a paper reads and then passes it on. Others smoke and all turn in early.

Give "Heinie" Merry Hell.

"We are giving 'Heinie' merry hell here and, I believe, all along the allied front. You cannot imagine the ground 'Fritz' retired over. His lines and the ground at his rear are just like a thimble—all shell holes and mine craters.

"The killed and wounded were all over the place, and some were terrible to see. The noise of the guns the last few days before the offensive was earsplitting, and on the morning of the advance Fritz's line was a mass of flame and bursting shells. They had signs up in the trenches saying there weren't enough Canadians in France to take that part of the trench. They know different now."

Mr. Carroll distinguished himself for his bravery at the battle of Vimy ridge.

"My dear, you'll never be able to drive that nail with a flatiron. For heaven's sake use your head."—Ladies' Home Journal.

Queen Mary Hospital Closed

Dr. Amys Reports the City in a Healthy Condition—Accounts Passed

At a meeting of the Board of Health last night, Dr. Amys, M.H.O., congratulated the Board on the healthy condition of the city, which is such that the Isolation Hospital is closed at present.

The Board granted Dr. Amys two weeks' holidays, to be taken at his own convenience, when Dr. Hammond will be acting Medical Officer of Health and paid at the same rate as Dr. Amys, by the Board. Dr. Amys will remunerate Dr. Hammond for such time as he may act for him other than his holidays.

Money Due.

The report of money due the Isolation Hospital, amounting to $67.64 for indigent patients since the first of the year was read and approved.

The milk tests taken this month proved satisfactory, except in one case, where the standard was low.

The following sewers were recommended: On Gilchrist street, from London to McDonnel; on Romaine street from Park to Monaghan road, and on Monaghan road, from Romaine to Laval street, the latter sewer for the convenience of the Henry Hope Co.

The public will be prohibited from burying night soil on property.

Accounts Paid.

The following accounts were received and ordered to be paid:

United States Considers Substitution of Casualty Insurance.

WASHINGTON, July 10.— The administration purposes to abolish the system of pensions for wounded soldiers and for the surviving kin of soldiers killed in battle and to substitute therefor a casualty insurance plan. A committee of officers of some of the largest life insurance companies in the country will begin a series of conferences with Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo this week on the formulation of the proposed legislation. The tentative proposals are: A minimum compensation of $1,500 for the death of an enlisted man; a maximum compensation of $1,500 for a total disability; a maximum compensation of $5,000 for the death or total disability of an officer. It is proposed to pay this compensation in a series of instalments extending over a period of years.

BRITAIN'S AIR SERVICE NOW UNDER HOT FIRE

Plenty of Planes and Pilots, Says News, But Not Kept Ready.

NEW YORK, July 10.—An Associated Press cable from London this morning says:

Premier Lloyd George's speech at the secret session of the House of Commons was issued too late for press comment, but other comments on the air raid, which continue the uppermost topic, indicate that the official version of the Premier's speech is likely to be a deep disappointment. Some newspapers forestall the Premier, saying that if the explanation is to be that there is no airplane defence of London, because it is needed at the front, the obvious retort is that there ought to be enough for both.

The Daily News claims authoritative information that there are plenty of airplanes and plenty of pilots and fighters, but that they are not kept ready. If they had been prepared to rise immediately, as they are at the front, the invaders, the paper says, would have been smothered in the proportion of three and four to one. It is declared that on the occasion of the recent raid at Harwich warning was given ninety minutes before the British machines rose. The Daily News claims that the organization is defective and ought to be remedied.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

KING PINS WIN TWO FROM C.G.E.

Last night at the Water Street Alleys the King Pins took two out of three games from the Canadian General Electric team. The whole three games were keenly contested. The King Pins won the first game by 31 pins, but the Canadian General Electric team came back in the second and won out by a good margin. The King Pins won the third game by 11 pins. Solomon was high man for the King Pins, with a total of 400, while Fielder, for the Canadian General Electric, had high three games, with a 445 total, and also high single of 173.

To-night the South End and the Grocers are scheduled for a fast game. Last night's scores were as follows:

King Pins—

ATTENDED BUCK'S BIG DANCE

Despite the inclement weather the big open-air dance, held last evening at the Grand Hotel, attracted a number. The big floor was laid out in the back yard and the whole was illuminated by incandescent lights hung overhead. Nicholls orchestra supplied the music. Dances of all kinds were indulged in and a couple of experts were on hand to introduce all the latest steps.

HAIR-RAISING BATTLE WON IN SEVENTEENTH BY THE HIGHLANDERS

ST. LOUIS, July 10.—St. Louis and New York battled for seventeen innings to-day, a single by Baker in the seventeenth driving in Peckinpaugh with the winning run for the visitors. The score was 7 to 5.

Wonderful fielding shut off several runs. In the fourteenth, with men on first and second and one out, Arragon hit a hot liner toward left, but Austin leaped into the air, speared the ball with his left hand and touched second for a double play.

In the sixteenth, after Marsans singled and Sothoron had sacrificed, Shotton hit a low line drive to centre, but as Marsans was about to score Hendrix raced in, made a sheer string catch, and doubled Marsans off second.

In the seventeenth Peckinpaugh walked, Arragon sacrificed, Pipp walked, Baker singled, scoring Peckinpaugh, and E. Miller singled, scoring Pipp. Score:

be forwarded to Provincial Secretary McPherson, protesting against the appointment. It is understood Mr. Rankin, who has been interviewed by veterans, will consider appointment of returned soldiers, stating that when he made the recommendation, he secured a man who understood tilemaking, on which prisoners are employed, but Mr. Rankin was told by veterans that this class of work was not too heavy for them.

KINGSTON, Ont., July 10.—Post-James Stewart received a cable this afternoon announcing that his son, Lieut. Rodgie Stewart at the front with "A" Battery, R. C. H. A., had been killed in action. He was 22 years of age and went overseas in 1914. He was a graduate of the Royal Military College. Major J. C. Stewart, his brother, who has been at the front in France since the beginning of the war, sent the news of his death, stating that he had been granted leave to attend the funeral.

READY FOR THE TWELFTH

Transport Service is in Good Shape

Automobiles from all over the county of Peterborough have been chartered for to-morrow, when the local Orangemen will journey to Port Hope for the purpose of celebrating the Twelfth of July. Any district lodge that is unable to provide for its own needs will be looked after by the city lodges. This afternoon it was reported that accommodation had been provided for five hundred Orangemen.

"AT HOME" WAS ENJOYABLE EVENT

A very successful at home was held by the Women's Missionary Society of the George St. Methodist Church yesterday afternoon from 3 to 6 p.m. The grounds looked beautiful with their foliage and flowers, and the house decorated with flowers everywhere also presented a charming appearance. Delightful music was furnished by Mrs. Foster, violin, and Mrs. Fenwick, piano, their programme being greatly enjoyed by the large crowd present. Mrs. Renwick contributed two vocal solos in excellent voice, and Miss Mather an enjoyable piano solo. Rev. A. J. Thomas gave a short but most interesting talk on the work of the W.M.S. The social committee served refreshments during the afternoon.

At the June meeting of the Society Miss Might, the delegate to the Branch Convention, gave a splendid report.

The New Shoe Store

The "Walk-Easy" shoe store opened its doors this morning for a share of public patronage. The premises, which is situated at No. 330 George street, has been specially fitted up for footwear, is quite centrally situated, near the Market Arcade, and has been treated to an attractive interior, finished in white.

A general stock of seasonable shoes has been opened up and displayed, covering an assortment of the newest season's styles. The manager is Mr. Frieman, who recently retired from the Toronto Ladies' Tailoring Co. of this city, and who has been favorably known in this connection as a good business man, possessing energy and push.

Leaves $3,500,000 To 400 Employees Who Helped Him Make It

BOSTON.—Appreciation of faithful services of his 400 older employes by dividing $1,000,000 among them, with further provisions giving them, sixty per cent. of the income of $2,500,000, this principal also ultimately to be distributed among them with certain limitations, was expressed in the will of John Bartlett Pierce, of Peabody, Mass., vice president of the American Radiator Company, who died June 23. Mr. Pierce's will was filed for probate here. Not one of the beneficiary employes had the slightest intimation of the contents of the document until after the testator's death.

Mr. Pierce, who was founder of the radiator business in the United States, left an estate estimated at $5,000,000. Seven-tenths of this fortune is, therefore, given by Mr. Pierce to the men who helped him make it. It is his associates and employes in that company to whom his will pays tangible tribute for their "keen business ability combined with a true sense of honour, a high quality of integrity and a conscientious and loyal devotion to the performance of duty, and for their splendid spirit of co operation," the bequests consist of stock in the business.

In addition to the million lolla's to be distributed at once among the employes, Mr. Pierce left $1,000,000 outright to his widow and $500,000 in various bequests to relatives and friends. The residuary estate of $2,500,000 is left in trust, forty per cent of the income to go to the widow and two half sisters, and sixty per cent. to be distributed among the employees in the same ratio as the outright million dollar bequest. After the deaths of the widow and sisters the principal of the trust fund is to be distributed among the employees.

The will provides that the employees to enjoy these benefits must have been in the service of the company at least ten years at the time Mr. Pierce drew the will in December, 1913, and also places certain limitations on the amount, both as to income and principal, of the residuary estate each individual employe shall receive.

The executors and trustees of the will are Clarence M. Woolley and Frank M. Peters, of New York, and Rolland J. Hamilton, of Chicago.

Press Comment On Prussian Spy Evil

"ACTION WILL BE WELCOMED"

Cleveland Plain Dealer:—"Announcement that the United States government is organizing a new secret service department to cope with the menace of German espionage in this country will be welcomed as an indication of a thorough-going determination to spare no effort in the safe-guarding of America's military and naval forces and to take no unnecessary chances with a capable and unscrupulous foe."

"IS A GIANT TASK"

Boston Globe:—"Ridding this country of spies is a giant's task. The Secret Service faces a big job. It will take time. The work must go on quietly, the public never knowing what has been done until the evidence for conviction is produced in court."

"THEIR SUCCESS IS HOPED FOR"

Rochester Union and Advertiser:—"With the spy system as efficient as it has proved itself to be, the necessity for breaking it up is apparent. Despatches from Washington say that the greatest efforts are to be made to this end and that all the departments of the government are to unite in the work of ferreting out the employes of the Kaiser in this country. It is to be hoped that they will be successful, and that soon."

"BEGIN WITH HIGHER OFFICES"

Baltimore American:—"It might be well in setting the anti-spy pack on the scent to begin with the higher offices and those related thereto and to investigate as well the antecedents of all persons taken or being taken into the federal service, not excepting those who are associated with the Bureau of Information."

"LEFT A COMPLETE SPY SYSTEM."

Brooklyn Eagle:—"That Count von Bernstorff left a complete spy system here is not to be doubted. It is not a matter to cause surprise or undue alarm, and we hope that the present activity on the part of the government is not entirely due to the fit of spy fever that followed the announcement that German submarines had foreknowledge of our troop movements."

His hair, especially that of the top of the head, seemed to be a bit "mussed up."

"What's de matter?" asked a friend.

"Mah foots is sore," explained the boy. "Pap, he done hit me on de haid wif his ax, an' I was standin' on some ole iron."—Atlanta Journal.

He wondered why his wife turned cold on him and remained so for several days. All he said in remonstrance was:

WEDDING BELLS

CASEY—SKUCE.

A very pretty wedding took place on June 27, at the home of Mrs. Richard Skuce, of Emily, when her daughter, Miss Jennie was united in marriage to Mr. R. L. Casey, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Casey, of Emily. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. P. MacInnes, B.A.

The bride entered the prettily decorated parlour on the arm of her brother, Mr. W. J. Skuce, to the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, played by Miss Rhea Patterson, cousin of the bride.

The bride, dressed in white silk crepe de chine, carried a sheaf of white carnations and fern and wore the groom's gift, a gold wrist watch.

During the signing of the register Miss Patterson sang "Because," after which a dainty supper was served.

Only the immediate friends of the contracting parties were present. The bride and groom were unattended. The groom's present to the pianist was an amethyst brooch.

The bride and groom left later, amid the good wishes of their friends, for their future home in Emily.

Pte. M. Tobin Tells of Going Over The Top At Vimy Ridge

Mrs. E. Kendry has received the following most interesting letter fro mher brother, Pte. M. J. Tobin, 21 Canadian, B.E.F., France:

France, June 14th, 1917.

Dear Sister:—Just a few lines in answer to your very welcome letter which I received yesterday, and was pleased to hear all were well, as this leaves me at present. Well Mary, we are out for a month's rest after a very hard spell. We are on a very warm part of the front, and something doing every minute. We have very poor trenches just where we advance and dig ourselves in and sleep in the trenches is a thing of the past. I have not had my clothes off since I came back from the hospital, and when we are in the trenches we are twelve days without taking off our boots, so this is no picnic out here. One thing in our favour, we have had beautiful weather, and only have had one day's rain since the advance on April 9.

That was sure some day, and I was only back from the hospital, and feeling very poorly, but went through all without a scratch; the daylight broke looking like a fine day, but about 5 o'clock it started to rain, and at 5.30 the artillery opened up and over the top we went after Fritz, and we sure must thank our artillery, as it was more like a ploughed field than a line of trenches, but the Germans had concrete gun emplacements that would stand any kind of shell fire, and their machine-gun fire accounted for most our killed and wounded. Our Brigadier had about 1,500 yards to advance and in that distance we had over 1,000 prisoners, and the ground covered with German dead. After reaching their fourth line of trenches we had no hand-to-hand fighting, but from then on until we drove them entirely over the ridge, we were subject to all kinds of shell fire, and about 9 o'clock that morning it started to snow and rain mixed, and the mud was knee deep, and that night we were wet to the skin and took our knives and scraped the mud off our clothes. We had to make our own trenches under shell fire, and believe me that is the time one will swing the pick and shovel, and for four days we held the face of the ridge and under a continuous shell fire, but during the nights the Germans withdrew their artillery back, and after four days we advanced three miles and dug ourselves in, but this line was only held for a few days, when we were advanced again about one mile. This line we are holding yet, and I never want to go through the like again.

I saw Austin; he was lucky enough to miss the advance, and hope he is lucky enough to miss the next one. I spent all Saturday afternoon with him, and am going on a pass for a day to see him, on Saturday. I suppose you have seen that Vince has been wounded. He was wounded over the left eye, but the sight is not affected and his wound is only slight; but I think he will not see much more fighting, as this thing is coming to a finish before long. There is not a day but there is a bunch of German prisoners coming in, and from the letters that have been taken off them and published in English papers for our benefit, Germany's civilian population is at the verge of starvation. There were some very pitiful letters from wives to their husbands, and the prisoners, themselves, claim they are very poorly fed. One thing sure they cannot finish it too soon for me, but if God spares me I expect to be home this fall. We are having fine weather here, and is sure sunny, France. We are camped in a beautiful part of France, and about ten miles behind the firing line, so we are bomb-proof for a time.

Well, Mary I think I have told you all for now, so will close. Bye-bye, write regular, from your

DOGS AND AUTOS ARE BOLSTERING TREASURY

Jos. H. Wolstenholme, $5, tail lamp out; Wm. Patterson, River Road, $4.60, dog running at large; M. Lonergan, Perry street $4.60, dog at large; Geo. N. Graham of the Empress, $4.60, dog at large.

These fines were collected in police court this morning. Charlie O'Hara was fined $2 for the reason that his dog was found at large. He stated that he had kept his dog tied, but his three year old child had let it loose in some way without the knowledge of any of the other members of the family.

Good Showing By Local Youngsters

Trumpeter Sam Whitehouse, son of Mr. Frank Whitehouse, who went overseas with the 66nd Battery, made a fine showing in the swimming race at the big sports at Woking, England, last month. The Peterborough youngster reached the semi-finals in this competition, in which there were no fewer than 400 competitors. On the same day Sergt. Chas. Thorpe of Peterborough won the one-mile open race.

Cocoanut Oil Makes A Splendid Shampoo

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else, that contains too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Just plain mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and entirely greaseless), is much better than anything else you can use for [illegible] it's possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months.

Says That Germans Refused To Believe The United States Had Declared War Against Them

Significant Report of Reception of News By Belgian-German Staff is Given by J. A. Gade, Who Has Returned From War Zone, Where He Assisted in Relief Work—What Belgium Faces.

VON BISSING'S PLAN

"When the German officers in command of the army in Belgium received news from their own wires of the entrance into the war of this country, they refused absolutely to believe the report. From commanding general down, the staff declared that there was a mistake in transmission from Berlin. Later, when forced to put credence in the report, these officers made it a business to avoid the word war; they spoke of a temporary break in friendly relations."

This significant description of the German thought about America's attitude toward Germany and the war was given to a representative by Mr. J. A. Garde of New York in Rochester, for whose forceful speech will be remembered by those who heard it. Mr. Gade has lately returned to this country from Belgium, where, for six months, he was one of Mr. Hoover's aides in Belgian relief superintendence. Mr. Gade had charge of the work in one of the large Belgian provinces; he was constantly in touch with Belgians of all classes and with the German army.

"There can be no doubt," continued Mr. Gade, "that the news of the United States's entrance into the war was a complete surprise to the German command in Belgium. Nor do those of us who had known German officers of rank there question the fact that this surprise was universal throughout the whole German army. It is, of course, only possible to surmise that the surprise was shared by the German government; possibly the army was kept in ignorance of what Berlin saw coming. But possibly, too, Berlin itself, had miscalculated on information furnished from this country. It is interesting ground for speculation.

"I purposely kept from telling of Belgian experiences in what I had to say, for I simply desired to give what help I could to the Red Cross, drive so finely started here in Rochester and moving now with such splendid momentum. But there are things which those of us who were privileged to serve in relief work in Belgium will never forget or cease to discuss with interest.

WELDING A NATION.

"Perhaps the most momentous thing I ever saw was the welding into a hot fire of patriotism, of love of monarch and of country, of a people somewhat indifferent to both. Belgium was the most devoted of all nations to peace and industry; in these she was intensive always. But in politics she was given to parties, disagreements and apathies. Albert was a good enough king; he was honest and a desirable figure in the government. But he meant nothing to the people, whereas the party loyalties of Walloons and Flemings, of Catholics and Protestants, of Germanic stock and of French stock—these were the things which counted.

"To-day parties, sects, races count as nothing in the love and devotion of the whole Belgian people to king and country; that people loves its king and proves it by dying and living in the constant and imminent danger of death for him; he typifies Belgium to every Belgian, and it is a vivid memory to have seen this welding of a loosely joined populace into a nation. There are no pacifists left in Belgium and yet no people will love peace as will the Belgians. But when they reconstruct themselves their first step in protection for the future will be universal military service. The whole thought of Belgium is united on this. They will have the best trained army they can manage; it will be equipped with everything known to modern warfare and the country will be fortified by every device military science has found good. Ask a Belgian what this is for, and he will tell you Belgium has learned what it is the only efficient form of national insurance. It would be a cure for some of our really intelligent and since pacifists to become acquainted with Belgium to-day.

What Belgium Faces.

"And now Belgium is face to face with its final sacrifices. We have had to tell the Belgians to kill their cattle. The reduction from $16,000,000 to $12,000,000 of relief fund means just this. For meat and fats they must use up their own supplies, and these have been depleted by German depredations. Cattle from the fields, money from the banks, metals wherever found, material wealth of all sorts have been taken in the cruel toll of 50,000,000 francs monthly which is levied on the nation by the Germans.

"One thing the Germans did not touch—the food and supplies sent to the relief commission. I saw many a case of the power of German discipline, for it was true, and this may be a surprise, that the Belgians had more and better food at times than the German soldiers. I have seen absolute hunger on the faces of German soldiers as they watched the distribution of food to the Belgians, but while I was in charge of the work, I never saw a German soldier take any of this food for himself. Everything else they took, but relief supplies were held inviolable. What is to come now is a problem. If the relief work had been preyed upon, England would have declared agreements broken the relief would have ceased and it would have taken a half million of German soldiers to have controlled the raging anarchy of Belgium. Those soldiers Germany could ill spare. But if the end draws near and desperate measures are adopted, I do not know what will happen.

Von Bissing's Plan.

"I do not know what General von Bissing would have proposed for he told me some weeks before his death. He would have proposed taking into Germany every able-bodied man and woman of the Belgian nation to be put to work there, and he would have moved the old people and the children over the lines of the Allies and into their keeping before the bayonets of his troops. Von Bissing is gone, but the danger of Belium remains. For the country is stripped to the buff. The people have little left but courage and devotion to the cause. So far as Belgium is concerned the U-boat campaign is successful in threatening starvation.

"Do you know what killing off their cattle means to the Belgians? It means no more children, for without milk child life cannot be sustained. There is a Belgian commission here to tell the government of what haste in our getting into this war means to the Belgian nation. I never saw any failure in the high hope and indomitable grit to win through on the part of any Belgian, but you can see the eager longing with which they wait the coming of our troops and ships in numbers to make the end of the war more sure. France is equally fine in courage and eager in her welcome of our aid, but France is still able to fight and to feed her people. Belgium faces starvation of her children.

"From all this you can see how much these of us who have seen Belgium and France in the war want to do what we can to help Red Cross and all the things this country is preparing for its part in the war. There is need of all the haste we can make and I feel that the knowledge of this and the will to do it are here now. Not long after my return from Belgium I visited the old field where I played my college football. The field was filled with young men, the finest of the fine it seemed to me. But there were no footballs, nor baseballs, nor no sports clothes. Nothing but khaki and military means and an eager attention to the business of drill. I could see the light of the spirit of their grandfathers in the faces of these young men, they have becomed convinced of the need of doing what this country has undertaken. There are comparatively few of us now who have seen this war but there will be thousands of Americans who will know at first hand what Belgium and France are doing and why they do it so bravely and hopefully.

"All that is needed to make this nation drive into this war with practical unanimity of energy is knowledge of its facts. And this knowledge is being gotten now and will become more and more fully known to the nation. In the light of such knowledge we shall not fail Belgium and France. Their courage is not breaking in the least; they will go on as long as they can have any strength left. But they need us now. And they need us now and the rest of the world will need Red Cross as never before."

Drafted Men And Volunteers Will Be On The Same Footing

No Distinction Will Be Made in Regard to Pay or Promotions It Is Announced in the House—Further Discussion of the Conscription Bill.

OTTAWA, July 11.—The House this afternoon again took up the Conscription Bill.

Charles Marcil of Bonaventure, asked whether under the law proposed the conscript soldiers should be on the same basis in regard to promotions and pension as the volunteer.

"Under the Act," said Mr. Meighen, "they are on exactly the same basis."

Mr. Oliver asked if the limitation in the Act of the number of men to be raised to 100,000 meant that after that had been done Canada's obligation in the war ended.

MORE IN WAR THAN EVER.

"On the contrary," said Mr. Meighen, "Canada will be more in the war than ever when the 100,000 have been raised. It will be for Parliament, however, to decide whether further authorization shall be made or not."

Mr. Oliver asked what relation this clause bore to the pledge given by the Prime Minister. The Prime Minister answered that the bill had no relation to the "supposed" pledge beyond the fact that is reserved to Parliament power to authorize 100,000 more men. If more were required, then only a short bill would be necessary. The Premier said it had not been a pledge, but an authorization.

STILL 50,000 SHY.

"Hear, hear," said Mr. Oliver. "I may say that this bill does not propose to implement that authorization or pledge or whatever it may be called. We take credit, under false pretences for having enlisted 100,000 men for overseas service. But the figures show that 75,000 of these would never go overseas and should, therefore, be deducted. Even adding the 100,000 conscripts we are still shy 50,000 of the pledge made in January, 1916.

MR. OLIVER'S STORY.

"The purpose of this bill is to raise 100,000 men," said Premier Borden. "Until Parliament meets again it is not desirable to increase this number."

"May I ask the Solicitor-General how long it will be before the number is raised," said Mr. Oliver.

"We expect before the next session," replied Mr. Meighen, "meanwhile our immediate object is to get this bill through. The longer we spend on it here the longer we will be raising the required number."

"I will tell a story to the Solicitor-General apropos of that remark," said Mr. Oliver. "An Irishman who had missed his train was told by a friend that he hadn't run fast enough.

"'Be dad,' said Pat, 'that wasn't the trouble. I didn't start soon enough.'" (Laughter).

Mr. Oliver asked how many classes were expected to be called out. Mr. Meighen replied that it was impossible to say, though it was hoped that only a few of the first classes would be called.

SEEKING OUT SLACKERS.

Mr. Oliver asked what authority the Postmaster-General, Col. Blondin, had for suggesting that men should be raised in the various Provinces by levies.

Mr. Meighen replied that it was simply a suggestion of what might be done.

Mr. Oliver decared that it was very important that sacrifices already made by various Provinces and districts should be taken into consideration. The population of the Dominion of military age should be taken in proportion to their numbers. Unless this were done, then the Government evidently did not intend to give the country a fair deal.

Mr. Meighen declared that the purpose of the bill was to seek out the slackers wherever or in whatever Province they might be.

Mr. Oliver asked whether it was the intention of the Government to take men as he had suggested.

Mr. Meighen answered that it was the intention of the bill to levy according to the available men in each Province.

Mr. Oliver retorted that the bill did not contain any such provision. He was therefore compelled to believe that it was not the intention of the Government to make this a bill of fair services.

"Will my honorable friend tell me what section of the Dominion has fallen short of doing its part," asked Dr. Edwards of Frontenac.

"Ontario is one of them," replied Mr. Oliver, amid loud laughing, from the Liberal side.

"The Postmaster's Daughter"

By LOUIS TRACY

CHAPTER XII.
WHEREIN WINTER GETS TO WORK.

Winter had identified Bates at the first glance. The letters in the man's hand, too, showed his errand, so, while the gardener was climbing the hill, the detective slipped into Robinson's cottage.

He found the policeman awaiting him in the dark, because a voice said:

"Beg pardon, sir, but the other gentleman from the 'Yard' asked me to take him into the kitchen. A light in the front room might attract attention, he thought."

"Just what Mr. Furneaux would suggest, and I agree with him," said Winter, quite alive to the canny discretion behind those words, "the other gentleman."

Robinson led the way. Supper was laid on the table. Poor Mrs. Robinson had again beaten a hasty retreat.

"Now, Robinson," said the Chief Inspector affably, "before we come to business I'll prove my bona fides. Here is my official card, and I'll run quickly through events until 1.30 p.m. today. I met Mr. Furneaux at Victoria, and he posted me fully up to that hour."

So the policeman listened to a clear summary of the Steynholme case as it was known to the authorities.

"I did not warn either Mr. Fowler or you of my visit because a telegram could hardly be explicit enough," concluded Winter. "At the inn I am Mr. Franklin, an Argentine importer of blood stock in the horse line. At this moment the only other man beside yourself in Steynholme who is aware of my official position, is Mr. Peters, and he is pledged to secrecy. To-morrow or any other day until further notice, you and I meet as strangers in public. By the way, Mr. Furneaux asked me to tell you that he found the wig and the false beard in the river early this morning. The wearer had apparently flung them off while crossing the foot bridge leading from the Bush Walk, having forgotten that they would not sink readily. Perhaps he did not care. At any rate Mr. Hart's bullet seems to have laid Owd Ben's ghost. Now, what of this fellow, Elkin? He worries me."

"Can I offer you a glass of beer, sir?"

"With pleasure. May I smoke while you eat? You see, I differ from Mr. Furneaux in both size and habits."

Robinson poured out the beer. He was preternaturally grave. The somewhat incriminating statements he had wormed out of the horse dealer that afternoon lay heavy with him. But he told his story succinctly enough. Winter nodded to emphasize each point, and congratulated him at the end.

"You arranged that very well," he said. "I gather though, that Elkin spoke rather openly."

"Just as I've put it, sir. He tripped a bit over the time on Monday night. But it's only fair to say that he might have had Tomlin's license in mind."

"That issue will be settled to-morrow. I'll find out the commercial traveller's name, and send a telegram from Knoleworth before noon. ... Who is Peggy Smith?"

Robinson set down an empty glass with a stare of surprise.

"Bob Smith's daughter, sir," he answered.

"No doubt. But proceed."

"Well, sir she's just a village girl. Her father is a blacksmith. His forge is along to the right, not far. She'll be twenty, or thereabouts."

"Frivolous?"

"Not more than the rest of 'em, sir."

"Have you seen her flirting with anyone?"

Robinson took thought.

"Now that I come to think of it, she might be said that way. Her father shoes Elkin's nags, so there's a lot of comin' an' goin' between the two places. But folks would always look on it as natural enough. Yes, I've seen them together more than once."

"In that case he can hardly grumble if the postmaster's daughter has an eye for another young man."

"Miss Martin!" snorted Robinson. "She would not look the side of the road he was on! Fred Elkin isn't her sort."

"But he said to-night in the Hare and Hounds that he and Miss Martin were practically engaged."

"Stuff and nonsense. Sorry, sir, but I admire Doris Martin. I like to see a girl like her liftin' herself out of the common gang. She's the smartest young lady in the village an' not an atom of a snob. No, no. She isn't for Fred Elkin. Before this murder cropped up everybody would have it that Mr. Grant would marry her."

"How does the murder intervene?"

Robinson shifted uneasily in his chair. He knew only too well that he himself had driven a wedge between the two.

"Steynholme's a funny spot, sir," he contrived to explain. "Since it came out that Doris an' Mr. Grant were in the garden at The Hollies at half past ten on Monday night, without Mr. Martin knowin' where his daughter was, there's been talk. Both the postmaster an' the girl herself are up to it. You can see it in their faces. They don't like it an' who can blame 'em?"

"Who, indeed? But this Elkin—surely he has some ground for a definite boast, made openly, among people acquainted with all the parties?"

"There's more than Elkin would marry Doris if she lifted a finger, sir."

"Can you name them?"

"Well, Tomlin wants a wife."

Winter laughed joyously.

"Next?" he cried.

"They say that Mr. Siddle is a widower."

"The chemist? Foreman of the jury?"

"Yes, sir."

"From appearances he is a likelier candidate than either Elkin or Tomlin. Anybody else?"

"I shouldn't be far wrong if I gave you the names of most among the young unmarried men in the parish."

"Dear me! I must have a peep at this charmer. But I want those names, Robinson."

Winter produced a note book, so he was evidently taking the matter seriously. The policeman, however, was flustered. His thoughts ran on Elkin, whereas this masterful person from London insisted on discussing Doris Martin.

"My difficulty is, sir, that she has never kep' company with any of 'em," he said.

"Never mind. Give me the name of every man, no matter what his position or prospects, might be irritated, if no more, if he knew that Miss Martin and Mr. Grant were presumably spooning in a garden at a rather late hour."

It was a totally new line of inquiry for Robinson, but he bent his wits to it, and evolved a list, which, if published, would certainly be regarded with incredulous envy by every other girl in the village than the postmaster's daughter; as for Doris herself, she would be mightily surprised when she saw it, but whether annoyed or secretly gratified none but a pretty girl of nineteen can tell.

Winter departed soon afterwards. Before going to the inn he had a look at the forge. A young woman standing at the open door of the adjoining cottage, favored him with a frank stare. There was no light in the dwelling. When he returned after walking a little way down the road, the door was closed.

Next morning, Bates heard of Peters as the detective and of Mr. Franklin as the "millionaire" from South America. Moreover, he scrutinised both in the flesh, and saw Robinson salute Peters, but pass the financial potentate with indifference.

Alas, that a reputation once built should be destroyed!

"I was mistook, sir," he reported to Grant later. "There's another 'tec about, but 'e aint the chap I met last night. They say this other bloke is rollin' in money an' buying horses right and left."

"Then he'll soon be rolling in the mud, and have no money," put in Hart.

"Who is he?" inquired Grant carelessly.

"A Mr. Franklin, from South America, sir.

Grant and Hart exchanged glances. Curiously enough, Hart remained silent till Bates had gone.

"I must look this joker up, Jack," he said then. "To me the mere mention of South America is like Mother Carey's chickens to a sailor, a harbinger of storm."

But Hart consumed Tomlin's best brew to no purpose—in so far as seeing Mr. Franklin was concerned, since the latter was in Knoleworth, buying a famous racing stud. Being in the village, however, this fisher in troubled waters was not inclined to return without a bag of some sort.

He walked straight into the post office. Doris and her father were there, the telegraphist being out.

"Good day, everybody," he cried cheerfully. "Grant wants to know, Mr. Martin, if you and Miss Doris will come and dine with him, us, this evening at 7.30?"

The postmaster gazed helplessly at this free-and-easy stranger. Doris laughed, and blushed a little.

"This is Mr. Hart, a friend of Mr. Grant's, dad," she explained. "I am afraid that we cannot accept the invitation. We are so busy."

"The worst of excuses," said Hart. "But there is a London correspondent here who hands in a long telegram at that hour."

"What's his name?"

"Mr. Peters."

"Great Scott! Jimmie Peters here? I'll soon put a stopper on him. He'll come, too—jumping. See, if he does not. Is it a bargain? Short telegram at six. Dinner for five at 7.30. Come now, Mr. Martin, it's up to you. I can see 'Yes' in Doris's eye. Over the port—most delectable, I assure you—I'll give full details of the peculiar case of a man in Worcestershire, whose crop of gooseberries increased four-fold after starting an aviary. And what does it matter if you do lose a queen or two in June? The drones will attend to that trifle. ... It's a fixture, eh? Where's Mr. Peters? In the Pull and Push? I'll rout him out."

The whirlwind subsided, but quickly materialised again.

"Peters nearly fell on his knees and wept with joy," anno nced Hart. "He believes that he was given a bull steak for luncheon. He pledges himself to have only five hundred words on the wire at five o'clock."

Meanwhile, father and daughter decided that there was no valid reason why they should not dine with Mr. Grant. Martin already regretted his aloofness on the day of the inquest, though truth to tell, Hart's expert knowledge of bee culture was the determining factor. On her part, Doris was delighted. Her world had gone awry that week, and this small festivity might right it.

Not one word of the improvised dinner party did Hart confide to Grant. He informed the only indispensable person, Mrs. Bates, and left it at that. Grant, a restless being these days took him for another long walk. It chanced that their road homeled down the high street. The hour was a quarter past seven, and Peters hailed them.

Hart introduced the journalist, saying casually:

"Jimmie is coming to dinner, Jack."

"Delighted," said Grant, of course.

Peters looked slightly surprised, but passed no comment. Then Doris and her father appeared. They joined the others, shook hands, and, to Grant's secret perplexity, the whole party moved off down the hill in company. When the Martins turned with the rest to cross the bridge Grant began to suspect his friend.

"Wally," he managed to whisper, "what game have you been playing?"

"Aren't you satisfied?" murmured Hart. "Odeath, as they used to say in the Surrey Theatre, you are as bad as Furshaw!"

There were others far more perturbed by that odd conjunction of diners than the puzzled host, who merely expected Mrs. Bates to belabor him with a rolling pin. Mr. Siddle, for instance, had just closed his shop when the five met. That is to say, the dark blue blind was drawn but the door was ajar. He came to the threshold and watched the party until the bridge was neared, when one of them looking back might have seen him, so he stepped discreetly inside. Being a non-interfering, self contained man, he seemed to be rather irresolute. But that condition passed quickly. Leaning over the counter he secured a hat and a pair of field glasses, and went out. He, too, knew of Mrs. Jefferson's weakness for shopping in Knoleworth, and that good lady had gone there again. Her train was due in ten minutes. A ticket gate led to a narrow passage communicating with the back door of her residence. He entered boldly, rushed the garden and hurried to the angle on the edge of the cliff next to the Martin's strip of ground.

Yes, a spacious dinner table was laid at the Hollies. Doris, Mr. Martin and Peters soon strolled out on to the lawn. The pedestrians had obviously gone upstairs to wash after their tramp.

EXERCISES AND CARE KEEP EYES BEAUTIFUL

Daily Attention Advised, Especially for Women—Most Essential Faculty —Why Old People See Well

No other feature of the human face is so sure an index to the mind and character as the eye, and no arguments are ever required to prove the importance of a beautiful one. Poets have indicted mere sonnets to its luminous beauty than any other charm of women. In the skill with which the eyes are used lies a woman's strongest and most subtle weapon of fascination. The whole gamut of emotions are expressed in the eyes. We can detect almost immediately the character of a woman or man by looking steadily into the eyes. Here we see gentleness, sympathy, a keen mind, defiance, cruelty, viciousness, power and so on.

The organ of sight is the most essential of all our faculties, for without it we live in a world of darkness and are forever helpless to a great extent. It is therefore of supreme importance that we give these delicate workers their measure of daily attention, abstaining from all manner of abuse which is universally common and so retain our sight to old age.

The Fruits of Care

Many people of the older generations are able to do a reasonable amount of reading, sewing and other work, see clearly a distance without the use of glasses, which seems strange to many who have worn glasses from childhood and others from the early twenties. Those who have never worn glasses tell that they have been careful never to abuse them. Many people on the other hand are born with weak eyes, which should make the owners even more careful of them. Middle-aged people oftentimes have brighter eyes than younger ones. The disposition has much to do with the shortness of the eyes and their beauty, but here again the owners will admit they have taken pains to give them attention and never visited the abuse upon them, especially in their younger days.

Beware of Eye Strain

Eye strain soon wilts the beauty of the eyes, making them heavy, dull and inflamed, besides being very injurious, in extreme cases causing temporary or permanent blindness. So soon as redness of the eyeball or lids is observed, immediately the work in hand should be stopped and the eyes bathed and given a long rest.

Reading under a poor light causes more eye strain than any other thing, and where persons read themselves to sleep they awake with red, puffy eyes and frequently a headache to boot. When reading or sewing turn the back to the light, so that it falls over the left shoulder. Never sew on black goods under artificial light. Hold the sewing or reading matter about twelve inches from the eyes.

Do not wear the beauty mesh veil with patterns so near the eye they confuse the sight; the finer the mesh the less likely it will harm the eyes. Never read while wearing a veil, or when riding on trolley cars or trains, or, indeed, in your swift moving motor, since the difficulty in adjustment injures the sight and encourages a blinding headache. Many women do not know that exercising of the eyes should become a daily habit where the health and beauty are to be cultivated and retained.

RULES FOR CROQUETTES

Keep Them in Ice-Box Until Thoroughly Cooled

The croquette, properly made, is delicious and digestible. If bungled in the making, it is a wasted left-over, spoiled for all further use. To turn out successful croquettes they should be made several hours before they are cooked and put into the icebox to become thoroughly cooled. This helps them to keep their shape when they are cooked. The fat in which the croquettes are cooked should be hot, just short of burning, before the croquettes are put in it. They should be cooked not more than two or three minutes and then drained for about two or three minutes on a piece of brown paper in the oven and should be served immediately.

Home-Made Tooth Paste

A good, cheap tooth paste may be made from one cupful of pure salt, one cupful of soot, half a cupful of carbolic soap, half a cupful of bicarbonate of soda mixed with salt. Melt the soap in an enameled saucepan, and when boiling stir in the soot and salts. When thoroughly mixed, set aside till cool.

Good Cleansing Mixture

A good cleansing mixture for the hands. Save all the scraps of ivory and toilet soaps. Cut up fine in enough cold water to cover and boil until dissolved, then stir in corn meal until thick, adding one tablespoon borax. Wet a small baking-powder can and pour in the soap. When cold slip out and cut into cakes.

To Make Clover Vinegar

Gather two quarts of clover blossoms, look over carefully, wash and drain dry. Pour nine quarts of boiling water over one quart of molasses, when lukewarm, add one yeast cake dissolved in a little lukewarm water, and the clover blossoms. Let stand for seven days, then strain and bottle.

Against Tan and Sunburn

The best way to protect the face from tan and sunburn is to apply cold cream, over which is put a generous coating of powder. If one is careful to wipe off the excess cream and to rub the powder into the skin smoothly, it will not show.

Canned Soup

Soup or consomme of any kind can be kept all ready for use in emergencies if canned boiling hot, in perfectly sterilized fruit jars, just as one would can fruit.

To remove grease from wall paper rub the spot over once or twice with a piece of flannel dampened with alcohol.

They are combining serge and pongee or pongee and linen.

A practical navy serge dress is a necessity of every wardrobe.

AIRMAN KILLED BY AN ELECTRIC STORM.

Flight-Lt. Page Probably Struck by Lightning Trying to Climb Above it.

Camp Borden, July 11.—Lightning was probably responsible for the death of Cadet Page of the Royal Flying Corps, whose machine crashed down on a road near Ypers Junction, during the thunder storm which broke over Camp Borden and vicinity last evening.

It is surmised that the aviator was trying to get above the storm when he was struck and instantly killed. He was alone in the machine at the time. Cadet Donellin, who was also flying alone, tried to make a landing in a turnip field when his machine turned upside down on touching the ground. He is in the camp hospital with a compound multiple fracture of the right leg and a badly lacerated chin. He may recover. A third machine which was caught in the storm, managed to make a safe landing. The storm seemed to be somewhat of a cyclone, circling the camp, the centre of which escaped the full force of the lightning, although the rain poured down in torrents, accompanied at first by a strong wind.

Hamilton, July 11.—The airman who was killed when the storm caught him in the air at Camp Borden last night, was Flight-Lieut. Claire A. Page of this city, formerly sales manager of the Canadian Hart Wheels, Limited.

Use a funnel for filling hot-water bottles, and the bottles will last longer.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

HOW I MET MY WIFE

By F. A. MITCHEL

One morning on going downstairs at my hotel for breakfast I stepped up to the office and asked for my mail. The clerk handed me some letters, among which was a tiny missive addressed to me in a feminine hand. On opening it I found a card bearing the name and address of Miss Alida Bainbridge.

Who Miss Bainbridge was I did not know, I fancied that she was some young lady whom I had met and asked to let me know when she visited the city, where I lived. One thing I must be careful about. If I did not recognize her when we met I must skirmish to place her, not letting her knew that I did not remember her.

When I called on Miss Bainbridge she was not at home. I left my card and the next morning received a note from her regretting that she had missed me and would be pleased to have me call again. She was not sure that I would remember her since it was so long we had passed that pleasant summer together at Shelton Springs. Doubtless we had both greatly changed since then.

I had passed a summer at Shelton Springs when I was seventeen years of age. I was then a beardless boy and was now a man of twenty-two with a soft beard of which I was quite proud. I had met a number of young girls there, but had forgotten the names of most of them.

The next time I called a young lady came into the room with whose appearance I was especially pleased. She looked at me quizzically, as though not quite certain as to my identity. I had no remembrance of her whatever, but, controlling my facial expression, clasped her proffered hand in both of mine, saying:

"What a pleasure to meet again one with whom I passed so many happy hours."

"But—but you have changed awfully."

"Awfully?"

"I mean very much. You have developed into quite a man. I should never have recognized you if I had not known who you were."

"You, too, have developed, but you have the same girlish face and figure. You certainly have not lost anything of your beauty."

There was a slight pleasurable blush at this.

"Have you been to Shelton Springs," I asked, "since that happy summer we passed together there?"

"Oh, yes, we have been there every summer for ten years."

"Is the bench still under the tree beside the creek?"

I was looking her in the face when I asked this question, she down at my card, which she continued to toy with. She raised her eyes to mine with a quick glance, then lowered them again. I had done a lot of spooning on that bench, and her action on my mentioning it convinced me that I had made love to her there.

"I dare say," I said, "you have forgotten our sitting there and all about it."

"I am surprised that you remember it."

"Why?"

"Oh, you men are very forgetful. It's five years since that evening. You left the next day and have never seen me since. Doubtless you have sat on benches since beside other girls and said what you said to me."

Had I not been desperately stricken with Miss Bainbridge I might have replied evasively. As it was, I told her that I felt the same—only more so—as I felt at that momentous interview. When she asked me why she had never heard from me in the meanwhile I called her attention to the fact that I was then a boy and she was a girl. What business had we to follow up that which led straight to marriage? She saw no impropriety in two youngsters loving. Engagements sometimes were of very long duration.

While I had no remembrance whatever of Miss Bainbridge, I certainly developed a case of quick love. I called upon her several times a week—that is, when I was not taking her out to amusements. She was making a visit to friends, which she prolonged, and when she departed we were engaged. Then she confessed that she had cherished her girlish love for me ever since that evening we had sat on the bench together at Shelton Springs. Of course it would not do for me to confess that I had no remembrance of sitting there with her any more than with several other girls, so I kept my own counsel.

In due time we were married. One day, only a few weeks after our return from the honeymoon, when I returned from business in the evening, I found my wife had locked herself in her room. With difficulty I persuaded her to admit me and saw that something dreadful had happened. When I asked what it was she burst into tears and pointed to a card on her dresser. It bore the name of Alfred Jones.

Alfred Jones is not my name. I saw at once that the fellow who had sat on the bench with Alida had turned up.

When a woman has loved a man for years and then married another thinking that other to be her real simon pure love, it is a difficult matter to get her over the shock. But I had an advantage in our being married, and even if we had not been I doubt if the original could have dispossessed me. I confessed, penitent, and the storm blew over. I have now got to the point where I can joke about it.

EXERCISE AND HEALTH.

Simple Rules For Developing the Body and Keeping "Fit."

"It isn't necessary to give a lot of time to the job of keeping fit," said the physical director of West Point Military academy. "Ten or fifteen minutes of setting up exercise in the morning and a walk every day—not necessarily a long one, but one in which you march briskly like a soldier, with your head and chest up and your shoulders back—will work wonders. Do you know why so many men are narrow chested and weak? It is because they never have given themselves a chance to breathe and never have given their muscles enough exercise.

"Many people, men, women and children, are semi-invalids most of their lives because of the lack of a few minutes of daily exercise and also because they have never been taught a proper posture and carriage—such, for instance, as we insist upon at all times in cadets—a position in which every organ of the body is held in its proper place, with ample space to carry on its own particular function without restriction, and in which every muscle of the body is furnishing its own transportation, so to speak, and not depending upon other muscles to do for it what it was intended it should do for itself.

"Proper posture and carriage, with shoulders square, chest arched, head erect and body well stretched from the waist up, will of their own account contribute much toward relieving our people of the many petty and not a few of the serious ills from which they are now suffering. They are the foundation of robust health and should be insisted upon in children from the very beginning until they become a habit and as such will displace the disease breeding, slouchy habit now so prevalent among people of all ages and stations."—World's Work.

Acts of the Apostles.

The weight of testimony is in favor of St. Luke as the author of the Acts of the Apostles, though some respectable critics claim that the authorship is quite unknown. There are no sure data for determining the date of the Acts. Various dates have been ascribed. Some think that it was written about the year 80, while others hold that it could not have been written before the second century, about A. D. 125.

Just Indorses the Check.

When you see 2td23, tf34, t2eod, 34pd xyif, wed-sat, medtoc and kindred expressions hitched to the tail of a newspaper article, it is a sign that the editor's motives is running the article were entirely mercenary and he may or may not indorse the sentiments expressed therein.—Kansas Gazette.

ECLIPSED A PRINCE

Beau Brummel Outshone and Then Snubbed the Regent.

STORY OF A FAMOUS CRAVAT.

After His Historic Quarrel With Wales the Beau Won a Sartorial Triumph That Almost Choked His Royal Master With Envy and Dismay.

It was Beau Brummel who was described as "the glass of fashion and the mold of form," and today there are ordinarily only two things which the name of the famous dandy of the English court suggests. One is an arbiter of fashion, the other the incident in which Brummel asked of a companion of the Prince of Wales, "Who is your fat friend?"

In 1836 Beau Brummel still was living, and the New York Mirror, a weekly publication "devoted to literature and the fine arts," printed a biographical sketch of him as a figure in contemporary history. Reading it today makes very real a character now little more than a tradition.

"For an obscure individual without fortune or rank to have conceived the idea of placing himself at the head of society in a country the most thoroughly aristocratic in Europe, relying, too, upon no other weapon than well directed insolence; for the same individual to have triumphed splendidly over the highest and the mightiest—to have maintained a contest with royalty itself and to have come off victorious even in that struggle—for such a one no ordinary faculties must have been demanded," the Mirror said in its issue of June 4, 1836.

It will be well to recall here that George Bryan, Brummel's father, was Lord North's secretary; that the son at Eton and later at Baliol college acquired a reputation for being a "swell dresser," and that still later he was a favorite of the Prince of Wales, who was to become George IV. of Great Britain. The Mirror related the familiar story of the "fat friend," immortalized in a Punch cartoon, explaining the circumstances which led up to it.

A mutual friend had dared Brummel to give an order to Wales, who was then prince regent, and at a dinner the dandy said to him, "Wales, ring the bell!" The prince did so and when a servant appeared said, "Show Mr. Brummel to his carriage." It was to repay the regent for this public humiliation that Beau Brummel uttered his famous question the next day in the street. The prince was growing corpulent and sensitive of the fact, so a feud between the two was launched with the remark.

It is an old story up to this point, but the Mirror proceeded with some facts which probably have never been published since. Brummel boasted that he would put the prince regent out of fashion, made his plans at once and sprang his coup at a brilliant ball given by the Duchess of Devonshire. In the Mirror's own words:

"When the whole assembly were conversing upon his supposed disgrace, Brummel suddenly stood in the midst of them. Could it be indeed Brummel? Could it be mortal who thus appeared with such an encincture of radiant glory about his neck? Every eye was upon him, fixed in stupid admiration; every tongue, as it slowly recovered from its speechless paralysis, faltered forth, 'What a cravat!'"

And then the description of the cravat which confounded the guests at the Duchess of Devonshire's ball:

"There it stood, smooth and stiff, yet light and almost transparent; delicate as the music of Ariel, yet firm as the spirit of Regulus; banding with the grace of Apollo's locks, yet erect with the majesty of the Olympian Jove; without a wrinkle, without an indentation. What a cravat! The prince regent saw and shook, and, uttering a faint gurgle from beneath the wadded bag which surrounded his royal thorax, he was heard to whisper with dismay: '— him! What a cravat!' The triumph was complete."

The Mirror added that the Prince of Wales sent an emissary to Beau Brummel to learn the secret of the wonderful creation in neckwear and that Brummel sent back word, "Tell your master that you have seen his master."

It was not until his debts forced him to flee from England and to take the obscure position of British consul at Caen, in France, where he contracted more debts and finally died insane in 1840, that the secret of the cravat became known. The Mirror said:

"There was found after his departure upon his table the following epigram of scorn: 'Starch is the man.'

"The cravat of Brummel was merely starched. Henceforth starch was introduced into every cravat in Europe."

St. Bernard Dogs.

The true St. Bernard dog originated in the fourteenth century, being a cross between a shepherd dog from Wales and a Scandinavian crossbreed, half Dane and half Pyrenean mastiff. The last pure descendant of the tribe was buried beneath an avalanche in 1816.

There is a perfect specimen of a true St. Bernard dog in the Natural History museum at Berne, where the stuffed body of the famous Barry is preserved. There is plenty of St. Bernard blood left, however, crossed with other strains, and the fame of the breed can never perish.

Here's help in decorating your home inside and outside

People judge you by your home. A beautiful home, well decorated outside and inside is not only a pleasant place to live in—but commands the respect and admiration of your friends and neighbors.

Good decorating results require good taste plus good finishes, plus expert skill in applying. You can get expert advice on all three if you consult us about

Lowe Brothers

Paints, Varnishes, Enamels, Stains

In the selection of paint for the exterior it is economy to use Lowe Brothers "High Standard" Liquid Paint. It is scientifically-made paint that gives perfect protection with lasting beauty. "High Standard" Paint spreads and "goes" farther than cheap paint—sets in a close tight coat—resists years of wind, sun and wet—fails only by gradual wear—leaves a good surface for repainting.

You will always find good paint where you see this sign.

For the walls and ceilings, use Lowe Brothers "High Standard" Mellotone. Its rich colors rest as well as delight the eyes. It is fadeless and washable—not easily scratched or marred—and decidedly economical.

For refinishing furniture, floors and woodwork, Lowe Brothers Vernicol comes in colors to match usual finishes. Easy to use—economical.

For varnish that wears, retains its brilliancy and depth of lustre, choose Lowe Brothers "Little Blue Flag" Varnish—one for every purpose.

For solid colors on old floors use Lowe Brothers Hard Drying Floor Paint.

If you have a decorating problem we'll be glad to help you.

MANSFIELD AS AN ACTOR.

His Genius Enabled Him to Turn Bad Parts Into Good Ones.

We were to open a new theater in Panton street, which was not ready, so we were transferred to the Royalty. Mansfield was a young man then, about twenty-four, I should say. He was practically unknown. He soon began to shine at rehearsal. His part was that of an old beau. J. G. Taylor was to play a certain waiter. The play was an adaptation from the French. Farnie was the adapter, with no pride of authorship, so he allowed Mansfield a good deal of liberty in the way of interpolation and business. Day by day the part of the old beau was built up, especially in Taylor's scenes, until Mansfield's part assumed the proportions of a leading character and Taylor's part, which was the principal comedy part of the play, faded away into the background. We all began to take notice of Mansfield and to perceive that his character was going to be the part of the play.

One day Taylor rebelled. He told Farnie and Alexander Henderson, the manager of the theater, that he was the leading comedian of the company and that Mansfield's character had now become the most important personage in the comedy. He protested violently. Farnie was in a dilemma. Mansfield's business and additions were so clever and so valuable that he deserved the prominence accorded to him. Taylor was an important actor and could not be dispensed with.

Mansfield came forward. "Would Mr. Taylor like my part?" he said.

Taylor felt that, as the principal comedian, the best part belonged properly to him. He ought to have Mansfield's part.

Mansfield handed it to him. "By all means," said he. "Here it is," and he handed over the manuscript covered with interpolations, corrections and business.

We resumed our rehearsals.

"You will allow me," said Mansfield to Farnie—"you will allow me the same privilege with this new part you were so generous as to accord me with the other? Mr. Taylor has the advantage of my suggestions on the other character; you will permit me to do my best with this?"

"By all means," said Farnie, and to work we went again.

Mansfield built up again. Day by day, little by little, his new part absorbed scene after scene.—H. H. Sothern in Scribner's.

Proof That He Knows Something.

"It always makes me laugh."

"What does?"

"To see the man who thinks he knows everything run for the plumber the minute that anything goes wrong with his water pipes."—Detroit Free Press.

It is a pleasure appropriate to man for him to save a fellow man, and gratitude is acquired in no better way.—Dyke.

PICTURES IN THE HOME.

Have Them Appropriate to the Rooms In Which They Are Hung.

Pictures add a great deal to the beauty of a home if they are selected with taste and care. They do not have to be expensive to be beautiful, many delightful reproductions of the works of the old masters being on sale nowadays at prices within the reach of the most modest pocketbook.

Before putting up a picture on your wall be sure that it has some meaning and some beauty. Also it should be appropriate to the room it is to adorn. For instance, family photographs have no place on the walls of a living room. They are too intimate a decoration for a room in which strangers as well as friends are apt to be entertained. Reserve family photographs for the bedrooms or a "den."

Select for the living room landscapes, reproductions of still life, ideal heads and faces and good photographs of masterpieces. Such pictures are not only instructive to the family, but they may form an interesting topic of conversation to the friends who are entertained in this room.

The music room of course should be adorned with good photographs of eminent composers and other musicians, while the library calls aloud for portraits of literary and other public men. —Exchange

BEDS IN COLONIAL DAYS.

The Settee, a Link Between Settle and Sofa, Was Sometimes Used.

Toward the close of the seventeenth century the bed increased in importance. A list of the household furnishings of a Salem merchant in 1690 included "1 great oaken bedd, 1 truckle bedd of maple, 1 large sack bottom bedd, 6 Cambiett bedd curtains, 2 calico bedd curtains, 8 blankett sheets, 2 paire silk bedd curtains."

The settee, which was a link between the settle and the sofa, was sometimes used as a bed. This piece of furniture was both of imported and domestic make. The back and seat were usually incased in turnkey work. With the exception of the arms and braces the entire frame was concealed.

The construction of the colonial settee was identical with one type of the renaissance seat. From Italy it passed into France and from France to England. Holland had no part in its development.

From the Italian palace of the sixteenth century to the New England home of the seventeenth was a far away cry, and yet, barring crude workmanship, the colonial bench was a faithful copy of the renaissance design. The Dutch settlers were unfamiliar with this settee, as they also were with the New England settle.—Argonaut.

On the Witness Stand.

A little flaw in his statements ruins the evidence of the witness. It may be a slight exaggeration, but the opposing lawyer seizes it and uses it to impress upon the jury that this witness is not reliable.

The Advertiser to-day is on the witness stand. If he makes mis-statements he is judged accordingly and his entire advertising is mistrusted.

Wide-awake business men realize this. They tell the truth in their advertisements; not because they are better than they used to be; but because they have learned that it pays.

The advertising columns to-day contain real, dependable information that will save money for you if you follow them intelligently.

NOTE OUR NEW ADDRESS:
176-178 SIMCOE STREET

PUTTING A SALMON RIVER ON THE MAP

SEVEN BEAUTIES FROM ONE POOL. READING FROM RIGHT TO LEFT: MAXMILLIAN FOSTER, W. O. M'GEEHAN, JACK LAIT, GRANTLAND RICE. MAXMILLIAN FOSTER HAS HIS HANDS FULL.

THE map referred to is a map of some importance, for salmon is the big game of the fishermen, and brings in search of it sportsmen from all over the world with big two-handed rods and large noisy reels and (what Canada much desires) a deep purse for camps, guides and outfit. Harry Allen, President of the New Brunswick Guides Association, has known the Cains River as one of the best trout streams in the Province of New Brunswick, and salmon were frequently caught twenty miles up from the junction with the better known Miramichi, but he believed that if the right kind of fishermen got there, they would find salmon all the length of at least eighty miles.

The investigation was made a short time ago by a party of sporting writers and editors from the United States. Maxmillian Foster, a salmon fisherman of twenty years standing, who knows New Brunswick and Newfoundland like a book, and writes for the "Saturday Evening Post"; Hughie Fullerton, of the Chicago "Examiner," Jack Lait, of the Chicago "Herald," Grantland Rice and W. O. M'Geehan, of the New York "Tribune," and L. O. Armstrong, of the Bureau of Commercial Economics, Washington, D.C., an old campaigner who has hunted and fished in the Canadian woods for over fifty years, and A. O. Seymour, General Tourist Agent of the Canadian Pacific Railway, an ardent fisherman.

When they arrived at Fredericton, all the local fishermen were pessimistic. "If there are salmon in the Cains," they said, "you have come at the wrong time. They went out with the ice and are now at sea. Better go home and come back in a month." It was cold and raining, the worst kind of weather for flyfishing, but nothing daunted, they set out.

With eight fishermen, one movie picture operator from the Essanay Company of Chicago, and nine guides, the fleet started out near the head of the Cains River, fishing the pools as they went down. The first day they struck only trout, but from the second day onwards the movie man was busy. Twice he had to choose between two fishermen who had hooked their salmon at the same time. Maxmillian Foster had a basket of thirteen, ranging from seven to eighteen pounds. The largest measured forty-two-and-a-half-inches, which means that if it had been taken in the fall it would have weighed forty-two-and-a-half pounds. Every member of the party had what he came for, thanks to Silver Doctor and Parmachene Belle, the two flies that the Cains River salmon seem to like. In one pool seven beauties, weighing between them sixty-eight pounds, were taken out in two hours, and it was only dark and lack of time that closed the sport. Result, eight happy fishermen, one happy movie man, and one supremely proud Harry Allan, who saw that his claims were justified and that Cains River could take its place for salmon besides the hitherto more famous waters of the Miramichi and the Restigouche.

NEW YORK GREEKS WILL FIGHT HUNS.

Pledge to "Fight Against the Common Enemy of the World—Germany."

New York, July 10.—A pledge to "fight against the common enemy of the world—Germany," was taken by more than 1,000 Greeks, who attended a mass meeting here yesterday. They were members of the League of Greek Liberals of New York.

A resolution was adopted conveying to President Wilson "our soldiers' determination to redeem our national pledges and to stand true to our treaties by supporting, with everything that we have and everything that we are, Venizelos in his ennobling task to array the forces of Greece against the common foe."

2,200,000 BRITISH TROOPS.

Are Located on French Front, Aside From Elsewhere, Says Northcliffe.

NEW YORK, July 10.—England is now maintaining an army of 2,200,000 on the French front, aside from other forces in Africa, Egypt, Palestine, Mesopotamia, and at Salonika, Lord Northcliffe declared to-day, speaking at a luncheon of the Overseas Club.

"The British navy saved democracy in the early days of the war," he said.

"It's confidence that does it."

Yes, Builds You Up in 5 to 10 Days

Iron For the Blood and Phosphorus For the Nerves

Weak, anaemic, run-down, nervous persons will be glad to know that they can be restored back to their youth vigor by the discovery of this new drug called Bonised Phosphorus with Iron.

It is spring time now and every person needs something to build them up. Now you know as well as any doctor will tell you, the curse of spring time is impure blood. It takes many people to their grave, ruins health, makes you weak, runs you down and finally you are a physical wreck.

This new drug is a combination of iron and phosphorus. The iron acts directly on the blood while the phosphorus soothes and strengthens the nerves. You start today and take two or three tablets of Bonised Phosphorus with Iron after meals and in 5 to 10 days you will be 100 per cent. stronger.

This drug does not act like other iron tonics you have taken, but instead, it does not blacken the teeth, upset the stomach or make you constipated. This new drug is dispensed by one druggist in each city. F. C. Weber dispenses it for Peterborough.

Russian Offensive Makes Great Progress

GERMAN RAID IN BELGIUM REPULSED

Roumanian Army Joins With Russians In Huge Offensive

Kalusch Has Been Captured By the Russians and General Brusiloff's Forces Are Active on Long Front---German Raid on the Sea Coast is Repulsed, Field Marshal Haig Announces.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, July 12.—The reorganised Roumanian army has joined the Russian offensive, according to Petrograd cables received to-day at the Russian Embassy.

The Russian advance continues along a greatly widened front of 350 miles, the advices stated.

RUSSIANS TAKE AUSTRIAN HEADQUARTERS.

PETROGRAD, July 12.—Russian troops have occupied Kalusch, formerly headquarters of the Austrian army, taking many prisoners, according to a despatch from headquarters to-day.

PETROGRAD, July 12.—Kalusch, which has been captured by the Russians, is approximately twenty miles southwest of Halicz between the rivers Sivka and Lomnica, and on the main road between Stanislau and Stryj in Galicia. Its capture indicates an amazing progress of the Russian offensive forces through the break in the German lines around Halicz.

PARIS, July 12.—German attacks in the region of Juvincourt and on both banks of the Meuse were completely repulsed, to-day's official statement asserted. "In the Champagne on the Aisne front in the sector of Moulin Laffaux, there was active artillerying," the War Office said.

LONDON, July 12.—Evidently seeking information preliminary to another attempt to advance along the Belgian sea coast, German troops attempted a general raid last night south of Lombartzyde in Belgium, Field Marshal Haig reported the manoeuvre to-day, declaring the Germans had been successfully repulsed. It is believed the Germans are attacking there in hope of relieving the increasing pressure on Lens and Lille.

BERNE, July 12.—The Vossische Zeitung declared to-day that Chancellor Bethmann-Hollweg had resigned. The newspaper asserted that the Kaiser was undecided whether to accept his resignation.

PROBABLY TWO BATTALIONS LOST.

LONDON, July 12. — British losses in the successful German drive around Nieuport, Belgium, probably total two entire battalions (between 2,000 and 2,500 men), Gen. F. B. Maurice, Director of British Military Operations, said to-day.

(By Ed. L. Keen, United Press Staff Correspondent.)

LONDON, July 12.—German reform elements have succeeded in forcing the Kaiser to summon the Crown Prince to Berlin so that the heir to the German throne shall subscribe to constitutional reforms they plan. This was the explanation received from Berne to-day of the heretofore unexplicable summons to the German Prince. The Kaiser has heretofore rigorously ignored his eldest son in governing Germany's internal affairs.

The Berne report declared the Reformists recognized that if any changes were won in Germany's administration, the pledge of the Crown Prince, next on the throne, must be obtained to make them permanent.

DEMOCRACY MAKES A GAIN.

To British observers to-day it appeared out of all the confusion of reports from Germany that the Liberal movement there had been definitely advanced. Whatever the outcome of the present crisis it seemed assured that the democratization of Germany had been brought a little nearer.

One interesting collateral fact cited to-day was the astonishing frankness of newspaper comment which had been permitted by the German censor.

PEKING IS SURROUNDED.

TIEN TSIN, July 12.—Sixty thousand Republican troops now surround Peking. The remnant of the Imperialist forces under General Chang Hsun are intrenching inside the capital city. The Republicans are armed with seventy guns.

BARN RAISING ON BIG SCALE

A new landmark was erected yesterday at R. R. 1, Norwood, in the property of Mr. Edwin J. Fife in the form of a big barn. At 6 a.m. about 85 men met at the farm for the barnraising and by 6:30 p.m. one of the finest barns in the vicinity with concrete and stone foundations, concret floors and wooden walls was completed for the fall crops. At the conclusion of the work about fifty ladies from the surrounding county served a sumptuous repast on daintily spread tables under the trees about Mr. Fife's beautiful home, after which a pleasant and enjoyable social evening was spent. Mr. Fred Roy took some splendid photos of the newly constructed building, and those familiar with the magnificent site of Mr. Fife's farm, situated as it is on an exceedingly high hill, may form some idea of the probabilities of their success.

Suggests Pardee As Temporary Liberal Chief

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, July 12.—A Winnipeg despatch to-day says: "The Manitoba Free Press, Liberal, and the most influential paper in Western Canada, to-day reads Laurier out of the Liberal party, and suggests Chief Liberal Whip Pardee for temporary leader, and F. B. Carvell, of New Brunswick, as eventual leader of the Liberal party in Canada.

GERMANS SHOW GREAT ACTIVITY ON WESTERN FRONT

Field Marshal Hindenburg Trying to Stem Dissatisfaction in Germany By a Big Showing in the Field

BATTLE OF THE DUNES

Special to The Examiner:

(By William Philip Sims, U. P. Staff Correspondent.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN THE FIELD, July 12.— Field Marshal Hindenburg is evidently trying to stem dissatisfaction at home in Germany by a big showing on the western front.

To-day the Prussian troops opposite the whole of the British line were more active than at any time during the past year.

South of the Scarpe the enemy retook a portion of a trench west of Vert wood on infantry hill. In the Lombartzyde section there was great activity.

The German artillery concentration in the battles of the Sand Dunes on the Belgian coast was the biggest since the German efforts at Verdun. Explosives levelled the sand hills and the British trenches, the light house at the mouth of the Yser and the life-saving station were reduced to ruins. Summer cottages were smashed and everything levelled before the attack.

All of these activities of the German fighting force suggest to British officers that Hindenburg has ordered all branches of his army to buck for effect back home. They recalled Hindenberg's recent trip to Berlin and figured that the Kaiser, prodded by the growing unrest through the Central Empires, and goaded by reverses on the East and West fronts, had intimated to the Field Marshal that he had better do something. This belief is borne out by German prisoners. They state dissatisfaction with the present state of affairs abounds in Germany.

Germany is fighting hard in the air. The prisoners recently taken declare enamy commanders give a large share of the credit for the sand dunes victory to the German airmen. Large numbers of planes were concentrated for the attack and they were aloft despite a heavy storm.

BRITAIN'S CROP BELOW NORMAL

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, July 12.—Britain's grain crop shewing is below normal. A special statement issued by the Board of Agriculture forecasting the yield on various staples and based on returns up to July first showed wheat 94 per cent. of normal, barley 98, oats 93. Potatoes were above normal at 106.

SATURDAY'S APPEAL IS A DOUBLE ONE

The call on Saturday in connection with the Red Cross Tag Day is a double one. Funds are needed for the Prisoners' of War work, and for the French Red Cross—two objects that should appeal to every patriotic citizen. It is hoped that the response on Saturday will be a notable one. Through the kindness of Mr. Stinson the Tiz-It Theatre has been placed at the disposal of the Red Cross and will be used as headquarters on Saturday. Workers can obtain their boxes and tags there on Friday afternoon after 3 o'clock.

FIVE MORE LOCAL SOLDIERS ARE BACK FROM FOREIGN SERVICE

Three Members of the 93rd Battalion Who Saw Service in France Return--Pte. Harold Wood, Formerly of the 93rd Battalion, Officially Reported Wounded--To-day's General Military News.

Five more Peterborough soldiers arrived from overseas yesterday and another quota is expected shortly. Yesterday's arrivals consisted of Ptes. Thos. Sargisson, Herbert Yorke and G. Van Norman, who reached here on the 5.35 train and Pte. Chas. Griffin and Andrew Torrance, who arrived on the 9 o'clock train last evening. The first party was met by Ald. Dobbin, Duncan and Stratton and City Clerk Armstrong and the second by Ald. Dobbin and Duncan and the returned men were taken to their homes in motor cars.

Pte. Thos. Sargisson enlisted here originally with the 38rd Battery, but was transferred to the 93rd Peterborough Battalion, and went overseas as a member of the Bugle Band of Lieut.-Col. Johnston's unit. After the arrival of the 93rd in England he was transferred in a draft to the 52nd Canadian battalion at the front and served six months in France being attached to the brigade wirers. He has been invalided home suffering from pulmonary trouble and after a furlough here will go to the Sir Oliver Mowatt sanatarium at Kingston for treatment. His home is at 468 Aylmer street.

Pte. Herbert Yorke whose home address is 36 Lafayette Avenue also went overseas with the 93rd Battalion and like Pte. Sargisson was transferred to the 52nd Battalion at the front. He served in France for a number of months, but his health broke down and he is now suffering from lung trouble and laryngitis. He will undergo treatment at the Sir Oliver Mowatt sanitarium in Kingston.

Pte. Chas Griffin, one of the first to enlist in the 93rd Battalion was another of yesterday's arrivals from the front. Pte. Griffin went overseas as a member of A Company of the 93rd and was transferred to the 5th C.M.R., at the front. He was badly wounde after some months in France and is now unfit for further service.

Pte. G. Van Norman, son of Jerry Van Norman, 423 London street, reached Peterborough on the 5.35 train. Pte. Van Norman enlisted at Renfrew and went overseas with the 97th Battalion. After much service in France he was invalided home suffering from pulmonary trouble and will undergo treatment at the sanitarium at Kingston.

Pte. Andrew Torrance, 465 Park street who arrived last evening, enlisted here with the 238th Forestry Battalion and went overseas with that unit.

Pte. C. Banks, of Omemee, also arrived home last evening.

PTE. WOOD WOUNDED

Mrs. Harriet Ann Wood 478 Rubidge street has received official word from Ottawa that her son, Pte. Harold Wood, Canadian Infantry is officially reported admitted to the 18th General Hospital, Carmieres, on June 28, suffering from a gun shot wound in the right leg. Pte. Wood was among the first to enlist in the 93rd Battalion and went overseas as a member of A Company transferring to the 52nd Battalion at the front as a bomb thrower. Pte. Wood was a member of the 57th Regiment before the war. Two other brothers are overseas. Corp. Wood with the 2nd Battalion and Pte. R Wood with the 247th. The latter was formerly a member of the 93rd Band.

The following letter has been received by a member of St. Andrew's Patriotic Society from Pte. Norman Paterson, formerly of the 93rd Battalion:

France, June 11, 1917.

We just received the housewives from the St. Andrew's Patriotic Society and were very pleased with them. We also received the socks a short time ago and they are very useful and we never seem to have enough of them.

My brother and I wish to thank the Society through you for the trouble and time you have taken and we realize that the boys over here are still thought of by our friends at home, even if we are a long distance from them. This war seems to last a long time, and the boys are just a little bit tired of it. We certainly will enjoy home when we get back in a way we never did before, but it will not be for a little while yet.

The country we are in just now is beautiful, at least back from the line where the shells do not reach it, and we are having great weather. Last winter it was very cold, and then later on it rained every day for about two months, and as we live out of doors nearly all the time it was a disagreeable business, but it is over now for a few months and we are having some real Canadian summer weather. Please thank the Society for my brother and myself and tell them that we were very pleased with the housewives and socks and you will do us a great favour.

Yours sincerely,
NORMAN PATERSON.

KINGSTON, July 11.—Captain Thomas Ashmore Kidd, aide-de-camp to Brig.-Gen. T. D. R. Hemming, G.O.C., has been appointed casualties officer of military district No. 3, and will assume the rank of major.

The recipient went overseas with the first Canadian contingent from Valcartier as a subaltern of the now famous 2nd Eastern Ontario Battalion. He was a brother officer to the late Capt. George T. Richardson and the late Lieut. H. Stewart, who left Kingston at the same time and went into that unit.

After being at the front for a number of months he was wounded in the head and side, and was invalided to England, coming later to Canada.

KINGSTON, July 11. —As part of the vocational training which will be conducted in the city, the Military Hospitals Commission command here has received two old Cadillacs, one new McLaughlin and two Ford cars. These will be used for instruction of returned men so that they may be sent back into civil life fitted to take positions which would not be open to them if such a course was not established. The disability of many of the men unfits them for the positions they held previous to their enlistment.

Through the kindness of Col. G. Hunter Ogilvie, A.A.G., the gun shed of the R.C.H.A., Bagot street, has been loaned to the M.H.C.O. temporarily. This shed is admirably adapted to this work. It will be equipped with all apparatus necessary, and as part of the course the cars will be dismantled and reassembled.

Major Good, who was appointed vocational training officer some time ago, is in charge of this branch of the work. He will examine each man to ascertain his ability in various lines of work. Giving the preference to any desire on the part of the men for any particular branch of work instruction is that vocation will be given. The shipping in of the cars mentioned is for the mechanical course of the vocational training scheme, but there will also be such subjects as wireless telegraphy, telephony, stenography, etc., taught.

LAUNDRY PRICES

Commencing on Monday, July 16th, there will be a slight advance in the price of laundry by all laundries.

New Amendment to Military Service Bill a Closure to Anti-Conscriptionists — Solicitor-General Springs a Surprise.

SUBMIT OR GO TO JAIL

CLOSURE ON ANTI-DRAFT TALK.

Solicitor-General Meighen has introduced to the military service bill, prohibiting, under heavy penalties of fine or imprisonment or both, once this measure becomes law, all anti-conscription speaking or writing, or inducing in any way any neglect or failure to comply with its provisions.

OTTAWA, July 11.—After the House of Commons had reached this evening the end of its first run, in the committee stage, over all the sections in the military service act, and was about to return to section one again for the final re-survey of the bill, the Solicitor-General sprang a new and decidedly drastic section. The amendment is designed to put a summary stop to all agitations against the enforcement of the bill once it becomes law, and to prevent any legal proceedings under habeas corpus or otherwise from interfering with or delaying quick action once a man is conscripted. Newspaper editors who allow in their papers anything calculated to induce or influence any person or resist or impede the execution of the act will, under the new section, be liable, upon indictment or upon summary conviction, to from one to five years' imprisonment, and their papers shall be summarily suppressed for the duration of the war. Any person who speaks or writes against compliance with the conscription law shall also be liable to speedy incarceration for a like period. No tricks of the law can be invoked to protract legal proceedings in connection with appeals from the decisions of any of the conscription tribunals.

AN EFFECTIVE BAR TO OPPONENTS.

The new section puts an effective closure on all anti-conscriptionists once the bill becomes law. Under it the Province of Quebec and every other section or class in Canada would have to keep quiet and submit, or else go to jail.

The Solicitor-General merely read the amendment. He made no comment upon it, beyond stating that the members of the House would have the text available for reference in to-morrow's Hansard.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier, who listened intently to the reading of the new section, interjected but one remark: "Better put in martial law at once" he said.

FINE, PRISON OR BOTH.

Clause One of the new section provides that any person coming within any of the classes affected by the bill who contravenes any of its provisions or any of the regulations made thereunder, and who are not otherwise made in the bill liable to penalty for such contravention, shall be liable upon summary conviction to a penalty of not less than

RUMOURS THAT HUN GOVERNMENT IS TO RESIGN

Main Committee of the Reichstag Has Issued an Ultimatum Holding Up the Three Billion Dollar Vote

WANT POLICY STATED

Special to The Examiner:

AMSTERDAM, July 12.—Rumours were circulated here to-day that German Imperial Chancellor Hollweg and his whole government were about to resign. The main committee of the Reichstag has given an ultimatum that it would not approve of a three million dollar vote until the government declared its policy as to peace and election reforms. The government has so far refused to do this.

AMSTERDAM, July 12.— The Berlin Tageblatt was quoted in a despatch reaching here this afternoon as declaring: "Chancellor Hollweg's position has been strengthened by the Emperor's confidence. He will not retire." The Tageblatt's statement varied from other reports here of Hollweg's resignation.

ORANGEMEN OFF TO PORT HOPE TO-DAY

Motor Cars of All Descriptions Were Used to Provide Transportation

The decision of the Orangemen of Peterborough to use motor transport to visit Port Hope for the annual walk was responsible for the greatest exodus of gasoline propelled vehicles this morning that the city has ever known. Cars of all sizes and descriptions were utilised and the drive began at an early hour. In addition to the members who went in automobiles, many others went down to Port Hope via the regular and special G. T. R. trains.

DENIES STORY OF INCREASE TO RAILWAY MEN

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, July 12.—Chairman McIntyre, of the Ontario Railway Board, this afternoon denied the story that the Ontario Railway Board will give the men five cents an hour increase in taking over the Toronto Railway. He says the Board would have to go into the labour market and get men where it could to operate the cars.

THE WEATHER

Cool, damp weather, unlike the usual July conditions, still continues. The warmest day up to the present time only showed 82 degrees in the shade. This was on June 13th—June had rain on 14 days, and July is following in much the same line. "The Twelfth" last year was a hot one, the thermometer going to 93 degrees.—W. P.

THURSDAY, JULY 12, 1917

DAMAGING DISTINCTIONS.

The Toronto World has this unwelcome paragraph:

It is stated that the party of returned soldiers which arrived this week in the city came over on a steamer containing 39 officers and 804 rank and file. The 39 officers were given the exclusive use of the entire hurricane and promenade decks, and the privates, 804 of them, were huddled into the remaining accommodation, or want of it. Sixty-four alm chairs were placed at the disposal of the 39 officers. The soldiers could lean over the bulkwarks if they were able.

The World adds that "little things like this do more to get a wrong spirit abroad about the army than all the fighting in Europe." The World is wrong—they are not little things"; they are greatly injurious big, wrong things. They strike at the root of healthy morale of an army constituted as the Canadian army is—of democratic elements that do not take kindly to military snobbery. There is no place in a Canadian military force for such marked distinctions of treatment as those cited, which are not only contrary to the spirit of democracy, but unjustified by any fact of social disparity of quality. In our Canadian army the private soldier is, as a rule, as good as the officers. There are many privates in the ranks as well born and as well bred as the officers, some of the privates much more so than some of the officers. Many of them are better educated than the officers, and some of the privates of as great courage and military capacity as the officers, as witness the large number of privates and non-commissioned officers promoted on the field to official grades. Some of the best officers serving at the front in the Canadian forces to-day are men promoted from the ranks. Such contrast of decent treatment as between Canadian soldiers and Canadian officers are exceedingly wrong, and if it has prevailed to any considerable extent in the past, it has had a tendency to discourge recruiting. It is considered by a sound young Canadian that it is his duty to fight for his country, but no one will think it his duty to fight for the perpetuation of snobbery, or to submit to unjust and humiliating treatment. Of course there must be discipline, but that can consist with an absence of unfair distinction, social or other. Canadian soldiers enlist to fight injustice and militarism. Men will not be encouraged to recruit if they have a prospect of submitting to injustice as well as fighting against it.

The new "big offensive" developing in Peterborough is directed against the potato bug.

ACCOUNTING FOR THE MILK IN THE COCOANUT.

The members of King William Orange Lodge, No. 140, Toronto, have passed, and forwarded to Mayor Church, a resolution protesting against the Canadian National Exhibition holding a "Quebec Day." It is part of the regular policy of the Exhibition management to dedicate one particular day each year to the provinces of the Dominion. The action of the members of the Orange lodge mentioned is quite within their right, and quite natural under the existing circumstances. It is assumed that the proposal to penalize Quebec is held to be justified by the scant response of Quebec to recruiting. If this is the reason, the Orangemen would more aptly pass a resolution placing the condemnation not only upon Quebec, as it seems to deserve, but upon those responsible for creating the sentiment and situation that destroyed the spirit of recruiting in that province.

In the elections of 1911 the Orangemen of Ontario were not unfriendly to the Borden party and did not, as far as remembered, condemn the action of the party managers in playing the Nationalist game, for the sake of helping Borden to power by destroying Laurier's influence in Quebec. Those who now demand the ostracism of Quebec, raised no voice of protest against bringing Bourassa, the arch enemy of Canadian cooperation with Britain, into Ontario in the interests of helping the "party of loyalty." Nor had any protest been raised against first helping Nationalism to its feet—in Drummond-Arthabaska— nor was there any lack of sympathy in 1911 with the attempt to elect Nationalist members to parliament as supporters of Mr. Borden. Then, when only the interests of party were at stake, there was connivance at treason, as expressed in the gospel of Nationalism—"Canada owes nothing to Britain—we are not bound to help her in her wars." With this doctrine preached in Quebec in season and out of season for eight or ten years by Nationalism, it was inevitable that the popular mind, poisoned by such damnable doctrines, preached by such oily and eloquent intriguers as Bourassa, Blondin, Sevigny and Patenude and a host of others—it was no wonder that a deaf etar was turned to recruiting in Quebec.

The simple people of Quebec were all the more ready to listen to and accept such doctrines, and think no harm in believing them, when they saw the leaders of the "party of loyalty" practically approve them; help the candidates of such a cult, with Conservative election funds, and endorse the principles of Nationalism by taking—and keeping there—three Nationalists into the cabinet, as advisers to the king to whom they declared they held no duty of obedience or service. Anybody who had eyes to see, could see, and saw this devlish game being played; saw disloaylty and treason in spirit, encouraged, helped, patronized, subsidized with the spoils of office. Anyone who welcomed Nationalism, and what it means, as a partner in the party game, should not be surprised when the legitimate harvest against the highest interests of the empire, against the harmony of Canadian citizenship, is reaped in the failure of recruiting in Quebec. If Quebec has failed in recruiting, as it has done, the blame is upon Natioanlism; and who is to blame for helping Nationalism to a standing, applauding it, rewarding it, officially recognizing it and putting a premium upon the preaching of disloyalty to Britain and to the Empire. Is it Quebec that should be read out of the family of Confederation or should somebody else be disciplined? It is Nationalism plus the help of the Borden government that killed recruiting in Quebec and brought the humiliation of conscription upon Quebec and the rest of the Dominion. Another resolution is in order.

We shan't need conscription to get willing women workers for Saturday's Red Cross Prisone. aid tag day.

PRIVILEGES OF RANK.

It is a reflection on our people and Government that hundreds of officers are allowed to return to Canada from England without so much as visiting the front, simply because they refuse to accept an appointment lower than their rank. While they joy-ride in England, move about in fashionable circles, and draw their pay or re-cross the Atlantic at the country's expense, the humbler soldiers who enlisted with them are sent on to Flanders to suffer and die in the trenches. There is no voluntary reversion for them. They may have enlisted in the artillery and been transferred forcibly to the infantry. They may have gone as bandsmen and been drafted into cavalry. They may have earned their stripes by hard effort and been reduced to privates on going to the firing line. No doubt a case can be made out for allotting better food and better quarters and better pay to commissioned officers but no sound military or political reason can be advanced for treating the rank and file as though they had no rights, and the commissioned officers as though they were God's elect. A considerable amount of pardonable soreness is developing in this country over circumstances of this nature. Nobody wants to embarrass the Government in the middle of a great war, but surely a serious effort should be made to bring the obsolete customs of the army into harmony with the spirit of democracy for which the allied nations are fighting. —Toronto Star.

PUTS COUNTRY FIRST.

It remained for Sir Wilfrid Laurier to hasten the discussion of the conscription bill and chide, gently but firmly, two of the Government representatives, who have expressed so great a desire to have the measure rushed through quickly, for the delay and hindrance they were causing by personal disputes. The two who were rebuked were Premier Borden and his ex-minister of militia, Sir Sam Hughes.

Sir Sam accuses the Premier of having ordered him to "slow up on recruiting," and the latter raised objections to the accusation, and explains his side of the story. While they are both anxious to speak, with increasing warmth, Sir Wilfrid arises to inform them that it is of no advantage to the House to witness a dispute of this kind, the only question of interest being the bill before the committee. The reproof was effective, and business was resumed.

Had Sir Wilfrid placed party advantage before patriotic duty, as his opponents are so fond of declaring he does, would he have placed any obstacle in the way of a continuance of this general quarrel between two leading Conservative members Or would he have kept still and enjoyed this exhibition of the boasted unity of the Government forces? Party advantage all lay in the latter course.

If the leader of the Opposition had wished to gain personal prestige from the encounter, he would have waited until the two concerned had talked themselves hoarse, and would then have taken advantage of an opportunity to criticize them He did not do this, his reason being that he cared more for getting on with the country's business and saving time than he did for party politics or personal glory. The nation should be grateful that there is a statesman of this type to exercise influence where it is so much needed.—London Advertiser.

GEN. MAUDE REPORTS ON TIGRIS ADVANCE

London, July 11.—A despatch issued by Sir Stanley Maude, commander-in-chief of the Mesopotamia Expeditionary Forces for seven months, until the 31st of March last, shows that the period was equally divided in preparations and in the operations which led to the fall of Bagdad. He describes how the advance was successfully carried out in the face of most difficult conditions, by the gallantry of the British and Indian troops, brilliantly seconded by the navy.

The Mesopotamia Commission's recent disclosures attract attention to, and create special interest in General Maude's references to the present water transport and hospital arrangements. He states that the newly formed water transport directorate is so well organized that "an eight day endless chain of river craft passed up and down the river thereby assuring the maintenance of the troops at the front."

Sir Stanley Maude further says: "Our well equipped hospitals were more than adequate to meet all calls, and throughout the evacuation of the wounded was carried out on model lines. Arrangements for the comfort and rapid transfer of patients from the field units to the hospitals reflects much credit on those concerned."

General Maude thankfully acknowledges the prompt response made to his demands from England, India and Egypt.

EXEMPTION FOR MEN NEEDED IN SUPPLYING ARMY

Washington, July 11.—The United States will sift out and exempt from fighting service laborers vitally needed in feeding, clothing, supplying and equipping the armies.

Lest this nation make the mistake England did at the outset, the Government will free such men, and see to it that they keep at their work. To this end a corps of experts to-day began a list of industrials essential as backstops of the armies in the field.

From official sources it is learned the list probably will name farmers, as a general class, miners, men engaged in shipbuilding, munitions workers of all classes, and every branch of industry that aids directly or indirectly in maintaining the military forces.

Even foremen in these industries exemption is not absolute. It is conditional upon the man remaining in the same enterprise. Every man must appear before the exemption boards, and the routine is very strict.

Only after proving to the board that he is "indispensable" to the continuance of that particular business, and cannot be replaced by another man, "without direct substantial material loss and detriment to the adequate and effective operation of the particular enterprise" will the man be exempted from bearing arms.

Under the draft regulations, each exemption board must investigate existing conditions of industry in its district. With the aid of President Wilson's list, exemptions will be made with the least possible drain upon the industrial situation.

On the district boards now being formed there will be one representative of labour, industry and agriculture. Boards of about thirty states are complete to-day.

Affidavits from employers will form part of the evidence that must be submitted by the claimant of exemption to prove that he is "indispensable."

Alien Agitators Prevent War Work Winnipeg Report

WINNIPEG, Man., July 11.—A note of alarm against alleged conspirators and alien enemies operating in Winnipeg is sounded on the first page of a local daily in a two-column letter calling upon the authorities to take action. While the letter is signed "Patriot" the president of The Telegram announces that it is written by a prominent citizen who has facts to warrant every word uttered. The letter says in part:

"Never before has the industrial progress of Winnipeg been subject to such labour unrest as at the present time. Evidently there has been concentrated action for a considerable period of time, backed by agitators whose influence has been quietly working night and day, to the detriment of those engaged in the making of munitions, war supplies and industry generally. What is back of the daily programme that is now being conducted by labour agitators leading bands of alien laborers from one industry to another, urging upon workers to throw down their tools and join the procession? A survey of industrial conditions as affecting the wage-earning class to-day in Winnipeg shows that never before has the relief department been called upon so little for aid. Never before has there been a time in this city when the same type of men as the leaders and followers in these gangs have been so well dressed as they appear to-day. Never in the history of the savings bank deposits have savings by this class of men been higher than to-day.

"Winnipeg is also at the present time 20,000 workers short of what it was three years ago. To-day there are walking the streets of Winnipeg at least 5,000 aliens, while at the same time there is this shortage of labour, caused by our men's fighting at the front, of more than double that number. That there is a general campaign under way by men acting under instructions from higher sources, having as their object the shutting down of works engaged in the making of munitions, war supplies, fuel and fuel supplies, is shown by the fact that every new report of labour trouble that has appeared in the daily press has been some industry of this nature.

"How long would Germany and Austria allow a body of English-speaking agitators to hang around her munitions factories and even threaten the workers with bodily harm if they did not join their ranks? How long would they last if they attempted to stop the work of German and Austrian factories that were turning out foods and other war supplies for their soldiers on the firing line? What would the Kaiser do to the miner who failed to deliver coal for his motive power, factories and homes in Germany?

"When such an organised campaign as mentioned has endeavored to increase its influence by beginning to get the thin edge of the wedge into the churches of the city, is it not time for the press to call the public attention to the condition of affairs and the patriotic duty of every citizen in the community?"

WHERE JOFFRE FIRST WAS FAMOUS.

France first heard the name of Joffre in 1894, when he was 38 years old. He was south of the Sahara in Africa, a Major in the French Army, when suddenly his name rang through France as "The Hero of Timbuktu." Years ago, he told how it all happened in a little book that was translated into English under the title of "My March to Timbuctoo." It is a modest, simple narrative, so condensed in style, so full of weighty matter pithily presented, that it cannot fail to remind the reader of Caesar's "Commentaries."

He had been sent to Senegal, French West Africa, to build a railroad from Kayes, at the head of navigation on the Senegal River, to the Niger. This route would give river and rail transportation between the French Atlantic ports in Africa and the famous City of Timbuktu. The world is, to-day, thus linked with this once mysterious trade mart in inner Africa.

It was known that the merchants of Timbuktu, were handling a trade of some millions of dollars a year along the caravan routes across the Sahara; and that this commerce was greatly handicapped by the Tuareg of the desert and the Fula of the Sudan who were alternately masters of Timbuktu, as one of the other gained the ascendency. Each race, in its turn, exacted enormous tribute as the price of permitting industry and commerce to be carried on; and the helpless people of the city were on the verge of destitution and despair when France decided to go to their relief.

While Major Joffre was pushing his railroad forward as fast as possible, Colonel Bonnier was dispatched with troops to the relief of Timbuktu; and some time after, Joffre was ordered to leave the railroad in other hands and lead another body of troops to that city. He made a wonderful march of about 500 miles under very difficult circumstances, for the Niger was in flood, no boats could be obtained and the troops had to march, heavy laden with supplies, through dense scrub, beyond the river's reach. In spite of these impediments, Joffre gained rapidly on the advance party; but he did not hear till he was within a few miles of Timbuktu that the Tuaregs, who were then masters of the city, had killed Colonel Bonnier and most of his men.

Then Joffre turned defeat into splendid victory. He had his force within the city almost before his presence was known; and he trounced the Tuaregs so effectively that in a few hours he was master of Timbuktu, to the great joy of the inhabitants. He so firmly established French supremacy over that town and the whole of Northern French West Africa that the vast region has never again been in jeopardy. The hero of Timbuktu suddenly became one of the marked men of France; and the steady advancement that came to him culminated, early in the present war, in his supreme commandership of the French forces, and later in the position, recreated for him, of Marshal of France.—New York Times.

TAKE AS MUCH INTEREST IN SELECTING A CANDIDATE AS YOU WOULD IN SELECTING A HORSE

H. W. Wood, president of the United Farmers of America, and now mentioned as a cabinet possibility, recently had the following in the Grain Growers' Guide:

A democracy is a government by the people. Its character depends on the standard of the citizenship of the people themselves. If there was anything wrong in the election, the fault lies in the people themselves, and not in the politicians. The people are benefited or injured by government The politicians want office, and they try to do and say things that will cause you to vote them into office. If they appeal to your prejudices instead of your reason and high sentiment, it is because they think you will respond to that appeal. "Yes," you say, "but some of the men we heard talk were not capable of appealing to our reason, and we had no choice in the matter, for the other side was just as badly represented." Your fault again. Citizenship in a democracy is worth something. Have you been quietly thinking during the past four years whether or not the best man in your party in your district was serving you If you have not, you have not been doing your duty as a citizen. You should begin thinking and working and thinking right now for the next election. If you conclude the member-elect is not the right man, begin at once to try and find the right man or woman. Talk the matter over with your neighbour or neighbours. Make it your business to attend to your business. Take as much interest in selecting a representative as you would in selecting a horse or a farm. Keep on trying to find the right candidate until you have found him. This is only getting ready for action. When the next election approaches you must not only know what you want to do, but you must be prepared to do it.

Go to your party caucus and help send delegates to your party convention, who will nominate the right candidate. If you fail here you will fail everywhere; if you make good here you will make good everywhere. Right here is where the machine stops and the hopper is filled. Just as the hopper is filled, so will the grist be. If the people want this grist to be true democracy, they must fill the hopper. The machine is all right if it is run right, and it will be easier to run it right than it will be to build another one—another party. If every man and every woman who wants good government will be ready at the next election to attend his or her party caucus, and go prepared to act in intelligent unison, I will promise that there will be no occasion for a third party, and there will be no occasion for finding fault with the way the following campaign is conducted and there will be no cause to find fault with the result of the election. This means citizenship, which is the price of true democracy.—H. W. Wood, President U.F.A.

SOUTH ENDS DROP TWO TO THE GROCERS

Last night the Water Street Alleys was the scene of a very exciting match when the South Ends, who have tapped the League up to the present, went down to defeat before the Grocers, who took two out of three games. The South End team won the first game, but the Grocers came back strong, and won the next two games. Fitspatrick for the Grocers, had high count for three games with a 449 total, and also had high single of 205. Shook, for the South Ends, had a total of 425.

To-night the Allies and the Printers will clash for a hard battle.

Last night's scores were as follows:

ONE HIT OFF RUTH AND RED SOX WON

Tigers Unable to Connect With Boston Twirler—Dauss Also Good.

DETROIT, July 11.—Ruth held Detroit to one hit to-day and Boston won, 1 to 0. With two men out in the ninth, Shorten, a pinch hitter, doubled and scored Walker, who previously had hit for three bases. Bush got Detroit's only hit, a hard drive which Ruth intercepted but could not field. Ruth passed four and hit one, but struck out men in the pinch-hit getting five of his eight strike outs with men on second. Dauss also pitched a fine game, striking out seven men and was strong with men on the bases. Score:

	R.	H.	E.
Boston	000000001	1	7 1
Detroit	000000000	0	1 0

Batteries—Ruth and Agnew; Thomas; Dauss and Stanage.

At St. Louis— Philadelphia and St. Louis changed places in the American league race to-day when the visitors batted five St. Louis pitchers hard and won, 13 to 5. The locals now are in last place. Schang got three hits and two sacrifices in five trips to the plate and Strunk got three hits and two walks in five trials. Score:

At Cleveland —Cleveland defeated Washington, 3 to 0, in the evening game of the series, Covaleski holding Washington to four hits. Gallia and Shaw held Cleveland to six hits but every one but one was utilized in the scoring. Wambsganss made a clean steal of home in the third inning. Score:

	R.	H.	E.
Washington	000000000	0	4 0
Cleveland	01110000x	3	6 2

Batteries— Gallia, Shaw and Ainsmith; Covaleski and O'Neill.

CHANGES IN GERMAN CABINET.

LONDON, July 11.—German Chancellor Bethmann-Hollweg has decided to fill vacancies in the German Cabinet with certain members of the Reichstag and to create a new Ministry of Labour, to which post a Socialist will be appointed, according to an Exchange Telegraph despatch to-day from Amsterdam.

HAD NARROW ESCAPE FROM A LIGHTNING BOLT.

Stratford, July 11.—Mr. and Mrs. Charles O'Brien of Ellice had a narrow escape from serious injury or death last night during the electrical storm which passed over this city. Mr. and Mrs. O'Brien were driving home when the storm broke, and seeking shelter from the blinding rain drove into Andrew Johnson & Sons coal sheds. Hardly has they entered the building, when the end of the shed was struck by lightning, about fifteen feet from the horse's head, and travelling along a wire, killed the animal instantly. Apart from a severe shock the occupants of the buggy were unharmed.

Property Formerly Paid Entire Cost of Sewer Construction, But A Fixed Rate of 52c. Now Obtains

The city's system of meeting the cost of sewer construction has proved something of a revelation to many citizens who have followed the Council's attempts to determine whether it will build the Princess Street sewer now, or indefinitely postpone the work until conditions are more favourable.

It has already been published that the work is costing about fourteen dollars a foot, and probably the average ratepayer entertained a misty idea that the cost was being borne by the property owners on that street. The fact is, that the Princess Street landowners pay a fixed rate of 52 cents a foot, and the rest of the fourteen dollars is paid out of the general taxes. In other words, the bulk of the cost falls upon the city as a whole.

As one citizen commented to-day: "No wonder the Princess Street people want the sewer built at once, since it is costing them only 52 cents a foot more than it is me. And here is an injustice they are probably unconcerned about. When the sewer was laid on my street, the ratepayers on that street had to pay the entire cost. And we haven't finished paying it yet. Then the Council made a change. They decided upon the flat rate of 52 cents a foot, and the remainder of the cost to be paid out of the general taxes. The result is that I am paying my share of all the cost of the sewer on my street, and a considerable proportion of such expensive sewers as that on Princess Street, and a portion of all the other sewers constructed since that change was made. But the Princess Street people and the rest of the city are not helping to pay the cost of the sewer on my street. That is manifestly unfair, and I contend that the Council should adjust the rate in order that those who obtain the immediate advantage of a new sewer may pay a higher proportion of its cost. I do not advocate the extreme measure that was inflicted upon me by the old plan, but surely some change is due."

Not so many years ago the average cost of sewers was about $1.00 a foot. In fact, the Boswell Avenue service cost 58 cents a foot. But gradually the price began to creep away from those low figures until the present new record was set up.

One citizen claims that the members of the Council are unaware of the exact conditions, and they add that the constant changing of the personnel of the Council necessarily destroys their contact with municipal affairs from year to year. It provides another argument for the continuity of civic management similar to the Water Commission.

COMMON HUMAN FAILING.

Men are Very Much Inclined to Dislike their Jobs.

A certain discontent with the immediate job is one of the most common of human failings. Ninety-nine out of every hundred of us are conscious of it at intervals, or more or less continuously. There are times, and with some it is practically all the time, when we would like to do something else, be something else or be somewhere else. The grass on the other side of the road looks greener; the other fellow's job looks easier, and more desirable.

Blessed is the man who has found his work, and rejoices in it, or words to that effect, as the late Elbert Hubbard, or somebody, once remarked. From observation and hearsay we might conclude that it is only a small percentage of men who have really found their work. According to the frequent testimony of the majority they are convinced that they are really better fitted for some other work. They feel that if their true vocations ever spoke when they were choosing their careers it must have been in inaudible whispers, and that fate unkindly permitted them to get sidetracked.

Stranger than this is the apparent conviction of a great many persons that they could perform some other task much better than the one handed to them by an unreasonable destiny and practically as well as that other task is being performed by those who have had years of training and experience in it. Doubtless in some instances they are right. There are many square pegs in round holes, and vice versa, but the strange fact remains that this delusion is cherished by very many persons whose achievements in their own lines prove conclusively that their performance in the field that seems so alluring would be fully as inferior in quality.

Of course the factor of interest in one's work is of vital importance in the matter of results. A lack of interest is more than likely to produce poor work, while enthusiasm is conducive to excellence. And the matter of natural gifts or inclinations must be taken into account. But after these factors are reckoned with there still remain certain natural traits that are bound to affect the quality of a person's effort, in whatever channel it is directed. There is the work of craftsmanship. If one's work is sloppy in any particular trade a certain sloppiness is bound to appear in his efforts in any line. If neatness, orderliness and precision are not in one's make up, then the lack will manifest itself in whatever one does, whether as plumber, professor or poet.—Providence Journal.

Vanity and Spectacles.

One of the popular objections to wearing glasses is that wearing glasses makes one look old. This was true in the days when they were worn only to help poor sight, and chiefly by the elderly. Now, a very large percentage of wearers of spectacles are children, and the wearing of spectacles is no longer a mark of advanced age. It is not a sufficient excuse for a lady to say that glasses would make her look old. Moreover, wearing glasses is one of the best preservers of a youthful appearance. This is because prolonged eye-strain causes wrinkles to appear prematurely and gives the countenance a strained, anxious, tired, drawn, cross look, which is very characteristic and is far more to be avoided, from the point of view of appearance, than the slight disfigurement of glasses. Indeed, so far from being unbecoming, there are some types of face to which glasses just add the finishing touch!

Ancient Shipping Dues.

It is believed that the word "tariff" is of Moorish origin, and refers to the duty placed on imports or exports. At the southern point of Spain, running out into the Strait of Gibraltar, is a promontory which from its position commands the entrance of the Mediterranean Sea. A fortress stands upon this promontory, called in the times of the Moorish domination in Spain "Tarifa." It was the custom of the Moors to watch from this point all the merchant ships passing and to levy duties according to a fixed scale on all merchandise passing in and out of the strait. The duty thus levied took its name from the place and was called tarifa or tariff.

Men More Often Blind.

It is estimated that throughout the world blind men outnumber blind women in the proportion of two to one.

Made a Costly Mistake.

A big commercial house in the middle west raised the salary of one of its officers to $40,000 a year.

The officer was greatly pleased. "Now my ambition is satisfied," he said.

Within two years the concern had found a way to dispense with this officer's services. It was done cleverly and smoothly. The man never suspected the real reason why he was released.

The head of the concern had overheard his remark. "We want no men in this business whose ambition is satisfied," he said. "When a man is satisfied, when he ceases to plan and fight for the future, we begin to lose money on him."—Woman's Home Companion.

Why She Made No Outcry.

"You say," said the lawyer, "you heard this man break into your house in the dead of night, and yet you made no effort to call for help."

"That is so."

"Were you too frightened to call out?"

"No. I was not disturbed a particle. He bumped into the rocker of a chair and swore, so I thought it was my husband."—Detroit Free Press.

The Cheerful Face.

Do not be grumpy in your own home. Some folks save all their smiles for company or special occasions. It is far more necessary to happiness to be cheerful in your own home and with your own family. If the home is happy one can bear rudeness met elsewhere. If the home is happy the happiness will radiate among neighbors and friends.—Milwaukee Journal.

Electricity's Friends and Foes.

Experiments have shown that the best conductors of lightning, placed in the order of conductivity, are metals, gas coke, graphite, solutions of salts, acids and water.

The best nonconductors, ending with the most perfect insulation, are india rubber, gutta percha, dry air and gases, wool, ebonite, silk, glass, wax, sulphur, resins and paraffin.

Renewing Rubber.

Rubber that has lost its elasticity may be rejuvenated, according to the Journal de Pharmacie et de Chimie, by immersing it for five minutes in a bath of glycerin mixed with twenty-five times its volume of distilled water and heated to 70 degrees C. and then drying it with filter paper.

Too Polite.

Little Boy—That lady that talked to me in the park gave me some candy. Mother—I hope you were polite. Little Boy—Yes, ma, I was. Mother—What did you say? Little Boy—I said I wished pa had met her before he got acquainted with you.—Chicago Herald.

Not Facially.

"How do you preserve the paint so wonderfully?"

"I put many coats of varnish over it," explained the artist. "But," he added hastily, "I hardly think that would work in your case, dear lady."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Time works wonders—and so would most people if they were as tireless as time.

Rainbows.

The time of day or the state of weather when a rainbow appears is believed by many people to be an indication of future weather conditions. According to an old rime, a rainbow in the morning warns the shepherds to be prepared for rain shortly; an evening rainbow points to fine weather the next day. Sailors believe that a rainbow in the wind is a sure sign of continued wet. If it comes in the opposite quarter the rain will soon stop. Again, if in fair weather a rainbow be seen foul weather will speedily set in, but if the bow appear in foul weather fair weather will be at hand.

Young Women Found Missing From Refugees

ROCKFORD, Ill. — W. C. Free of this city recently received letters from a nephew, John Watkins, who went with a unit from the University of Chicago to drive an ambulance in France. Watkins is eighteen years old, and these candid impressions of an American lad were given to his relatives with no thought that they might find their way into print. The following excerpts are from Mr. Watkins' letters, in which he gives sufficient reason why American men should enlist in this great cause of liberty from what he already has witnessed:

"You probably are wondering what I am doing with my time. I have been here a week now, but that is entirely too soon to size up the situation, even in a halfway fashion. At the same time I am catching on to a few things. You people in America do not and cannot realize what this war actually means; you are too far away. With these people here it is business now, the chief business of life, to repel the invader and crush Prussianism. Every man is wearing a uniform. Last week there was a grand review of the class of 1918, called for service this year. There is not a boy in it who is older than I am, and the saddest story I have to tell is the sight of thousands of people in mourning. There is scarcely a woman on the streets who does not wear black, nor a man without his crepe band. Sadder yet is the sight of the thousands of brave fellows with their Croix de Guerre, and other medals, but with one arm or one leg or a terrible scar some way or other to deform and disfigure them for life.

SEES LONG WAR AHEAD.

"What will happen in America in the next few days I don't know, but in all seriousness you ought to do immediately what it took England 2 years to do, arm to the last man, prepare to fight to the last ditch. France is doing her best, and we owe to her a bigger debt for her noble work in this war than we do really for the revolution, for France has carried a burden for three years that would kill many nations, and she alone can't stand it many years longer. There is a limit to all things you know. Get this idea, no one here expects to see the war end for at least two years more. This scrap isn't going to end until the Allies say to Germany what Grant did to Lee: 'The only terms we can consider are unconditional surrender.'"

"I am not going to tell stories of recent atrocities in the unconquered territory, but I am going to point out two things: Germany admits completely devastating the territory so that no living thing can exist there. And then this, which makes an American's blood boil even more, —among the thousands of refugees coming into Paris there is not one girl or woman between the ages of 14 and 30. I have come to realize that even the American men are doing their bit to protect the honour of their women, and I am willing to do my bit to protect the honour of hearts. Is there any explanation which will ever justify such actions as these?

WANTS TO STICK TO END.

"I can only say that if the United States goes in I do not want to come back to America, unless on furlough before the war is over. I may be hot headed, but believe me, if any of the family were on this side, too, and actually saw these things and noted the undeniable facts that can be seen, they would do the same."

A second letter written by Mr. Watkins to his uncle, Mr. Free, was written after news had been received of the entry of the United States into the war, and the writer gave expression to his feelings in few words but to the point:

"Three cheers for the red, white, and blue! 'Vive la Amerique!' say the French officers as they salute us privates in American ambulance uniforms. The American flag occupies the place of honour in the centre of the group of allies' flags on the government buildings. It certainly has created a great moral effect over here. We are no longer outsiders, but brothers in arms with the French army and they are quick to recognize it."

YOUR MUSIC SHOULD BE GOOD MUSIC

That is only possible when your Piano or other musical instrument, is of the highest grade. The selection of a Piano is a matter that requires special care, as there are so many features that go into the composition of the high-class instrument. This is exemplified to its fullest degree in the production of the which represents the finished result of years of labor, experiment, and test by the best brains, and artistic talent in the business.

Williams New Scale Piano

The Williams New Scale is a triumph of Canadian Industry, and stands the test of the most thorough comparison to our customers entire satisfaction.

Let us demonstrate its tone qualities to you. Your own artistic taste can judge it and its beautiful appearance.

CITY WILL ASK FOR TENDERS FOR CONSTRUCTION OF SEWERS

Princess Street Sewer Has Been Costing the City Fourteen Dollars a Foot —Labour and Materials Are High—Some of the Aldermen Are in Favour of Letting the Work Stand Over.

Tenders are to be asked for the construction of sewers on Princess street, Romaine street and George street. The complete work represents about three thousand three hundred feet. Tenders are to be in by July 23rd and the successful contractor will have the privilege of using the city's plant for sewer construction. This was decided upon at a meeting of the Board of Work committee held last evening and followed by a meeting of the City Council. Ald. Dobbin was of the opinion that the work should be suspended owing to the abnormal conditions. Ald. Saunders and Ald. Taylor urged that the work be proceeded with despite the prospects of paying a minimum wage of thirty-five cents an hour for labourers. Ald. Taylor said he had property on Princess street and was willing to pay his share of the extra cost. He was surprised to learn that the extra cost is shouldered by the whole city and not by the property owner. The cost to the property owner is fifty-two cents a foot frontage no matter whether the sewer costs five dollars or one hundred dollars a foot. The cost to the property owner is fixed by law.

Can Secure Men.

The sewer on Princess street has been costing fourteen dollars a foot owin gto engineering difficulties. Ald. Weir, chairman of the Board of Works committee, announced that John Hayes, a contractor, had stated that he could build the sewer for half of fourteen dollars a foot. The majority of the members of the committee were inclined to take the statement with a grain of salt. Those who opposed the construction of the sewer under present conditions favoured a proposal to ask for tenders.

Martin Neary, sewer foreman, who was present at the meeting, had no doubt of his ability to secure all the men required for the work.

Ald. Saunders said that the proposal to ask for tenders was merely a ruse to delay the work. Both City Engineer Parsons and Street Commissioner Evans advised against the construction of the sewers under the present abnormal conditions. The aldermen have little hope of securing a contract price low enough to justify letting the work out of the citys' hands.

MUSIC IN THE HOME

MUSIC AND THE SERVANT PROBLEM.

"At our Red Cross sewing meeting the other day," said a lady interviewed on this subject, "the conversation drifted from sox, and shirts, and bandages to our troubles with the servant problem. As everyone knows, girls are hard to get and harder to keep, especially now since immigration to Canada has been stopped. Girls prefer to work in a factory or clerk in a store to housework. Mrs. Blank ,one of our regular attenders, spoke up and said: 'I do not blame maids for leaving some places where there is no consideration shown them at all for their hours off duty. Not one of us would stand living month in and month out in a home without music of some kind. Yet what opportunity do we give our maids for enjoying music now and again. "Oh, I know you say give them an inch and they'll take a mile. Let them use the piano or phonograph sometimes and they will be at it every afternoon and evening until goodness knows how late. But you don't refuse your maid a book to read for fear she might want to carry off the whole library to her own room.' This hint set some of us thinking."

And well it might. Just as farmers are putting more music in their homes to keep the young people on the farms, so can music rightly used and reasonably encouraged be utilised to keep the servants bright, more capable and satisfied. Common decency demands a certain interest in one's help. Give them plenty of music. Most of them are fond of it. They have their work to do and the particular sort of life they lead is almost wholly determined by the nature of the work and by the wages they receive for it. To the great majority life at best is narrow and monotonous. Of all enjoyments open to them, music whether from the standpoint of performer or listener, is the most delightful and valuable. One of the tragedies of our modern life is that belief that musical appreciation is only for the few and that the many have and can have no part in it; that music is an aristocratic art designed only for a limited number.

Music is democratic. It is for everybody. Give the servants more of it. To anyone desirous of doing something to make pleasant surroundings for their help, try giving them an opportunity of enjoying music in the home.

MUSIC FOR DESSERT.

Half a dozen churches in London provide daily organ-recitals at the noon hour. So far only in the famous old Methodist Cathedral of Toronto, the Metropolitan Church, is this custom followed. Yet there is nothing more delightful, more restful, than organ music well played. The quick lunch habit is hard enough on our bodies. It is far harder on our souls. Because of the rush of business life many young people develop an unwise habit of unnecessary hurry. It becomes a merit in their eyes to run to a lunch counter, bolt a bowl of beef stew, and rush back to the office, having spent, perhaps, twenty minutes in the task. They would feel better and work better if they sat half an hour at table and twenty minutes in church listening to an organ programme.

A recent article in the London Times described the various kinds of people who may be found in the pews during a noontide recital. Here is an extract:

In the middle of a pew, scorning its stiff support, sits an elderly man, his chin on his hands, and his hands on a stick, thinking, perhaps, of his son in France, and going through some necessary figures, since he cannot fight himself. They seem to come out the better for the violin which is just then threading its way through the coils of melody which the paper calls a Sonata in E minor by J. S. Bach. Ah, if fiddlers knew how their instrument sounds in these old churches, whose pillars break up the echo and whose cold stones retort upon the ear every fragment of tone, they would fight for the luxury of hearing it. Near by is a dreamy boy, too young to know why people should want to hide their feelings, whose eyes ask if there can be anything more heavenly than Mendelssohns "O God Have Mercy," and one forgets on the instant all that Handel and Mozart ever wrote and looks back agreement with him. Just in front is a girl who has been sitting with her hands in her lap since the beginning of the recital and has never raised her head. She is fitting the music to some thoughts of her own which are not our business, for she has not once looked to see what is being played.

That is not surprising, for as The Times indicates, mere Music is more important than the names of Music. It is the gentle, seductive concord of sounds that is needed to rest our souls rather than the stimulation of curiosity. On this continent few people can be satisfied to hear music and be content. They want to know the name of the piece, the history of the man who wrote it, how many times he was married, where he lived, what was his philosophy, if any, and how much he got from the publishers for each composition. We are programme-mad. It would be a pleasant relief sometime to attend a recital where printed programmes were not to be obtained, and train ourselves to listen intelligently. It would be a new experience for most of us.

MUSIC OF JAPAN, STILL UNKNOWN IN AMERICA, HAS A DISTINCTIVE CHARM.

There has been an effort in modern times to inculcate into our music the notes of Oriental melodies. The aim is praiseworthy for there is much that is beautiful and melodious in the songs of the East. According to Mrs. Larz Anderson, the author of "The Spell of Japan," there is a charm in Japanese music that has been compassed by very few other countries.

The mistake is made, however, by the general mass of people in thinking that the popular song heard in America, dealing with themes peculiar to the land of the tea gardens is truly Japanese. The melodies and arias from Madame Butterfly are hummed by people in the fond belief that they are singing the songs of the alluring East. There is as much truth in that as there is truth in the portrayal of Japanese life in a hawk-ster's booth in any of the popular summer resorts.

Ideals of Japan Not Portrayed In Music Heard in the West.

When Mrs. Anderson wrote about Japan and its music, she wrote with the knowledge that comes from years of intimacy with the people of that country. She had gone there to live and had seen the beauty of life and ideals of the land not with the eyes of a sightseer, but with the eyes of one who desires to make friends of the people with whom one lives. This is not true, however, of the great majority of people who make a sojourn in that country. By very virtue of their power to make the trip they are the type of humanity who are interested in the pomp and show of the land, in the tea gardens and unduly emphasized geisha girls. They are the people coming from the Great White Way of America and through dint of sheer boredom and want of diversion, seek relief in the discovery of the Great White Way of other countries.

Japanese Composer Alone Can Portray Music of Japan.

It is little wonder then, that the intellectual class of Japan takes exception to the so-called Japanese music as heard in this country. If the world would only stop to consider that no music can be called national in character unless written by one who belongs to the nation, who has had the ideals and folk lore of the country bred in the blood and the bone of him, they would look to a Japanese composer for the music of Japan. And there is Japanese music which has a distinctive appeal. Japan means infinitely more to its people than tinkling gardens and singing geisha girls; it means devotion to ideals.

The Japanese music we know is really the product of the American composer whose fertile imagination works out melodies as he sees Japanese life. We take for granted that his product is genuine and typical of the life of the Orient. But now we have come to realize that we have yet in store for ourselves the pleasure of hearing real Japanese music, that music which is imbued with the ideals and civilization of Japan. Only the native-born can paint these things for us in song.

City Engineer Parsons was asked to make a report concerning a railway switch on Driscoll Terrace.

SIDEWALK WANTED.

Mr. W. W. Mallory's request for a sidewalk at the corner of Wolfe and Park streets, was referred to the City Engineer for a report. The matter of filling up a ditch at that point will also be investigated by the Engineer.

SALARY INCREASE.

The salary of Mr. H. Evans, Street Commissioner was increased from $1,150 to $1,250. Mr. Evans who was at the meeting was invited to go out and have a "bucket of fresh water" as the Aldermen were too modest to discuss the matter in his presence.

REPAIRS TO STREET.

A letter was received stating that the waterworks department had agreed to repair Smith street west from Benson avenue.

Repairs will be made to a ditch on Reid street between McDonnel street and the G.T.R.

STREET OILING.

Ald. Langford named a number of streets which he wanted oiled. Ald. Weir, chairman of the Board promised to look into the matter.

How Any Woman Can Remove Hairy Growths

(Beauty Culture.)

It is not longer necessary for a woman to visit a beauty specialist to have superfluous hairs removed, for, with the aid of a plain delatone paste, she can, in the privacy of her own home, remove even a stubborn growth in a very few minutes. The paste is made by mixing some water with a little powdered delatone. This is applied to the hairs and after 2 or 3 minutes removed and the skin washed, when it will be left clear and hairless. Tear-Producing Gas To Capture Deserter

Paris, July 11.—Tear-producing gas such as is used on the battle front, was utilised by the police who captured a deserter named Thouin, who resisted them in his apartment in the Rue Andre Del Sarte. Protected by a steel shield a policeman braved the armed recalcitrant and bored a hole in the door wherein he inserted a tube for the gas. As soon as he realised the situation Thouin shot himself and his wife half-suffocated, then opened the door. Thouin died soon

He was granted his discharge from the officers' training camp here.

Firemen Refuse Aid In Flushing George Street

Work Will Be Proceeded With Despite Objections—Men Assisted Before

At last night's meeting of the City Council a recommendation from the Board of Works committee respecting the flushing of George street was adopted. It provides for the flushing of George street twice a week from Brock street to King street. Any assistance necessary for the work is to be secured from the Fire Department. Ald. Dobbin, chairman of the Fire, Water and Light committee, read a letter from Chief Howard, stating that seven members of the department had positively refused to participate in such work. The men were asked to express themselves on the matter and the seven men in question took a negative stand.

Ald. Smith was peeved over the attitude of the men. "They hold us up for more money and then refuse to accommodate the city a little," said the East Ward representative. "Wait until they want something more," he added.

Acting Mayor Duncan looked upon the work as a little exercise for the men. He told of three men whom he saw yesterday running around in the new car. He said he thought they would break it all to pieces.

"The more they get the less they do," observed another of the aldermen.

It was moved by Ald. Stratton and seconded by Acting Mayor Duncan, that the work be carried out according to the schedule proposed and that any assistance required be secured from the fire station.

Ald. Stratton said it would make little difference if the city had to secure seven new men. "They won't be hard to get at a thousand dollars a year," said Ald. Stratton.

"They helped us in this work before," remarked Ald Smith.

RECEPTION TO REV. MR. COON

Former Peterboro' Pastor Takes Up New Work in Lindsay

LINDSAY, July 12. — Following the weekly meeting of the Queen Street Epworth League on Monday night last a reception was tendered to Rev. Mr. Coon, the new pastor. The crowd was large and representative and a very enjoyable evening was spent by all present.

The League programme consisted of a recitation by Miss May Keith, a vocal duet by Misses Preston, solo by Mr. Graham, and Mr. Dobin, and the topic, which was taken by Miss M. Preston. Mr. Percy Haight occupied the chair.

Mr. W. B. Sparling then took the chair and presided at the public reception to the new pastor. In a few words he welcomed Mr. Coon to Lindsay, and expressed the desire that he would find living pleasant and profitable in Lindsay, with congenial relations between all peoples. Addresses were then delivered by Mrs. Vickery, president of the Ladies' Aid; Mrs. Nicholson, president of the W.M.S.; Mr. Jas. Jewell, Treasurer of the Church; Mr. Jas. McGahey; Mr. Alex. Clark, on half of the Baptist Church; Mr. W. B. Sparling, on behalf of the Cambridge Street Methodist Church; Mr. Percy Haight, superintendent of the Sunday School.

Rev. Mr. Coon made an appropriate reply to all and looked forward with pleasure to his sojourn in Lindsay and his pastorate at Queen Street.

Dainty refreshments were served by the Ladies' Aid, after which the gathering dispersed with the singing of the national anthem.

Farmers' Wives Will Be Needed To Help Harvest Heavy Crops

Some Farmers Are Buying Special Machinery—Pray For Sunny Weather Says One Man Who Refers to Present Conditions.

Forehanded farmers who are confronted with the huge task of harvesting this year's crops without the usual force of hired men, are arming themselves with special machinery. One farmer stated this morning that he had a big catch of hay that would soon be ready to cut, but he had not help and couldn't get any. Hence he bought a hay-loading machine, with which he hopes to overcome the difficulty that has been causing him considerable anxiety.

Other farmers, it is stated, will enlist the aid of their wives and daughters. In other words, the women at home will be called out to drive hay rakes, probably to run binders, and in some cases to "pitch" hay.

"There are some tasks that I don't mind my wife doing," said the above mentioned farmer. "Some of the lighter work she is able to do, but I hesitate to suggest that she do even that. But when you see women pitching hay and other work that would tire a strong man, then I say we might as well go to Russia. Only the Doukaboor women are called upon for those labours. I'd leave the stuff in the fields before I'd allow my wife to do it. Life is too short, and if the country after stripping us of labour for the armies and munition shops can't organize sufficient help from the cities for six weeks they can't expect our women to fill the gaps."

According to this farmer he expects to see women taking a more active share in the harvest than is usual. Some farmers, they are the exceptions, have their wives help them from harrowing the land in the spring until threshing time. But experience has shown this informant that these burdensome tasks soon break up the health of the women, and the farm home eventually suffers a serious loss.

But there is the situation. Farmers are offering wages for hired men that they never dreamed of under the old conditions. But they cannot compete with the munition factories. Hence there will be women on farms in this district attempting to do the work of men, and the city holiday idea will probably be followed as in the halcyon days of peace.

"Pray for sunny weather now," said the farmer. "We need sunlight and fresh drying winds. The crops are in excellent condition, but they should begin to ripen now, or the bright prospects may take a grave turn."

SOME PHILOSOPHY FROM KINMOUNT

KINMOUNT, July 11.— For a few days almost every one was wishing for rain for their gardens, as the soil in this country requires lots of moisture. It came, and we have had two days of rain, besides two days of cloudy, moist weather, and how everything did grow. One could almost see the garden stuff growing. How beautiful all the gardens in the village are looking, and strange to say that in two nights when there were very sure signs of frost and people outside the village had some of their vegetables frost bitten, a thick fog rose up from the river and covered the village. This remained until after sunrise, and when it cleared away nothing had been injured in the slightest. It was hard on the farmers' gardens, but they have so much besides that will have galores, while the villager's garden is his all. I say this advisedly, but the women do more than most of the men, though all put in what time they have to spare.

There is a great deal of talk in the newspapers about the necessity for economy, but I can assure them there is no waste in the homes of the working men, and everything and anything has to be planned for and made good use of, and yet the wages are not enough to cover all the positive needs of a family, besides rent and fuel. Flour and sugar is a little easier and yet there is room for improvement, and as meat, next to bread, is the staff of life, how little of it can they buy to keep up the strength necessary for their strenuous labour? Ask the farmer to live without meat! You might as well ask a man who has used tobacco for many years to give up his pipe. He would not have the strength required for his employment. Vegetables are all right in their place, and nearly all have a liking, for them, but with many they cause indigestion, and they do not seem to strengthen the stomach as meat would do. One might as well expect a horse to work hard on grass without oats as ask a man to work hard without meat. With grass in abundance this summer, grass fed cattle should be plentiful. Let the working man ask those in a higher position to economize in food, clothing and pleasures, and I wonder how many would even give up their luxuries. And yet how they do talk.

The Women's Institute met in the Baptist church on the evening of July 3rd. The meeting was opened by the president in the chair, and was followed by a short address by Rev. Mr. Hockley. Dr. Caroline Brown of Toronto, then gave an interesting address on "The Need of the Hour." The orchestra did good work, and also there was a lively address by Rev. Mr. Williams, which was quite amusing.

The Orangemen of Kinmount attended divine service in the Presbyterian church last Sunday, when Rev. Mr. Williams delivered a sermon, which was listened to with interest. There was a full church.

Pte. Stanley Boldt has arrived home from the trenches and is visiting his sister, Mrs. J. Trotter.

Miss Minnie Henderson, of Union Creek, has been visiting her friend, Miss Cora Simpson.

The Sunday school picnic in connection with the Presbyterian church was to have taken place in Hopkins' Grove to-day, but the out look of wet trees and grass is not encouraging, although the afternoon may be fine.

REMARKABLE TEST OF A JERSEY COW

Owned Near the City by Mr. Isaac Hetherington, Smith

The Jersey Champion cow, "Judy Dentonia," owned by Mr. Isaac Hetherington, Smith township, near Peterborough, recently accomplished a wonderful test, under unfavourable conditions. This cow freshened in February and the test was not conducted until May.

In thirty days, "Judy's" milk record was 1,520 pounds, equivalent to 95 pounds of butter. When it is remembered that the average cow's yield of butter in thirty days is between 30 and 40 pounds of butter, "Judy's" yield is considered very remarkable. This cow is one of a herd of 24 Jerseys, owned by Mr. Hetherington. With an Empire milker Mr. Hetherington's son and daughter milks the entire herd in from 45 to 55 minutes.

FRUIT AND EFFICIENCY

At this time of year fruits of many kinds are available as low-priced foodstuffs. Fruit of some kind should be eaten daily, not merely to take the place of more expensive food, but because of its great value to physical health and mental efficiency.

Fruit benefits health and efficiency in several ways. For one thing, as admirably stated in a health letter issued by the Life Extension Institute:

"Fruit is not concentrated nutriment. Most fruits contain from 75 to 95 per cent. of water. The balance is largely woody fibre or cellulose, fruit sugar, and minerals. The cellulose supplies the waste which is so frequently lacking in modern diets.

"Cellulose furnishes no nutriment; it affords simply bulk and a mechanical timulation to the movements of the digestive organs. They are built to receive this bulk, and their proper functioning requires it.

"Thus the free daily use of fresh fruit incidentally affords a regular supply of water and a certain bulk to the food, which prevents constipation, allays thirst, and, according to some, diminishes the desire for stimulating drinks. Pure water should, of course, be taken in addition to that supplied by fruit in the diet."

Constipation is one of the commonest foes to health and efficiency. It lowers both vital force and thinking power by the toxic action of the uneliminated substances which it allows to circulate through the blood to every part of the organism.

Wherefore, if only because of its value as a preventive of constipation, the eating of fruit should be a daily custom with men and women who have work to do and wish to be able to do their work well.

Besides which the eating of fruit further increases mental and bodily vigor by promoting digestion itself as well as elimination.

One of the requisites to good digestion is an ample production of gastric juice by the stomach. Scientific experiments have proved that the acids of fruits stimulate the stomach to produce the indispensable gastric juice.

And of particular interest to persons suffering from a condition of deficiency in the natural acid of the stomach, it has been found that fruit acids help to compensate for this deficiency.

Again, those mysterious but most necessary food constituents called "vitamins" are abundantly present in fruit. Especially are they present in such fruits as oranges, lemons, limes, and most of the berries.

Consequently the daily use of fruit is an insurance against vitamin deficiency.

The preservation of the teeth, another important factor in the maintaining of efficiency, is promoted by the eating of fruit. For fruit acids stimulate the flow of saliva and prevent the formation of tartar.

Also they have a cleansing effect on the teeth. For this reason it is desirable to eat fruit at the close of a meal instead of the beginning.

Do not, of course, go to the extreme of restricting yourself in summer to an almost exclusively fruit diet. But do eat plenty of fruit throughout the summer.

And having acquired the fruit-eating habit, continue it till another summer comes. Every day, summer and winter, eat some fruit if you can obtain any. You will find this pays.

Thrilling Tales Made "Captain" Very Popular

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn.—This is the story of Judson W. Field, lecturer, whose tales of adventures thrilled men women and children, in clubs, country residences, and even at theatres until a fortnight ago.

Field came to Minneapolis about six weeks ago. L. W. Murphy, a director of the Northwestern Telephone company, was dining at the Hotel Radisson with a friend. He spied a young man, wearing a British uniform, sitting alone at a table.

Now Eddie Murphy, both before and since he wore the bold braided uniform of the governor's staff, has been intensely patriotic and hospitable. He commented to his companion that it was not proper hospitality to allow a soldier of America's ally to be dining alone and lonesome in Minneapolis.

Murphy's sentiments were echoed by his companion. The two introduced themselves to the young man and invited him to dine with them. He accepted gladly, introducing himself as Capt. Field, late of the British aviation corps, wounded three times in battle and the hero of a hundred wild adventures at the front.

MAKES DINNER SPEECH.

So entertaining was his talk with Murphy invited him to be his guest at the Elks' club for dinner at a later date. Capt. Field accepted. Murphy informed his friends of his "find." The dinner developed into a reception. At its close Field was invited to speak. With a modesty of demeanor that charmed his hearers in one so young Field told the story of his adventures. When he finished speaking his place in Minneapolis seemed assured.

He told of enlisting with one of the first Canadian regiments sent to France. With a wealth of detail he related the stories of the British training camps. The hurly-burly of the embarkation from England to France, how his regiment was sent in a steamer, provisioned only for a few hours' trip, cruised about the English channel for three days before finally landing, was vividly described.

ADVANCED MONEY.

His story brought salvos of applause from his auditors. Field was dined and feted in clubs and in homes, made a guest at country residences, and even asked to tell his adventures at a local motion picture theatre. Some men of means advanced him money and gave him introductions to friends. Young women (Field himself was only 22 years old, according to his story) felt thrills of pride about him.

Then about two weeks ago Lieut. Col. W. G. Bell of the Seventy-ninth Cameron Highlanders came to Minneapolis to recruit for the British army. It was natural that two such warriors should meet. At the meeting Col. Bell recognized Field as a former private in his regiment who had seen service and had been wounded once.

He taxed the lecturer with being an impositor so far as his captaincy was concerned and more or less of a Munchausen with regard to his story of airplane adventures. Field denied both imputations. Col. Bell sent to Winnipeg for a war record of Private Field of the Sixteenth overseas contingent from Winnipeg, the regiment where he had known Field.

STORIES ARE CLEAR.

In the meantime Field had told a story of bathing, with a comrade, in a water filled shell crater and of a buxom Belgian girl stopping near to talk with the pair, who were sitting up to their chins in water. Finally, said Field, the other soldier tired of his wait for the girl to go on. "Tell her to hop it, old chap," Field said his companion suggested to him as a French linguist. "Tell her to hop it; I'm sittin' on a bit o' shell."

Some one who heard Field tell this story—which got many a laugh—had an odd memory of himself. He went back home and dug out a book of cartoons by the famous Capt. Bruce Bairnsfather, the British officer whose cartoons have been reproduced by the Tribune, copied from the London publication the Tatler, which first publishes them. In the book he found a cartoon that had the same lines ascribed to one of the bathers. He sent the book up to have it shown to Field.

"Ah, yes," exclaimed Field. 'Capt. Bairnsfather is a friend of mine. I told him the story and he made the cartoon of it."

That was the last seen in Minneapolis of Judson W. Field. He disappeared as suddenly as he had come. So did the book of cartoons. Later when Col .Bell received a reply from his message stating that Feld had been given no commission there was no Field to confront. That was more than a week ago, and still Field's whereabouts is a mystery

THREE KNOCKED DOWN BY A LIGHTNING SHOCK.

Port Hope, July 11.—Mr. H. A. Walker, a Welcome farmer, and his wife and son, Horace, had a narrow escape from instant death when his barn was struck by lightning on Saturday afternoon. Mr. Walker and his wife and son were knocked down by the shock and rendered unconscious, and the team of horses that he was driving at the time the lightning struck, were also knocked down. The lightning tore away almost completely the gable end and the west side of the barn. To-day the members of the Walker family had almost completely recovered from the shock they received.

PRESENTATION TO MISS GOARD

Is Honoured By Members of Trinity Methodist Church

A number of the attendants of the mid-week services of the Trinity Methodist church gathered last night at the home of Miss Electa Goard, 341 Charlotte street, to present her with a beautiful pearl and diamond brooch, a token of their appreciation of Miss Goard's unfailing presence as pianist at the mid-week service.

The following address was read by Rev. Mr. Wilson, whilst Mrs. Lytle made the presentation:

To Miss Electa Goard,—The attendants of the mid-week service of Trinity church desire to express to you in some tangible way their sincere appreciation of your faithful services as pianist for so extended a term.

You have for some years led the musical part of our mid-week service, and we appreciate to the full the great sacrifice you have made to give such regular and constant service. We have seldom, if ever, been disappointed — our pianist was present on every occasion, and in all weathers and we would like in some way to show our gratitude to you for this constant labour of love.

Will you please accept this little ornament as a token of our high appreciation of your faithful and valuable leadership of our mid-week service music.

Signed on behalf of the attendants of the mid-week service in Trinity church.

Celie Lytle.

C. B. Routley's Attractive New Store Premises

One of the results of the removal of Mr. C. B. Routley from his former long established store on George street to his present new and handsome quarters, is the marked improvement which his new store has made on that section of the street. A complete transformation of these premises has been accomplished. A splendid wide-open new front, with ample plate glass windows, specially designed for effective window displays has been effected. The new system of prism lighting reveals a commodious store interior, much larger than the old premises occupied by Mr. Routly. This has been fitted up and furnished in a first-class manner and adapted for the numerous lines of goods carried by him. The improved general features of the store front lends a smart up-to-date and brightening effect to the whole of the surrounding business section, and puts everybody in a better class than before.

Owing to the extensive and varied character of Mr. Routley's stock, the work of removal and settling has been a very laborious one; so that but little attention has, as yet, been paid to actual business. In a few days, however, the stocks will be all arranged in complete departments, to enable business to be resumed. Mr. Routley will occupy the whole of the three stories and basement of this building as well as a large annex in rear, for surplus wall papers, stocks, etc.

a hundred dollars or not more than five hundred dollars, or to imprisonment for a term not less than one month or not more than twelve months, or to both fine and imprisonment.

SPEAKING OR WRITING AGAINST ACT.

Clause two provides that any person who, by means of any written or oral communication or by any public speech or utterance, advises, urges or advocates that the men or any of the men mentioned or included in any of the clauses liable to conscription shall contravene, disobey, neglect or fail to comply with all or any of the requirements imposed upon them by the act, or by the regulations made thereunder, or who wilfully resists, obstructs, hinders or impedes or attempts wilfully to resist, obstruct, hinder or impede, or who persuades, induces, or influences or attempts to persuade, induce or influence any person, or any body or class of persons, to resist, obstruct, hinder or impede due execution of this act in any respect according to its true intent or purpose, shall be guilty of an offence, and shall be liable upon indictment or upon summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not less than one year or more than five years.

NO INJUNCTION TO STAY

Clause Three says "no proceeding authorized or pending before any of the tribunals provided for by this act, and no decision of any such tribunal, shall by means of injunction, prohibition, mandamus, certiorari, habeas corpus, or other process, whether of the like kind or otherwise, issuing out of any court, be enjoined, restrained, stayed, removed or subjected to review or consideration upon any ground, whether arising out of alleged absence of jurisdiction in the tribunals, nullity, defect or irregularity of the decision, or any cause whatsoever."

WILL NOT LIMIT OTHER ACTS.

Clause Four provides that no provision in the act shall affect penalties provided by any other law for the offence of assisting the enemy, nor shall it affect or limit the powers of the Governor in Council under the war measures act.

PUBLICATION OF PROPAGANDA

Clause Five, relating to the publication of any anticonscriptionist propaganda, is as follows:

"Any person who prints or publishes in any newspaper, periodical, tract, pamphlet, circular or printed publication whatsoever, any editorial, article, letter, correspondence, or other matter intended or having effect to advocate, advise, persuade, instigate, or influence the public, or any person body or class of persons, to resist, obstruct, hinder or impede the due execution of this act or compliance therewith in any respect or particular, according to its true intent, meaning and purpose, shall be guilty of an offence, and shall be liable upon indictment or upon summary conviction, to imprisonment for a term of not less than one year nor more than five years; and, whether the printer and publishers of any such newspaper, periodical, tract, pamphlet, circular or printed publication shall have been first convicted or not, the same shall be summarily suppressed, and shall remain suppressed for the duration of the present war."

WILL PROTRACT DEBATE.

The moving of the new section will undoubtedly further protract the debate on the bill, and it may be expected that some members at least will vigorously protest against the taking away of the right to protest against conscription as soon as it is passed by the present Parliament, and even before its enforcement is undertaken, or before a new Parliament is elected. It may also be expected that there will be vigorous opposition to the taking away of the historic right of habeas corpus.

FROM THE OLDEN DAYS.

When Livery Stable Was Situated at the Corner of George and Hunter Streets.

At the rear of the dwelling on Stewart Street, formerly the Children's Aid Society Shelter, is an old square brick building which the late Jas. Stevenson used for coal oil storage. Workmen engaged by Ald. Duncan, who owns the property, uncovered a number of interesting souvenirs of the Peterborough of 50 years ago. One of them is a well-preserved business card used by Thos. J. Fisher to advertisce his livery stable. It read, "Fisher's Old Stand, corner of George and Hunter Streets, Peterborough. The public may be accommodated with all kinds of conveyances, and at prices to suit the times. Please give us a call and no pains will be spared to make customers comfortable in our line of business. Peterborough, 23rd December, 1862."

And it is claimed now that service is something new!

OBITUARY

LOUISA ROBINSON.

Louisa May Robinson, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Robinson, 583 Downie street, died this morning after an illness of several days, aged one year.

The funeral will take place on Saturday to the Little Lake cemetery.

MRS. A. FLEMING.

Edith Scott, beloved wife of Alexander Fleming, died yesterday at the Nicholls Hospital after a short illness. Mrs. Fleming was born in Dummer twenty-five years ago.

The remains were taken this morning to Hastings for interment.

MRS. JOHN SOUCIE.

The death occurred at noon yesterday of Mrs. John Soucie, of 236 Perry street, at the age of 71 years. She had been ailing for some time, and her death was not unexpected.

She was born in County Kerry, Ireland and came to Canada when a child with her parents, settling in Otonabee, where she resided until 12 years ago, when she moved to Peterborough. She was a Catholic in religion, and was greatly respected by a large circle of friends, who will be grieved to hear of her death.

She leaves to mourn her loss five sons, namely: John, of St. Ignace, Mich.; Edward, of Revelstoke, B.C.; Frank and Andrew of Vancouver, and Thomas of this city, and four daughters, Mrs. J. F. Ryan of Douro; Katherine of Vancouver; Josie, of Buffalo, and Carrie, of Obid, N.Y. Her husband predeceased her 30 years ago.

The funeral will leave the family residence, 236 Perry street, on Friday morning at 9 a.m., to the Sacred Heart church, where service will be held, afterwards proceeding to St. Peters cemetery for interment.

JOHN FRANCIS HODGE.

Death came with terrible suddenness to Mr. J. F. Hodge, east river road, Otonabee, last night, July 11. He retired in his usual condition of health; but about midnight his daughter, who, alone with him, occupied the house, hearing some unusual noise, came down stairs. On entering her father's room she found him lying helpless outside the bed, where he had evidently fallen in an attempt to rise. With some difficulty she replaced him in bed, and hurried to the nearest neighbour to give the alarm. A doctor was immediately summoned by telephone, but his skill was unavailing. Mr. Hodge passed away about two o'clock. He has for some time been in bad health, as he was at the time of the death of his wife, on March 31st, and for some time recently has had trouble with his heart.

The late Mr. Hodge, who was 67 years of age, was born in Clark Township, Durham County. Several years ago he came to reside in North Monaghan, removing about five years ago to Otonabee. He leaves to mourn his death, one daughter, Miss Alda Hodge; two brothers, Samuel of Mitchell; Robert of Seattle, U.S.; and three sisters, Mrs. Ballagh, Starkville, Durham County; Mrs. Gordon, Garden Hill, and Mrs. Wm. Reid, Otonabee.

Mr. Hodge was quiet and unobtrusive in manner, but a gentleman of high character, rigidly honest and honourable. He was a very successful farmer on a limited scale, evidently priding himself more upon the high quality of his products of all kinds than upon large yield. He was a great lover of horses and his modest stud of superior quality, gave evidence of good care and kind treatment. He enjoyed the very highest esteem of his neighbours, and of the community wherever he had resided. Much sympathy will be extended to the only daughter who is left alone, having been deprived of both mother and father in the short space of four months.

The funeral will take place from the family residence, river road, on Saturday, at 3 o'clock, p.m., the services to be conducted by Rev. Robert Pogue of St. Paul's. Interment at Little Lake Cemetery.

BIRTH.

RICE.—At Endicott, N.Y., on July 9th, 1917, to Mr. and Mrs A. T. Rice (nee Gertrude Armour), a son.

MITCHELL.—In Nicholls Hospital on July 5th, to Mr. and Mrs. H. Gunaolas, a son.

LAKEFIELD PERSONALS.

Mr. and Mrs. S. Spence spent Wednesday afternoon in Smith the guest of their daughter, Mrs. Lorne Webster.

Mrs. John Botterill and Miss Vera are spending a few weeks at Stoney Lake.

Mrs. Robt. Payne and children spent Tuesday in the village.

Miss Madge Nugent is spending a few weeks in Smith, visiting friends.

Mr. Alfred Payne, of Smith spent Tuesday in the village.

Mrs. Richard Smith, of Peterborough spent Wednesday in the village.

Mrs. Jacob Payne is spending a few weeks at Stoney Lake.

A Boy Scout movement is taking place in Lakefield and at the first meeting held on Monday evening some fourteen boys were present. This organization is purely undenominational and aims to improve our boys both mentally and physically. Several of the citizens are behind the movement in Lakefield and it promises to be a great success. There has been, and probably is now, a feeling on behalf of parents that this organization is a form of militarism. To show how absurd such a notion is, it is only necessary to detail a few of the aims of the Boy Scouts. Scout craft is a combination of observation, deduction and handiness that is the ability to do. It deals with first aid, life saving, tracking, signalling, cycling, nature study, seamanship and other instructions. It is hoped that the parents, on hearing of this movement will lend their hearty co-operation. The Scout laws, given below, are worthy of special note.

(1) A Scout's honour is to be trusted.

(2) A Scout is loyal to the King, to his officers, to his parents, to his country and to his employer.

(3) A Scout's duty is to be useful and to help others.

(4) A Scout is a friend to all, and a brother to every other Scout, no matter to what social class the other belongs.

(5) A Scout is courteous.

(6) A Scout is a friend to animals.

(7) A Scout obeys orders.

(8) A Scout smiles and whistles under all circumstances.

(9) A Scout is thrifty.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Henderson and Miss Ethel Henderson are at Evergreen Cottage, Big Island, Stony Lake, for July.

Miss Grace Conway, Downie street, is visting Miss Isobel Donnelly, at Big Island, Stony Lake.

Mr. and Mrs. Goodwin, Hamilton, are visiting their daughter Mrs. Lacey, Hunter street.

Mrs. James Bell returned last night from a visit with friends in Detroit.

Miss Violet Stevens, nurse in training at the Grace Hospital, Detroit is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. L. Stevens, 631 George street. Flight Lieut. Leslie Stevens is expected home from the front soon to spend a furlough with his parents.

Mrs. Giles Stone has returned from visiting her daughter, Mrs. R. T. Hick, at Richmond Hill.

Miss Wallace, Lindsay is in the city visiting Mr. and Mrs. Widdess, 400 Downie street.

THE OLD HURDY GURDY.

Crude Musical Instrument That Led Up to the Hand Organ.

The early type of hurdy gurdy originated in Germany during the ninth century and under the name of bauren leyer (peasant's lyre) attained great popularity throughout Europe, falling into a decline only at the beginning of the last century. Even today a slightly modernized type of this instrument may be seen upon the streets of the smaller towns of Savoy.

The instrument consisted of a violin-like frame and sounding board, provided with from three to six strings. The music was produced by a small crank actuated wooden wheel, whose resined edge bore against the strings. The two outer strings were keyed in unison and when the wheel was revolved gave forth a bass note which served as a musical background. The remaining strings were attached to keys, by which their tension and their tone might be varied. This adjustment was the only control possessed by the player.

Needless to say, the hurdy gurdy was suited only to the most elementary of selections. While originally much used at fetes and celebrations, it later was used only by itinerant street musicians, a position now occupied by its successor—the hand organ

Earliest Cold Storage.

In Macaulay's essay on "Lord Bacon" he points out that in 1626 the subject of his memoir tried the experiment of stuffing a fowl with snow to prevent it from putrefying and in carrying out the work caught cold, from which he died. Macaulay adds: "In the last letter that he ever wrote, with fingers which, as he said, could not steadily hold a pen, he did not omit to mention that the experiment of the snow had succeeded excellently well." If, however, we turn to nature there are instances in Siberia of mammoths preserved in ice so that their flesh is still eatable from a period probably coeval with the first appearance of man on this globe. If the Romans brought to their banquets the dainties of the known world, had they not some knowledge of cold storage?—London Spectator.

MOTHER'S FATAL FALL AFTER SON'S RETURN.

Hamilton, July 11.—Elizabeth H. Wheeler of Dundas, 65 years of age, after welcoming home her son, who returned from the front last night at 9 o'clock, fell downstairs about three o'clock this morning, breaking her neck, and dying shortly afterwards. Owing to the return of the son the family sat up until about 2 o'clock in the morning. About 3 o'clock they were awakened by the fall of the mother, who apparently had risen to go downstairs.

SUFFERED TERRIBLY

For Four Days and Nights From

DIARRHOEA

Diarrhoea arises from many causes such as change of diet change of water change of climate, catching cold, the eating of unripe fruits or anything that will cause an excess of bile.

On the first sign of any looseness of the bowels it should not be neglected, but should be looked after immediately, for if not diarrhoea, dysentery or some other serious bowel complaint may ensue.

Miss Florence Harfield, 325 Lauder Ave., Toronto, Ont., writes: "I was troubled with a violent attack of diarrhoea. I suffered terribly with it for four days and nights, and finally I became so weak I did not think I could stand it any longer. My sister advised me to try a bottle of Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry. I did so, and after I had taken three doses I felt a whole lot relieved. I kept on taking it, and by the time I had taken six doses, the diarrhoea had completely stopped. I think it a wonderful remedy, as it is so quick to act. I will recommend it to all my friends."

There are so many spurious "Strawberry" preparations sold that you should see that the name "Dr. Fowler's" is on every bottle you buy. Price 35c. Manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

PREMIER'S RESOLUTION DELAYED ONE DAY

Request to Defer Resolution For Extension of Life of Parliament Caused Merriment—Sir Robert Borden Consents to Request For Delay From Associate Member From Halifax.

RAILWAY BILL DISCUSSED

OTTAWA, July 17.—Before a representative house yesterday afternoon Sir Robert Borden moved the resolution standing in his name, requesting the Imperial Government to amend the B.N.A. Act so as to provide for a further extension of the term of Parliament for another year ending October 7, 1918. Sir Robert Borden was accorded a mild mead of applause when he prepared to rise. Much to the surprise of those present, however, A. K. MacLean, junior member for Halifax, rose instead.

Asks Postponement.

"Let me suggest to the Prime Minister," he said, "that consideration of this resolution be postponed for a few days at least. I don't pretend to speak for any other honorable gentleman on this side of the House, but it is only fair that consideration of the motion be postponed at least until the Military Service bill has been passed. The ultimate decision of the House on that measure may very much affect me in reaching a conclusion on this resolution. This is a fair suggestion and I trust it will receive consideration.

Sir Robert Borden briefly consulted Sir George Foster. When he rose there was no trace of resentment on his face.

"I would have been glad," he said, "if the honorable member had communicated to me earlier the desire which he now makes. I gave notice on Friday last and I came to-day prepared to go on with this resolution which has been on the order paper for four months. However, in accordance with the request, I am willing to postpone consideration until to-morrow. In the meantime I will consider the request further."

No Sympathy Shown.

Hon. Frank Oliver rose. "So far as I am concerned," he said in a level but emphatic voice, "the suggestion of the junior member for Halifax has no support from me." (Loud laughter from the Conservative side.)

"Make that unanimous," said Geo. Kyte, of Richmond.

Hon. Charles Murphy rose. "Mr. Speaker," he said, "I am of the same opinion as the member for Edmonton." (more laughter.)

Dr. Clark, of Red Deer, heaved himself to his feet from a back seat. "I hope," he said, "that the desire of the member for Halifax has not been prejudiced in the eyes of the Government by the observation of honorable members who have taken their seats."

(Cries of "hear, hear," from the Government side.)

Hon. Dr. Pugsley rose amid further jeers from the Government side. "I am sorry," he said, "that this resolution should be allowed to stand over. It has been on the order paper for many days. The sooner it is brought down and decided upon the better, for the country."

"The request of the honorable member for Halifax has no support from me either," said Sir Robert Borden, in a jocular mood. "My good nature, however, compels me to accede at least in part to his request."

Sir Wilfrid Laurier concluded the discussions. "While I am ready to go on with the resolution," he said, "still I am glad tht the request of my hon. friend from Halifax which was sincerely made has been agreed to. This is a free Parliament, and any honorable gentleman making a sincere request is entitled to consideration." (Cries of "hear, hear," from both sides.)

Railway Bill Discussed.

The House then went into committee on the bill to amend the Railway Act.

Frank Carvell, of Carleton, was again back in his seat after a week's absence. He and Sir Wilfrid engaged in an earnest conversation at the opening of the House. Thereafter Mr Carvell took a hand on the railway bill.

BIG RUSSIAN DEFICIT IS FACED THIS YEAR

Petrograd Fears Depressing Value of the Ruble Further by a New Issue of Paper.

PETROGRAD, July 15.— The serious financial problems confronting the Russian Government were referred to in a report read at a private meeting of the Duma yesterday by Deputy Bubilkoff, who said the nation's gold reserve of 1,711,000,000 rubles covered 13.3 per cent. of the paper money of the State now in circulation. The debt, which at the end of 1913 was 8,900,000,000 rubles, was 35,600,000,000 at the beginning of 1917. If the paper money issued during the war were added, he said, the total debt was brought up to about 45,000,000,000 rubles.

Of the total national expenditures in 1917 between 12,000,000,000 and 14,000,000,000 rubles would be represented by a deficit. The Deputy referred to the great deterioration in the purchasing value of the ruble, and said that to cover this deficit by the issuance of more paper would mean a further serious increase in prices.

Another unfavourable feature of the general situation is a decrease of 30 per cent. in the production of coal in Southern Russia. M. Bublikoff also referred to the fact that 40 per cent. of the country's locomotives and cars were in the shops awaiting repairs.

The financial problems, the Deputy said, could not be solved by the imposition of fresh taxation, which would remove the stimulus for productive labour.

KEEP THE POTATOES GREEN AND GROWING

Keep the Hoe Going Until the Tops Meet Sufficiently to Shade the Ground—Hilling is Not Always Necessary—Protection of Potato Tops From Moisture.

LATE BLIGHT AND ROT

Many are growing potatoes in Canada this year, for the first time and, as a result of the greatly increased number of growers, the crop will probably be greatly increased. But to insure a good crop there must be an abundance of moisture in the soil and the tops must be protected from insects and disease.

Cultivating the Crop.

The soil should be kept cultivated with the cultivator or hoe until the tops meet sufficiently to shade the ground. As most of the tubers develop in the three or four inches of soil nearest the surface, and as the tubers will not develop well in dry soil, quite shallow cultivation is desirable at this season of the year. In soil which is dry there may be good development of tops but there will be few tubers. The roots in such cases have gone down deep into the soil to obtain moisture but the tuber-bearing stems, which are quite different from the root system, do not develop well. Where the soil is a loose, sandy loam, hilling is not necessary and may be injurious, as the soil dries out more than if left on the level. In heavy soils it is desirable to hill the potatoes as it will loosen the soil and the tubers will be shapelier than when the ground is left level. When there is sufficient rainfall and moisture in the soil hilling is likely to give best results in all kinds of soil as the soil will be looser and the tubers can push through it readily. As a great development of tubers takes place during the cooler and usually moister weather of the latter part of summer, it is very important to keep the plants growing well until then. In one experiment it was shown that during the month of September there was an increase of 119 bushels of potatoes per acre.

Protection of Potato Tops From Insects.

It is very important to prevent the tops of potatoes from being eaten by insects, particularly by the Colorado Potato Beetle. The old "bugs" do not do much harm to the foliage, as a rule, and usually the plants are not sprayed to destroy these, although the fewer there are to lay eggs the less difficulty there will be in destroying the young ones. These begin to eat rapidly soon after hatching and close watch should be kept so that the vines may be sprayed before much harm is done. Paris green kills more rapidly than arsenate of lead, but does not adhere so well, and in rainy weather it is desirable to have something that will stay on the leaves so that they will be protected until it stops raining and thus prevent the tops being eaten. At the Central Experimental Farm a mixture of Paris green and arsenate of lead is used in the proportion of 8 ounces Paris green, 1 1-2 pounds paste arsenate of lead (or 12 ounces dry arsenate of lead) to 40 gallons of water in order to get the advantage of both poisons. It may be that it is not convenient to get both poisons when either 12 ounces of Paris green or 3 pounds paste arsenate of lead (or 1 1-2 pounds dry arsenate of lead) to 40 gallons water could be used, or in smaller quantities, say 1 ounce Paris green to 3 gallons or 3 1-2 ounces paste arsenate of lead or half that quantity of dry to 3 gallons of water. An experiment conducted for six years at the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, showed that, on the average, where the tops were sprayed to kill "bugs," the yield was 188.9 bushels per acre, while when the tops were not sprayed and allowed to be eaten, the yield was only 98.2 bushels per acre. It is desirable not to stop with one spraying which usually does not kill all the bugs but to spray several times, if necessary, so that as little foliage as possible is eaten.

Protection of the Potato Plants From Late Blight and Rot.

In some years the crop of potatoes is much lessened by the Late Blight disease and when rot follows little of the crop may be left. It is, therefore, very desirable to prevent this disease from spreading. This is done by keeping the plants covered with Bordeaux mixture from about the first week of July, or before there is any sign of the disease, until September. Sometimes the first application of Bordeaux mixture is made before the potato beetles are all killed, when the poison for them may be mixed with the Bordeaux. While the disease is not very bad every year it is well to be prepared. There was an average increase per year of 94 bushels of potatoes from spraying with Bordeaux mixture in three years.

The formula for Bordeaux mixture for potatoes is 6 pound copper sulphate or bluestone, 4 pounds freshly slaked lime to 40 gallons of water. While the bluestone will dissolve more quickly in hot water; if it is not convenient to get this it may be suspended over night in a cotton bag or earthen vessel containing four or five or more gallons of water. The lime should be slaked in another vessel and before mixing with the copper sulphate solution should be strained through coarse sacking or a fine sieve. The copper sulphate solution is now put into a barrel, if it has not already been dissolved in one, and enough water added to half fill the barrel; the slaked lime should be diluted in another barrel with enough water to make half a barrel of the lime mixture. Now pour the diluted lime mixture into the diluted copper sulphate solution and stir thoroughly, when it is ready for use. The concentrated lime mixture should not be mixed with the concentrated copper sulphate solution, as, if this is done, an inferior mixture will result. If the barrels are kept covered so that there is no evaporation stock solutions of the concentrated materials may be kept in separate barrels throughout the season. It is important to have the quantities of lime and copper sulphate as recommended, but in order to be sure that enough lime has been used and there is no danger of burning the foliage, let a drop of ferrocyanide of potassium solution (which can be obtained from a druggist) fall into the mixture when ready. If the latter turns reddish-brown add more lime mixture until no change of colour takes place.

Next to its unique flavour, the great economy of Salada Tea has been the reason for it's enormous sale.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY AIDS

MAE MARTYN

Dearie: Yes, I believe men all recognize a "made" complexion. Throw away your powder and rouge, and use a plain spermax lotion. Then you will have a complexion of which you can feel justly proud, because it will be real as well as beautiful. To prepare it dissolve four ounces spermax (which you may get from your druggist) in one-half pint witch hazel or hot water. This lotion cannot be detected when on, and its regular use banishes lines, blotches, pimples, blackheads, and sallowness. The spermax lotion is delightful for spring months, as it protects the skin from the winds.

Dora: You can make your own sparkling and clear by this simple home treatment: Dissolve an ounce of epsoms (get it at drug store) in a pint of water. Take one or two drops in each eye every day will be all that is necessary to make them feel strong and look bright. If the lids are red or inflamed, try soaking balls of absorbent cotton in the cream, and laying them on each eye.

Juanita: The sogginess of skin which you write about is disfiguring, and you will soon be wrinkled past help if you neglect it. But try this simple treatment, and I'm sure it will work wonders. Mix an ounce of ammonia (from the drug store) in one-half pint cold water, and add two teaspoonfuls glycerine. This cream jelly will cause the skin to contract slowly until the healthy firmness is restored. Keep your complexion clear and free from blemishes. Also removes blackheads.

Eugenia: Your yellowness doubtless means that your liver requires a regulator, and I would suggest a plain dandelion tonic. This will cleanse the blood and give tone and strength to the liver and kidneys, and when these organs are in a healthy condition you will be free from the bilious attacks, the obstinate headaches, and the pains in small of back and groin. To prepare this tonic I get an ounce hardene from druggist, and put it into one-half pint alcohol (never use whisky), then add one-half cupful of sugar and hot water to make a quart. The dose is a tablespoonful before meals. The hardene tonic is excellent to clear the skin of pimples, blotches, and sallowness, and its timely use frequently saves doctor's bills.

Chloe: I have found the most beneficial shampoo for the scalp and hair can be made at home by dissolving a teaspoonful sanitas in a cup of hot water. This is unusually soothing and cleansing to the itchy, dandruff-laden scalp and quickly corrects over-oiliness and other scalp-ups-sets. My shampooing with sanitas has restored an even color, rich gloss, and soft fluff to my hair, which was becoming dull and brittle. It seems to have encouraged a vigorous and luxuriant growth.

P. S.: The spare point do a continuation of the slim figure effects, and as you show signs of an added waistline you should take steps to reduce your weight. Make this preparation at home, and before each meal take a tablespoonful: Get four ounces of parsotle from your druggist and dissolve in one and one-half pints of hot water. Strain and cool the mixture before using. This is inexpensive, and will be welcome to the woman who does not want strenuous diet or exercise.

Lorraine: Your faded hair is not necessarily dying, though it is in danger. Here is a home-made hair tonic, costing little, which I know is of great value to the scalp and hair: Into one-half pint alcohol put one ounce quassoin (which I get from the druggist's), and add one-half pint water. This gives you a full pint. I have found it very soothing, and it banishes the dry, harsh, unhealthy condition of the scalp, invigorating the hair roots so a beautiful growth is certain to result.

Delicious! Appetizing! Invigorating!

"The Postmaster's Daughter"

By LOUIS TRACY

CHAPTER XIV.

ON BOTH SIDES OF THE RIVER.

The sun, transmuted into Greenwich time, exercised an extraordinary influence on the seemingly humdrum life of Steynholme that day. A few minutes after three o'clock—just too late to observe either Winter or Siddle—P. C. Robinson strolled forth from the cottage. He glanced up the almost deserted side street, in which every rounded cobble and white flagstone radiated heat. A high class automobile had dashed past twice in forty minutes, but the pace was on the borderland of doubt, so the guardian of the public weal had contented himself with recording its number on the return journey.

But his thoughts were far a-field from joy riders, stray cattle, hawkers without licenses, and other small fry which come into the constabulary net. It would be a feather in his cap if he could only strike the trail of the veritable. Steynholme murderer. The entrancing notion possessed him morning, noon and night. Mrs. Robinson declared that it even dominated his dreams. Robinson was sharp. He knew quite well that the brains of the London detectives held some elusive quality which he personally lacked. They seemed to peer into the heart of a thing so wisely and thoroughly. He did not share Superintendent Fowler's somewhat derogatory estimate of Furneaux, with whom he was much better acquainted than was his superior officer, while Chief Inspector Winter's repute stood so high that it might not be questioned. Still to the best of his belief, the case had beaten both these doughty representatives of Scotland Yard; there was yet a chance for the humble police constable; so Robinson squared his shoulders, seamed his brows, and marched majestically down the Knoleworth Road.

He had an eye for The Hollies of course, though neither he nor anybody else could discern more than the bare edge of the lawn from bridge or road, owing to the dense screen of evergreen trees and shrubs planted by the tenant who remodelled the property.

But the spot where the body of Adelaide Melhuish was drawn ashore was visible, and the sight of it started a dim thesis in the policeman's mind, which took definite shape during less than an hour's stroll. Thus, at four o'clock exactly, he was pulling the bell at The Hollies. Almost simultaneously, Mr. Siddle knocked modestly on the private door of the post office, to reach which one had to pass down a narrow yard.

"Mr. Grant at home?" inquired Robinson, when Minnie appeared.

Yes; the postmaster was on the lawn with Mr. Hart. The policeman found the two there, seated in chairs with awnings. They had been discussing, of all things in the world, the futurist craze in painting. Hart held by it, but Grant carried bigger guns in real knowledge of the artist's limitations as well as his privileges.

Hart was the first to notice the newcomer's presence and greeted him joyously.

"Come along, Robinson, and manacle this reprobate," he shouted. "He is nothing but a narrow minded pre-Rafaelite. A period in prison will dust the cobwebs out of his attic."

"Hello, Robinson!" said Grant. "Anything stirring?"

"Not much, sir. I just popped in to ask if you remembered exactly how the body was roped?"

"Indeed, I do not. Some incidents of that horrible half hour have gone into a sad jumble. I recollect you calling attention to the matter, but what your point was I really cannot say now. Perhaps, it may come back if you explain."

"Well, we don't seem to be making a great deal of progress, sir, and I was wondering whether you two gentlemen might help. I don't want it mentioned. I'm taking a line of my own."

Grant repressed a smile. He recalled well enough the first "line" the policeman took, and the mischief it had caused. Being an even-minded person, however, he admitted that his own behaviour had not been above suspicion on the day the crime was discovered. In allotting blame, as between Robinson and himself, the proportion was six of one and half a dozen of the other.

"Propound, justiciary," said Hart. "You've started well, anyhow. The connection between a line and a rope should be obvious even to a judge.... As a pipe-opener, have a drink!"

Robinson had removed his helmet, and was flourishing a red handkerchief, not without cause, the day being really very hot.

"Not for a few minutes, thank you, sir," said the policeman. "May I ask Bates for a sack and a cord?"

He went to the kitchen. Hart was "tickled to death," he vowed.

"We are about to witness the reconstruction of the crime, a procedure which the French delight in, and the intellect of France is a hundred years ahead of our effete civilization" he chortled.

Grant was not so pleased. The memory of a distressing vision was beginning to blur, and this ponderous policeman must come and revive it. Yet even he grew interested when Robinson illustrated a nebulous idea by knotting a clothesline around a sack stuffed with straw, having brought Bates to bear him out in the matter of accuracy.

"There you are, gentlemen!" he said, puffing after the slight exertion. "That's the way of it. How does it strike you?"

"It's what a sailor calls two half hitches," commented Hart instantly. "A very serviceable knot, which will resist to the full strength of the rope."

"We have no sailors in Steynholme, sir," said the policeman.

"Oh, it's used regularly by tradesmen," put in Grant. "A draper or grocer—any man accustomed to tying parcels securely, in fact—with fashion that knot nine times out of ten."

"How about a—a farmer, sir?" That was as near as Robinson dared to go to "horse-dealer."

"I think a farmer would be more likely to adopt a timber hitch, which is made in several ways. Here are samples."

And Grant busied himself with rope and sack.

Robinson watched closely.

"Yes," he nodded. "I've seen those knots in a farmyard ...Well, it's something—not much—but a trifle, better than nothing. .....All right, Bates. You can take 'em away."

"Have you shown that knot to Mr. Furneaux?" inquired Grant.

"No, sir. I've kept that up me, sleeve, as the sayin' is."

"But why?"

Robinson shuffled uneasily on his feet.

"These Scotland Yard men will hardly listen to a uniformed constable, sir," he said. "I'll tell 'em all about it at the inquest on Wednesday."

"In effect,

John P.
Robinson he
Sez they didn't know everythin' down in Judee," quoted Hart.

"You've got my name pat," grinned the policeman, whose Christian names were "John Price."

"My name is Walter, not Patrick," retorted Hart. Robinson continued to smile, though he failed to grasp the joke until late that evening.

"Did you make up that verse just straight off, sir," he asked.

"No. It's a borrowed plume, plucked from an American quill pen."

Hart gave "plume" a French sound and Robinson was puzzled to know why Grant bade his friend stop profaning a peaceful Sunday afternoon.

"You'll have a glass of beer now?" went on the host.

"I don't mind if I do, sir, though it's tealime and I make it a rule on Sundays to have tea with the missis. A policeman's hours are broken up, and his wife hardly ever knows when to have a meal ready."

Minnie was summoned. It took her a couple of minutes to draw the beer from a cobl cellar. So it chanced that when Doris led Mr. Siddle to the edge of the cliff about twenty-five minutes past four, the first thing that they saw was the local police constable on the lawn of The Hollies putting down a gill of "best Sussex" at a draught.

"Well!" cried the chemist icily, "I wonder what Superintendent Fowler would say to that if he knew it?"

"What is there particularly wrong about Robinson drinking a glass of beer?" demanded Doris, more alive to the insinuation in Siddle's words than was quite permissable under the role imposed on her by Winter.

She waved her hand to the party on the lawn. Grant, whose eyes ever roved in that direction, had seen her white muslin dress the moment she appeared.

"Who the deuce is that with Miss Martin?" he said, returning the signal.

"Siddle, the chemist," announced Robinson, not to well pleased himself at being "spotted" so openly. "Well, gentlemen, I'll be off," and he vanished by the side path through the laurels.

"Siddle!" repeated Grant vexedly. "So it is. And she dislikes the man, for some reason."

"Let's go and rescue the fair maid," prompted Hart.

"No, no. If Doris wanted me she would let me know."

"How? At the top of her voice?"

"You're far too curious, Wally."

"Semaphore, of course," drawled Hart. "When are you going to marry the girl, Jack?"

"As soon as this infernal business has blown over."

"You haven't asked her, I gather?"

"No."

"Tell me when you do, and I'll hie me to London town, though in torrid June. You are unbearable in love."

"The lash of your wit cuts deeply sometimes," said Grant quietly.

"Dash it all, old chap, I was talking at random. Very well. I'll do penace in sackcloth and ashes by remaining here, and applauding your poetic efforts. I'll even help. I'm a dab at sonnets."

Meanwhile, Mr. Siddle had regained his poise.

"I meant nothing offensive to the donor of the best," he said, turning his voice to an apologetic note. "But I take it Robinson is conducting certain inquiries, and I imagine that his superiors demand a degree of circumspection in such conditions. That is all."

"Surely you do not rank with the stupid crowd in its suspicions of Mr. Grant?" said the girl.

"I'm pleased to think you refuse to class me with the gossip-mongers of Steynholme, Doris," was the guarded answer.

There had been no reference to the murder during tea which was served as soon as the chemist came in. The visitor had tabled a copy of a current medical journal containing an article on the therapeutic qualities of honey, so the talk was lifted at once into an atmosphere far removed from crime. Doris was grateful for his tact. When her father went to the office she brought Mr. Siddle into the garden solely in pursuance of her promise to the detective, although convinced that there would be no outcome save a few labored compliments to herself. And now, by accident, as it were, the death of Adelaide Melhuish thrust itself into their conversation. Perhaps it was her fault.

"No," she said candidly. "No one who has known you for seven years, Mr. Siddle, could possibly accuse you of spreading scandal."

"Seven years! Is it so long since I came to Steynholme? Sometimes it appears an age, but more often I saw by the calendar must be in error. Why it seems only the other day that I saw you in a short frock, bowling a hoop."

"A tom-boy occupation," laughed Doris. "But dad encouraged that and skipping as the best possible means of exercise."

"He was right. Look how straight and svelte you are! Few, if any, among our community can have watched your progress to womanhood as closely as I. You see, living opposite, as I do, I kept track of you more intimately than your neighbors."

Siddle was trimming his sails cleverly. The concluding sentence robbed his earlier comments of their sentimental import.

"If we live long enough we may even see each other in the sere and yellow leaf," said Doris flippantly.

"I would ask no greater happiness," came the quiet reply, and Doris could have bitten her tongue for according him that unguarded opening. Suddenly availing herself of the advice which the detective, like Hamlet, had given to the players, she gazed musingly at the fair panorama of The Hollies and its gardens, with the two young men seated on the lawn. By this time Minnie was staging tea and the picture looked idyllic enough. Doris saw out of the tail of her eye that her companion was watching her furtively, though apparently absorbed in the scene. He moistened his thin lips with his tongue.

MACLEANS IN BOSTON

Canadian Methods and Kilts netted 1,000 recruits in Fortnight

The Canadian Maclean Highlanders, as a result of a whirlwind campaign for recruits in Boston, reached full strength for the trip overseas. This unit received permission to recruit in Boston. The Kilties took the city by storm. Besides bringing their own up to strength by signing 1,000 men, they also gathered in some 300 Americans, whom they promptly turned over to the American army. The Canadian recruiting methods made a great hit. The Maclean Highlanders during the early days of their campaign, secured quite a number of men in Ontario. They were commanded by Lieut.-Col. Guthrie, M.P., of New Brunswick, a veteran of the first contingent.

English Gunners in Alps

An Italian soldier at the front wrote to friends: I have seen your English gunners. They are fine soldiers indeed. They seem so calm, self-confident, and strong. They behave splendidly under fire and have some beautiful guns. The Austrians evidently know of their presence among us, and their airmen tried particularly to locate their batteries, which have been shelled furiously of late. The English and Italians are very friendly and getting on like good and true comrades.

Baker Deaf to Plea for Queen

While touring the north country among munitioners, King George arrived in a town late at night and sent an attendant to buy some bread. The baker refused because it was after the official hour. "But it's for the King," pleaded the attendant. "There is not a bit of bread on the train."

"I don't care if it's for the Queen herself," replied the baker. "I can't sell you a bit."

Technicalities of No Avail

Augustus John Macdonnell, an Englishman who was living in Lille before the German occupation and came over with other refugees in August, 1914, was at Kingston-on-Thames Police Court held to be an ordinary resident of Great Britain and ordered to report to the military.

Griddle Cakes Without Eggs

With the advent of cold weather griddle cakes are always liked. Take 1 yeast cake, 1 cup lukewarm water, 4 tablespoons light brown sugar, 4 tablespoons melted lard, 1 teaspoon salt, 1½ cups flour, 1½ cups milk. Scald and cool the milk. Dissolve the yeast and sugar in the lukewarm water, add the lard, flour, salt and milk. Beat well, then cover and set aside in a warm place to rise for about an hour. When light stir well and bake on a hot, greased griddle.

Whetting the Appetite

Condiments and similar substances serve to whet the appetite by stimulating the nerves of taste. Upon the whole, they seem to exercise a favorable influence upon digestion. Among these aids to appetite are spices which are added to food, and coffee and tea. Food should be made palatable, but care must be taken not to use too much seasoning, otherwise the digestive organs are soon irritated and disease produced.

Tansy for Furs

Sprinkle the leaves of tansy among your woolens and furs and they will be preserved by this old fashioned remedy. A few drops of oil of lavender placed in a small bowl of boiling water will dispel unpleasant air in a room.

Lost Needles

Have you ever had needles disappear entirely in the filling of the pincushion? You can prevent this by inserting a piece of pasteboard in the filling halfway.

Cook all summer and aboveground vegetables in salted boiling water; all winter and underground vegetables in unsalted water, adding the salt when seasoning for the table.

If a white shirt is scorched when ironed, the brown marks may be removed by rubbing them with a little dry borax.

Figs split open form excellent poultices for boils and small abscesses.

Most Work Freely

Nearly 25 per cent. of 3,000 workers in Gloucestershire hospitals are giving their services free.

At the request of the Mesopotamia Field Force, 300 fishing-rods were sent out.

The Manchester tramways carried 140 million passengers in 1916.

Umbrella as a Clothes Drier

A clothes drier that can be carried will appeal to travelers, and persons living in small quarters. An umbrella, four yards of strong wrapping twine, and several small brass rings are required. Knot the rings into the twine at intervals, measuring the distance between the rib points of the umbrella, and hook the twine to the points by the rings, as shown, providing considerable drying space for small articles. Hook the umbrella handle over a suitable support, or tie it carefully to the supporting pipe of a light fixture in the middle of the room, ready for the articles to be dried. The twine may also be wrapped around the points, but it is better to carry a line with rings attached.—From Popular Mechanics.

A Thirty-three Year Job.

The founder of "synthetic philosophy," so called as being an attempt at fusing all the sciences into a whole, was Herbert Spencer. It was in 1859, when he was about forty, that Spencer projected his scheme of philosophy, based on the principle of evolution in its relation to life, mind, society and morals. He proposed a scheme requiring him to complete eleven volumes in twenty years, but he was thirty-three years at work on it, and then it had greatly exceeded the original scope. To the accomplishment of his self imposed and gigantic task he devoted all of his time, strength and mental powers, steadfastly refusing honors and titles. Delicate from infancy, he yet lived to pass his eighty-third milestone.—Chicago Journal.

Passing Counterfeits.

Johnny—Say, papa, passing counterfeit money is unlawful, isn't it? Papa—Yes. Johnny—Well, papa, if a man was walking along the street and saw a ten dollar counterfeit bill upon the sidewalk and did not pick it up wouldn't he be guilty of passing counterfeit money, and couldn't he be arrested and put in jail? Papa—More likely the lunatic asylum. Now you may go to bed, my son.—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

Get His Dose Later.

Mr. Courtney (flatteringly)—I had the blues awfully when I came here tonight, Miss Fisher, but they are all gone now. You are as good as medicine. Miss Fisher's Little Brother—Yes; father himself says she'll be a drug on the market if she doesn't catch on to some fellow soon.

Egg Plant

EGG PLANT is a difficult vegetable for the amateur gardener to handle.

A bulletin of the National Emergency Food Garden Commission contains the following information:—Egg plant is a hot weather plant, therefore it should not be grown where the summer season is short. Nor should it be attempted in poor soil, nor by any one who is not willing to give it plenty of attention. It requires one or more transplantings, and if its growth suffers any check the crop is likely to be a failure.

Inasmuch as it is not safe to set out egg plant in the garden much before the middle of June and because the plant requires a long growing season the seeds should be sown indoors or in an outdoor hotbed. One-third of an ounce of seed will produce enough plants to make a row 100 feet long. These seeds are usually sown thickly in rows in the seed boxes and when the plants are large enough to handle they are transplanted to flower pots filled with rich soil. Some gardeners, however, prefer to sow the seed directly in flower pots and to thin out the seedlings later.

Unless the seedlings are transplanted to large pots directly from the seed box as the plants grow they should be set in larger pots. Some gardeners make three transfers before putting the plants into the garden, which should not be done until warm weather is settled and the plants are six to ten inches high. Great care should be used not to disturb the roots in any transplanting. Injury can be avoided by using old berry boxes instead of flower pots for growing the seedlings, the bottoms of the boxes being torn off and then the rest of the box set into the garden with the plants.

Plants should be set eighteen inches apart, and the fruit may be eaten when they are three inches or more in diameter.

Boys and Girls Can Help the Country and Themselves

"I USED to have a hard time to get my boys to work in the garden, even when there was nothing else they wanted to do," said a suburban father, "but now they go without an order or request from me and work as long as they can find anything to do. 'We are not slackers,' I heard one of them boasting, and he was as proud of doing his bit in the garden as if he was following the colors in answer to the bugle call."

This is the experience of other parents. The boys have responded to their country's need and can be depended upon to do their duty in the useful trenches of the garden and on the honorable field of food supply. The adult who does not encourage this spirit and make all possible use of the enthusiasm and devotion of the boys and girls is making a sad mistake and committing a blunder. For a long time we have been complaining that no one has wanted to work on the farms or live in the country and bemoaning the fact that all the young people come to the congested cities.

If properly handled, the interest that the younger members of society have had aroused in them in this farm and garden campaign for the patriotic increase of the food supply and the altruistic purpose of feeding our Allies may be turned to good practical account for the future. It may incline the boys, and the girls too, to find something in the country that is worth while and to think that farming is, after all, a vocation comparable in satisfactory returns with many of those in the city to which they have solely heretofore turned their attention.

The children and young persons who are so willing now, under the high impulse of helping humanity, to do their part as gardeners will need direction, of course, but they will need also to be assured that they are doing something worth while and that they shall see the results of their labors and have a personal share in it.

If a boy or girl raises a good crop he should have something to say about its disposition. If he wants to present it to his family the family should be duly appreciative. If he desires to give it to some one who has less food he should have the privilege. If he desires to sell it and send the proceeds to the Allies or donate it to some other patriotic purpose his parents or those directing him should endeavor to get his point of view or to use such arguments with him as will persuade him to adopt theirs.

Gardening is not the whole of increasing the food supply for the country, although it is a very important one, and the only one in which city children can have a share. If the country children can be encouraged to raise live stock, something which all children who love pets and animals will take to very readily, they will be performing an important service. Let them have a flock of chickens for their own, make theirs the responsibility of feeding them, of gathering the eggs and of taking care of their quarters. A goat is a pet that will add to the liveliness of a little chap's life, and it is as valuable as it is easy to support. On a farm the youngest member of the family may choose to raise a calf with advantage to himself and the community.

Give all the boys and girls a chance to be producers.

ANSWERING THE NATION'S CALL.

Potting Plants

AS soon as possible after the first of May all the house plants should be taken to the garden and assembled in a shady place where one can work in comfort and where the roots when exposed will not be injured by the sun. Here also a potting bench should be provided, say a few boards or a door or shutter laid on the top of two barrels, and a supply of soil prepared. This latter should consist of loam that has formed six or eight inches of the top layer of land on which the grass has been growing, preferably land on which cattle have been pastured.

"The thinnest possible skimming of sod should be taken off and thrown away to get rid of the actual grass, but the fibrous layer immediately below, which is rich in humus and beneficent bacteria and has long life and fertility, must be religiously saved. Brown or yellowish upland soil is better than the black stuff found in low, moist situations." These are the directions of Mr. F. E. Palmer in the chapter on "House Plants Out of Doors in Summer," in a little book, "Milady's House Plants," published by A. T. De la Mare Company.

"There is a popular fallacy," he says, "that this bog or black peat has wonderful growing properties. Unfortunately this fallacy has extended even to professional gardeners, with the result of many a failure and disappointment.

"If the available loam is light in color and inclined to be stony, add to it one-third old leaf mould, that is leaves of trees that have become reduced by years of decay almost to a powder. Have an extra supply of this on hand so that some more may be added for the ferns when their time comes, to make the mixture half loam, half leaf mould. If the loam is sticky, like clay some fine sand may be added, say ten per cent, otherwise sand is of little or no value, especially coarse sand. A few cracked pots that may be broken up for drainage, a little moss out of the woods, also for drainage, two or three potting sticks, from a piece of shingle to a section of a broom handle, will complete the equipment.

"Chop up the loam and rub it through a coarse sieve, say three-quarter inch mesh, all the grass roots going through and only the stones being thrown away. Sift the leaf mould to remove stones and sticks and mix the two together on the bench.

"Taking the foliage plants as the first group, take the largest plant out of its pot and examine the roots and soil. If the plant is in a healthy condition the roots should occupy every bit of the hole of the earth and be matted around the bottom. This is the best time of year for putting it into a larger pot, because spring and summer are the times of greatest energy in the plant world and they can thus best stand the shock of repotting.

"A plant that has been in a five inch pot will require a seven inch one. For drainage put in the bottom of the pot a bit of broken flower pot with the concave side down. On top of this is placed a thin layer of charcoal and on this a thin layer of moss. Having 'crocked' the plant, as the gardeners say, it is ready for the plant.

"Lay the plant down on the bench and hold firmly with one hand, with the other take a fork and tear away the coils of roots that have formed around the drainage. If the plant sits too deeply in the new pot fill in a little soil, then put it in and fill around the hole with some of the new soil. After giving the whole a vigorous shake to settle the plant and soil in position, firm down the latter with a potting stick. After ramming this layer firmly, fill in more firming again until the desired level is reached."

This is one of many valuable things in this book for the woman who likes to grow flowers and in these days of vegetable popularity still clings to a few pots. She will especially want some house plants for next winter, when she can't grow vegetables, and she will be interested in how to make them bloom and in the chapter on sun parlors as plant rooms.

Don't Waste Stale Bread---Use It

NOW that the scarcity of wheat and the serious demand for it has been brought home to us, not a bit of bread should be thrown away. We have been great sinners in this respect. The garbage pails in the cities have had not only slices but even loaves which were absolutely wasted. Fortunately out of town, where there are pigs or chickens to be fed, it is not altogether wasted, but nowhere should it be thrown away, since there are many excellent ways of utilizing it.

In England the use of toast has been discouraged because persons have been in the habit of discarding any toasted bread that was left over even more than they have plain bread, but it, as well as all bread scraps, may be thoroughly dried out in a moderate oven and rolled into crumbs for which there are many uses. Chops, egg plant, oysters and many other kinds of food that are to be fried are delicious dipped in beaten egg and then in bread crumbs. Dried bread crumbs are good, too, to sprinkle over the top of creamed fish or vegetables, with or without cheese, and browned in the oven. They may be used for creamed and baked eggs which are prepared with various sauce and under different names. They are also excellent for various scalloped dishes.

Stale bread is always valuable for stuffing.

No bread should be eaten the first day of its baking if one has a regard for health. If it is a little too stale, however, to be palatable one may always make French toast by beating up an egg with enough milk to moisten the bread, and then frying it. A good breakfast or luncheon dish may also be made by breaking stale bread into small pieces and mixing it thoroughly with milk and egg, with a pinch of salt and a bit of butter, beating it into a batter. It may then be dropped upon the griddle and fried like batter cakes.

Bread pudding when made at home is a dessert by no means to be despised. An excellent recipe is: Soak one pint of fine crumbs in a pint of warm milk until soft. Add three tablespoonfuls of cocoa dissolved in a little water, three well beaten eggs, a half cup granulated sugar, then another pint of milk. Set the pudding dish in a larger pan of hot water and bake one hour. Serve with whipped cream flavored with vanilla or with a sauce made from a scant cupful of sugar, a tablespoonful of cornstarch and a cup of water. Cook in a double boiler ten or fifteen minutes, and just before serving put in a tablespoonful of butter and a half teaspoonful of nutmeg.

Brown Betty is another dessert in the making of which bread crumbs may be utilized. Put a layer of bread crumbs in the bottom of a baking dish, then a layer of tart, sliced apples, and so on in alternation. The top layer should be of bread crumbs. Add a half cup of water to a half cup of molasses, stir in two tablespoonfuls of brown sugar, pour over the crumbs and bake in a moderate oven for one hour. Serve with hard sauce or with cream.

Trees for Food Production

MAKING trees that now are valued only for their wood produce food is a hobby of J. Russell Smith, professor of industry in the University of Pennsylvania.

"We now have reached the state in our industrial development when we need large areas of land put to trees that will produce many crops of useful fruits, nuts, beans or other annual or occasional crop before the final crop of wood," he says in American Forestry. "A tree is no poorer for the fact that it has supported fifty or a hundred crops of nuts, fruit or beans.

"The great need of American agriculture to-day is not primarily things for men to eat but things for the beasts to eat. Our domestic animals eat many times as much as we do, and trees, whether attended to by horticulturist or forester, can undoubtedly be made to yield vast amounts of forage if care and attention are directed to that object. Half or two-thirds of the pork grown in Portugal is produced by the acorns of the cork oak and evergreen or ilex oak. There are many other trees that might join the oaks and make a series of crops that would supply a surprising proportion of the needs of domestic animals, especially sheep and swine.

"With this idea of crop forage in mind and with the added fact that with the rising price of meat we are steadily increasing our consumption of nuts and are importing them by the millions of dollars a year, it becomes evident that foresters have been giving us, particularly farmers, bad advice in merely advising us to raise wood. There is little doubt that this idea of fruit harvests as well as wood harvests should have its proper place of beginning on the farmer's woodlot.

"Under the present system of land utilization most of the Appalachian has no economic future except in forests. Yet we have the very stimulating example of Corsica, where similar mountain slopes as steep as a house roof, and even steeper, are clothed for miles in a continuous expanse of trees which look strangely like a forest. Yet every tree is a grafted chestnut. Every acre is as valuable as good corn land in Indiana, and scattered along the magnificent macadam roads are the substantial stone villages of the numerous population, that supports itself in comfortable prosperity from the combined income of chestnuts, chestnut wood and the by-product of pasture and a small garden patch. The chestnut industry has continued in Corsica for centuries.

"Even the young man who plants an oak tree has little reason to expect to live to utilize the timber from its trunk. Yet most of our oaks have specimens that will bear fruit in from three to seven years when grafted upon the suckers growing up around the stumps of their own or allied specimens. Thus instead of having the forest fire follow the lumberman he should be followed by the tree grafter, converting mediocre oaks into prolific oaks, mediocre hickories into good shagbarks, wild persimmons into fruitful persimmons, average black walnuts into those few excellent ones that will furnish kernels in whole quarters, ever bearing mulberries in place of the prolific but quick ripening wild variety.

"The process of establishing crop trees need not be limited to the conversion of wild trees. Many of the fruit yielding trees are easy to transplant, and some of them yield quickly, especially the mulberries, which fruit wild at the height of a man's head. Specimens of the selected 'ever-bearing' varieties will actually bear in the nursery row. The mulberry is so highly prized by the pig, so easy to transplant and so prolific that it is probably the easiest point of approach to the farmer who wishes to experiment along these lines.

"The practice of the Corsican mountaineers is suggestive of a proper method of handling the technical question of getting a stand of trees and keeping it, and at the same time utilizing the by-product of the pasture. The Corsican goat, whose milk makes such good cheese, browses in the chestnut forests and keeps down most of the undergrowth. When a Corsican sees a chestnut tree which in five, ten or twenty years is likely to be ready to go to the pulp mill he goes off to his little nursery, digs out a ten foot chestnut and plants it near the one which it is to succeed. He puts two stakes to keep it from being ridden down by the goats. When it is established, in two or three years, he grafts it. When the old monarch by which it stands finally comes down it is ready to spring promptly into rapid growth and the fullest possible utility of the vacated light, space and fertility. It is true that the natural way to propagate a chestnut is to graft the suckers that grow around the stumps, but the Corsican finds it quicker to have the understudy tree established in advance."

Looking Ahead in the Gardens

NO one knows how long the great demand for food which is making gardeners and food conservers of us all is going to last. Like the government that is preparing for a long war, we must prepare for gardens next year and perhaps the year after.

One of the first things to be done is to start a compost bed. Compost is one of the "quickest" forms in which fertilizer can be applied to the soil. It can be used profitably in next spring's seed beds and in the seed boxes which will be used for starting plants indoors near the end of next winter. It is also valuable for use in hills of melons or other vegetables which need warm soil in the spring and for top dressings of garden beds where quick action of fertilizer is desired.

Compost consists of fine, thoroughly rotted manure, vegetable matter and soil mixed together. As soon as you start to gather any garden crops you can begin composting the waste portions. The pea vines, the turnip tops and waste lettuce leaves can all be thrown into the compost bed. In the city lawn clippings are especially desirable in the compost bed. Street sweepings—if you are sure they are free from automobile oil—will help greatly to increase the fertility of the compost.

It will pay the permanent gardener to build a permanent pit for compost, lining it with concrete.

A gardener living near Washington uses gas for lighting his house. He utilizes the empty carbide cans for the benefit of his young cucumber, melon and other plants which need protection in the spring. With a can opener he cuts out the bottom of the can and then cuts the can in two with a diagonal cut in the middle. This makes a low protector the top of which slopes toward the sun or away from the wind, as he chooses to turn it. By covering the top with cheesecloth he keeps off insects, while a glass cover will admit sunlight and exclude cold on an unseasonable day in spring. Small bottomless, topless boxes built at home serve the same purpose.

When lettuce and other cool weather plants are attempted in the summer they must often be shaded from the wilting sunlight. Cheesecloth will do this sufficiently, and the home gardener can use his own ingenuity in manufacturing low frames for the cloth.

Little cuffs of stiff paper wrapped about the stem of a tomato or cabbage plant when it is transplanted will protect it from cutworms. In some localities the insects are kept out by building low board fences around them and stretching netting or cheesecloth for a roof.

MEMORANDA FOR JUNE.

Transplant sweet potato plants from plant frame to garden.

Sow tomato, cabbage and collard seeds in plant frame for fall crop. (Sow tomatoes in early June. Sow cabbage and collards in late June).

Sow seeds of hardy perennials in hotbeds. Shade plants with screens made of slats.

Transplant in seed bed hardy perennial flower plants and place plants six to twelve inches apart both ways.

Plant beans, corn.

Prune spring flowering shrubs and vines after flowers have fallen.

Plant dahlia roots.

Keep soil between rows mellow.

Spray for insect enemies and plant diseases.

Harvest and replant crops promptly.

Food Problems Abroad

"WE must supply abundant food for ourselves and for our armies and our seamen not only, but also for a large part of the nations with whom we have now made common cause, and in whose support and by whose side we shall be fighting. * * *

"The world's food reserves are low. Not only during the present emergency, but for some time after peace shall have come, both our own people and a large proportion of the people of Europe must rely upon the harvests in America. * * *

"Let me suggest, also, that every one who creates or cultivates a garden helps, and helps greatly, to solve the problem of the feeding of the nations."

Horse Radish, Leeks and Garlic

HORSERADISH, leeks or garlic are so easily grown and occupy so little space they are worth while in almost any garden. Horseradish roots after the first year are likely to become woody and misshapen, and the best results are obtained by planting it fresh every spring and digging every root out in the late fall or even at the end of winter. Often horseradish is allowed to grow year after year in some garden corner, the roots being dug whenever needed.

The plant is propagated from cutting off the roots called "sets." These should be five or six inches long and in size ranging from that of a lead pencil to that of a man's little finger. For straight, thick roots the soil should be deeply prepared. It likes moist soil.

Garlic "cloves" should be planted in early spring two or three inches apart in rows. They grow through the summer and are ready for harvesting in early fall. Leeks may be planted early or as a "follow crop," earth being heaped around the plants as they grow to blanch the stalks. They are not ready for use until late fall and may be stored for winter in cellars.

Results of Life in Darkness.

A scientist kept goldfishes in a roomy tank and with plenty of food, but in absolute darkness. He kept it up for over three years and then observed the modifications that had occurred in the fish. The color first became black, but after the second year it became golden again, and the reason for this is interesting. In the first instance the dark pigment cells spread out and covered up the subjacent layer of crystals which gives the goldfish its golden sheen. In the second instance the phagocytes devoured the dark pigment cells and thus re-exposed the golden layer. The changes in the eye were even more interesting. The structure of the eye was completely altered. The fish became totally blind. The experiment suggests that an individual fish imprisoned in a perfectly dark cave would become blind. But it does not throw any direct light on the origin of a blind race of fishes in caves.

How Hard Rubber Is Made.

We're all of us coming in contact with hard rubber every day of our lives. Our fountain pen, our inkwell tops, the magneto parts and telephone receivers are all made of hard rubber.

But how is it made? Where does it differ from the rubber in an automobile tire, for instance? We'll wager a guess that not one man in a thousand knows.

Vulcanization consists of uniting sulphur with rubber to give it certain properties of elasticity, durability and, still more important, make it to retain these same properties under all normal conditions of heat and cold.

When a larger proportion of sulphur than is found in ordinary soft rubber is present and vulcanization is continued for a much longer time we obtain as a result a substance vastly different in physical properties—hard rubber. Before vulcanization it is quite elastic and we can mold it to suit our needs.—Exchange.

Insects in Flight.

Motion pictures of insects in flight prove that the movement of the wings of all insects presents the same general character. When flight is begun the amplitude of the first wing beats is much smaller than of the subsequent ones, but the period remains almost unchanged. The insect regulates the velocity of its flight not by the rapidity of the motion of its wings, but by changing their inclination. Although in normal conditions the period of the wing beat remains constant, it may be increased or diminished by various influences, such as fatigue and cold.

Hastening the End.

"You'll find I'm hard to discourage," said the persistent suitor melodramatically. "Some day I'll make you admit you love me, and then—not till then—I will die happy."

"I'll say it now," replied the heartless girl. "I don't mind telling a lie for a good end."—Pearson's Weekly.

Country Life.

Over 200 years ago William Penn, speaking of a country life, said, "In short, 'tis the original, and the knowledge and improvement of it, man's oldest business and trade and the best he can be of."

A Gigantic Meteor Stream.

One of the most accomplished and assiduous students of meteors, Dr. Denning, is of the opinion that the August meteors, which radiate from the constellation Perseus and are sometimes popularly called the "tears of St. Lawrence," belong to a stream so broad that the earth, traveling between eighteen and nineteen miles a second, occupies seven weeks in crossing it.

This would make the width of the stream, if the earth traversed it at a right angle to its course, nearly 80,000,000 miles. These meteors are so scattered all round the orbit in which they travel that some of them are visible every year. They are believed to be connected with a bright comet which appeared in 1862 and is supposed to have a period of about 120 years. The outer end of its elliptical meteor stream is situated far beyond the orbit of Neptune.—Los Angeles Times.

Elephants' Fear of Mice.

The reason why one tiny mouse is capable of scaring a whole herd of elephants half to death is found in the fact that in the elephants' native land there are little animals known as chacanas, which feed on a small, sour berry of which elephants are very fond. They live in settlements, something after the manner of prairie dogs, under the berry bushes, and sometimes when feeding the elephants trample upon the little towns, and the chacanas in their fright frequently run up the tubes of the elephants' trunks. Their long, sharp claws catch in the flesh, and they cannot be ejected. The more violently the monster blows through its trunk the more firmly the hooked claws of the little animal become imbedded in the flesh, and inflammation and death are the result. In captivity, therefore, the elephants think they are in danger of the deadly chacanas when they see a mouse.—New York American.

A Tale of Six Cities.

There are at least six cities on this continent which every one should see. Every one should see New York because it is the largest city in the world and because it combines the magnificence, the wonder, the beauty, the sordidness and the shame of a great metropolis. Every one should see San Francisco because it is so vivid, so alive, so golden. Every one should see Washington, the clean, white splendor of which is like the embodiment of a national dream. Every one should see the old gray granite city of Quebec piled on its hill above the river, like some fortified town in France. Every one should see the sweet and aristocratic city of Charleston, which suggests a museum of tradition and early American elegance, and of course every one should see New Orleans.—Julian Street in Collier's Weekly.

Origin of the Pitcher.

Some of the earliest drinking vessels were made of skins, sewed together in such a manner as to be water tight. The skins were well tanned, and the vessels made from them were well nigh indestructible. Leather drinking vessels in England were called "blackjacks" and were made in about the same shape as the pitcher of modern times. The inside was coated with a layer of pitch, thus giving rise to our word "pitcher," it is believed.

Why Elephants Fear Mice.

It seems almost incredible that so small and harmless an animal as a mouse is able to frighten an elephant almost out of his senses, yet one little mouse in the hay on which they are feeding will stampede an entire herd. In the elephants' native land there are little animals known as chacanas, which feed on a small sour berry of which elephants are very fond.

They live in settlements, something after the manner of prairie dogs, under the berry bushes, and sometimes, when feeding, the elephants trample upon the little towns, and the chacanas in their fright frequently run up the tubes of the elephants' trunks.

Their long, sharp claws catch in the flesh, and they cannot be ejected. The more violently the monster blows through its trunk the more firmly the hooked claws of the little animal become imbedded in the flesh, and inflammation and death are the result. In captivity, therefore, the elephants think they are in danger of the deadly chacanas when they see a mouse and show signs of great fear.

More Labor Than You Thought.

To write a single letter of the alphabet, it is roughly estimated, requires from 200,000 to 300,000 distinct processes, all of which are controlled and directed by the mind. To make the letter O, for instance, takes but a second, yet if all the mental processes involved had to be performed consciously years would be consumed in the performance. First, the making of the O is willed in the brain, setting in motion the activities of thousands of cells in the hearing areas, the seeing areas, the speech motor areas and the muscular motor areas. Hundreds of nerve threads connecting these cells with various cells and nerve threads in the brain are set to work to organize the movement, while other nerve centers attend to the business of furnishing the requisite amount of blood. As a result, the spinal centers are actuated, and finally the smaller nerves in the fingers direct the forming of the O.

Discovering a Star.

Long had he worshipped her at a distance, but his shyness prevented him from proposing.

Then one evening, for the sweet sake of charity, a theatrical performance took place in which the charmer was leading lady and more adorable than ever. Afterward the shy admirer drew near, his love made valiant by the sight of her beauty.

"You are the star of the evening," he said as they stood alone in a corner.

"You are the first to tell me so," said the damsel, with a happy blush.

"Then," he retorted promptly, "may I claim my reward as an astronomer?"

The lady looked puzzled.

"What reward?" she asked.

"Why, the right to give my name to the star I have discovered," said the young man, speaking boldly at last.

The King's Way.

It was characteristic of the late King Edward VII. that he never showed too much or too little courtesy, but just enough to maintain his reputation of being the most gracious gentleman of Europe. Some years ago, according to the author of "The People's King," his majesty visited Aberdeen and knighted the lord provost. At the luncheon which followed the king sat next to Mrs. Lyon, the wife of the lord provost, and noticed on the table the card denoting her place.

"I must alter this," the king said, smiling on the lady.

With his pencil he effaced the word Mrs. and in its place substituted Lady and graciously handed the card to her newly made ladyship.

Family Harmony.

"I am very easy on my shoes," said the stout lady complacently. "Look at this pair. I've worn them three years, and they're still as good as new. I'm easy on clothes too. There's my tweed—just as fresh as the day I bought it, seven years ago. And hats, gloves, stockings—in fact, I'm easy on everything."

"Except father, eh?" said her daughter quietly, without looking up from her book.

Quite Likely.

"I wonder when the first surgical operation was performed."

"I suppose it was in Adam's time. When he had his fall he must have broken something."

Settled.

Father—I don't think much of that young Sinkins who calls to see you, daughter—Never mind, father. I think enough of him for both of us!

The wise man flatters the fool, but the fool flatters himself.—Latin

Getting Out of the Rut.

The merchant who conducts his business according to the method of the last century is not giving his customers the service they are entitled to. The spirit of the new century is to do more than to merely turn goods over at a profit. It is to really earn that profit by giving real service, accommodation and reliable advice. The modern merchant must know his goods thoroughly and what is best adapted to every household requirement.

That class of merchant invariably advertises. That is the one sure test of his being abreast of the times.

THE PEASANT'S RIDDLE.

And How the Sicilian Kept the Promise He Made to the King.

A Sicilian laborer told us this story. He says his mother told it to him when he was a child. It sounds like one of Grimm's tales and is undoubtedly very old folk lore:

"My mother told me that once there was a king who saw a peasant working in a field and asked him how much he earned. And the peasant said 'Four carlini a day.' 'What do you do with your 4 carlini?' asked the king. 'One I eat, the second I put at interest, the third I return, and the fourth I throw away.' This puzzled the king and he asked the peasant what he meant. And the peasant said:

"'I buy my food with one. I feed my children with the second, and that is putting money out at interest. I feed my old father with the third, and that is paying back what has been given me. I give the fourth to my wife, and giving her money is throwing it away.'

"That's a good riddle,' said the king, 'and I must tell it to my friends. Promise me that you won't tell any one the answer till you have seen my face a hundred times.' So the peasant promised, and the king went back to his palace and asked them the riddle. Nobody could answer, but one remembered seeing the king talk to a peasant, so he went to the peasant and asked him about it. But the peasant said: 'I can't tell you. I promised the king I wouldn't tell the answer till I had seen his face a hundred times.' 'Oh, that's easy!' said the king's friend and he took a hundred lire out of his pocket, and every piece of money had the king's face stamped on it.

"So the peasant told the king's friend the answer to the riddle, and the king's friend went back to the palace and said to the king, 'I can guess your riddle now,' and he did. Then the king became angry and said: 'You couldn't have guessed it. That peasant has broken his promise!' So the friend had to tell the king how he had fooled the peasant."

HUN "SLACKERS" CAUGHT.

Found Themselves in Unpleasant Situation When War Began.

Lord Newton a few days ago in the House of Lords, caused surprise by stating that many British prisoners at Ruhleben, Germany, had no desire to return to England. It is now learned that there are about 800 of these prisoners, British subjects, who openly profess sympathy with the German cause.

The reason for this large number of pro-German British is that they are almost all Germans, born and bred, who acquired British nationalization either in England or in some of the colonies, in order to escape liability to military service in Germany. Most of them left Germany specially for this purpose, and after residing on English soil for the minimum period requisite to naturalization, they returned to the Fatherland and resumed their ordinary life. The interned prisoners also include, their sons and grandsons. There are also natives of Austria, Germany, Switzerland, and Russia, who similarly acquired British citizenship.

There was much indignation among these pseudo-British at the outbreak of the war when they suddenly found themselves interned as were out-and-out Englishmen. There were many protests, but the police replied that they had sheltered themselves from military service under their alleged British nationality and must take the consequences. At first they were carefully distributed among the purely British prisoners for observation and espionage purposes. The Englishmen countered with a boycott which eventually resulted in the separation of the two elements.

Whenever one of the pro-Germans asked for leave, the officer of the day would say, "What regiment do you wish to join?" In the end about 300 volunteers for the German army were obtained from the camp.

True Eloquence.

True eloquence, indeed, does not consist in speech. It cannot be brought from far. Labor and learning may toil for it, but they will toil in vain. Words and phrases may be marshaled in every way, but they cannot compass it. It must consist in the man, in the subject and in the occasion. Affected passion, intense expression, the pomp of declamation, all may inspire to it. They cannot reach it. It comes, if it comes at all, like the outbreaking of a fountain from the earth or the bursting forth of volcanic fires with spontaneous, original, native force.—Webster.

Heredity.

"Father!"

"Well, son, what is it now?"

"I want to ask you an important question."

"Fire ahead, boy; I shan't be offended at what you ask."

"Thank you. I want to ask why you are so old fashioned in your ideas?"

"I suppose it's heredity. I remember asking my own father that very same question."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

MINE WARFARE.

The Object is to Dig Under and Blow Up Enemy Trenches.

A little while ago one of my pollus came to me and said, "I think, lieutenant, the Boches are busy mining our trench." I listened but heard nothing. Then I went into his shelter and did, for a fact, hear muffled blows, struck regularly. Evidently they were working underneath us. It is very disagreeable, when you are already underground, to feel this hidden, slow work, impossible to prevent, that may blow you up any minute. And the tiresome part of it is that since that moment everyone is convinced that he hears the strokes that are digging the abyss underneath him. Such is the power of imagination. O Pascal! But the captain was notified and telephoned in turn to headquarters. An officer of the engineering corps came and listened with a microphone, and said we were in no danger; in the trench beside us a French mine-gallery had already been pierced underneath that mine.

In front of all the network of trenches there are underground listening posts, where the sappers listen with their microphones and register the least sound. This officer told me that two days before he had blown up a Boche mine. In order to do that, the exact location of the enemy's gallery must be established; then a hole is bored toward it with a drill similar to the one used in boring wells. When the right spot is reached, it is packed and blown up with a 'bickford.' The explosion chamber of the German mine goes into the air along with its inhabitants.

The same fate awaits the mine that we have been worrying about. In mine warfare, the essential thing in the conflict is just the opposite of the war in the air, when it is a question of getting above the enemy aviator. The counter mine, on the contrary, must go beneath the enemy mine; when they reach it at the same height, they blow it up. It sometimes happens that the miners suddenly find themselves face to face with the enemy. Then they kill each other as best they can—with hammers if they have no revolvers.

These Good Old Prices.

I've just come across an old menu, stained and torn, that was issued seventy-five years ago by Hathaway's hotel and eating house, which makes one long for a return of some prices that prevailed in those "good old days." This famous old eating house stood on the spot where the present Boston tavern stands, and the menu referred to is one of the relics of old Boston days in the tavern's collection.

According to that menu, a porterhouse steak was served for 37½ cents, tenderloin steak was 25 cents, sirloin 20 cents and plain beefsteak 15 cents. Roast goose was 95 cents, turkey and chicken 20 cents.

In the barber shop shaving was 8 cents, hair cutting 15 cents and shampooing 20 cents. Baths cost 15 cents. A night's lodging was but 50 cents.—Boston Post.

Arms of Washington.

The arms which Washington used are heraldically described as follows: Argent (silver), two bars gules (red), in chief three mullets (stars) of the second, gules (red). The crest: A raven with wings addorsed, sable (black), issuing out of a ducal coronet, or (gold).

Although these arms were used by Washington, the arms of the family in Yorkshire are materially different, bearing a lion and being surmounted by a crest with an eagle, not a raven. The Yorkshire arms were the original arms, according to Albert Welles, whose "Pedigree and History of the Washington Family" gives with edifying detail the descent of the Father of His Country from Odin, first king of Scandinavia. Fifty-five generations were required to evolve George Washington from Odin.

Food and Strength.

Remember that the food you take one day supplies the strength you put forth the next. It is then a mistake to take a heavy meal on the day of heavy work. The time to take it is the day before.

Wise stablemen know this, and when a horse has a long day's drive before him they give him only what is called a "check feed," a very light meal, to be followed at night with a heavy one.

So there are two good reasons for a man's not eating much on the day of stress. It adds nothing to his strength on that day, and the process of digestion calls the blood to work at the stomach when every ounce of it is needed at the brain.

Surveying Land.

The art of land surveying owes its origin to the fact that the Egyptians were unable to keep permanent monuments on land which was overflowed every year by the Nile. Under such circumstances it became necessary to have some means of reidentifying the various pieces of land. The instruments and mathematical methods of astronomy, with suitable modifications, were used by the Egyptians for land surveying.

Not in Stock.

"How much are calories? I want to buy 500," a young woman inquired of the floorwalker.

"Calories?" he replied. "I don't believe—500—I doubt if we have that many in stock. However, inquire at the dress goods counter."

"Have you any calories in stock?" she asked the clerk.

"Calories? What's them?" The clerk for once looked puzzled.

"Well, I don't know. But I know this wouldn't be the department. Calories, you know, are something to eat. I went to a food lecture the other day, and they said to eat at least 500 calories a day. I suppose it's a vegetable."

"I suppose so," said the clerk.—Columbus Dispatch.

REASON FOR VINEGARS

Aids to Digestion—Crude Flavors Can Be Disguised

A little reflection on common customs connected with food and feeding generally reveals a scientific foundation, writes Marion Neil. It is not only because vinegar is a cheap condiment that it appears so often upon our tables. Experience has taught us that vinegar is an aid to digestion, and this is the real reason for our partiality to it. Vinegar is essentially dilute acetic acid, and it has a solvent action on muscle fibers. Similarly, vinegar tends to soften cellulose of wood matter of vegetable foods, and on this account it is served with salads, cucumbers, and even with boiled greens and cabbages.

Vinegar might be used with advantage much more extensively since the crude flavor of plain vinegar can be disguised in many ways without diminishing its real value as a digestive. Thus vinegar may be made of sweet or savory flavor, and the use will depend upon the flavor. In making flavored vinegar, wine vinegar should be employed as a foundation, but pure malt vinegar may be substituted if expense is a consideration. By soaking various aromatic substances in vinegar flavor is imparted, and vinegar thus flavored can be used in various ways.

For example, nasturtium vinegar is very useful for flavoring sauces, gravies and for use in salads or special salad dressing. The full grown flowers should be gathered on a dry day, put into a wide glass bottle, shaken down until they lie close and covered with cold vinegar. A very small shallot, finely chopped, and a fragment of chopped garlic may be added if desired. The bottle must be quite full of vinegar. At the end of two months it may be opened for use, then vinegar being strained and seasoned with salt and red pepper.

SCIENCE TO END WAR

How World Could Have Been Spared This Struggle

"It is my firm conviction that had the allied nations cultivated the sciences as they must do henceforth there would have been no war such as this." This was the dictum of Dr. A. B. Macallum, F.R.S.C., University of Toronto, in his presidential address on "The Old Knowledge and the New," before the Royal Society of Canada. Mankind to-day, as a result of this war, has parted with some fondly cherished illusions, he stated. It was a dark and sombre picture that would be thrown on the screen after the war was over.

"It will indeed be a new world and a new age in which all the shibboleths will be discarded and mankind will see things as they are," he asserted. "Free trade and protection, the laissez faire doctrine, individualism, socialism, and all the creeds and counter creeds will be only memories from the past, because the conditions to be will refuse to be solved by doctrinaires and idealists." Treating of the solution of labor problems after the war, replacement of human wastage and food, he declared that no matter what resulted from the war an altered viewpoint regarding the utilization of science was inevitable.

Blackberry Vinegar

Wash berries and mash to a pulp, add cider vinegar to cover well and stand in the sun during the day and in the cellar at night, stirring occasionally, strain and add the same amount of berries as used before, crush and pour over them the strained juice. Set in the sun again for one day and the cellar at night, then strain and to each four cups of juice add two cups of water and six pounds of sugar. Heat slowly, skim and when it comes to a boil, strain and bottle.

FRENCH HOLD CAPTURED HEIGHTS

Russians' Victorious Advance Continues

ALL GERMAN ATTEMPTS TO EJECT FRENCH FRUSTRATED

French Not Only Hold All Their Gains in the Champagne District in Face of Desperate Attacks But General Petain's Men Also Score a Success in the Verdun Sector---German Military Chiefs and Reichstag Have Unfruitful Conference.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS, July 17.—German forces made further desperate assaults last night in the Champagne seeking to drive the French from their newly won gains around Mont Teton, but were repulsed, to-day's official statement asserted. The War Office also announced a vigorous offensive blow by the French around Hill 304 (Verdun Sector), which resulted in the recapture of positions which had been lost to the German's great attack on June 28 and 29. Many prisoners were taken in this battle, the number not yet having been counted. The Champagne fighting during the past three or four days was the most bitter anywhere along the French front. The Germans have been fruitlessly trying by every means of attack and weapon to break the French hold on dominating heights there, to-day's official report said. The Germans again attack Mont Teton. Their attacking waves were withered in our fire, and their troops fled back to their trenches, leaving many dead. All of the French gains achieved Saturday were held inviolate by our forces. The statement said there was active artillerying around Cerny and Courcy.

LONDON, July 17.—Field Marshal Haig's British soldiers gained during the night northwest of Warneton, Belgium ,according to their commander's report to-day to the War Office. In the Nieuport sector (close to the sea in Belgium), he said a British raiding party encountered large enemy detachment in front of the German positions, and after sharp fighting, drove them back into their trenches. There the enemy was bombarded by the British party.

NEW YORK, July 17.—Threats of arrests for refusing to serve on selective draft exemption boards to-day promised to speed up the work of organizing local exemption boards, thereby hastening the coming of the draft day.

PETROGRAD, July 17.—Minister of Finance Shingaroff, Minister of Education Manuiloff and the Minister of Public Relief, Prince Shakhovskey, formally resigned to-day. All are members of the Caoet party. Minister of Railways Nekraesoff is said to be considering a like move, but Premier Lvoff is endeavouring to dissuade him. M. Prokopovitch was to-day announced as the new Minister of Commerce, vice M. Konovaloff, who resigned May 31. M. Techarnowsky will succeed M. Manuiloff as Minister of Education.

ROME, July 17.—Manifesting great activity on the shores of the Adriatic, Italian aeroplanes have successfully bombarded Pola and Durazzo, it was reported to-day. Bombs were dropped on forts and shipping, all military works and vessels attacked were heavily damaged.

RUSSIANS EVACUATE KALUSZ SAYS BERLIN

BERLIN, via London, July 17.—Russians have evacuated Kalusz and are retreating along the southern bank of the Lomnica River, the War Office stated to-day. Kalusz, between Lemberg and Stanislau, was captured by the Russians last week.

AMSTERDAM, July 17.—The conference which Chancellor Michaelis, Field Marshal Hindenburg, General Lundenorff, and the military chiefs have been holding with the Reichstag majority leaders, were said in Berlin despatches to-day to have been "unfruitful."

PETROGRAD, July 17.—For tactical reasons Russian troops on the left bank of the Lomnica River have been transferred to the right bank, leaving Kalusz, the War Office announced to-day. The move, it was asserted, secured important crossing to the Russian forces. "The Germans pressed us back occupying the village of Novica," the War Office said in this connection. "But were driven out on arrival of fresh reserves. There was heavy fighting at Novica, Loziany and in the Krasna region, with severe enemy losses."

AMSTERDAM, July 17. — An official denial that there has been any break in diplomatic relations between Argentine and Germany, was received here to-day. An amicable settlement of points in the controversy between the two nations is hoped for.

LONDON, July 16.—An official statement issued by the Admiralty to-night says:

"Our naval airmen dropped several tons of bombs Sunday night on the following military objectives: The Solway Works at Zeebrugge, railway junctions and sidings at Ostend, railway sidings and dumps at Middelkerke, railway junction at Thourout, motor transport convoys and railway sidings at Lichtervelde. All four machines returned safely."

LONDON, July 16.—The probable recommencement of heavy fighting along the Austro-Italian front seems apparent from the latest official communication from Rome. Heavy bombardments have been begun along the entire front, with the Italian gunners doing effective work in destroying enemy positions at various points. In the Jamiana valley the Italians, following a heavy bombardment, delivered a successful raid, capturing 275 prisoners and machine guns and war material.

Comparative calm still prevails on the Macedonian front, although in the Vardar sector the Teutonic allies have endeavoured to carry out raids with strong forces. These were all repulsed by the French fire.

Rain Interferes With Road Oiling

The wet weather of the past two weeks has seriously interfered with the work of treating the public thoroughfares to a coat of road oil. No sooner is one side of the road oiled than it rains, and the work of oiling the other side is sometimes delayed for several days. The wet weather also makes it impossible to get the best results from the standpoint of distribution and permanency. Very little work has been done in East City owing to the pressure of work in other wards, where the initial start was made.

KING DROPS GERMAN NAME

LONDON, July 17.—King George dropped his German family name to-day for himself and all the Royal family. He announced to the Privy Council at a special meeting that hereafter the Royal house would be known by the name of "Windsor." The Germanic name held by the family was "Saxe-Cobourg and Goethe."

FOUR OF GERMANY'S MERCHANT SHIPS ARE CAPTURED BY BRITISH

Enemy Vessels Were Sighted by British Patrol Ships in the North Sea and Were Rounded Up

WERE FIRED UPON

LONDON, July 17.—The capture of four German merchant ships in the North Sea yesterday was announced by the Admiralty to-day. The Germans did their best to make off and two were damaged by gunfire from the British boats which sighted them. The Admiralty statement said: "Our light forces on patrol duty sighted a number of German steamers. Our signals were disregarded and the ships made toward the Dutch coast. Two of the rearmost were badly damaged by the gunfire. The four were intercepted and captured. Two crews escaped. The others were brought into the harbour. The names of the captured steamers were the Pellstorm, Brietzig, Marlshern and Heinzblumberg.

MAY TRY PERIOD OF VOLUNTARY RECRUITING FIRST

OTTAWA, July 17.—This afternoon will finally solve the many speculations which have been abroad concerning Borden's offer in exchange for extension of term. That his resolution for the extension will be accompanied by some compromise, probably a period of voluntary recruiting, is generally expected. As the details for the administration of the Act would take at least a month to complete in any event, Sir Robert may claim that he is not really delaying the bill to any extent by attempting voluntary recruiting in the meantime.

Success Of Pupils Of Miss Lonergan

At the recent Toronto College of Music examinations the pupils of Miss Lonergan made a high standing, as follows: First class honours, Miss Mary Timm; honours, Misses Amy Fairbrother, Margaret Doris, and Clara Allen, equal. The results reflect the greatest credit on their pupils and their teacher.

DOG FISH BY ANOTHER NAME WILL TASTE SWEET

OTTAWA, July 17.—Third reading was given on Saturday to the bill of Hon. Mr. Hazen, changing the name of "dog fish" to "gray fish." It has been found that this fish is food, but people will not eat it under the name of "dog fish."

SAYS MASS OF THE PEOPLE OF ONTARIO DON'T WANT CONSCRIPTION

MONTREAL, July 17.—Le Canada says this morning: "To go to Ontario is to understand much of the mentality of our neighbours. That they are favourable to conscription is what their representatives have affirmed in the House because they have taken the word of bank managers, managers of insurance companies or postmasters. The truth is that the mass of the people in Ontario, the rank and file, are strongly opposed to conscription. They fear it, and their torment is greater because they are afraid of openly manifesting their opinion. These thousands of young men in Ontario who do not wish to go to the front and who also do not wish to stay at home because they are the object of incessant insults on the part of recruiting officers, prefer to save themselves by going to the United States. Each race has its mentality, it manifests itself in divers ways. The representative of a large English concern in Montreal has just spent three months in Ontario. At Belleville, our informer tells us, in that centre a pure Orangeism, though it is only so in name, the population is opposed to conscription. It is the same at Cornwall, Brockville, Peterborough, etc. If there is a general election it is firmly believed there that the Liberal party will be returned to power, that the Government well knows this, and so it is ready at all costs to avoid an appeal to the people."

A GRAPHIC LETTER FROM PETERBORO' GIRL ON DUTY IN FRANCE

Miss Jean Harstone, Who is Driving a Motor Ambulance at the Front Gives Some Interesting Details of Her Work --More Peterboro' Soldiers Home From Overseas--To-day's General Military News.

The following letter has been received by Mr. and Mrs. R. Harstone from their daughter Jean, who is driving a motor ambulance at the front:

June 10th, 1917.

Dear Father and Mother,—I have not had mail for nearly a month until this week and now I have two from both of you, two from Marion and several others. The last two weeks have been very pleasant. I have been on night duty and, until four days ago, we were slack. However, we are making up for it all right, and awful as it may seem, we are very glad to be busy again. I have spent most of my time bicycling with Ruby Hamilton and Capt. ——. We go to the little village ando get a wholesome meal first of all and then, with what time is left, we talk to the people and see the places. Ruby knows several artists here, so we spend some afternoons with them. This place is full of artists in peace times, who live in charming little cottages and have lovely English gardens. Miss Mowry has gone to a casualty station for six weeks and Ruby Hamilton and Miss Colborne go on leave some time this week. She is taking this letter for me, hence I can write more freely. We are very closely censored and can say practically nothing. The troops and nurses can say a great deal more than we can. Have any of my letters been censored much?

Many Hospitals.

This place is a city of hospitals, nine here in Etaples, five at Camieres, which is four miles from here, two at "Le Toquet" and "Paris Plage," three miles from here. The Canadian base is here as well as the largest training grounds in the world. The men go from here to the front and they all come back here for courses, so you see it is a busy spot. We hear the guns all day long, both the practice and the ones at the front; when heavy bombardment is going on. At night the place is bright with star shells. We are about sixty miles from the front, and except for the guns and the troops we might be miles off, although we have runs from here right up.

Ten days ago two of us went to Arras and two others went to Bethune. I was at Arras and while there they took us into the back line trenches, and a heavy bombardment was going on at the time; a bit up the line stray bits of shrapnel scattered around, but nothing that mattered. As for that we have taken him, but in meantime a Hun' aeroplanes get here now and again, and the other day we had a heavy shower of shrapnel from our anti-aircraft guns. Last week I had a run into Rouen and every day some of us are in Boulogne, so you see we can spread ourselves once in a while. I am kept busy even when we are slack, for I am a sub-section leader, and when the section leader is ill or away I have the whole thing. There are 20 in a section and there are four sections. Two on in day and two at night and we change every two weeks. Last week Cousin Jack (Major) from Edmonton, called to see me. He came down from Ypres and went back the same day.

Met Canon Davidson.

You will never guess whom I met on the train the other night—Canon Davidson. He had a fall and a cold so was sent back. He sat on the front seat with me, and was very much interested in everything. He was sent to England two days ago and I was to have taken but in the meantime a train came in and the other section did the evacuation. I had a cake of maple sugar and a bundle of Examiners for him, which, unfortunately, he did not get. That reminds me, I got Marion's last box. It was fine. I like to get the maple sugar.

As to the war, although we are doing well now, I do not think it will be over for some time yet. Russia rather let us down. Of course Heinie brought all his troops from that front to this, but as far as we can tell, he is just as strong as ever. It seems incredible, but his bombardment night before last was the biggest thing so far in the whole war.

We had a lot of prisoners the other day and sitting cases, and the eldest was 18. Then along other parts we get men about 60. There seems to be nothing between, but nevertheless they seem to have the men and the supplies and quite able to go on for a while. I think the Americans will have a chance. We have some of their hospital units settling here. One unit does not seem to be very happy. The first week the quartermaster blew his brains out and the sisters do not seem to be favourably impressed, and think it is fearful for their young men to come over to such conditions. As a matter of fact the hospitals here are excellent. They are tents and huts, but very comfortable and have every appliance. They are one of the wonderful things of the war. These women apparently expected places like civilian hospitals. And if the conditions are not good here, what about the front, I am sure the men will not regard the matter in the same way. The other night we had a funny experience. The men had had a great victory and were awfuly pleased, so much so that many of them got off their stretchers and got into the cars with their friends as sitting cases. We were chasing them all over the siding. I arrived at the E. M. D. office to find where to take mine, and found I had three empty stretchers, and the others would have been empty if the man could have moved.

This is a disjointed and rambling letter. Love to all.

JEAN H.

NO DISCREDIT TO MATTHEWS-BLACKWELL COMPANY IN REPORT

W. F. O'Connor, Cost of Living Commissioner, Whose Findings Were Published Last Week Tells Company That Statements Do Not Reflect on Them

COMMISSIONER'S LETTER

That W. F. O'Connor, Cost of Living Commissioner, does not think that his recent report in regard to cold storage operations, the cost of bacon, etc., casts any discredit upon the Matthews-Blackwell Company, is evident from a letter received by the firm from Mr. O'Connor, and which is published below. The figures quoted in connection with the Matthews-Blackwell Company were used in comparison with that of another big firm, apparently to show the big difference in margin per pound for the two firms. Mr. O'Connor's letter is as follows:

Ottawa, July 16th, 1917.

Matthews-Blackwell, Limited.
Packers, Peterborough.

Dear Sirs,—The Minister of Labour has asked me to attend to your communiction to him of July 14th.

The report is expected to be in hand this week and I will send to you a number of copies forthwith upon its receipt. You will find upon reading the report that any statements therein which may affect your firm are accurate and are not such as in any manner to cast discredit upon you.

Yours truly,
(Signed) W. F. O'CONNOR.

Police Broke Up A Friendly Game

Mr. George Manley, milk vendor, paid two dollars into police court this morning for leaving his horse untied on the street. The police receipts these dog days are confined to two dollar limits, and the most of those are collected from dog and traffic by-law breakers who pay the money at the station, pleading guilty without appearing in court. The summons are simply presented to the Magistrate who signs them. Sunday night the police visited a flat where they are said to have broken up a little poker game in which three members of the Jewish colony were amusing themselves. This case is set down for Thursday.

YOUNGSTER IS INJURED

Little Fellow Has His Foot Crushed

A young boy named Napoleon Barbeau was painfully injured on Hunter street, this afternoon, when he fell off his bicycle and was run over by a waggon laden with bricks. The heavy waggon passed over the boy's foot, injuring it painfully. He was removed to St. Joseph's Hospital.

Austrians Are Now in Full Retreat Having Been Driven Back in the Nomnica River Region and in the Carpathians.

PRISONERS ARE TAKEN

LONDON, July 16.—The Russians yesterday captured sixteen officers and nine hundred Austro-Germans in the battle in Eastern Galicia, says the official statement issued to-day by the Russian War Department. The Russians also took a number of machine guns.

From July 1 to July 13, the statement says, eight hundred and fifty-four officers and thirty-five thousand eight hundred and nine men were captured by the Russians. General Brusiloff's forces also captured ninety-three heavy and light guns, twenty-eight trench mortars, four hundred and three machine guns, forty-three mine-throwers, forty-five bomb mortars, three fire-throwers, two airplanes and much equipment.

Throw the Germans Back, Too.

The Russians drove the Austrians out of the village of Lodziany, in the Lomnica River region, and retained possession of the eastern end of the town. Northeast of Kalusz the Germans began an attack this morning. The Russians threw them back.

The occupation by the Russians of the Galician town of Dolina is reported in a Petrograd despatch to The Idea Nazionale of Rome, as quoted in a Central News despatch from that city. The Austrian army of General Boehm-Ermolli is said to have been thrown back on the Carpathians.

Austrians in Full Flight.

The whole Russian front from the Gulf of Riga to Roumania is reported in official despatches to-day from Petrograd to the Russian Embassy in Washington to be alive with battle. The Germans are said to be rushing up troops from the Italian and French fronts and to be entirely rearranging their positions.

On the northern front near Riga, German reinforcements are rushing up by sea transport. On the Lemberg front the troops are being shifted back and forth by means of heavy automobiles in an attempt to prevent further advances by General Korniloff. On the southern front in the Carpathians the Austrians are said to be in full flight.

Russian Official Report.

The Russian official communication says:

"Western front — On the lower Lomnica there have been fusilades and artillery bombardments. Northeast of Kalusz the Germans since morning have made energetic attempts to throw back our troops on the Lomnica. The Kinburne Regiment, weak in numbers but strong in courage, against which the principal German forces were thrown, repelled the attacks. The commander of the brave regiment, Lieut.-Colonel Simoviky, was wounded. After this, led by the regimental commander's assistant, the gallant Captain Khipoff, the Kinburners advanced and threw back the enemy, inflicting losses upon him and capturing prisoners and machine guns.

"The battle on the Landes-Reuldzian-Yrzana front continued all day. After a severe engagement the Austrians were driven out of the village of Lodziany and pressed hard to the River Lomnica, but owing to attacks by newly-arrived enemy reserves from the direction of Rozniazov and in view of the great losses among our officers, our troops were compelled to retire a short distance and entrench themselves in the eastern end of the above-mentioned village (Lodziany).

"Roumanian front — In the region of the River Oituz one of our scouting parties on its arrival at the enemy's trenches was subjected to an attack by twenty Germans. The officers fought their way back, carrying the body of a dead soldier."

LEGITIMATE COMPLAINT.

The Peterborough War Veterans would appear to have a legitimate complaint against the Children's Aid Society's officials in regard to the Society's tag day collection boxes. In refusing to lend the boxes to the Veterans, because as they alleged there was "a hard and fast rule" against loaning them to any one, the Society officials were quite within their rights. But if there is such a rule, why was it broken on Saturday and the boxes placed at the disposal of the Red Cross? As men who have done their bit overseas, Peterborough's returned soldiers are hurt at the volte face of the Children's Aid Society. They feel that they have been discriminated against and they would, naturally, like to know why? Will the officials of the Society please throw some light on their action?

BETTER SWIMMING FACILITIES.

The coming of hot weather has ushered in the bathing season and the Examiner advises every member of the City Council to visit the swimming places, along the river, during the next few weeks. They will be amazed to find the number of people who indulge in swimming—particularly at the number of girls who have learned the useful art—and they will appreciate the enjoyment that would be given many hundreds more if proper facilities were provided. It is too late this year to accomplish anything in this line, but an amount should be placed in the estimates next year to provide dressing places at several points on the river. Nothing elaborate is needed, and suitable shelters could be built at comparatively small cost. As conditions are at present, only the girls living close to the river and who can don their bathing suits at home have a chance to enjoy a dip in the cooling waters of the Otonabee.

It is a remarkable state of affairs, that of all the taxes paid into the city coffers, only $600 comes back to the citizens in the form of amusement and this year the handling of this amount, destined for band grants, has been so mismanaged as to deprive citizens of the weekly event always looked forward to—the Friday night concert of the 57th Band.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

That story about a man eating four chickens and a few other things at a picnic across the line seems to suggest that there is considerable scope for Food Controller Hoover's activities.

Ice has gone up ten per cent. in Toronto. Well, thanks to the weather, even the long suffering public has had a bigger rest period than usual, between the attacks of the coal man and the onslaughts of the gentlemen who deal in the frappe wet.

A London dispatch is headed, "Kaiser a heart heavy." This is the first intimation that the German Emperor has such an organ.

THE COLD-STORAGE REPORT.

The report of the Cost of Living Commissioner, Mr. W. F. O'Connor, on cold-storage operations in Canada has come with the force of a revelation, due to the fact that only in the third year of the war has the Government begun seriously to take stock of the food situation, says the Toronto Globe.

The report shows that the scope of cold-storage and the extent to which it has thrust itself between producers and consumers of staple foodstuffs are even greater than the public suspected. Perhaps no interest of such magnitude in Canada is so concentrated. Virtually all the cold-storage business is handled by a dozen companies. The stimulus given it by the war has been such that the receipts from sales of butter, eggs, cheese, beef, pork, bacon, ham, mutton and lamb increased from $35,900,000 in 1913 to $93,895,642 in 1916. The growth of cold-storage facilities is to be welcomed. Cold-storage performs a useful function by conserving perishable commodities when the supply exceeds the demand, and by marketing them in the season of lowest production. At least, these are the services which it can render producers and consumers with advantage to both, but the process can be greatly abused if it can be manipulated by a few men intent only on the maximum of profit. For instance, if they can lay in such stocks as to create an artificial scarcity, they can raise market prices by the power of withholding supplies. Commissioner O'Connor points out some features of the business in Canada that make it advisable that the investigation should proceed. He produces figures to show, first, that the larger the share of the trade secured by any one company the higher its charges for storage; second, that the charges are greater on those products which are most nearly monopolized by cold-storage operations; third, that the growth of a company's facilities has not been accompanied by a reduction in its tolls, but, on the contrary, by an increase; and fourth, that the rate of profit has been steadily rising during the war. The Commissioner is prompted to make this caustic comment: "The food consumer has suffered as a result of war conditions. The food purveyor has not. He has seen to it that he has been well and sufficiently paid."

The Commissioner's figures give the "margin" of cold-storage profit—the difference between the price at which commodities were laid down in cold-storage warehouses and the price at which they were sold. This margin is, therefore, gross profit, not net. It includes interest on investment, operating expenses, and all the various items in the companies' costs. The next step will be to ascertain the net profits, and this investigation is now under way. It is necessary that full information be obtained as the basis for regulation and legislation demanded by the exigencies of the food crisis. Mr. O'Connor points out that the fact that the business is in a few hands simplifies the problem of controlling prices. Consumers will be surprised to hear that one-fifth of the butter, one-third of the cheese, one-fifth of the eggs, two-thirds of the beef, one-half of the mutton and lamb, and nearly all the pork they purchase pass through cold-storage. In the large cities cold-storage plants handle a large proportion of the cheese, one-half of the butter and from October to April, a large proportion of the eggs. These conditions make public regulation imperative as an assurance to people that the cost of food will not be unduly enhanced by middlemen's profits.

The O'Connor report says that cold-storage profits tend to be normal except in respect to some commodities, chiefly bacon and eggs, in which the control is highly concentrated. In one line concentration has been carried so far that two companies sold 140,000,000 pounds of bacon last year out of a total of 151,000,000 pounds sold by all the cold-storage companies in Canada. "Possibly," says the Commissioner, "no more striking example of monopoly in any one commodity can be cited from the records of any country supplying the Allies with food." Virtually all cold-storage bacon was exported. One of the two firms cited as having a near-monopoly, the William Davies Company, exported 95,000,000 pounds at a margin over cost of 5.05 cents a pound, totalling nearly $5,000,000 gross profits. Sir Joseph Flavelle, the head of the firm, protesting against the assumption that net profits were inordinate, says that the product was sold in London to the Imperial authorities in open competition with the world. The country's concern must be to make certain that excessive profits made by the sale of any commodities shall in large part return to the public Treasury. This is the aim of the business profits tax. In the case of foodstuffs, however, legislation must go farther. The rising cost of food has already forced a lower standard of living on many thousands of wage-earners and it has become essential that the Government shall, through the Food Controller or some other agency, regulate all the processes through which foodstuffs pass from the primary producer to the ultimate consumer. Chief of these links in the chain of distribution is cold-storage. While the Commissioner finds that no combination exists, and while the companies may be able to prove that they are taking no unfair advantage of the public, it is inexpedient to leave them an absolutely free hand. The urgency of the situation is emphasized by Mr. O'Connor's complaint that this year there is an apparent disposition on the part of a few companies to demand excessive margins and that the tendency toward monopoly continues.

HOW LONG?

This is proving to be the harvest time for the middleman, for the retail merchant in almost every line, and for the distributors, handlers, toll takers who stand between producer and consumer and skim off so much of the cream. Just as this paper has heretofore pointed out, such increase in price as the producer or manufacturer has been compelled by higher wages or higher cost of raw material to put upon his wares, has been multiplied many times by distributors and retail dealers who are now making more and easier money than ever before.

The shabby thing about the American business system is that business ethics—if that term can be used to cover such practices—permit a dealer to make a one per cent. advance in the cost to him of shoes or sundries or drugs or foods or anything else, an excuse for adding fifty per cent. or four times that to the cost to the consumer. We shall see it once more as soon as the war tax is imposed. Prices high as they are, will double up again; and in explaining it to the consumer greed will put the blame upon the government or on conditions over which it will claim to have no control.

How long the people will stand this sort of thing and what steps they will take to remedy it remain to be seen. But one of the things going down and under and out of sight for ever in this extraordinary crisis through which the world is passing is the exploitation of the common people by conscienceless greed.—Rochester Post.

A CALL TO CANADA TO GARNER CROPS

OTTAWA, July 17.—An appeal to the people of Canada, to the great industries, banks, commercial institutions and employers generally to assist in providing labour to garner in the harvest has been issued by Sir Robert Borden. Owing to many representations to the Government with respect to the shortage of labour for harvesting operations the Prime Minister called a meeting of transportation companies and of several other important bodies for the purpose of arranging as far as possible for the provision and transportation of labour to those portions of the country where it is most needed for gathering the harvest. At that meeting representatives were present on behalf of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, the Grand Trunk Railway, the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company, the Canadian Northern Railway Company, the Canadian Manufacturers' Association the Canadian Bankers' Association, and the Imperial Munitions Board. In the absence of Mr. R. B. Bennett the National Service Board was represented by its secretary, Mr. Peterson. The Ministers of Trade and Commerce, Railways and Canals, Labour, Militia and Defence, the Interior and Agriculture were also present.

Arrangements were outlined which it is believed will effectually meet the apprehended difficulties in securing sufficient labour for the harvest. It is understood that the National Service cards in the possession of the National Service Commission will be utilized to locate men who have had experience in farming, who are now otherwise employed, and who have expressed willingness, if desired, to undertake other work in the interest of the country. The manufacturers and other interests will aid in locating men who may be useful on the farms and will encourage them to undertake work there. The railways will provide for the transportation of the workers secured to the places where they are required.

"A cordial spirit of co-operation was manifested by all present at the meeting and there is no doubt that every effort will be made on the part of the transportation companies and the various associations represented to assist in securing an adequate supply of labour.

TIME IS BRIEF.

The following appeal has been issued by the Prime Minister in pursuance of suggestions made at the meeting:

"The Government has received from many quarters urgent representations as to the need of arranging for the provision and transportation of labour necessary for gathering the harvest in some portions of the country, especially the Province of Ontario and the Prairie Provinces. An urgent appeal is made to the people of Canada for assistance and co-operation to meet this very urgent need. It is vitally necessary that no portion of the approaching harvest shall be lost through lack of the labour necessary to secure it. That harvest is required for the sustenance of the men who are fighting the battle of civilization and humanity in every theatre of war, it is necessary also for the sustenance of our own population and the people of all the allied nations. The time during which the harvest can be gathered is very brief, the necessary labour must, then, be available, for the work cannot be performed at any other time.

ABUNDANCE OF HUMAN ENERGY.

"There are many other industries of the highest importance for the purpose of winning the war, but in almost all these industries work can be carried on during twelve months of the year. The Government appeals for every possible effort by the great industries of the country, by the banks, by commercial institutions and by all employers of labour to assist and co-operate. To those who are employed in industries other than agriculture the Government appeals for such co-operation and aid as will ensure that all available labour for this most essential need shall be forthcoming. There is in Canada abundance of human energy to ensure the gathering in full of the approaching harvest without materially interfering with other essential industries. By the good-will and co-operation of all our people that most vital and essential purpose can be fully secured. We appeal also to the women of Canada who can assist by supplying the places of those who leave their employment to take part in harvesting. The Government is confident that its appeal to the Canadian people for this great purpose will not be in vain."

Making a Garden.

Agriculture is nearly as old as man, and since it began it is probable that farmers have been studying out balanced rations for domestic animals, but even yet few housekeepers have any real scientific ideas on feeding the family. Your state agricultural college or the department of agriculture, Washington, can help you out in this, and you should take the matter into consideration in making your garden and see to it that your vegetables include the most nutritious and health giving properties. Every farmer knows that when a horse works all day he should receive certain feed and when he is idle—in rainy weather, for instance—he gets different rations. How about a man or a child? Do you know how to set your table to get the maximum results and keep perfect health? Do you serve the same food to the men working in the heat of the harvest field, to the boy going to school and to the babies? Your garden should contribute to the health and happiness of each.—Reclamation Record.

Might Have Changed History.

Here is the story of an averted tragedy which, if it had not been averted, might have changed the whole course of modern history in Europe. The time was about three weeks after Sadowa. The place was the little village of Pirsdorf, about thirty miles from Vienna. King William of Prussia and Bismarck were there, and they sat down on a terrace outside a small cafe to drink beer. Kern, an Austrian forester, saw them. He regarded them as the deadly enemies of his country. He was an excellent marksman, and he had his double barreled gun with him. Taking aim from behind cover, he was about to fire when his wife, seeing what he was after and fearing the consequences, clutched him by the coattails. He turned to argue with her, and before the argument was finished the king and his chancellor had disappeared. So nothing happened. But if Kern had been allowed to fire there might have been no German empire.

Joy of Pockets.

The pocket has to be lacked before it is properly appreciated, the London Chronicle says. This writer had taken his pockets as a matter of course until one evening he attended a fancy dress ball in costume which, he discovered when too late to remedy the defect, was absolutely pocketless. The question at once arose what to do with pocket handkerchief, money, cloakroom ticket, and so on. The handkerchief, of course, went up his sleeve, but it took some minutes to devise receptacle for coins and other necessaries in the lining of the cap, the heels of the shoes and the cuff of the coat. All night long, however, he felt lost though having no place to thrust his hands into. Since then he finds himself frequently putting his hands into his pockets to experience the sheer joy of knowing that they are there.

Boiled Down.

Editor—How's the new society reporter? I told him to condense as much as possible.

Assistant—He did. Here's his account of yesterday's afternoon tea:

"Mrs. Lovely poured, Mrs. Jabber roared, Mrs. Duller bored, Mrs. Rasper gored, and Mrs. Rumbasquat snored."—Pittsburgh Chronicle.

The Turk and the Crescent.

The crescent was not originally an emblem of the Turk. It was first used by the primitive Christians of Constantinople and the eastern provinces of the old Roman empire as an emblem of the growing influence of Christianity. It was not until about the year 1453, after the Turks had overrun Asia Minor and parts of southern Europe and had captured Constantinople, that the Turks adopted the crescent as their national emblem. The Koran prohibits the use of images and symbols in the religious ceremonies of the strict Turk or the internal decorations of their temples and mosques, the rule being so strict as not to allow the martial or civic decoration of their greatest generals or pashas, successful commanders or other distinguished persons. The adoption of the crescent by the Turk as a national emblem is an oddity which has so far remained unexplained.—Philadelphia Press.

Easily Amused.

When Professor Chumpleigh's hat blew off he made no effort to retrieve it. Instead he leaned against a lamppost and watched half a dozen pedestrians join in a mad chase.

"I could have picked it up myself," he murmured, "but I knew from my studies of human nature that everybody within sight would endeavor to get it for me."

He he remained, chuckling cynically, as the hat dashed this way and that, and the kind people grew hot and frantic in their efforts to capture it.

At last a boy made a fine long jump and held it with both feet. When he returned it to the professor it had eleven holes in it, eight ounces of dirt and was minus the brim.

"Ah, well," murmured the savant, as he tendered the boy threepence for his trouble, "I suppose one must pay for one's pleasure."—London Mail.

Apt.

"Why do they call the baby 'Bill?'"

"He was born on the first of the month."

Arabic Numerals.

An illustration of what mankind owes to the labor saving Arabic numerals compared with preceding forms of notation is shown in adding 1848 to 1848, the sum which is expressed in only four figures, or 3696. Meantime in Roman characters we would have to denote 1848 with the capital letters MDCCCXLVIII. Repeating these letters explains why Cicero complained of the sweating toil of all addition. On that account Homer's total of Agamemnon's fleet is not the correct sum of the different contingents to it which he gives of the Grecian states. Herodotus is worse yet when he gives the total figures of Xerxes' army after enumerating the quotas of the various nationalities which composed it. Likewise what a life insurance company would now do without Arabic numerals may be imagined.

Baths of Diocletian.

It is said that when the baths of Diocletian were in operation they must have accommodated not fewer than 3,000 bathers at a time. With some of the emperors bathing seems to have been a sort of fad, as they expended vast sums in the erection of bathhouses and bathing apparatus. Diocletian, however, does not depend entirely on the baths for his place in history. He became emperor in 284 A. D. and abdicated in 305. Two years before his abdication he became very active in persecuting Christians, so much so that in the annals of martyrdom his reign is alluded to as "the Diocletian era." It is said that the Diocletian baths were built by Christians, 40,000 of them being compelled to do the work.

Flogged For Bathing.

On an island in the Cam at Grantchester, England, is a mill pond known as "Byron's pool" because it was here that the poet, as an undergraduate enjoyed his favorite recreation. Even in his day, Edward Conybeare tells us in "Highways and Byways in Cambridge," bathing was a practice somewhat frowned on by the academic authorities. A century or so earlier any student found guilty of it was publicly flogged in the hall of his college and was again flogged on the morrow in the university schools by the proctors. A second offense meant expulsion from the university.

Shop Talk.

"If we didn't have to give back any change think of the money we merchants would make."

"We all have our troubles," said the magazine publisher. "Sometimes it frets me to have to print any reading matter, but I suppose it must be done."—Kansas City Journal.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

How the Cats Came to Strongsville

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1916, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

It was not Hezekiah King's fault that he was born a half wit and with a twisted leg besides. His parents died when he was ten years old, and Hez became a sort of child outlaw. He wandered here and there till he finally settled in Strongsville.

Hez found the farming class much more sympathetic than the villagers, but he was imposed on by them to a certain degree. When he had got to be a youth of fourteen or fifteen he could hoe corn or potatoes or chop and split wood as well as almost any man. They would hire him by the week and give him such food and lodgings as they saw fit, and when he was through with his week he was given some old clothes or a few cents in money.

The years passed on until Hezekiah was twenty, and he was more of an outlaw than ever. A man named Brooks went to work in the sawmill at Strongsville. He was an old bachelor, and he rented a small house and lived alone. In passing the boy on the street one day he must have given the victim a look of sympathy, for when he got back to his house again he found Hezekiah seated on his doorstep. He invited him in and gave him a meal and a good bed. From that day the unfortunate had a home.

To make clear what followed the reader must know that Strongsville had a strong antipathy to cats. It was founded on sanitary principles. There had once been an epidemic of scarlet fever and again an epidemic of measles, and the doctors had agreed that the germs of both were carried from house to house by the feline population. Thus it came about that the cats were exterminated to the last one and the mice had a play day every day in the year. The old bachelor learned this fact as soon as he talked of renting a house in the village. He was told that if he brought a cat along with him she would certainly be poisoned off in short order.

One day after Hezekiah had had a home for six months he went to work for a certain farmer at wages set by Mr. Brooks, who had become a guardian to him. After working for three or four days Hezekiah unearthed a box of gold coin amounting to $5,000. They were English coins and had been buried in the long ago—so long ago that the box had become mere punk. He carried the money home with him wrapped in his old coat, and it sent forth metallic clinks as it was thrown on the table. He was smiling almost for the first time in a year, and after an effort he managed to say:

"I dug it out of the ground."

"Did you tell the farmer?" asked Mr. Brooks when he had recovered from his astonishment.

"Not a word," was replied.

"Well," continued the old bachelor after the money had been counted, "this find has made you rich, but don't say anything about it to any one. The people of this town have used you shamefully, and I want to see you get even with them. You know what I mean, don't you?"

In reply Hezekiah's face lighted up, and he nodded his head. He had been aware for a long time that no one had played him fair, but he felt his helplessness to resent it.

In thinking how he might revenge the young man's wrongs the old bachelor brought up the cat question, and he soon had his plans laid. The next tin peddler that came along was stopped and held in private conversation for half an hour, and then he winked and laughed and drove away. He stored his tinware temporarily and loaded up 200 felines in its place.

That wagon re-entered the village at 11 o'clock at night, when every man, woman and child was sleeping his first sleep. It paused in front of the town hall, and the door was opened, and the cats came bouncing out.

Two hundred cats might have been exterminated in time, but the tin peddler returned next evening with 200 more re-enforcements and again the third night. The town had now been turned into a cat town. It had more cats walking the fences or seated around the back doors than any town of four times its size in this state. By night it was a constant serenade that prevented sleep except at brief intervals. There were enough cats to carry the germs of a dozen epidemics. It is a cat town today. Men were hired by the week to shoot or trap them, but kittens were born about as fast as old cats were killed off, and at last the people gave up and settled down to bear the infliction with what pains they could.

After the cat invasion was a month old the bachelor said to the half wit:

"Hezekiah, you know what a cat is, don't you?"

Hezekiah nodded and grinned.

"After paying all expenses of dumping 600 cats into Strongsville I have $4,500 of your gold left. I am going to put it in the bank for you and send you to New York city to see if the surgeons can make you over. I hope they will be able to help you. If they can't, you can come back home and live with me the rest of your life. Do you understand what I mean?"

The surgeons helped him some—enough so that when he caught sight of twelve or fifteen cats sunning themselves on some householder's veranda he could appreciate the situation and go home and say to Mr. Brooks:

"There were just three barrels of cats on Brown's veranda—just three barrels—and Brown was out there looking at them, and looking very sad."

The treat that its lovers learn to expect from a cup of "SEAL BRAND" COFFEE, is always realized to the full for "Seal Brand" holds its aroma and flavour to the last spoonful in the air-tight can.

In ½, 1 and 2 pound tins. Whole—ground—pulverized—also fine ground for Percolators. Never sold in bulk. 163

SACKING A THEATER.

What New Yorkers In 1765 Did For an Offensive Play.

Here is an account of the sacking of a theater in New York from the Gazette of that city of May 3, 1765:

"The play advertised to be acted last Monday evening having given offense to sundry and divers inhabitants of this city, who thought it highly improper that such entertainment should be exhibited at this time of public distress, when great numbers of poor people can scarce find means of subsistence, whereby many persons might be tempted to neglect their business and squander that money which is necessary to the payment of their debts and the support of their families, a rumor was spread about the town that if the play went on the audience would meet with some disturbance from the multitude.

"This prevented the greatest part of those who intended to have been there from going. However, many people came, and the play was begun, but soon interrupted by the multitude, who burst open the doors and entered with noise and tumult. The audience escaped in the best manner they could. Many lost their hats and other articles of raiment. A boy had his skull fractured and was yesterday trepanned. Death is his. Several others were sorely set upon and injured. But we heard of no lives lost. The multitude immediately demolished the house and carried the pieces to the common, where they consumed them in a bonfire."

A Tennyson Anecdote.

Lord Tennyson, who was recently appointed chairman of the committee on measures for settling soldiers in the Dominions, tells a story of his father, the Poet Laureate, and Mr. Gladstone, which is worth repeating. Lord Tennyson accompanied his father and Mr. Gladstone on the famous Scandinavian cruise, and, during the voyage, Mr. Gladstone confided to the son that he was minded to offer Tennyson a barony, and asked Lord Tennyson if he thought his father would accept it. Lord Tennyson said he thought he would, to which Gladstone rejoined, after a moment's thought, that his only difficulty was that he feared the poet might insist on "wearing his wide-awake in the House of Lords."

The Lady and the Dishrag.

When a woman declares that she "feels like a dish rag" she is dragging herself down to the lowest level of still life. We doubt not from the personal appearance of that handy article of domestic utility that if any life existed at all in said rag it could not possibly fall lower or feel meaner. However, woman should never offer herself in comparison with so degraded an object for the simple reason that mankind spurns the dish rag most vehemently, and as woman exists solely for man she should not seek to lower herself in his esteem. When a rag takes up its duties in the dishpan it has reached the tag end of abandoned hope, the climax perhaps of a merry life. A dish rag might have been a lovely lady's hose in its palmy days adorned by a silken garter and surrounded by costly lingerie. But it is not of its past that I speak. It is of its present social standing, its vulgar environment and its utter self abandonment. 'Tis true that you may feel fatigued to a limp and loppy degree, but never can you feel so utterly wretched and beyond redemption as a dish rag.—Zim in Cartoons Magazine.

Furnishing the Home.

When you plan to furnish your new home and have just so much money to spend begin by making two lists, one of the things you want and the other of things you have to have. Cross off from one and add to the other and you will get the best results from your money.

Plans for furnishing a home should begin with the kitchen. A housewife spends a good share of her time in the kitchen, and she owes it to herself to make it as attractive and easy to work in as possible.

Too many young housekeepers plan their furnishings and homes with a view to what their friends will say about them and not enough attention to the real needs.

Too many of us start furnishing our homes where our friends will see them first—at the front door—and when we get to the kitchen there is nothing left.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Sharp and Pointed.

"A good advertisement," said an advertising man, "should be as sharp and pointed as the Irishman's answer.

"The witty Judge Lord Morris was on the Irish circuit, and one evening at dinner he tried to tell a story, but an Irishman kept interrupting him.

"Finally, in despair, Lord Morris seized the interrupter by the sleeve.

"'Surely,' he said—'surely, man, ye want to hear the story o' the rint breaker o' Bally-Skilberreen.'

"'No, no, me lord,' said the interrupter, 'that's the lie I told ye meself yesterday.'"—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Eskimo Mourning Customs.

All Eskimos are superstitious about death, and, although they hold festivals in memory of departed friends, they will usually carry a dying person to some abandoned hut, there to drag out his remaining days without food, medicine, water or attendance.

After the death of a husband or a wife the survivor cuts the front hair short and fasts for twenty-five days.—Argonaut.

Ostrich Dogs.

Collie dogs are used to herd ostriches in South Africa and perform the work with great sagacity. The birds are savage when breeding and will attack any man or animal that interferes with them, but are strangely cowed in the presence of the dogs.

Cynical.

"I'm sure there has never been a breath of scandal about her."

"Why, hasn't she any friends?"—Pearson's Weekly.

Her Shifting Form.

"A young man is formed at twenty-five."

"A young lady too. But she likes to alter the superstructure frequently to meet fashion's vagaries."—Pittsburgh Post.

Violent Language.

First Deaf Mute—So when he heard the report he got furious about it. Second Deaf Mute—Furious! Why, he was so mad that the words he used almost blistered his fingers.—New York Telegram.

The Thing to Get At.

Chief Counsel—The first thing to do is to get at the root of this trouble. Associate Counsel—The root of the trouble is the late Mr. Bigwad's fortune. Chief Counsel—Exactly, and we must get at it.—New York Tribune.

Aldermen Are Getting Tired Of Talking Coal

Council Has Held Four or Five Meetings—Enactment Will Have to Be Approved by Lieutenant Governor

Acting Mayor G. H. Duncan called a special meeting of the City Council last evening for the purpose of considering a new phase of the proposal to establish a municipal coal yard. The by-law authorizing the city to go into the coal business has been approved by the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board and all it is now lacking is the endorsation of the Lieutenant-Governor of the Province. This will likely be forthcoming in the course of a few days. In the meantime the city has offered five cars of egg coal which will cost the consumer about nine dollars and fifty cents a ton. Two cars of this coal may be retained by the city for use in the city buildings, also the fire station and the Isolation Hospital. Ald. Dobbin did not approve of ordering five cars of coal unless the city had the necessary provision to meet the bill. As matter stands the Council has no authority to purchase coal until the enactment of the Railway Board is signed by the Lieutenant-Governor. It is understood that five cars are on the way. It was finally decided to have Ald. Dobbin communicate with Toronto and have delivery of three cars of the coal delayed or make arrangements to sell it to a local dealer. The city has the necessary authority to purchase two of the cars for use in the city buildings.

Ald. McIntyre was of the opinion that the Council was over cautious in the matter of establishing a municipal coal yard. Ald. Stratton expressed the opinion that the whole scheme would prove to be a "great big fizzle." Ald. Worth referred to the number of times that the Council has been called upon to discuss the coal question.

Mosquitoes Among Snowbanks.

In both the Rocky mountains and Alaska the geologists and engineers of the United States geological survey have as part of their regular equipment mosquito nets for their heads. Even when working in deep snow head nets and gauntlets are necessary to protect the field men from the bloodthirstiness of the pests.

The mosquito does not vanish with increasing altitude. At 11,000 feet or timber line he is as prolific as at sea level, and smoke, no matter how dense and pungent it may be, will not eradicate him. The only sure relief lies in the net. In some sections of Colorado the mountain natives' systems become thoroughly inoculated with their poison. After this they are bothered no more. The first advice given to the "tenderfoot" by the old timer is, "Let 'em bite; they won't keep it up long."—Popular Science Monthly.

Old Postal Rates.

The high postal rates that prevailed in the earlier years of the last century made the transmission of a letter or parcel a matter of serious moment.

"A packet weighing thirty-two ounces was once sent from Deal to London," writes Mrs. Eleanor Smyth in her life of Sir Rowland Hill. "The postage was over £6, being * * * four times as much as the charge for an inside place by the coach. Again, a parcel of official papers small enough to slip inside an ordinary pocket was sent from Dublin to another Irish town addressed to Sir John Burgoyne. By mistake it was charged as a letter instead of as a parcel and cost £11. For that amount the whole mail coach plying between the two towns with places for seven passengers and their luggage might have been hired."—London Chronicle.

Tin Can or Canteen?

Popular etymology is always more interesting than the learned explanations of philologists. For instance, take the barrack room derivation of the word "canteen." It is no use trying to convince Tommy Atkins that it comes from the Italian "cantina," a small cellar. He had his own derivation, which he finds quite satisfactory. "Canteen" is simply "tin can" said backward. To justify this theory he simply invites one to look around. Certainly tin enters largely into the outfitting and furnishing of the average canteen. The drinking vessels are tin, the counter is tin, and in many cases the tables also are covered with block tin. No wonder Tommy holds that the word has some connection with the metal that is so much in evidence.—Manchester Guardian.

Antiquity of Stockings.

Stockings were known among the Romans more than 1,800 years ago, as is proved by paintings found in the ruins of Pompeii. They were considered more ornamental than useful. In the colder climate of northern Europe they became a necessity, and the manufacture of them became a recognized employment in the twelfth century, when they were fashioned chiefly of cloth. In the reign of Edward II. they assumed a resemblance to those now worn. At the courts of Spain and Italy they were fashioned of silk and were made enormously large.

Sarcastic.

Mrs. Nextdore—My daughter plays the piano. Perhaps you've heard her. Mrs. Newcome (with great self restraint)—I've heard the piano. Mrs. Nextdoor—Yes, my daughter Mary is very musical. Mrs. Newcome—Ah, you have two daughters then!—Musical America.

Try it Iced (delicious)

RECIPE: Keep on hand a syrup made up of one half cup of FRY'S Cocoa, one cup of sugar, one cup of warm water. Stir until smooth. Then boil for 5 minutes and chill and add one half teaspoonful of Vanilla Extract. To serve, allow two tablespoonfuls of this syrup to a glass with a little chopped ice and fill with cold milk. Stir well.

Try this cooling, delightful FRY drink. You'll what it offers.

Point of the Cape of Good Hope.

Cape Point, which terminates the mighty headland known as the Cape of Good Hope, consists of a towering promontory of sandstone, which rises from the sea to an altitude of 840 feet. At the base of this stands a big solitary column which is known as Vasco da Gama's pillar. The lighthouse which here illuminates the meeting place of the Atlantic and Indian oceans is one of the most important and most useful of its kind. It is visible from a distance of thirty-six miles. The cliff scenery is wild and sublime, the rocks are magnificent, and the farreaching sea, with the fierce surf beating on the iron bound coast, is impressive. In the water directly beneath the cliff sharks are abundant.

A Ballet, Not a Revolution.

When Bonaparte put the Duke d'Enghien to death he Paris felt so much horror at the event that the throne of the tyrant trembled under him, Sir John Sinclair wrote. A counter revolution was expected and would most probably have taken place had not Bonaparte ordered a new ballet to be brought out with the utmost splendor at the opera.

The subject he pitched upon was "Ossian, or the Bards." It is still recollected in Paris as perhaps the grandest spectacle that had ever been exhibited there.

The consequence was that the murder of the Duke d'Enghien was totally forgotten and nothing but the new ballet was talked of.

THE CITY COUNCIL WANTS PLACE TO PARK AUTOMOBILES

Ald. Weir Suggests That Simcoe Street Be Used—Police Serve Notice on Automobile Owners

At a special meeting of the City Council held last evening, Ald. Weir brought up the question of parking cars on the public streets of the city. The number of standing cars on Water street from day to day is increasing and the police have given notice to several automobile owners that they must not leave their cars standing at any one place longer than one half hour. Ald Weir suggested that the cars be parked along Simcoe street between George and Water streets. Acting Mayor Duncan said that this would make it difficult to drive up to the city buildings. The Acting Mayor suggested that the old carters stand on Water street below Charlotte street be used for that purpose. He believed that the majority of automobile owners would be willing to pay ten cents each and keep a man on the spot to look after the cars. Ald. Weir did not think this would be a convenient place. The matter will probably come up at a later date.

PROBLEM IN OTTAWA.

The following extract from the Ottawa Journal of yesterday's date refers to a similar condition which exists in Ottawa. The extract reads as follows :

Chief of Police Ross points out that owing to the lack of width in the streets in the centre of the city, the problem of parking cars may be a big one before long. It is an accommodation to motorists which is being provided now in most large cities. The city by-laws provide against leaving a vehicle standing in front of a place of business for longer than a few minutes.

Queen street will be marked immediately, and it is probable that other thoroughfares may be similarly marked in the near future.

AUSTRIA'S FOOD NEED ACUTE.

Exorbitant Prices Told in Press of the Dual Monarchy.

Reports of food conditions in Austria-Hungary found in copies of Austria-Hungary newspapers reaching New York and London show that the problem of feeding the inhabitants of the dual monarchy is not the least of the troubles weighing upon the shoulders of the young Emperor. In describing a visit to the principal markets of the Austrian capital, a reporter of the Vienna Arbeiter-Zeitung says:

"Instead of getting better things are becoming worse. The markets are more scantly supplied than ever they were even during the times of bitterest frost. A year ago the colouring of Easter eggs was forbidden; now such an order is unnecessary for there are no eggs to colour though in ordinary times out of our supplies we could export millions of eggs. Of other provisions there is great scarcity.

"The fruit market is permanently deserted; the booths are shut up. The only vegetables to be found are celery, parsley and occasional carrots and cabbages. These latter attract great crowds though they cost nearly 25 cents a pound. Sauerkraut, practically the sole food of many, costs from 8 to 14 cents a pound. Gourmets may buy small and sinfully dear lettuce at from 8 to 16 cents—which is a frightful price. Radishes are 10 cents a bundle.

The meat scarcity gets ever greater. Early in the morning great crowds invade the market to try to obtain meat, because nothing else is available; but by 7 o'clock nothing is left but a few little bits of lamb at about $1 a pound. The few geese on sale cost $1.50 a pound, so that for the great mass of the people there is nothing.

Butter supplies are quite insufficient; margarine a rarity, goose fat only procurable at $3.25 a pound. It is a serious business when neither vegetables nor meat can be obtained.

Budapest papers contain the following account of a demonstration against the high cost of living arranged by Hungarian Government employes:

"Never before had the capital city seen a meeting like that of the Hungarian State employes. Some 8,000 functionaries marched silently through the streets of the city. Most of them were old men, well advanced in years. Nearly all of them appeared to be exhausted. Together with high magistrates were seen minor employes of the Ministries, as well as letter carriers, all of whom, without exception, complained about the the food shortage. Then there were teachers in ragged clothing who did not even have anything better for Sunday, and who were not in the least ashamed of it. There were also many women without hats in the parade. The only object of their unanimous demand was a minimum of provisions but they demanded that with the firmness of desperation. They appealed to the King by telegraph."

A Croation paper of April 17 reported that in the City of Maros-Vasarhely $1,400 had been offered for a pig weighing only 110 pounds. The same paper said that every day sixty carloads of Rumanian grain were arriving in Vienna, and added: "If only a few carloads would wander over to us by mistake!"

New potatoes are more delicious baked than old ones.

Fish is excellent food and not eaten nearly often enough.

The Task Of Drafting 500,000 Men

It was a gigantic task to complete the registration of something like 10,000,000 men liable for military service in the United States, but it was only a starter for the more tremendous task of drafting the 500,000 soldiers Uncle Sam needs right away.

Of course, it would not be very hard to draw names from a wheel, a certain number from each district, but the problem is not so simple as this. As soon as the names are drawn there enters the question of whether the candidates for military service are fit or exempt.

Certain exemptions will be automatic, such as for physical disability men in certain industries and professions and some other reasons which will be announced at the proper time. Very few if any exemptions will be granted from the registration. That is, men who claimed exemption when they registered because of dependents, physical disability or other reasons are liable to draft. If they wish to claim exemption they will have to do it when they are called to the colours and they will have to prove their claims to the satisfaction of an exemption board. There will be a board for every county and for every 30,000 persons in cities of more than 30,000 inhabitants.

The man who goes before a board to claim exemption will have to satisfy the members that the country would be better off with him at home than with him at the front.

Besides the local boards there will be federal boards for each federal judicial district. These bodies will pass upon certain matters of exemption, principally for occupational reasons. They will also act as appeal boards from the decisions of the local boards. There will be 3,800 of the local boards.

Exemption for occupational reasons will be treated as individual cases. There will be no class exemptions, such as of ammunition, railroad or other industrial workers. A man who donned overalls in an ammunition factory after the draft became a certainty does not stand much chance of being exempt on that account.

Probably the greatest number of exemptions will be granted because of physical disability. No man will be allowed to be his own judge of this. There will be many who will try to make the examining surgeons think they are physically unfit, and there are thousands of young men who will try to make the surgeons think they are fit. The latter stand the better chance.

It is a strange fact, but a gratifying one, that it is easier to fool an experienced surgeon into thinking your condition is better than it is than to fool him into thinking it is worse.

Flat feet probably will be the most prevalent cause for exemption. A man with flat feet is absolutely no good as a soldier. After along march he would be in such pain that he would be absolutely useless. He will be unable to stand, walk or sit down, and in all likelihood be unabel to sleep.

Physical appearance has something to do with exemption and personal habits has a great deal. One thing which the army and navy insist upon is cleanliness. A man who has unclean habits or an unclean person cannot get into the fighting forces. Of course mere superficial uncleanliness can be washed off and the soldier required to keep himself clean, but uncleanliness often results in skin affections which debar a man from the army.

These are just a few of the things which show what an enormous task it is going to be to draft the army of 4,000,000. After the exemption has been granted to men who claim it, or forced upon others who do not want it, there will come the mobilization and housing of the army before it can trained. This in itself is a stupendous piece of work. A division at war strength includes about 28,000 men. There are nine regiments of infantry, one brigade of artillery, one cavalry regiment, one engineer regiment, signal field battalion aviation squad, medical corps and sanitary squad.

To provide cantonments for a division means practically to build a city for a population of 28,000. Even with the most compact arrangements army officers say that a division in cantonment requires about 780 acres of ground.

Police Baffled By Brutal Murder Of Little Detroit Boy

DETROIT, July 17.—With the discovery of the body of a five-year-old boy, Stanley Levine, in a yard in rear of his parents' home, 246 East Ferry Avenue, without a mark upon it to indicate the manner in which he died, the police department believes it is facing one of the most puzzling of the many degenerate crimes ever recorded in this State. The little fellow, whose father, Julius Levine, is a weal thy Jewish merchant, was dragged from his bed through an open window into the yard, and there evidently suffocated, the physicians who made the post mortem believe.

After working all day on the case the Detective Bureau expresses the view that the boy was carried off by a degenerate who had evidently mistaken him for his nine-year-old sister, Cecillia, a handsome dark eyed child, who usually occupied the room in which her brother slept Saturday night. The girl had gone to a relative to stay which fact was evidently unknown to the fiend who in the dark room grabbed the boy and then escaped.

The police have found that a man has several times been following the girl home and at picture shows in the afternoon has attempted to make advances to her.

Entrance to the Levine residence was obtained by "Jimmying" up a window. A younger brother sleeping with Stanley who tried to give an alarm was told to keep quiet or he would be killed. Another attempt to scream resulted in an attack by the man who inserted his finger in the child's mouth and brutally tore it. The noise alarmed the father who rushed into the room but too late to catch sight of the fiend. The boy's body was found still warm when Mr. Levine reached it. This is the third child murder of similar character in Detroit this year.

A Jitney Service For East City

Matter Will Be Placed Before the Present Owners of Radial Railway

At last night's meeting of the City Council, Ald. Smith brought up the question of establishing a jitney service to East City to connect with the George street cars. At the suggestion of Ald. Smith the Council adopted a resolution authorising the matter to be placed before the Ontario Hydro Power Commission, the present owners of the Peterborough Radial railway. If the Council is successful in securing the service it will supply a need for a street car service in East City until such time as the new overhead bridge on Hunter street is completed and the street cars are running in that direction. The proposed jitney service is to include the same transfer privileges as the street cars.

Linen will have a more beautiful texture if it is ironed only on the wrong side.

Efficiency For What?

A young man of 24 stepped into a business office in a large city and walked up to a desk where an elderly man sat examining a bundle of papers.

"Look at that, father!" the young man said with a smile of pride. "I've made nearly one hundred on my efficiency chart! What do you think of that"

The business man looked up at his son with a smile and a feeling of pride at his appearance, and then his eye fell on the list of questions put by the efficiency bureau that had interested the young man to compete with many others for first place.

1. Are you physically sound and free from all trace of disease?
2. Can you apply yourself to mental labour without great fatigue?
3. Are you an exact mathematician?
4. Do you have any bad habits?
5. Would you be willing to employ yourself in a business that required honesty, quickness of judgment, keen intellect?
6. Are you quick to see and take advantage of a business opportunity?
7. Are you in debt? If so, how did you become so?
8. Do you have extravagant habits of dress, amusements, or social life?
9. Can you secure good letters of recommendation from business men in the city who know you?
10. How much money have you ever earned, and how did you earn it?

The father read the list and then, without a word, reached for a sheet of paper and put down the following:

1. Are you a Christian? Would you follow the teachings of Jesus if to do so should result in the loss of money and position?
2. Do you have some great cause of humanity at heart, and are you ready to give your heart's enthusiasm for it?
3. Are you as active and as useful in some church as you are in your business of money-making?
4. Do you pray and read the Bible daily?
5. Are you planning to do a man's part by sharing in the burden of good citizenship?

The father handed those questions to his son. The son read them, and has face paled and grew red by turns. He faltered. His father was a distinguished and deeply consecrated man who had lived consistently the life outlined in the questions. The son respected him as he respected no other man.

"Father," he said finally, in a low voice, "that is real efficiency. I am going to try to live up to it; but right now I cannot answer those questions honestly and pass. It will take me a long time to qualify.

"It will take you all your life," his father said, gravely.—Youth's Companion."

ENGLAND WANTS FAST TRAMP STEAMERS NOW

Must Exceed Speed of Submarines—Programme of Government Requires Standardization.

LONDON, July 17.—Speaking in the House of Commons on the government's ship building programme, the parliamentary secretary of the shipping controller said the programme of construction was a very big one and could be carried out best by standardisation.

Tramp steamers were wanted most at the present time but they must be something more than the ordinary tramp and exceed in speed the under-water speed of the submarine. About one-half of all the merchant ships of the United Kingdom of over 2,000 tons gross were engaged for the army and navy, the colonies and the Entente Allies in connection with the war. The shipping controller, the secretary said, was rapidly extending the requisitioning to include all steamers in the possession of the country.

Regarding the restrictions of imports and the question of conserving shipping he said the government was mapping out the future not only for this year but for next. They were measuring the greatest possible losses they thought would occur and putting against them month by month what they expected to build and to buy—and, by dealing with the matter in that way, could make arrangements to defeat the enemy in the campaign to destroy shipping.

ENGLAND TO SELL AIRPLANES.

LONDON, July 17. — The British government advertises a sale of airplanes. It has 105 airplanes which it desires to dispose of immediately. Only one is complete with engines. The others are ready to have the engines mounted. Presumably most of them are obsolete models.

UNLICENSED INSURANCE IS UNFAIR

Premiums Paid Unlicensed Companies Here Do Not Pay Taxes Anywhere, Says T. L. Morrisey

The following letter to the Monetary Times has been sent to the Examiner for insertion:

Editor, The Monetary Times:

Sir,—I had hoped during this time of national stress, all classes in the community would recognize the littleness of all internal differences, sink their petty squabbling and bickerings, and see the necessity of presenting a united front to the common enemy which threatens the very existence of our country. Unfortunately, however, this is not to be, since we find one class—and that one, singularly enough, the one which arrogates to itself pre-eminence in the possession of the virtues of loyalty and patriotism, the Canadian Manufacturers' Association—flinging down the gauntlet in a most brasen manner.

Your last issue contains the report of the insurance committee of that body, and also a statement of the case by the managers of their insurance department, Willis, Faber & Company. The similarity between the two is so marked that one can see the fine Italian hand of the manager running through the report. I think therefore, and I would fain believe, that the great majority of the members of the Manufacturers' Association may be absolved from the charge of associating themselves with the enunciation of principles so utterly at variance with what they stand for in their own business; so manifestly unfair and unreasonable, if not reprehensible.

MUST CONFORM TO LAWS.

It is claimed that the manufacturers are inconsistent in demanding "protection" in their own business, and "free trade" in insurance. Their answer is: "Why accord protection to insurance and deny it to banking?" Why compare two things that are unlike? I have endeavored, and I must confess my inability to trace any analogy. The essential difference lies in the fact that the government of this country, and in the interest of the people of this country, says that before an insurance company may do business in Canada, it must conform to the laws of Canada. There is no law to prevent a citizen of Canada borrowing money outside of the country nor is such a law necessary. They clinch the argument by asking: "Would it be proper to suggest that a joint stock company, that sells a bond issue in New York, should be taxed thereon?" No one, that I ever heard has suggested that a manufacturer should be taxed when he sells the product of his factory in New York, thereby—"engaged in the patriotic work of bringing in outside capital to help build up the country."

Their insurance manager betrays a woeful ignorance of his business if he believes what he states in regard to deposits. The licensed company has to maintain deposits at Ottawa; the unlicensed company has similar deposits somewhere? A funny argument if based on fact; but it is not based on fact. When an assured pays 100 premium to a licensed company that company has to keep on deposit at Ottawa against that premium about $60. When he pays $100 premium to an unlicensed company, no part of that premium is placed on deposit at Ottawa or elsewhere for the protection of the policyholder.

DO NOT PAY TAXES ANYWHERE

It is grudgingly admitted the licensed companies make out a plausible case when they cite taxes. Thanks for small favors. But the unlicensed companies have to pay taxes to their own governments! Dangerous ground! What becomes of your claim to special privilege if that argument were allowed to prevail? There seems to be a lack of co-ordination here between the insurance committee and the fiscal committee. But let me supply a little bit of information. Premiums paid to unlicensed companies in Canada do not pay taxes anywhere. If the sovereign State of New York imposes a tax on insurance premiums it is a tax on premiums collected in the State of New York, and you may rest assured such premiums as referred to would be treated as collected in Canada, not New York, so that they have not even the poor solace of knowing that though denying their own country the benefit they are upholding an ally.

Now we come to another peculiar obsession; the licensed companies possess an advantage over the unlicensed that is well worth the price! If not, why do they not all withdraw and operate as unlicensed? The Canadian manufacturers do themselves an injustice in making the suggestion. There are two broad classes of companies. First, the companies that will only do business in any country in strict accordance with the laws of that country; second, the companies that are not averse to doing a piratical business. The companies operating in Canada under a license belong to the first class. But if there be anything in the claim that a licensed company has any such advantage, what stands in the way of the pirate adopting decent methods and taking out a license? Surely the converse holds true.

COMPANIES PROVED WORTH-LESS.

I fear I have already encroached upon your good nature, but before closing I would like to make one or two observations upon the learned dissertations as to form, rates, competition, etc., put forward by the insurance manager. What are these forms he talks of? Possibly putting on a straight insurance for a small proportion of value, then a first excess at a lower rate, second excess at still lower rate, and so on. That is gambling, not underwriting. It is objectionable, too, in that it results in some being able to obtain more favored terms than others. The most striking illustration of a fancy form was that of an obstinate manufacturer who gave up a million of perfectly good insurance to take a blanket form for $100,000. The plant burned, and the concern was out over $900,000 because some of the companies writing the fancy form proved to be worthless.

The gentleman animadverts very strongly against the high rates charged by the Associated Companies, claiming that the reduction obtained by placing insurance abroad runs to 30 per cent. He knows, if he will only admit it, that the tariff is as the breath of life to his nostrils, and that his rates are made by the necessities of each case, i.e., what cut is necessary to switch the business?

STORY OF A 30 PER CENT. CUT.

Let us take a concrete example; a cold storage plant in a certain Ontario town had been written all along at what was considered a fair rate to both parties. The advocate of unlicensed competition appears upon the scene and was able to persuade the assured that he was being ground under the iron heel of an "absolute monopoly," and that a 30 per cent. cut would afford the necessary relief. This appealed to the assured—especially the 30 per cent. and he switched the business. It was the irony of fate that a fire should happen almost immediately, and the plant should be wiped out with a loss of about $200,000, which prompts me to paraphrase the dictum of this authority: "There is no reason why a rate which is unprofitable to an unlicensed company should be profitable to a licensed company."

Just one other point, and I have done: Recently representations were made to Ottawa that a war tax of 75 per cent. of all profits in excess of 20 per cent. would paralyse the industries of the country, and it was suggested as an alternative that the tax be 25 per cent. of profits in excess of 20 per cent, up to 50 per cent.; 50 per cent. of profits in excess of 50 per cent. up to 75 per cent., and 75 per cent. of all profits over 75 per cent. Now, presumably these profits are being made, otherwise the putting forward of these representations would be simply an attempt to fool the government.

Think of it, ye fathers of families—professional men, shopkeepers, clerks, laborers—all struggling with the problem of how to make both ends meet. Let it sink deep into your minds—profits 75 per cent., and over! What bearing has this on the high cost of living. "Those whom the gods would destroy they first make mad."

Yours, etc.,
T. L. Morrisey.

Quick, Safe Way To Remove Hairs

(Toilet Talks)

Keep a little delatone powder on your dressing table and when ugly, hairy growths appear, make a paste with a little of the powder and some water, apply and let remain on the hairy surface for 2 or 3 minutes, then rub off, wash the skin and the hairs have vanished. This treatment is quite harmless and rarely more than one application is required, but to avoid disappointment care should be used to buy the real delatone.

PRINCESS IN HELPFUL WORK

Divides Time Between Care of Garden and Care of Army Canteens.

LONDON, July 17.—Princess Mary, only daughter of the king, is dividing her time between her vegetable garden at Windsor castle and visiting munitions plants where she usually presides over the canteens. The princess likes to reach a munitions centre unannounced and to delight the factory girls by serving and passing out to their hot midday meal.

When the munitions workers at a certain factory hurried into their canteen for their dinner the other day they were surprised to find the princess standing beside a great urn, clad in large blue overalls, ready to hand out food to them. Every girl was eager to purchase at her hands and many returned to the counter for a bun, just for the sake of another smile from the princess.

Men Carried Muffs, Late In 18th Century

QUITE AS MANY ADDICTED TO HABIT AS WOMEN—FASHIONS CHANGED WITH DIFFERENT YEAR.

If one should see a well dressed man walking along the streets of Washington carrying a muff, doubtless one would stare. The wonder might be at first whether or not a man was crazy, and, second, if he were the loser of a wager.

Yet it was not so very long ago that men were actually carrying muffs to keep their hands warm just as women do to-day. In England men carried muffs until late in the eighteenth century, and quite as many men were addicted to the habit as women.

In an expense account of Prince Henry of Wales, in 1608, mention is made of the purchase price of two beautiful muffs. For one he paid the goodly sum of seven pounds sterling, or approximately $35. It was not a muff of fur, but cloth ornamented with gold and silver. Sixty shillings was given for a fine black satin muff; the satin was richly embroidered with silk.

During the reigns of Charles I and Charles II., an odd double-muff was the vogue. This consisted of a separate covering for each hand, and looked very much like a long, loose cuff which was fastened to the coat sleeves.

The arrival of William of Orange brought another fashion into favour. Small muffs were carried and hung by a cord from a coat button, or were attached to a ribbon which went around the neck.

After the year 1710 muffs became uniformly larger. Horace Walpole writes of having given a "decent smallish muff you might put in your pocket" to a friend of his.

In the year 1760 it was considered very fashionable for both ladies and gentlemen to carry pet dogs in their extremely roomy muffs. During the succeeding twenty years muffs lost favour with men, and in 1786 only those celebrated for their idiosyncrasies ventured forth with a muff. Gradually the fad died out entirely among men.

The majority of muffs carried by the Englishmen of those early days were modest and unostentatious. Some of the more elaborate were trimmed with bows of ribbon. Frenchmen carried muffs that were, in truth, "Parisian creations." They were most wonderfully and fancifully trimmed with ribbon and lovely lace frills.—Washington "Star."

Housewife Told Way To Save In Using Meat

INSTEAD OF PLANNING A STEW TRY THIS RECIPE FOR SAKE OF ECONOMY, SAYS WRITER.

Just now, when the government is admonishing every good housewife to look to the matter of saving in her kitchen, some women are racking their brains over the question of what to serve if porterhouse, capon and rib roasts are to be cut off the menu. The usual alternative that occurs to mind is "meat stew" a most unpleasant sounding possibility to a porterhouse and capon taste. Instead of planning a "stew" for economy's sake try this:

Buy a large slice of steak off the round (a most economical cut) and roll the slice round a stuffing made of bread crumbs, seasoned with herbs and melted butter. Skewer the roll, lay it in a dripping pan, dredge with flour and place small pieces of fat in the pan. Roast an hour, basting frequently, and make a thick gravy when the roll is done—as you do after roasting a more expensive cut. The round can be cut in slices, a ring of beef around a circle of stuffing, and, with the rich gravy, is really delicious.

It is always more economical, when buying lamb, to purchase the forequarter, which is usually several cents less a pound than the leg. Have the butcher remove the chops, which will serve for a second day's dinner. The portion at the neck will make a rich soup and the roast itself, if well browned and basted and served in thin slices is most toothsome.

HOCKEY INJURIES PROVED FATAL

JAPAN AND HOLLAND.

Japanese Minister Says Nations Have Lost No Cordiality Since War.

THE HAGUE, Netherlands, July 17.—Asked if the relations between Japan and Holland had suffered at all during the war the Japanese minister at The Hague, K. Ochiai, declared in an interview:

"The relations between the two countries have always been of a very intimate and friendly nature and have lost none of their former cordiality during the war."

The question was inspired by all the talk about Japanese ambitions respecting the Netherlands East Indies, and the concern occasionally aroused in Holland by the writings of certain Japanese jingoists.
